Communication was received from the Hydro-Electric Commission advising the Council that a complaint had been made regarding the dangerous condition of electric wiring in town, and also of the advisability of appointing an electrical inspector.

In connection with the appointment of an Inspector the Council decided to consider the matter at a special meeting in the near future.

More Sidewalks.

The Council decided to extend the walk on George Street east to Mr. Spence's residence; to put a cement crossing from R. Campney's corner to B. Smith's corner; another crossing at the south end of the walk on the east side of Concession Street, West Ward, to the west sidewalk; to put a box ditch across the corner of the Park, and to build a sidewalk from Wm. Jones' corner, east, to Quackenbush's corner.

T. Butters succeeded in obtaining a reduction of $8.25 in his income tax by reason of his claim for exemption as a married man.

Council adjourned.

Mr. Reggie Barlow of Toronto spent Sunday last in Town.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Connors of Healey Falls spent Monday last in town, the guests of Mrs. J. W. Bryans.

Mr. Arthur Gabriel of Tweed spent Sunday last in Town.

Messrs. Frank Menzie and Fred Stillman of Campbellford spent Sunday last in Town.

Mr. Wm. Mattin of Campbellford spent Sunday last in Peterborough.

Mrs. J. W. Brown and Miss Brown spen Sunday last in Peterborough.

Mr. J. E. Fowler and daughter, Cleo, spent Monday last in Peterborough.

Mrs. Greenly entertained a number of young people on Wednesday night of last week. They report a good time.

Knit for Soldiers.

A meeting was held at the residence of Mrs. J. Holderoft, on Monday night last, Oct. 19, under the auspices of the Woman's Relief Committee. It was decided to organize a Sewing Club to knit and sew for the soldiers at the front, and Mrs. Wm. Vance was appointed Superintendent of the work, the membership fee being ten cents.

The next meeting is to be held at Mrs. Overend's residence, on Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, at 7.30 p.m.

Methodist Church Anniversary.

The eighteenth anniversary services of the Methodist Church was held on Sunday, Oct. 18th. The special preacher was Rev. A. Mansell Irwin, B. A., B.D., of Norwood.

Excellent music was furnished by the Choir. Mrs. C. Holcombe and Mr. W. McBurney were the soloists at the morning service, and Mrs. Kindred and Mrs. Vansickle gave a duet. In the evening Mrs. Kindred and Mrs. Vansickle and Dr. Kindred and Mr. E. Williams contributed a quartette, as did also Mrs. Pomfret, Mrs. Vansickle, Mrs. Kindred and Miss Turner, while Messrs. Dr. Kindred, W. McBurney, C. L. Pickering and E. Williams rendered a male quartette.

Carpet Mystery Solved.

MONTREAL, Oct. 27.— [illegible] provisions with, it is said, be made as a result of the successful efforts of the city detective department to trace the mysterious disappearance from the city hall, of a $700 carpet, which originally was duty in the council chamber. Detective Gagnon, who had been engaged on the case for the past few months, at the instance of Mayor Martin yesterday reported that the missing carpet had been found.

ITCHING BURNING OF ECZEMA INTENSE

Begun on Child's Face. Spread all Over Head. Pimples Would Fester and Break Like Boils. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

Elmore, Sask.—"My little boy had eczema when he was about a week old. It began on his face and spread all over his head. It was in pimples and they would fester and break like little boils all over his head, but were like rash on his face. The eczema was very itching and the burning was intense, so much so that it made him so restless he could scarcely sleep.

"I tried several ointments and salves and they seemed to do very little good so I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment after he had been sick about a month. When I used Cuticura Soap and a few applications of the Cuticura Ointment I noticed quite a difference. He was able to sleep well the first night on the new skin on it. I kept on using them for three months, and two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment cured him." (Signed) Mrs. A. V. Tucker, July 13, 1914.

Lord Roberts Addresses The Canadians

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 26.—In the pouring rain, Lord Roberts visited the Canadian camp on Saturday, motoring over from Ascot, accompanied by his daughter. He was received by Major-General Alderson and the Divisional Staff. The distinguished Field Marshal proceeded to the first brigade, where the officers were drawn up. His Lordship chatted genially with several on parade asking many questions regarding the length of the individual service for the King and noticed the decorations which were worn by many. He afterwards went down toward the south end, being cordially greeted en route by men on the lines. At South Camp the 2nd first battalion was formally inspected. Lord Roberts also went along the artillery lines and afterwards lunched with divisional staff at headquarters.

Welcome Canadians.

Lord Roberts, addressing the officers and men of the contingent said: "Brother Soldiers of the Canadian contingent, it is an intense pleasure to me to be able to give you a most hearty welcome to the Mother Country. We have arrived at the most critical moment of our history, and you have generously come to help us in our hour of need. Words fail me when I try to tell you how deeply we appreciate your action and the splendid spirit of loyalty which has prompted that action. Three months ago we found ourselves involved in this war — a war not of our own seeking, but one which those who have studied Germany's literature and Germany's inspiration knew was a war which we should inevitably have to deal with sooner or later. The prompt resolve of Canada to give us such valuable assistance has touched us deeply. That resolve has been quickened into action in what I consider a marvellously short space of time, and under the excellent organizing and driving power of your Minister of Militia, my friend, Major-General Hughes, you quickly found yourselves in a fine camp in your own Laurentian Mountains, where your training and musketry were able to be carried out in a most practical manner and with the least possible delay, the result being that to-day, less than three months from the declaration of war, I am able to greet this fine body of soldiers on English soil.

Stern Task to Perform.

"You have a stern task before you. We are fighting a nation which looks upon the British Empire as a barrier to her development. To attain our humiliation she has manufactured a magnificent fighting machine and is straining every nerve to gain victory. In her determination to be ruling power in the world she has not scrupled to break faith with small nations and has shown by her actions that she is prepared by every means in her power, however unworthy and brutal, to achieve her purpose. When the time comes for you to take your place in the field you will find yourselves fighting side by side with men of our regular army, who have already done great deeds and endured great hardships, with men of our Indian army who have come with such devotion and eagerness to take their share in defending British interests, and with men who like yourselves are coming from other self-governing Dominions to co-operate with us. I need not urge you to do your best; I know you will, for you will be fighting in the greatest of all causes, the cause of right, of justice, and of liberty. May God prosper you in this great struggle."

SAGE TEA TURNS GREY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your chief charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns grey, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggy, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color to your hair, and lustre of your hair, and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge, or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair has disappeared, and after another application becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

Government Loans To Railway.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 27. — Official announcement is made of a loan of $6,000,000 by the Dominion Government to the Pacific Great Eastern Railway now under construction from Vancouver to Fort George. The loan will ride the company over until the bonds can be sold in the old country. The railway is guaranteed by the Provincial Government, and the work is two-thirds completed.

A WOMAN'S WAY

Who says a woman's part is only "watch and wait"?

True, a woman cannot shoulder a rifle and go to the front, but there is a way in which she can help and which is just as important. That way is in supporting the prosperity of Canada.

Women do the buying. A million of them in Canada are buying every day, most of the necessities and luxuries for eight million people, expending and influencing the expenditure of perhaps a billion dollars every year.

At present much of that expenditure goes for imported products.

Suppose it were all switched to Canadian-made goods. Think how many Canadian workmen would be kept busy supplying this enormous demand! Think what it would mean to Canadian industries! Think what an era of prosperity it would create!

That is a woman's way to help. To create prosperity for Canada, to lay forever the spectre of unemployment, to create resources to carry on the war.

It's very easy too, just

CANADIAN LADIES TELL THEIR EXPERIENCES IN WAR-TIME GERMANY

The following article from the weekly journal Canada, gives additional interest from the fact that Mrs. Brent and Miss Bletcher are cousins of Mrs. H. Ruth of Peterborough.

"A party of Canadian ladies from Port Hope, Ontario and Toronto, consisting of Mrs. Brent, of the latter city, and of the Misses J. and M. Tuer, Miss Bletcher, and Miss Holdsworth, of the former, arrived in London during the summer and decided to take one of Cook's tours through the Rhine Valley, Switzerland, and France. After visiting Cologne, Heidelberg, and Mayence, when war broke out they were near the Swiss frontier, and for four days endeavoured to get from Freiburg into Switzerland. This failed and together with a large number of British people collected in that town for the same purpose, the party was sent back to Baden by the German authorities.

"On the arrival of one of one train at Baden," said the Misses Tuer to a representative of Canada who met them on their return to London this week, "our baggage was rigorously searched, and we were subjected to a detailed cross-examination by the police authorities at the station. We were asked where we were born, our ages, what we were doing in Germany, and questions of that description. When this was over, the police furnished each of us with a sort of card passport. This card had to be produced to the police whenever asked for.

Treated With Tact.

"From the station we went to the Holland Hotel, where we stayed the whole eight weeks, were given the benefit of a reduced tariff, and treated with the utmost courtesy. The food was excellent, and the attention and kindness of the proprietor markedly noticeable. He was a very broad-minded German indeed, with no British antipathies whatever, and, moreover, frequently supplied us with the Times, Daily Mail, Mirror, and other papers, though their arrival was somewhat belated. We received no letters, papers, or communications of any kind from the outside world, nor were we able to communicate with our friends outside Germany. The only real news of what was happening in the war we obtained through the Italian papers, which were allowed to come into Baden. What money we required we obtained from the American Consul. We were forbidden to talk to other foreigners in the city.

"Baden was very quiet indeed the whole time, as befitted its characteristic status. There was no evidence of any business being done and latterly the only excitement seemed to be the arrival of the wounded. We were told that there were upwards of 1,500 in the hospitals there. During the first few weeks, when news of victories was constantly arriving, the city took on an air of repressed but joyful excitement; elle bells rang, the band played in the gardens, and there was much singing. Latterly, however, all this gave change to sadness and the wearing of mourning. We noticed people wearing black everywhere; it was a predominant feature.

Alarming Reports About Britain.

"At the English Church all references to the 'King's enemies' in the prayer-book service were omitted, by order, whilst the prayer for the Kaiser was continued. We heard all sorts of alarming reports concerning Britain and the war. Among other things—that there were riots in London, that there were notices posted up everywhere denouncing the war and asking men not to enlist; that there were famine and revolution in India; and a big Boer rising in South Africa.

"Day after day we inquired at the police office as to our chances of being allowed to leave Baden, but not until September 30th was permission granted. We were then permitted to make our own arrangements for getting to London, and travelled by ordinary trains through Switzerland and France to Paris and Dieppe, where we crossed to Folkestone.

"The only thing that surprised us now that we are again in Britain, after all we heard in Germany, is the quietness of London and the absence of any real appearance here of the fact that we are at war with Germany. We are only anxious now to get back home, and hope to sail on Sunday."

SUNK BY MINE.

French Steamer Admiral Gantaumme Was Carrying Peasants.

DOVER, Oct. 27. — The steamer Admiral Gantaumme was sunk yesterday by a mine just outside Boulogne harbor. About twenty or thirty persons were drowned, owing to the panic which prevailed as the passengers were being transferred to the cross-Channel steamer Queen, which rushed to the assistance of the sinking vessel.

Most of the passengers were peasants from Pas de Calais, who had been taken aboard at Calais to be transferred to Boulogne.

London, Lights Obscured, Finds There Is a Sky

City Wears Weird and Abnormal Aspect at Night, and Eyes Are Directed Upward by Great Searchlights That Ceaselessly Send Shafts Into the Heavens.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, October 24.

London is becoming gradually aware of the fact that overhead there is a sky, at night as well as by day. No longer are the bright streets arched merely by darkness; London has grown conscious of the immensity overshadowing it, and has developed a nervous habit of looking up into it. To attribute this habit to a fear of Zeppelins would be a gross exaggeration. The other thing is that London has discovered the sky.

What has combined to make one alert to the potentialities of this vast roof of London are the drawn blinds, the masked lamps, the searchlights. London at night has acquired an unwonted gravity, quiet and darkness. It is impossible to move about town after sundown without feeling that terrible things are happening elsewhere, that a miracle may at any moment bring us here, too, into the zone of terror—a sudden and violent shattering of London's ancient humanity. It is our nearest approach to a realisation of the horrors that are being enacted upon the other side of that narrow strip of water which washes the southeast coast.

City Is Weird at Night.

London is undoubtedly abnormal, weird, at night. And yet a visitor from an English village, from a substantial country town even, would find it difficult to understand how it is that when the lights have been lit one calls London dark. A Londoner of the eighties might be equally puzzled. For the city yet retains sufficient brilliance to have astonished the past generation of oil lamp and gas jet days. There are still the dazzling shop fronts, the glowing automobile buses and trams. The street lamps are not less powerful because they are fewer, and their masks serve but to throw a stronger, a more concentrated, light upon the roadway.

But memory is short. One compares impressions to-day with those of yesterday—not with those of ten or twenty years ago. We have the flaming sentences in electric light, spelled out, obliterated, and spelled out again, the vivid advertisements in fierce fiery colors; the lavish display of the cinemas, the flashing lamps of the automobiles, the wonderful illuminations at Charing Cross and in Parliament square. It is a strange, uncomfortable experience to see the War office and the Admiralty with all their blinds drawn, the trams and cars with their blinds down, and plunged in absolute darkness as they cross the river bridges, the great banks of the Cecil and Savoy hotels darkly looming over the embankment, to miss the bright, familiar face of "Big Ben."

Phantom Lives Search Night.

And a stranger in London for the first time, in ignorance of events, could not fail to sense the difference. He, too, would quickly find the sky and cast curious glances up into it. For one thing, his eyes would be guided there by the searchlights. All night long they stab the darkness of the sky, moving like phantom eyes, staring wildly along a track which mortal eyes cannot follow, searching a void which they cannot penetrate. Hypnotised, we strain our gaze, and then pass on our way, hoping that while London sleeps this vigilant, tireless watch will fight upon no evil thing, that the dawn will appear bright with the promise of good news.

London is taking this war very, very seriously. You see it when any troops depart. The crowds have ceased to cheer. Forgotten is all the fervor with which London acclaimed its soldiers when they tramped through the streets en route for Table Bay. And Tommy Atkins has to wait till he gets to France for the cheers and the flowers and the kisses. His march across London to the railway is sometimes well nigh funereal.

A battalion was marching into Waterloo station, and a crowd of anxious and serious minded English folk was watching it, proud enough of those stalwart khaki men, but silent; uplifted, no doubt, and moved, but moved to silence. The last ranks were marching in, and scarcely a cheer had been heard. Then came a private astride one horse and leading another. He had some slight difficulty with the other horse. The difficulty conquered, he looked about him, a trifle exasperated. His eyes rested upon a constable, a stolid London constable, keeping the route. With mock pleading he addressed the policeman. "Oh, p'liceman," he said, "do smile!"

Misery Bids You Laugh.

And here is the cutter merchant himself depressed and gloomy, inviting you to laugh. His clothes are rags, his face bristles; his expression reflects the hopelessness of long standing. The world, on the whole, has treated him snubbily. One would not suppose that this pedler deals in laughter, but he does. He offers you "one thousand laughs" for a penny.

"You must laugh! You can't help laughing!" he says, with deep laid misery in his voice. And this laughter he is endeavoring to wring out of the Kaiser. The Kaiser's woes are to be your merriment. Altogether you can have four thousand laughs for fourpence, in "The Kaiser's Nightmare" there are a thousand; in "The Kaiser's Confession" a thousand; in the "Programme of the Kaiser's Christmas Banquet at Buckingham Palace," a thousand; in "The Kaiser's Last Will and Testament," a thousand.

This last will and testament is printed on blue paper and looks like a genuine legal document. In it the Kaiser, realizing that "his number is up," realizing also "that he is fairly up against it," disposes of all his imperial possessions, his famous mustachios, even his mailed fist. The thousand roars do not appear among the depositions, but doubtless they are right enough—for the unsophisticated.

Those who do not dispense laughter are the vendors of patriotism. They stand with great bunches of little flags, the flags of the allied nations, and their invitation to the purchaser is more imperative.

"Wear your colors!" they say; and it must be said that many thousands of persons have rendered obedience.

Cossacks Good Fellows, East Prussians Found

Farmers Praise Invaders, Who Did No Harm to Inhabitants During Occupation of Province—Liked Russians so Well That They Actually Helped Them.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, October 24.

For over a century the Cossack has been the "bogyman" of Continental Europe. German and even French mothers to this day frighten their babies into obedience with the terrifying announcement that "the Cossack is coming," just as the English mothers of old used to sing to their refractory children.

"Hush ye, hush ye, little pet ye,
Hush ye, hush ye, little fret ye,
The Black Douglas shall not get ye."

But the Cossack is not so bad as he is painted, to judge, at any rate, from a letter in the Copenhagen Politiken, dated from Berlin. It says:—

Although East Prussia is now virtually cleared of Russian troops, comparatively few of the inhabitants have returned to their homes, though the Russians, even the much feared Cossacks, seem to have behaved fairly well during the time they spent on German soil. Meeting a couple of farmers from Allenstein (some of the small beershops near the Stettiner Bahnhoff, that are mostly frequented by East Prussian refugees, naturally our talk was about the war.

"The Russians are by no means bad," said one of my former neighbors. "The regiment that came to our village really behaved quite decently. They paid for what they got and didn't even eat as much as hurt a cat. They advised us to stop calmly where we were, cultivate our fields and see to our cattle, and we did so as long as we could. When the Russians arrived we had our women and children in the cellars, but it was not necessary. Within twenty-four hours we were all going about as if we were in a state of profound peace.

"The Cossacks are awful thieves, but otherwise they are all right. They were not guilty of any acts of cruelty as long as we humored them and let them do as they pleased. But they never could see through a joke.

"A gang of them, about twenty, were riding through a village a couple of miles south of Bischofsburg, and while they were passing a house in course of construction a bricklayer dropped a brick which hit a Cossack on the head. Naturally the Cossacks thought it had been thrown purposely. It was an unfortunate joke, for not one of the workmen lived."

"We, too, had a call from the Cossacks," said the other farmer. "The first thing they ask when they come to a village is, 'Are there any Prussians near?' Next, 'Have you any money?' or, 'Where is your watch?' They squeezed me to the extent of 300 marks, all that I had. But afterward the rascal who stole them was sorry, for next day a whole regiment of Russians came to the town. You could see at once from the way they behaved that they were decent people. So I hastened to the captain and told him how the Cossack had treated me, not being ashamed to steal a poor man's savings.

"The captain became angry, and a little bit afraid.

"'Would you know the man again who took your money?' he asked.

"'Yes, captain.'

"'Well,' be outside the church in an hour. But God help you if you have lied!'

"An hour later I found the captain with about fifty Cossacks filed up along the walls. I recognised my man at once. He was examined and my 300 marks were found in his possession. I was sorry for him, and though I pleaded for him the captain refused to temper justice with mercy."

During my talk with these East Prussians I got a lot of interesting information and details, which, put together, help to form a comparatively distinct picture of the Russian occupation, now rebegun, apparently with more vigor than before.

The Prussian population seem to get on well with the Russians. In several cases the inhabitants even warned the invaders against the marshes and showed them the right way. The same was the case in Galicia, where the Austrians again and again complain that the inhabitants assist the Russians. My informant explained this strange fact by the circumstances that the inhabitants of East Prussia, one year after year have paid high taxes to the army and navy, are angry because nearly all the troops are sent to the battlefields in the west at the very time when they should be defending the population in the east against invading foes.

Dramatic Tales of the Front Told by British Troopers in Letters Home

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, October 24.

How the first German prisoner of war was captured is related by Private Alexander Gibson, of the Royal Scottish Fusiliers, in a letter to his wife.

"I don't know whether it is any distinction or not, but I had the honor of capturing the first prisoner of war. We got an order to stop a motor car, and, as the driver pulled up, a man tried to escape on the opposite side. When I collared him he got into an awful state, and started pulling photographs and papers from his pockets. He was taken away, and I believe was shot the next morning as a spy."

* * *

Private Sullivan, of the King's Royal Rifles, writes of an interesting encounter in which he participated in the first stages of the war.

"The Germans were directing a terrific rifle fire at the British from a hill above a French village. The British colonel in command ordered his men to charge, which they did.

"We got to the top of the hill," says Private Sullivan, "with the Germans flying in all directions, but all at once German machine guns began firing on us. They had two on top of a haystack. Two of our boys crept forward and set fire to the stack, and those Germans were soon roasted."

Here is a story of a typical British soldier of the best sort:—

"We were up somewhere Belgium way and marching backward and forward without seeing anybody, till one day we were told to be ready to take a hill. It looked a very nice sort of hill, quite innocent like, but when we came within about a mile of it it began to rain lots and lots, as you never saw, nothing else. They are all right, shells, shrapnel and bullets all over us. I got one in the leg, but went on for a bit, till we were all called back. They wanted to send me to the rear and back to England, but I said no and nipped on to a gun truck and was driven like a king for a day or two. After about a week I was all right again, and we were pretty nearly always scrapping.'

"I got put out at Soissons in a bayonet charge. These 'ere Germans always have two firing lines. One pretends to advance and fires a bit and we comes on, and then they either run away or hold up their hands, and while we go gayly on a second time probably a dozen quick firers open on us.

"That particular occasion we had a bit of a hill to take with a lot of them entrenched below. Well, we got well on to them, but Lord! just as we climbed near the top they came over like bees! What we did for the rest of the time nobody knows, and if any man tells you that he did this, that or the other when he is in such a 'mash' as we were in he is a liar. We were jumping here and there and looking out of the corners of our eyes for another behind till we were fairly mad; our bayonets got fine, especially for the rings round the muzzles of our rifles, which catch the German bayonets and snap them like straws. Lord knows how many I stuck, whether it was two or twenty. It was a grand scrimmage, and I was real sick when a bullet nipped me in the arm from elbow to thumb and stopped me. But we got that hill all the same.

"One of our chaps has been chops mad since then—went off his head in the fighting and still on duty as ever. The dirty devils won't fight for nuts, when they are doing anything. They are all right, they don't want to fight a bit. One time when we charged a line of them, instead of standing up to us, they all threw themselves down flat and chucked their rifles at us. One place we cornered a whole ambulance corps and one or two companies of artillery, and they gave themselves up without a whimper.

"The head doctor attended all night to the wounded and performed several amputations on his own men, and when he was done he just up with his knife and cut his own throat.

"Another incident worth while. Twelve of our cyclists went out and posted themselves along a road some distance apart. A company or two of Germans came singing along when they opened fire right down into the road. The Dutchies thought they had marched right into a regiment and hoisted handkerchiefs. Our men shouted to them to march past by fours and throw away their rifles. Most of them had done this before they discovered the trick. The last twenty or so, however, began cursing and firing and killed five of ours, but the other seven brought in nearly two hundred prisoners."

* * *

The wife of a recruit to Kitchener's army applied to his employers—they had undertaken to pay full wages to dependents—for his week's money.

Handed £2 ($10) she paused at the counter with a puzzled expression, and asked "Haven't you given me too much?" On being assured that it was all right, she withdrew without further comment, but once outside the office she unburdened herself to a friend.

"Walt until the old grounded comes home," she said. "There he's been telling me for months his wages were [illegible] and all the time he's been taking

America Has Hurt Peace Prospect, London Declares

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, October 24.

Inopportune is the term that best describes the feeling here regarding America's latest exploit to bring mediation. Englishmen are disposed to view the peace moves impatiently and no one is surprised that failure has followed.

No one familiar with the situation expected any other result than that Germany would seek to place the responsibility for the continuance of the war upon the Allies. Everybody feels that a distinct harm has been done to any future move for peace, which now is bound to be regarded with scepticism. There have not been the slightest reasons to change the view expressed a week ago that the Allies would prefer destruction to making a premature peace which would not put an end to the Kaiser's power.

At the same time President Wilson's general position is commended and he stands very high here.

English journals which criticised his Mexican policy now admit that he stands forth as a great figure in consequence of the outcome of the Rio Grande affair. Proper and precise position in neutrality is bound to strengthen him, when the time really arrives to make peace.

If Secretary Bryan should suddenly yield to his well known weakness and begin to address peace assemblages the effect would be to neutralise the American influence in this crisis. Americans here are shuddering lest the news may come any day that Secretary Bryan is speaking at meetings organised by the [illegible] makers.

Paradoxical as it may seem, that the best hope of peace is in broadening the war area and increasing the destruction of life, yet that is the fact. The world is still waiting for Italy to play her part, but Italy holds back. She is understood here not to be hesitating but awaiting a favorable opportunity.

The only difference between the Italian public and the Italian government is that the public wants war on Austria immediately, while the government wants war at the proper minute. Italy, I am assured, in no circumstances will cast her lot with the two kaisers. While she waits Turkey is moving rapidly toward the vortex which will give to Italy her chance. The protest against the withdrawal of the foreign court privileges has not been heeded in Turkey, and now it is reported that the Turkish War Minister is en route to Berlin to make the necessary arrangements for taking sides with the Dual Alliance.

Such a step would flank Austria, which now is regarded by diplomatists as a beaten Power, and as a result would give to Italy the long coveted control of the Adriatic. It is Italy's army that will count when she comes in. Her fleet is not important, because it is not needed. More important would be the moral effect of a repudiation of the Triple Alliance finally declaring in cast her lot with France, England and Russia.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A BOTTLE OF COUGH CURE

The moment Rosario saw the pond, sparkling and glowing in the spring-day sun, she decided to wade. Advancing one pudy foot, she stepped gayly in, but drew back with a surprised shriek. The water was decidedly cold. The next instant she felt herself slipping. Down, down, down she went — would she never stop? Scream after scream rent the air until she landed up to her armpits in water.

Jimmy Patten, whistling his way merrily along one of the side paths of the park, heard the shrieks and ran to the pond at full speed. So also did a woman who was just ahead of him on the same path. Both reached the pond at about the same time, but Jimmy plunged in and dragged out the frightened child; although it must be admitted that Rosario was in no danger of drowning in the least.

"Poor little thing!" said the woman. "She's scared nearly to death. Let me have her. There, there, darling, don't cry. It's all right now!"

She drew Rosario to her gently and wiped her face and hands, never minding that rivulets of dirty water were wandering down her skirt and that Rosario was pressing her bedragged curls against her silk waist.

"Don't hold her too close, ma'am," cautioned Jimmy. "She'll hurt your clothes."

"She'll get her death of cold," said the woman, paying no attention, however, to his warning. "She must be taken home at once. I wonder where she lives?"

"I know. She lives on my street. She's an awful kid. Sticks to me like fly paper. She probably tagged me up here. Keep still, Rosie. You ain't drowned—only washed."

"Oh," said the woman, looking at Jimmy for the first time, "you know her, do you? If it hadn't been for you she would have been drowned. You saved her life."

"'Tain't the first time," replied Jimmy, disgustedly. "I'm allays doin' it. Rosie's my jinx, I guess. Twice so far this year I've grabbed her jest in time to keep her from being killed. And three times last year. And when she warn't knee high to nothin' I got her away from a dawg jest as he was a-going to bite her. I didn't blame him. She was everlastingly pulling his tail."

"She must be taken home now or she'll get pneumonia," insisted the woman. "Will you call a taxi? Tell the driver to wait at the east entrance. I'll come right along with her. Will you hurry, please?"

"I'll be back in a jiffy," Jimmy darted off before the words were out of his mouth.

When the taxicab drew up before the gate the woman managed to get Rosario there also, although she had protested every inch of the way and had howled dismally and without an instant's interruption. Jimmy, knowing the child as he did, had no patience with her and scolded her sharply when he saw her.

"Rosie, keep still! I tell you, there ain't anything the matter with you. But you jest wait—there will be when your father gets hold of you. You'll catch it for following me—wait and see!"

At this comforting assurance, Rosario screamed still louder and beat her hands against her head and breast in a most frightful manner. She even threatened to lie down and kick in the bargain, but Jimmy nipped this intention in the bud by picking her up bodily and holding her tightly.

"You needn't worry about her being sick, ma'am. She's too wise to catch cold. But—why, ma'am!—you're shivering! You're taking cold yourself!"

"It's a raw day," said the woman, quickly. "It's not because I have been handling the child. I take cold very easily. We will all ride in the taxi and I will drive home first. I can trust you to look after Rosario."

"Indeed you can, ma'am. And the man must drive fast. You mustn't get sick on account of Rosario. She ain't worth it."

The woman bent over toward him quickly and looked down into his eyes. "Don't say that," she said, "because you do not know."

The taxi whirled down the fashionable streets, and as they rode along the woman talked gaily to Jimmy. As far as Rosario was concerned, conversation was impossible. She had not yet stopped howling, although she was giving her cries a little less volume than formerly. The woman inquired into Rosario's past history, and also into Jimmy's. More than once she laughed gaily at Jimmy's quaint replies, and yet, somehow, Jimmy knew that her mirth was forced. He could see that she kept her teeth from chattering with difficulty and that blue lines were deepening about her mouth. When she alighted before a fine house and made him promise to come through the street the next day and report on the state of Rosario's health, he knew quite well that she would not be able to tell for him, as she said she would.

Nevertheless, he went by the house. He was not surprised to see that the curtains were drawn and that there was an air of brooding about the place. Not only that day, but for many days after, the same quietness enshrouded it. Jimmy wondered if she was very, very ill, even ill enough to die.

"'Taint right for her to be sick on account of Rosie," he said to himself, rebelliously. "Rosie ain't worth it. She ain't, she ain't, she ain't!"

But one day as he passed by he saw a curtain was raised that had been pulled down. Then he heard a gentle tap on the window pane. Looking up, he saw her—oh, so white and wan. She beckoned for him to come in, and, breathlessly, he went up the marble steps and into the great house. Sitting by her, he told her about Rosario and her latest adventures.

After that he would have soon thought of failing to go to work as failing to go through First Street. He never went in again, but if the woman was up, and at the window she never failed to wave at him. Sometimes for days and days he would see no sign of her. Then Jimmy knew she was having a "spell" and he did not feel happy until he knew she was up again. The "spells" worried him not a little. "She only coughs," he told himself. "I don't see why the doctor don't cure her. A cough ain't nothing. Why I had one last winter, an awful one. I took Balcomb's Cough Cure' and it did me great. I bet it would help her. I'm a good mind to buy her a bottle. I can't buy it for a week or two. I'm that shy of cash, but I'll begin right off to save for it."

But the next time he saw the woman he decided it would be best for him to lose no time in getting the remedy, for even to his inexperienced eye she seemed to be weaker. All her strength seemed to leave her after she had waved to him her delicate hand. Yet Jimmy's purse would not permit him to buy "Balcomb's" this week.

"I wonder if Rosario's father would lend me 30 cents," thought Jimmy. "He'd oughter. It was on account of his kid she lady got sick. I'll ask him. He's meaner'n dirt, so I don't suppose it'll do any good."

When Rosario's father heard the proposition he flew into the air instantly. Give 30 cents to cure a lady who was fool enough to save such an imp of darkness as Rosie? Not he. The more Jimy begged, the firmer grew he. Never, never, never. If she had let her drown——

Jimy knew that Rosario was the apple of her father's eye and that such talk was all nonsense. But he also realized that it was plainly his lookout if the woman was to have the cough cure.

Try as he would, he could not [illegible] weeks. It was a proud boy that at last come from the druggist's with the incomparable medicine in his hand. The boys were playing marbles in the alleyway and hailed him to join them. But he shook his head importantly.

"I've got business to attend to," he said.

"I'll wrap the bottle in paper and write on it, 'From a friend.' I don't want her to know I'm giving it to her. Then I'll lay it on her step and ring the bell and scoot, like at Valentine's," he said to himself, and began to hunt for a bit of pencil to write the inscription.

After the package was done up to his liking, he set out on his errand. It had been three days since he had seen the woman, and it had seemed to him that all her life departed after her brave attempt at gaiety of greeting. Jimy had congratulated himself at the time that as soon as she had taken "Balcomb's" she would be herself again.

The house was dark as he approached. He softly climbed the stairs, laid the bottle on the steps and put up his hand to touch the bell, when something soft touched his hand. A white ribbon floated softly outward, borne on the night breeze—a white ribbon tied to a bunch of Ascension lilies. He gazed horror-struck. The precious bottle, stumbled over by his trembling feet, fell to the step below and broke in a thousand pieces, while the life-saving fluid it had contained left a dark stain on the marble.

"The lady would not need it now. He was too late. She would never need doctors, never need nurses, never need medicines, never need anything earthly any more!" He turned down the steps and started homeward. There was a lump in his throat no swallowing would clear. There was a smart in his eyes, no blinking would help matters.

The boys in the alley called him again to come and play with them. He shook his head. His mother put away his untasted supper in surprise. Never had he refused to eat before. Jimmy tumbled into bed. He cried softly in the dark. Nobody heard him. People in the great house on First Street knew nothing of his grieving. Perhaps the lady, in the other world, knew it. Of that how body can tell. Meanwhile the night breeze blew softly the ribbon tied to a bunch of Ascension lilies. And the broken bottle of "Balcomb's" lay on the marble steps beneath it, and the bit of paper, uppermost bearing the word, "From a friend. I hope it will make you well."

Meadows Are Piled With Dead.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—"The position on the coast is stationary this morning," says a Daily Mail despatch from Flushing, Netherlands, under date of Sunday. "There is less firing and it is more to the southward.

"The German losses are frightful. Three meadows near Ostend are heaped with dead. The wounded are now installed in private houses in Bruges, where large wooden sheds are being rushed up to receive additional injured. Thirty-seven farm wagons, containing a convulsive mass of wounded, dying and dead, passed in one hour near Middlekerke."

Radway's Ready Relief

Frank Mais, 420 6th St., New York, writes: "My wife suddenly fell very sick with indigestion. I called in the doctor, but he failed to help her any. We have no time to be sick. So I became my own doctor and with Radway's Ready Relief and Pills, I gave her according to Radway's directions, and she went back to work two days later."

AFRAID SHE WAS DYING

Suffered Terribly Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, Jan. 27th, 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives". I did not want to try them for I had little confidence in Patent Medicines, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While ill, I lost several pounds, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives", I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives".

The Second Stage of War Is Favourable To Russians

Comprehensive Resume of the Operations in the East Since the War Opened---Defeat of Germans Before Warsaw Has Been Decisive.

GRAND DUKE'S FINE STRATEGY

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Exactly one month of operations in the eastern theatre of war has decided the second stage of the conflict between the armies of Russia and the armies of Germany and Austria. From every point of view, the advantage is definitely with Russia, as was the case in the determination of the first stage.

For comprehension of the second stage, which culminated in the defeat of the German armies advancing on Warsaw and the River Vistula and their rapid withdrawal, it is necessary to review briefly the main operations of the first stage, the campaigns in East Prussia and in Galicia.

Struck at East Prussia.

Early in August, the Russian armies mobilized and advanced with amazing speed, struck at East Prussia, aiming for the fortress of Koenigsberg and the line of Danzig, Thorn, Simultaneously Russian armies advanced on Lemberg, the capital of Galicia. No attempt was made by Russia to develop a central offensive from Warsaw toward Upper Silesia. The purpose of the drive at East Prussia was to clear the Russian right flank from dangers of a turning movement and to strike terror into the hearts of the Germans in the north, thereby achieving a distinct moral advantage and compelling Germany to detach troops from Belgium and France. The invasion of Galicia was designed to safeguard the Russian left flank and to crush Austria's military power, a necessary accomplishment to a serious attack against Germany.

Von Hindenburg's Feat.

In August, Russian armies overran East Prussia, terrified the peasants, alarmed Berlin, occupied important towns and seemed about to astonish the world. But Germany, in the full tide of power, met the situation brilliantly. One of the ablest of her strategists, Gen. von Hindenburg, was sent to the East Prussian field. Utilizing his remarkable system of railways, he sent army corps to East Prussia. Von Hindenburg, by daring strategy, enveloped a great Russian army under Gen. Rennenkampf in the marshy region of the Masurka Lakes and won, early in September, the decisive victory of Tannenberg, which followed a victory at Allenstein. The Russians lost heavily, a total, perhaps of 70,000 men, and only escaped annihilation by a rapid withdrawal to the River Niemen. The Germans pressed their advantage and by September 20th had reached the Niemen and were launching a terrific effort to cross that stream.

Retreated on 20th.

They were defeated, sullenly, and began retreating on the 20th. Rearguard actions continued until Oct. 1, when the Russians made their victory decisive by crushing the German right wing in the forests of Augustowo. Every German column fled toward the East Prussian frontier, reached it after great losses and settled down on a defensive line well within the frontier. But the campaign in East Prussia was decisive, in fact on Sept. 24th, as the Russian. The Germans' right had failed as disastrously as the Austrians' previous drive. The net result of the whole business was that the Russians were back in territory from which they had been driven by von Hindenburg, were dealing overwhelming blow at their right flank, and were again menacing Berlin and weakening German military power in the western theatre.

In Galicia matters ran a similar course, although there was no important battle in Western Galicia and the Russian withdrawal from the region of Tarnow was prompted by the strategical necessity of straightening their whole line of battle and shortening lines of communication, which had been enormously extended by a too-rapid advance.

The great Sept. 21 of the Russian plans were checkmated by a new and very powerful German offensive. General von Hindenburg, hailed as the preserver of Prussia, was recalled from East Prussia, met the Kaiser and the general staff at Breslau, formulated with them the plan of seizing Poland and occupying Warsaw, happened to Cracow, put new heart into the drubbed Austrians and inaugurated the advance of a German grand army numbering not less than 600,000 men. Appreciating the requirements of the situation the Russians in Galicia fell back to the River Dunajec and occupied very strong lines of defence, holding these lines against a new Austrian offensive stiffened by German reinforcements. Their northern or left wing struck at Warsaw from the direction of Plock. Their centre, composed of first-rate Prussian troops advanced from Lowicz and Rawa, while their southern or right wing menaced Ivangorod and the Vistula from the direction of Radom and Kielce. The campaign was splendidly conceived, and, as is customary with the Germans, thoroughly organized.

Little Opposition.

For three weeks the Germans met with little serious opposition from men, but with tremendous opposition from nature. The country through which they advanced, with exceptions, plains characterized by marshes and a web of trouty-looking streams, presently became impassable from heavy continuous rains, the country was flooded and sodden. The roads became morasses. There were only two main lines of railway, from Thorn and Cholmlacowh. The Russians, using Cossacks in vicious and evasive skirmish, drunk and refreshed, never offering battle, always wasting the country. By the time the Germans were in sight of the Vistula and almost within sight of Warsaw they were wearied. They had lost heavily in stragglers. Batteries had been abandoned in the fogs.

They remained, however, a powerful cohesive and determined force utterly confident of their ability to take Warsaw and drive the Russians eastward from the Vistula. It is apparent at this writing, of course, that the Russian insertion in Poland, and the ability of the Germans to approach the Vistula practically uncontested, was no fortuitous circumstance. On the contrary such passivity was an important part of the whole Russian strategy. Not making the error of underestimating his opponents, and risking destruction by precipitous attack in Poland, the Grand Duke Nicholas concealed his real strength, permitting the Germans to advance, drew them to battle positions chosen long previously by the Russian general staff, and then coolly baited the trap.

The Battle of Warsaw.

On October 15th, the advance of the German left wing was within eight miles of Warsaw. The population of the Capital heard with alarm the booming of heavy German guns. There was something of a panic. German aviators swooped over the City, dropping bombs which did little damage. A few miles to the south, the German centre, having pressed forward to the west bank of the Vistula, was making a supreme effort to bridge that stream, already at flood rush from the great rains. Still southward, the German right, largely composed of Saxon troops, with a few Austrian corps, were struggling heroically to force the Tete du Pont of Ivangorod. But all along the line, Russian artillery devastated the German lines, while the Russian right wing, on the west bank of the Vistula, endured the onslaught of German infantry. The combat of infantry continued from the 13th to the 19th, with great losses on each side, and with no decisive issue.

On the 18th the Grand Duke Nicholas sprung his trap. He had staked the city of Warsaw and all Poland, possibly, upon the strength of its jaws. Avoiding, somehow, the observation of German aviators, he concentrated ten divisions of cavalry at Georgiewsk, north-west of Warsaw, and near the junction of the rivers Vistula and Bug. Suddenly he delivered a terrific counter-attack of infantry against the German lines west of Warsaw. Simultaneously, while the infantry combat was in full force, he swept the cavalry divisions around the German left wing and hurled them at the German rear. The movement was the closing of the millstones. The Germans fought with desperation, but their position was hopeless. After having many thousands on the field of battle, a retreat was ordered. The centre, unable to hold its ground without support from the left, gave way, but in the confusion of the hour neglected to inform the commander of the right wing. The Russians, swarming across the Vistula south of Warsaw, began a pursuit which still continues. It is impossible to estimate the losses. The Russian Government says merely that they were enormous and that too many prisoners were taken for an estimate to be possible at this time. Allowing for exaggeration, it appears that the German defeat was overwhelming and that no course is left to them save a retirement behind their outer lines of defence on the Prussian and Silesian frontiers. At Radom, the Austro-Saxon army is attempting a stand, but the Russians are in superior strength at that point and their advance to the north threatens to cut off the Saxons from retreating into German territory.

The collapse of the German invasion of Poland and the German retreat mark, therefore, the end of the second stage of the war in the east. It remains to be seen if Russia, in turn, can beat down the defence and enter Silesia. At all events, the outcome in Poland must have an important bearing on the war in the west, since Germany, now in danger of losing precious Silesia, must weaken her armies in France.

By Using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets You Can Renew the Appetite of Your Boyhood Days.

Some of you suffering men and women would just as soon think of eating pie, jam and cookies as you would of sleeping with a pair of Bengal tigers. You're afraid of your stomach. If you will only try a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after each meal and at bed time you will very soon overcome this fear of food.

"Cool, it's great to eat like a boy again"

These little Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into the stomach just like food. They mix their new and fresh digestive qualities with your food-juices in stomach and intestines and then disrupt your body, stop gas, intestion and "after eating distress." The act of eating a Stuart Dyspepsia Tablet is a pleasing one. You eat it as you would an "after dinner mint" or a "bonbon." It at once mixes with your food and digests that food. It relieves the strain of that meal, of course, and thus you experience a joyful feling from your food.

Soon your appetite will return. You will find yourself eating the foods you would dearly love to eat, but are afraid to eat; and in a very short time your old digestive system will be returned to you, for our tablets very quickly readjust themselves to normal conditions when we stop the trouble that makes them diseased.

Go to your druggist, no matter where you live, and buy a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. If you are one wishing a free trial of these tablets please address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., and a small sample package will be mailed free.

DARING DEEDS ARE PART OF DAY'S WORK

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The correspondent of The Daily News who has been in an armoured train to the banks of the Yser, gives a good description of the battle in the north-west. He says:

"The battle rages along the Yser with frightful destruction of life. All englishe, can compare with land engines death-sweep this desolate country vertically, horizontally and transversely. Through it the little train human engines crawl and dig, grub and root, skirmishing, charging and bombing in little individual rushes and tussles, tired and puzzled; onward here and there, sleeping where they can, never washing and drinking [illegible]. A friend may find himself facing by a friendly force and few may be blame.

Win and Lose Positions.

"Thursday the Germans were driven back over the Yser; Friday they secured a footing again and Saturday they were again hurled back. Now a bridge blown up by one side is repaired by the other; it is again blown up by one side, is repaired by the other; it is again blown up by the first or left as a death trap till the enemy is actually crossing.

"Actions by armoured trains, some of them the most reckless adventures, are attempted daily. Each day accumulates an unwritten record of individual daring feats, accepted as part of the daily work. Day by day our men push out on these dangerous explorations, attacked by shell-fire, in danger of cross-fire, dynamite, and ambuscades, bringing a priceless support to the threatened lines. As the armoured train approaches the river under shell-fire the car cracks with the constant thunder of guns ahead. It is amazing to see the style at which the guns can be swung.

Machine Gun is Master.

"And overhead the airmen are busy venturing through fog and puffs of exploding shells to get one small fact of information. We used to regard the looping of the loop of the Germans overhead as a hare-brained piece of impudent defiance to our infantry fire. Now we know it means early trouble for the infantry.

"Besides us, as we crawl up sniffing the lines like dogs on a scent [illegible] loads of wounded wait [illegible] on the sidings. Further up the line ambulances are coming slowly back. The bullets of machine guns begin to rattle on our armoured cars. Shells we learned to disregard, but the machine gun is the master in this war.

Foe Scattered by Machine Gun.

"Now we near the river at a flat country farm. The territory is scarred with trenches, and it is impossible to say at first who is in them, so incidental and separate are the fortunes of this river side battle. The Germans are cut out back embracing the lines of the allies' trenches. We creep up and the Germans come into sight out of the trenches, rush to the flank and are scattered and smashed. The allies follow with a fierce bayonet charge.

"The Germans do not wait. They rush to the bridge and are swept away by the deadliest destroyer of all, the machine guns. The bridge is blown up but who can say by whom. Quietly the train runs back.

"'A brisk day,' remarks the correspondent. 'Not so bad,' replied the officer. So the days pass."

Horses Replace Beeves in Vienna

Venice, via Paris, Oct. 24.—Advices received here from Budapest say that owing to the war and the necessity to supply the army with beef the consumption of cattle has been increased enormously. Since the beginning of the war 85,000 oxen have been slaughtered in Budapest, as against 25,000 for the corresponding period of 1913.

The reports say that owing to an inadequate supply in the cattle market live stock is frequently left unfed and unwatered from three to five days. As a result man head of cattle die, and the remainder furnish an inferior quality of meat.

The shortage in the supply of cattle is very apparent. The consumption of horse flesh is rapidly increasing. Five hundred horses brought into Vienna market on Monday sold for from $20 to $30 each.

Since the beginning of the month the prices of eggs and butter in Vienna have risen tremendously, placing them far beyond the reach of the poorer classes. Hungary is now the sole source of this city's supply. The peasants are making enormous profits also from other products, but show such a disposition to hoard their gains that the Catholic clergy in the country districts recently were instructed to urge their people to spend their unexpected gains in buying farm machinery and other useful articles in the interest of the whole community.

OUTFALL SEWER TO BE STARTED NEXT MONDAY

The outfall sewer will likely be commenced the first of next week. It is possible that the project will take a year to complete, and during that time considerable employment will be afforded for local labourers. The labour will be hired in shifts of one or two weeks in length and in this way as many as possible will be helped. The work of constructing the ditching machine as to which in the work is rapidly nearing completion, and as soon as the machine is finished the work will be gone ahead with. Before the ditcher can be operated a sewage disposal plant will have to be erected.

EAT CABBAGE, FISH, SUCCOTASH, NEW BREAD

"Pape's Diapepsin" digests food when stomach can't—Cures indigestion.

Do some foods "repeat" on you, eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, 'ot sits down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favourite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Forty-five Turcomans arrived in Vancouver yesterday in charge of Andrew Hart to join the second war contingent.

In semi-official Liberal circles at Ottawa it is stated that there will be no opposition to the election of Hon. T. C. Casgrain in Quebec County.

Sir Adam Beck has cabled an offer of "Sir James," the famous horse which won prizes at the Olympia Show, to Gen. Alderson, commander of the Canadian army.

Chief Newton of Belleville's police force, while engaged in picking apples in his garden, fell from a ladder, breaking three ribs and sustaining other painful injuries.

Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman, who was on trial in Minocola, N. Y., all last week for the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey, was released on $25,000 bail by Justice Kelby in the Kings County Supreme Court in Brooklyn, yesterday.

The Belgian relief committee in Montreal have received in cash up to date $144,000.00. This does not include a subscription of $10,000 from the Province of Ontario, and several other large amounts which have been promised but not yet received.

The Chinese Foreign Minister has demanded the surrender of a Japanese torpedo boat with its crew, which entered Chinese waters and substituted the Japanese flag for the Chinese dragon, and attempted to do away with the wrecked German torpedo boat, Ilis.

Rebels Defeated.

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 27.—It is officially announced that the rebel, Lt.-Col. Maritz, and his forces have been completely defeated at Kakamas, in the Gordonia district of Bechuanaland, by Union of South Africa troops. Lt.-Col. Maritz was wounded in the engagement and fled to German territory, according to the statement.

OLD CHILD WOKE UP CROSS OR FEVERISH

Look, Mother! If Tongue is Coated Give "California Syrup of Figs."

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing". Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your house. A little given today saves a sick child to-morrow. But get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Eight Inches of Snow Fell at Forest on Monday Night.

Forest, October 27.—Eight inches of snow fell here last night. There is no snow beyond a radius of 15 miles of Forest. The sleighing here is very good.

BOBCAYGEON'S ACTIVITIES

Women Knit and Hold Weekly Sales—Men Drill and Practice at Targets

Bobcaygeon, October 28.—A Soldiers' Aid Society has been organized here. The women are knitting socks and wristlets. They have a store on Saturday afternoon, when they sell vegetables, butter, eggs, home made bread, etc., chiefly donated by country people. A branch organization is formed in the different school sections in the vicinity. There is on hand at present $600. The men have formed a rifle club and have target practice once a week, and Mr. James Sims, a South African veteran, gives the members drill instruction.

FARMERS ADVISED TO TAKE MEN NOW.

Farm Help Will Not be so Plentiful in the Spring.

Warning the farmers of the Province against a shortage of farm help in the Spring, Mr. Macdonnel, Director of Colonization and Immigration is urging them to respond now to the appeal being sent out to relieve unemployment in the industrial centres.

Applications are coming in at the rate of 15 to 20 a day, but they are away short of meeting the demands for employment. Mr. Macdonnel points out that while there are lots of men now, the absolute stoppage of immigration to Canada and the withdrawing of thousands of men for the Canadian contingents will make it less easy to secure help next Spring just when the farmer will be planning to take advantage of the widened and profitable market the war has opened up.

Much Pain From Kidney Disease

Doctored in Vain Until Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Used.

Kidney derangements are often associated with disorders of the liver and bowels, and under these conditions ordinary kidney medicines usually fail to effect cure. It is because of their unique, combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are so generally successful, even in the most complicated cases.

Mr. Emanuel Bernard, farmer, St. Paul's, Kent County, N.B., writes:—"About eighteen years ago my wife was bad with kidney disease, and suffered greatly from headaches, pains in bowels and stomach, and her heart was affected. For 8 year she was treated by her doctor, with no apparent benefit. She then used five boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with most satisfactory results. This gave us such a good opinion of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills that we always keep them in the house to be used for all derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 35c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

GERMAN ATTACK SLACKENS IN NORTH

Allies Make Progress at Several Points

OPTIMISTIC BULLETIN IS ISSUED BY PARIS WAR OFFICE TO-DAY

Violence of the Assaults of the German Forces in the North has Slackened—Decided Advance Made by the Allies at Other Points Along the Line.

LOSSES ON BOTH SIDES VERY HEAVY

PARIS, October 28. — The German forces attempted a violent attack in the vicinity of Craonne last night, only to be repulsed with very heavy losses, according to to-day's official announcement. The three o'clock communique telegraphed from Bordeaux was unusually optimistic in tone. It declared that the German attacks between Nieuport and Arras were becoming less violent, indicating that the force of the German assault on the extreme left has been slackened. North and east of Ypres and between Cambrai and Arras, the allies are declared to be decidedly advancing. The Germans are suffering severe casualties at these points. The French are also advancing in the Woevre district.

LONDON, October 28.—The Times' correspondent in Belgium, wires the following: "Observation from a captive British balloon has revealed how effective has been the fire of the British warships on Ostend, Middlekerke, Lombardsyde, and other coast villages. Not a single wall remains standing in the villages of West Kerke, Slypen and Novie. Several other villages are also in ruins following the German occupation and also evacuation."

The correspondent of the Daily Mail in northern France, under the date of Tuesday, says: "The Germans despairing of crossing the line from Nieuport to Dixmunde, are trying to make a detour to cross the line from Dixmunde to Ypres. Military opinion is that this line will offer the Germans no better scope than that along the Yser canal—rather worse in fact."

A despatch to the Times from Berne, Switzerland, asserts that the Germans are receiving large reinforcements in Alsace and that the French are making great preparations for an attack on Belfort, which is powerfully entrenched.

LONDON, October 28.—All the reports reaching here to-day, indicate that the bloodiest fighting of the war has been in progress in Belgium during the past week, and continues to-day, with but slight abatement. Desperate night attacks directed against the French and British lines by the Germans in their efforts to cut their way through to Calais and Dunkirk, have been repulsed, according to the official word from the war bureau. What the cost of holding this line guarding the coast has been to the allied forces, is in no way intimated by the war office. It is feared, however, that the losses will prove staggering. All the reports declare the Germans pressed their attacks with the utmost bravery and an utter disregard for the number of lives sacrificed in the assaults upon the allied positions.

LONDON, October 28.—The greatest gratification is expressed here at the reports from Canada of the anxiety of men to enlist in the second contingent. Comment is frequent on the fact that Canada is offering better terms of enlistment than is offered for the home army. The Liverpool Courier, for instance, asserts that each man has been promised a grant of land on his return to Canada. In response to Sir Edward Ward's appeal for the gift of books for the troops in Salisbury Plain, 50,000 volumes that were asked for, will certainly be quickly obtained.

CHILDREN MURDERED

Galesburg Man Kills Three of His Family With an Automatic Shot-Gun

THEN SUICIDED

Special to The Examiner:

GALESBURG, Ill., Oct. 28.—Temporarily deranged. Will M. Stromberg, a candy dealer, early to-day blew the heads off his three children with an automatic shotgun, shot off part of his wife's arm ,and then turned the weapon upon himself, inflicting a fatal wound. Stromberg returned home at midnight and announced that he intended to kill his wife. Mrs. Stromberg fought with him while he attempted to shoot her and finally broke loose and ran into the yard. Mrs. Stromberg will recover.

ADDRESS ON FRIDAY NIGHT ON CHARITIES

The citizens are reminded of the address to be given in the Assembly Room of the Public Library on Friday evening by Dr. Turnbull, former Secretary of the Associated Charities in Toronto. He will speak on charitable work, and it is hoped that many will hear him, especially those who are interested in this work. The lecture has been arranged by the local cil of Women.

STILL CONTINUES

PARIS, Oct. 27.—The Russian bombardment of the Austrian fortress of Przemysl, in Galicia, says a despatch to the Havas News Agency from Petrograd, continues during the night, aided by strong searchlights.

Deserters from the fortress, the despatch adds, say that many of its defenders are succumbing epidemics, and that medicine and provisions virtually are exhausted.

All the men of the garrison are obliged to work continually on the fortifications, which the Russians are said to be fast destroying.

PORTUGAL FORCED IN

Germans Are Reported To Have Invaded Province of Angola.

PARIS, Oct. 28. — In a message from Lisbon, sent by way of Madrid, the correspondent of the Havas Agency says:

"Despatches received here say that German troops have forcibly invaded the Portuguese province of Angola, West Africa.

"Preparations are being made to despatch immediately warships and troops from Portugal to Angola."

Angola lies north of German Southwest Africa and borders on the Congo State, which, of course, belongs to Belgium. By traversing Angola and the Congo State the Germans would establish communication between their East and West African possessions. Recent despatches recorded the sending of 10,000 Portuguese troops to Angola under the escort of British warships.

Switzerland To Stay Armed.

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 28.—The triennial election for members of the Swiss National Council resulted yesterday in the change of only eight seats. The standing of the political parties in the council now is: Radicals 110, Conservative Catholics 39, Socialists 18, Liberals 13, Social Reformers 1, Independents 3.

The Government has spent $10,000,000 upon the mobilization and maintenance of Swiss troops guarding neutrality. The decision of the Administration has been that it would not be safe to disarm at the present time.

GENERAL BOTHA IS FIGHTING THE NEW REVOLT

Premier Takes Steps to Put Down Rebellion of De Wet and Beyers —Government in Good Shape

YOUNG BOERS LOYAL

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Oct. 28.—No attempt was made to-day to minimize the seriousness of the latest revolt in South Africa. The new leaders, Generals Christian De Wet and Christian Frederick Beyers have a strong local following in the Orange Free State and Western Transvaal. The admission by the war office that Premier Botha has himself gone to the front to lead the fighting against the new rebels indicates that the government has no intention of treating the revolt lightly. For the last fortnight the government of the Union of South Africa has been endeavouring to keep De Wet and Beyers in line. The Union government is in excellent shape to deal with the uprising. No troops have been withdrawn from that territory, while it is declared here that the younger Boers are almost a unit for the British cause. Because of this latter fact the high officials have high hopes of an early complete suppression of the new uprising.

SAM HUGHES IN FRANCE?

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Oct. 28.—It is rumoured here that Major-General, Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, is now with the headquarters staff of the British and French armies at the front. Before he left he declared his intention, if permitted, to visit the lines of the allies and to see some of the fighting.

The Sugar Prohibition

Will Not Apply to Canada—Designed to get at Germany.

OTTAWA, Oct. 28.—Although the official orders in regard to the matter have not yet been received in Ottawa, the sugar prohibition of the British Government is not interpreted here as applying to Canada. It is designed to get at Germany primarily and to overcome its circumvention of trade prohibition by selling through neutral countries. Great Britain's sugar importations last year were in round figures forty million hundred weight. Of this total almost half was supplied by Germany. When the war broke out trade, of course, was suspended, but it was discovered that German sugar was reaching England by indirect routes.

Laid in 900,000 Tons.

In consequence, the British Government, after laying in a supply of 900,000 tons, has prohibited all importations of sugar. This, as stated, is not understood here as applying to Canada. The domestic situation in Canada may, to a certain extent, be affected, however, if Great Britain's tensive purchases have cut down the sources of supply from which Canada has been accustomed to draw.

It is yet too early, however, to forecast the exact effect. Canada imports no sugar from Germany since trade was suspended, but the Government here has as yet shown no disposition of following the steps of the Imperial authorities and prohibiting importation of that commodity from all foreign countries. Such action seems unlikely.

FIFTY HAVE BEEN ACCEPTED BY THE RANGERS

Recruiting Will Continue at the Armouries Until the Quota is Secured—Are Drilling Hard

ORDERS FOR REGIMENT

Fifty men have now been accepted by the 57th Regiment for service with the second Canadian overseas Canadian contingent. Seven were added last night, out of of a total of ten applicants. Recruiting will continue each evening, at 8 o'clock until the total complement is secured. Twenty-five more men are needed.

The squad commences daily drill at the armouries this afternoon under the direction of Sergt. Instructor Dunkerley. A number of members of the contingent were put through a stiff three-hours' drill yesterday afternoon and to-day the whole squad will be out. Yesterday's drill consisted of elementary work and included a few minutes' "setting up" drill, which will be a daily feature. Soldiers, like athletes, must be in the finest condition possible, and the "setting up" exercises are a great help in gaining physical fitness.

The 57th contingent will drill here until word comes to leave for the mobilization centre of this division, Kingston. The recruits who have been sworn in are of course on the pay roll, receiving government pay of $1.10 per day, with an additional allowance for rations of 75c. per day.

The weekly drill of the 57th Regiment was held last night with a large turnout. Several companies spent the drill hour in the miniature rifle range in charge of Sergt. Instructor Dunkerley. Last night's drill was the last until further orders.

The following orders were issued last night:

Headquarters,
Peterborough, Oct. 27, 1891.

Orders by O. C. 57th Regiment:

1. Regimental drill will be discontinued until further notice.

2. The O. C. has been pleased to make the following promotions: B. Co.—To be corporals provisionally, H. Latimer, A. Cranfield.

3. Recruiting for overseas service will be continued each evening at the armouries until the required quota of 75 men is made up.

WETS AND DRYS FIGHTING TO A FINISH IN OHIO

COLUMBUS, Oct. 27.—Organized "wets" and "drys" have lined up for the last week of war on the liquor traffic which has aroused public interest to the highest pitch and attracted the attention of the entire nation.

On the outcome, to be decided next Tuesday at the polls, depends the future of 5,200 licensed saloons and capital estimated at $100,000,000 invested in breweries, distilleries and wholesale liquor establishments.

Both sides predict a sweeping victory. Drys assert that reliable polls reveal overwhelming sentiment of voters in favour of the proposed prohibtion amendment to the constitution and against the "home rule" proposal repealing the county option law and preventing state-wide prohibition by legislative enactment.

Wets Predict Majority.

Ridiculing the assertions of their enemy, wet leaders declare that careful polls taken in every county show that outside the populous counties of Cuyahoga, Hamilton, Franklin, Mahoning, Lucas, Summit, Montgomery Stark, Butler and Lorain sentiment for and against both amendments is shown to be fairly evenly dilvded. These countries containing the wet cities of Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Youngstown, Akron, Dayton, shown to be fairly evenly divided, declare, will roll up a majority for the "home rule" amendment and against prohibition ranging anywhere from 50,000 to 150,000.

In the final contest this week to influence the 1,200,000 or more electors who are expected to cash their ballots on November 3, money will be spent lavishly.

Germans Are Trying To Make A Stand Against The Russians

Snow Has Interfered With the Russian Advance and Enemy's Resistance Has Become More Pronounced, Although at No Point Have Germans Been Able to Take the Offensive.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, October 28.—To-day's advices from the front say that snow is again interfering with the offensive of the army and delaying the movement of the transports to the front. In consequence the rapidity of the German retreat on their East Prussian positions has been slightly halted, and they are putting up a much more determined resistance. At no point, however, have they been able to assume the offensiv. The latest reports from Przemsyl declare that the fortress is on fire in several places, and that it is being badly bettered by the constant shelling from the Russian guns.

EMDEN STILL ACTIVE

LONDON, October 28.—The German cruiser Emden continues to evade the pursuing column made up of some twenty British and French Warships, and nearly the total reserve strength of the Japanese navy. An official report received from her commander shows that she is now harrassing Japanese commerce. The big Japanese liner Kamazaka Maru en route to Singapore from Japanese ports with a valuable cargo, has been sunk in the Indian Ocean.

OTTAWA, October 28. — The full effect of the Canadian war taxes imposed on liquors, tobaccos, etc., last session has not yet become apparent on the revenue of the Inland Department. The total revenue collected by the Department from all sources in September last as against September of 1913, shows a falling off of nearly $330,000.

BERLIN, via The Hague, October 28. — Although the German war office admitted to-day that fighting in Belgium has been of the most desperate character, with heavy losses to both sides, only the greatest optimism was expressed as to the ultimate success of the campaign now being directed against the seaport cities. "The enemy has offered stubborn resistance," a statement issued from the war office declared, "but their losses have been enormous in opposing the advance of our troops, who are fighting with the greatest bravery."

RUSSIAN PRESS INDICATES THE SUCCESS OF FIRST TWO MONTHS

PETROGRAD, Oct. 28. — The Novoe Vremya makes the following comment:

"We have now finished the second month of the war. Although we were on the whole fortunate during the first month, we were overtaken by a great calamity. The second month has not been marked by a single failure. We have not only beaten the Austrians, but we have seen the conquest of a kingdom —Galicia—and a duchy—Bukovina. We have captured strongly fortified points held by the enemy as well as great provision depots, a large number of guns, trains, etc.

"We have hundreds of thousands of prisoners. Aside from the value of these successes from a military point of view they are significant as a realization of our national aim, is that they give back to Russia land which was wrested from her 600 years ago. If we are able to hold this land these days in Russian history will be appreciated in the centuries to come."

Another Russian newspaper in referring to the recent repulse of the Germans along the Niemen River says:

"We have now proved the German soldiers to be ordinary soldiers and not the supermen which they have been called."

The new present unity of feeling in Russia and the loyalty of a population commonly thought of as revolutionists pervades every class. Restaurant keepers, whose rooms were converted into military headquarters during the mobilization of troops, have yielded without hope of compensation. "It is our fight," said one of them, "why should we not help to pay for it."

HIGHWAYS AND BYWAYS.

It is regrettable that the "movement headed by Mr. W. A. McLean, the Chief Highways Engineer of Ontario," justifies what is implied in the phrase, highways and byways.

According to the "Canadian Motorist":

"This movement has for its object the achievement of a scheme for building a trans-provincial highway from east to west through the most thickly settled portions of Ontario. The projected road would connect Windsor and Montreal, running through London, Brantford, Hamilton, Toronto, Oshawa, Cobourg, Kingston, Belleville and Brockville."

The "Motorist" is keen on the proposal and naturally so. It is published in the interests of motoring, and the proposed "highway" is primarily in the interest of motoring. In its leading article the "Motorist," in advocating this highway says it would "not only be the main route for motor traffic between Windsor and Montreal," and adds 'but it would be the shortest route by nearly a hundred miles between Buffalo and Detroit, and would therefore attract thousands of tourists from the United States to Ontario."

It is therefore evident that the prime and principal object of this trans-provincial highway, is to provide a first class road for Canadian motorists and touring motorists from the United States.

Now there is no objection or antipathy to the motor—it has come to stay and holds an important place in pleasure traffic and in an increasing degree, in commercial traffic. Not one of the least points in favour of the motor is that it needs good roads and its general use furnishes a powerful impulse to their construction.

But provincial action and provincial funds should not be devoted too largely to providing highways for motoring, especially to the neglect of more important roads. The interests of the farmers and the general public should not be overlooked. There are thousands of farm vehicles in the province to one motor, and only one out of a thousand of these thousands can get direct benefit from the trans-provincial highway.

The farmer and market gardener need good roads to get their produce to market or to the railway station, much more than the comparatively rare autoist needs a first rate highway. Good roads affect the very life—living — of the farmer. The facility with which he can get his produce to market over good roads proportion his prosperity and the price the town and city consumer has to pay for his produce. A farmer or market gardener, if they have good roads to permit rapid and easy access to market, can make more money at low prices than they can make at higher prices for goods slowly and labourously conveyed to market over bad roads. Thus it is more to the interest of the farmer as well as the town dweller that there should be more and other good roads than a good small stretch of highway from Windsor to Montreal.

No trunk highway can be of the most general good unless access to it is given by good lateral roads. What would be the feelings of a farmer, coming to take the trunk highway to market, to see gay lines of motor cars bearing happy pleasure parties smoothly over the smooth, easy trunk highway, while he is ploughing through the mud, ruts and bumps of a neglected byway?

We see a great deal in print of the benefits of trunk roads for pleasuring motorists (all right in its way), but nobody seems to think of the farmers, a thousand times more numerous than motorists, whose industry is the very backbone of the nation, and its prosperity the measure of the prosperity and progress of the country. By all means give the motorists good roads, but don't confine the good roads to a narrow ribbon of highway from east to west. Motorists as well as farmers will profit as much if not more from good byways as from good highways, stretched out in a single line for 560 miles. It is not much in the motorists' interest, not to speak of the farmers, if he has to smash his springs and bump the life out of his machine over bad byways in order to reach the perfect highway.

By all means build the trans-provincial highway; but don't forget the byways—the side roads. The greatest good to the greatest number should be the motto of the Ontario Government; and the Chief Highways Engineer of Ontario, would not be blamed to any large extent, if he "headed a movement" for the improvement of the general road system of the province.

As remarked, there are a thousand farmers to one motorist, that is if we exclude United States motorists for whom it is proposed to build speedways; and the interests of the great producing and world-feeding class should receive at least as much and as prompt attention as the limited class that chiefly want good roads for pleasure.

We are suffering in this very city from the policy of one-sided road development. We are putting splendid pavements over a few streets in the middle of the city, and neglecting the other seven-eighths or nine-tenths of the city. Any motorist will tell you that if he gets any pleasure from using city streets, he must confine himself to dawdling around a small circle in the middle of the city. The great bulk of our street traffic has to be done over inferior earth and gravel streets, in a chronic state of disrepair, and the average user of a vehicle, has to pass over these bad streets for miles before he can get upon a smooth, paved street.

City pavements are a blessing in the middle of the city, but that should not be the only part of the city to have decent roads. A trunk line through the province would be a blessing, but that should not be the only stretch of good road in the country.

The byways, the connecting roads over the whole province should be made better and no government policy is a good one that does not direct its chief efforts to improving the "side roads" as well as, and in preference to, a single line of highway that, great as is its special benefit, gives infinitely less important, and infinitely less wide-spread good than would come from general improvement — of the general road system of the province. In providing "highways" we should not neglect the "byways."

OUR INDIAN TROOPS IN WINTER.

It is asked how the East Indian troops will stand the winter of Continental Europe. They will probably stand the winter better than the enemy will withstand them. It is a fact that the fighting races of India come chiefly from elevated regions, which have a very cold winter; some from highlands where, for four or five months of the year the temperature is much lower than the average winter in France or Belgium. While our Indian troops can stand the winter in Europe, there is no reason why they should not be given a trial of the climate of South Africa. They can easily be shipped across the Indian ocean to Africa, and they will give a good account of themselves in helping to settle the rising in that country, which is assuming considerable proportions, but not beyond the capacity of the gallant Botha to deal with. In case Indian troops are sent to South Africa, they will soon convince the revolting burghers that they have bitten off rather too big a mouthful.

A NONDESCRIPT MEDLEY.

The German newspapers don't have a very high opinion of the Canadians composing the first overseas contingent. The Reinisch Westfaliche Zeitung of Essen, where the Krupp works are situated, says that the "Canadian contingent is a nondescript medley, made up in part of such diverse elements as Red Indians, Russians, Servians, Montenegrins, Frenchmen and Belgians."

This estimate of the Canadian forces is quite consistently German, since, of course, it is false, what we might expect of the organs of a ruling class, that has, in every way, "lied" for "the day." There is nothing truthful or square or upright in the Kaiser's class of Germans. Lying, spying, deceit, treachery, disregard of treaty obligations, disregard of the white flag, false news, monstrous lies to deceive the German people — it doesn't deceive the world—are the means employed to help the Kaiser's mad dream of "world domination." We can't expect that the Canadians would be spared. They need no defence. In due time they will speak for themselves—through the mouths of their Ross rifles. The Kaiser has had to pretty severely revise his opinion of "French's contemptible little army," and he will find that the Canadians are in the same class.

ATTITUDE OF LABOUR TOWARDS THE PRESENT WAR SITUATION

What says Labour of the death-grapple in which the nations are engaged? Are the inarticulate millions who have striven through their trades unions and international organizations to make an end of war standing aside in an attitude of watchful waiting, or as conscripts do they participate in battle and siege with sullen reluctance? It is difficult to learn how the German Socialists regard the war, but the weight of evidence indicates that the rank and file of the party in Prussia, where Socialism has its greatest strength, believe that this is a struggle for national existence, and that in such a conflict the Socialist must sink his demand for social equality and industrial reorganization, and do battle side by side with the men of the privileged classes for the integrity of the State. Mr. Wm. Joyce, a very well-known Toronto Labour reformer, discussing the attitude of the German workman toward the war, speaks of it as likely to cause the collapse of international Socialism:

"In no country," he says, "had Socialism made such advance as in Germany. To such dimensions had it attained it was altogether within the probabilities that it would control the Parliament of the country in a few years. But another power was being built up in Germany at the same time—militarism. One was the antipodes of the other. The Will to Power versus the Will to Right. The test came. Power rode over Right as though the latter was not. Socialism in Germany is dead. With it passes away Socialism in all lands. Socialism was to destroy War. War has destroyed Socialism.

"But the working men and women are not left defenceless. Trade unionism has survived wars and will survive this greatest of all wars. To this end it is essential that the the militarist power of Germany be broken beyond repair. British trade unionists the world over may enter the armies of Britain with the full conviction that they are fighting for their own freedom and the freedom of their brothers and sisters. There can be no doubt of the result. Freedom shall not perish from the earth. God lives and rules. The Kaiser and the horrible system of which he is the head and front shall perish. Blessed are they who shall have a part in the glorious work of freedom's victory."

Mr. Joyce's statement represents fairly the attitude of Canadian organized labour toward the war. The workers of the Dominion are furnishing gladly the rank and file of volunteer armies in the determination that "Freedom shall not perish from the earth." There is no need of conscription, no necessity to spur the unwilling. As the call comes Canadian workmen step forward "with the full conviction that they are fighting for their own freedom and the freedom of their brothers and sisters."

And what of the British workman? He, too, has been striving against the spirit of caste, against class legislation, against inequality in the distribution of wealth that leaves the many under the harrow of poverty and makes the few rich beyond all computation. Where does he stand in this day of decision? A pamphlet issued recently on "The British Labour Movement and the War," and bearing the signature of most of the leaders of Labour, makes this plain. It was issued specially to clear away misconceptions due mainly to the reproduction in Great Britain and abroad "of misleading and often entirely false statements." After calling to remembrance the efforts made to promote friendly relations between the peoples of Britain and Germany, and showing how hope was beginning to dawn, that out of this intercourse would grow a permanent peaceful understanding, the leaders of British Labour point out that all their efforts were nullified by the determination of the German military caste to make Germany the dominant military power in Europe with the Kaiser the dictator over all.

"Such a victory would have meant the death of democracy in Europe," say these British Labour leaders, "and until the Power which has pillaged and outraged Belgium and the Belgians, and plunged nearly the whole of Europe into the awful misery, suffering, and horror of war, is beaten, there can be no peace. While the conflict lasts England must be sustained both without and within. Combatants and non-combatants must be supported to the utmost. The Labour movement has done and is doing its part in this paramount national duty, confident that the brutal doctrine and methods of German militarism will fail. When the time comes to discuss the terms of peace the Labour movement will stand, as it has always stood, for an international agreement among all civilized nations that disputes and misunderstandings in the future shall be settled not by machine guns, but by arbitration."

On the day when the nations meet to re-create the political system of Europe out of the wreckage left behind by the great war Labour will be able to exercise a more potent influence than it did at the outbreak of hostilities. The humbling of the war lords and the destruction of their power must mean the exaltation of the ideal of the Labour leaders of Britain. "Not by machine guns but by arbitration" shall the world's peace be safe-guarded in the days that lie before.—The Globe.

ONE GERMAN WHO FAVOURS GERMANY BUT OBJECTS TO THE KAISER

A private letter has been received from Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, who after his illness, took a position in the Canadian Government Immigration Office, Boston. After some personal references and the statement that his family is joining him, Dr. Langfeldt writes as follows of the war, which The Examiner is permitted to publish:

Boston, Oct. 21, 1914.

I am much distressed at this war. I had never thought it possible that Germany would ever antagonize England. For when I was there two years ago, I knew, what I always knew, that the Germans have no antagonism towards England, if it were only thoroughly understood that Prussians and Germans are not of the same race, as so many think. The former are descendants from the Huns and pro-Russians, and are much disliked by the Germans. I personally, had a great dislike, and more so now, of the Kaiser and his militarism and his claims to be the chief of the German Empire, though by force of circumstances he was made the latter. I believe that a thorough defeat of the Germans and Austrians will redound to the benefit and happiness of the two nations and enable them to obtain at the end of the war the privileges of British democracy. In the meantime it will cost many precious lives, and the sacrifice of many noble sons of all nations concerned. But no true freedom and happiness has ever been attained to without sacrifice. My heart aches for the people of my native land, who I believe, are in this war against their will; but, for that matter, the Kaiser does not ask them whether they want to be at war or not. They have to do as they are told, without having a voice given to the representatives of the people, as the cabinet is not responsible to

Germans Fail In Vigorous Offensive In East Prussia

Russian General Staff Announces a Resumption of Fighting at the North End of a Long Battle Line

PRISONERS TAKEN

PETROGRAD, Oct. 28.—The following official communication from the Russian General Staff was issued here last evening:

"Fighting has begun on the front in eastern Prussia. We have repulsed fierce German attacks in the region of Bakalarsewo. We took at Gombin, on the left bank of the Vistula, a convoy of prisoners.

"The battle front on Oct. 26 extended from Kouthe through Tesow, Rawa, Nowemiasto, Ballbrzegi and Glowaczow to the mouth of the Ilanka.

"Among the German troops there were many recruits.

"The fighting was especially fierce around Tesow and Rawa, where we captured portions of the enemy's positions.

"We won a victory that was essential toward Novo, Alexandria and Bwolen (Russian Poland). The enemy there is in retreat. We took about 50 officers and 3,000 men, several machine guns and eight cannon.

"South of Solec our troops, after crossing the Vistula, took eight officers and 300 men and some machine guns.

"Around Przemysl we have advanced as far on the railway as Stare-miasto and Surkaz."

Reliable information received here from Warsaw, giving a detailed history of the attempted German advance in Russian Poland, says that the Russian generals are absolutely at a loss to explain what they call a German error in delaying a night attack until the opportunity was lost.

For unknown reasons the Germans suddenly decided to delay the attack until morning, which allowed the Siberian and other Russian reinforcements adequately to protect the city. Papers found in the possession of German officers indicate that the general plan was to attack Warsaw that night. One explanation for the change in the plan is that the Germans failed to secure the assistance of the Polish element upon which they had counted.

The Russians are now engaged in a constant succession of hand-to-hand battles with the columns falling back from the Vistula. The main strength of these now extends over an irregular line from the Radom woods westward in the direction of Piotrkow and upwards into the woods south of Rawa.

The bulk of the heavy casualties comes from bayonet fighting in the deserted villages where the Germans are seeking to establish themselves. From the nature of the operations now in progress it is foreseen that there would be several days of appalling casualties.

The Russians greatly outnumbered the retreating columns, whose wings are constantly threatened by the approach of Russian troops.

Gen. Franklyn Passes Away

Death of Commander of Division of Kitchener's New Army is Announced

LONDON, Oct. 28. — Lt.-Gen. Sir William Edmund Franklyn, who commanded the third division of Kitchener's new army, died suddenly last night.

Lt.-Gen. Franklyn, prior to assuming the command in Kitchener's army, was military secretary to the Secretary for War, which post he had held since 1911. He was born in 1856 and served with distinction in India and other countries. He was director of the adjutant-general's department of the War Office in 1904-06.

A casualty list issued last night, dated Oct. 23 reports 16 officers killed, 35 wounded and 22 missing. Among the wounded are Brig.-Gen. C. T. McM. Kavanagh and Lt.-Col. E. B. Cook, First Life Guards; Lt.-Col. A. F. H. Ferguson, Second Life Guards, and Lt-Col. B. E. Ward, Middlesex Regiment.

Capt. John Jacob Aster, First Life Guards, son of William Waldorf Astor, was wounded in a battle in France.

The 60th Prussian casualty list, with accompanying Saxon and Bavarian lists, was published in Berlin yesterday. The list is headed with the name of Lt.-Gen. Frederic of Saxe-Meiningen, who was killed in a battle near Montigny, Aug. 22.

WHAT "ASQUITHS" ARE.

(Letter from Mechanic S. Kiddall, Royal Flying Corps).

The French tobacco is terrible, and the matches! Oh! Our fellows have christened them "Asquiths," because you have to "wait and see."

I am afraid I shall have to wait and see you, as our censor is hot stuff, from what I have heard. Please send me three or four hundred cigarettes, for which I would be eternally obliged. I will pay back the cost of them when I come back, but you will have to take the risk of my not coming back at all.

KISS OF GRATITUDE FOR BIG GUARDSMAN WHO BROUGHT AID

Mme. Livron, a French woman, writing from Soissons to her sister at Nyon, near Geneva, explains how she kissed in joy "a great big British Guardsman."

"For nearly two weeks," she writes, "we had nine German soldiers billeted in our small house, some coming, some going, but they were always nine. Most of them were peasants and dirty.

"They took all our beds, and myself and the three children were obliged to lie on blankets on the floor. They seized everything eatable in the house, and ate before us while we were all starving, and would not even give the children some bread, though Lucie, the oldest, begged for it. I was heart-broken.

"Suddenly one morning about six o'clock, there was a terrible noise. I thought we were going to be bombarded. But, no. The British were coming.

"All the Germans fled like pigeons. What cowardice! After treating us so badly. I shouted after them, 'Gentlemen, wait a bit; the British wish to speak to you.'

An hour later the British entered Soissons. Mon Dieu! What big fellows; but they are of the guard which protects the King of Britain at London. I jumped on the shoulders of the first Anglais that entered my house—you know I am polite—and kissed him. Poor soldier, he was much embarrassed.

"He did not speak French and I know no English. It is a pity. But sister, it is a pity to send such fine, big men to be shot.

"Dou you know what the British soldiers did? They cleaned the house entirely, and learning my story mostly by signs, went out and brought me in food. The stayed two days with me, and then went northwards.

"I shall never forget the kindness and forethought of the British. May they return!"

HAVE ISSUED NEW RULES.

Private Bills Must Be Introduced Before Legislature Opens.

The City Council will have to get its legislation ready at an early date for the next session of the Legislature. The City Solicitor has received a copy of new rules issued at the Parliament Buildings, respecting the application for private bills. These must be filed eight days before the opening of the session, and advertised six weeks in advance. Under the old rules bills could be in within four weeks after the session opened. The time of advertising is unchanged.

AN EASY WAY TO GET FAT AND BE STRONG

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on clogging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Thanks to the remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine into simple form the very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This master-stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh-builders. Sargol aims through its re-generative, reconstructive powers to open the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to every starved, broken-down cell and tissue of your body. You can really picture the result when this amazing transformation has taken place and you notice how your cheeks fill out, hollows about your neck, shoulders and bust disappear and you take on from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Your druggist has it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

Caution:—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.

WASTING SOLDIERS

German Northern Advance Frustrated at Every Point and Allies Are Gaining

ADVANCE IS MADE

LONDON, Oct. 28. — From the mouth of the River Yser at Nieuport in Belgium, to Lens, in France, which constitutes the allied line opposing the German advance along the channel, all efforts of the invaders were yesterday frustrated. Despite the orders of the German war lord that Dunkirk and Calais must be taken immediately and without consideration of the cost, the situation remains the same. The pick of the German troops, more than 200,000 in number, are being thrown away in a vain struggle to cut through the defence. The heaviest fighting of the day is understood to have taken place between Ypres and Roulers. To the southwest of Dixmude the allies not only held their positions but made substantial gains.

Although the Germans now have their big Howitzers in action, the guns which demolished Liege, Namur and Antwerp, these powerful weapons are proving much less effective against mobile forces than in siege operations. The allied commanders have adopted a policy of constant manoeuvring. Large forces never remain in the same place very long and the destruction from the German pieces is negligibly small. Another factor which is counting against the Germans is the character of the country along their route of advance. The land is extremely flat and entirely unsuited to intrenching on the scale carried out along the Aisne. This compels the German infantry to come forward in close formation across open plains and the execution of the allied artillery is described as terrible in the extreme.

Advices from the neighborhood of Ghent state that the city has been practically evacuated by the German garrison, their place being taken by Austrians. Heavy reinforcements continue to come up on both sides.

The naval contingent is checking all efforts of the Germans to advance directly along the coast. The three monitors which rendered such splendid service in the early days of the fighting and which are said to have been damaged by fire from shore batteries, are understood to have returned yesterday and resumed their play on all German positions within reach.

An unconfirmed report says that a portion of the German army, numbering 5,000 men was annihilated west of the River Yser by a large force of French. The Germans attempted to storm the French trenches and were allowed to approach very near their objective when they suddenly found themselves subject to an enfilading fire. Only a few hundred of the attacking column escaped.

A notable success of the French is reported from the east end of the 300-mile front. A drive in the vicinity of Nancy threw the Germans over the French border into Lorraine. From Pont-a-Mousson to Pagny, the entire country is freed of the invader.

St. Mihiel is in the hands of the Crown Prince despite all efforts to dislodge his forces. But east of that town the French are making splendid progress and the enveloping movement against his position is expected to reach an early and successful issue. North of Metsicourt, the town in the heart of the Argonne forest, taken Monday, the Germans lost additional ground yesterday.

There was renewed activity on the centre yesterday morning when a bombardment from French guns drove the Germans from fortified posts between Steinbrunn and Berry-au-Bac. Several German batteries are said to have been blown to bits. At all points the German offensive appears to have reached a critical stage. They must either go forward or backward. The latter eventuality seems most unlikely and military authorities predict a general retirement all along the front within a few days. On the other hand reliable reports say that the Kaiser was in Belgium on Sunday and gave emphatic orders that Dunkirk and Calais must be captured, laying special stress on the importance of the latter port.

Along the old front, stretching from the River Oise to Steinbrunn, from which the Germans withdrew their best troops to strengthen the army which is attempting to advance along the coast, the French have been taking the offensive, and to the north of Soissons have been engaging in an artillery duel with the Germans in which they have destroyed several of the German batteries. They seem to have been playing at this game for some time, for the last three reports from Paris have announced the destruction of German guns.

Further east, the offensive tactics of the French have driven the Germans, who were threatening Nancy back across the frontier. The Germans, however, are so strongly entrenched along the long line that it is believed they are preparing to remain for the winter, holding their positions until their present objectives, the northern ports of France have been attained.

A BATTLE IN PACIFIC?

German Cruiser "Leipzig", Reported Towed into Esquimalt

VANCOUVER, Oct. 28. — Rumors are again floating around regarding the mystery ship the German cruiser Leipzig. This time it is said, on what appears to be good authority, that the Leipzig was towed into Esquimalt harbor yesterday by a Japanese warship, presumably the Idzumo, which has been on this coast for some time, and that she is in a battered condition.

From the statements which have been made in Vancouver there must have been a fierce engagement somewhere in the Pacific, as the Leipzig had a large number of wounded, who are now being attended. Beyond this statement, no confirmation can be obtained of the story.

Steamer Sunk By Mine.

BELFAST, Ireland, Oct. 28.—The British freight steamer Manchester Commerce, bound from Manchester for Montreal, struck a mine at midnight last night off the Irish coast and sank. Captain Paine and thirteen men were drowned. Thirty other members of the crew were saved by a trawler.

Cargo of Merchandise.

MONTREAL, Oct. 28.—The Manchester Commerce was 3,444 tons net, and was owned by the Manchester Liners, a British shipping corporation. She carried a crew of about 43 men. Her master, Captain Paine, is well known and highly respected in Montreal shipping circles. The lost steamer was one of the large freighters plying regularly between Montreal and Manchester, and she left Montreal for the last time on Oct. 3.

EX-PRESIDENT'S SONS IN ARMIES OF FRANCE

PARIS, Oct 28.—Among the sons of ex-Presidents of France who are now with the French armies are the Marquis de MacMahon, Duke of Magenta, who is a brigadier-general at Belfort, while his brother, Count de MacMahon, is an infantry colonel; Major Sadi Carnot, who is doing duty in a fort near Montmorency; Claude Casimir-Perier, husband of Mme. Simone, the actress, who is an infantry lieutenant, and was recently wounded; Paul Loubert, who is a lieutenant of infantry and is serving at Verdun, and Andre Fallieres, who is attached to the Ministry of War.

CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN AT ONCE HEAD COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

In One Minute Your Stuffy Nose and Head Clears, Sneezing and Nose Running Cease, Dull Headache Goes.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake to-night struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith — just once — in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

THE J. M. GREENE CO., are pleased to announce, that after several years experience, handling the different makes of talking machines and watching the evolution that took place in the production and perfection of these marvelous musical instruments, we have arrived at the conclusion that the New Edison Diamond Disc is by far the greatest triumph yet produced in a sound reproducing instrument, and have decided to handle the Edison goods exclusively, convinced that our patrons will receive more real satisfaction and pleasure from the use of the Edison Diamond Disc or Cylinder Machines than from anything else we could sell them. We thoroughly believe this move is the best not only for our own interests but for those of our patrons. We must believe in the goods we sell before we recommend them to our customers, and to the Edison Diamond Disc Cabinet Machines and Amberolas, we can give our unqualified endorsement in every case. Sound reproduction by the Diamond Disc Machine is undoubtedly far superior to all previous achievements of Mr. Edison. No more needle changing. The reproduction point is a genuine diamond that never wears out and requires no changing. The Edison Diamond Disc Machines are bound to be the choice of discriminating music lovers in the end, thus we are following our principle—to offer the best only.

PUT WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL

WITH the advent of our adoption of the Edison goods exclusively, we want to give every home in Peterboro' and District a special opportunity to instal one of these magnificent instruments, whether they already have an Edison instrument of older style, or a talking machine of any other make already in the home or not. In case you have an instrument which no doubt you have enjoyed in the past because it was good at the time you bought it, we will gladly take it as part payment on a New Edison Diamond Disc Amberola or Cabinet Machine, and make a liberal allowance for it. The balance we will arrange on the easiest possible terms of payment. Where there is no instrument of the kind in the home at present we will be pleased to place the instrument you may select from our splendid stock, in your home for a two or three days' demonstration, and in case of purchase can make the terms of payment most favourable and easy for anyone to handle. This Free Demonstration will put you under no obligation to buy whatever but is following out the wish of Mr. Edison the great inventor, to see "an Edison in every home in Canada."

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

The Possibilities of Northern Ontario

Are Presented in the Demonstration Car Which Will Remain in the City Until To-morrow Morning. Fine Display of Fruits and Vegetables.

The demonstration car which has been sent out by the Department of Agriculture and the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway Commission for the purpose of making known the agricultural achievements of Northern Ontario, arrived in the City to-day. It will remain on the C. P. R. siding adjacent to the Campbell Milling Company until to-morrow morning. The exhibit is in charge of Mr. C. E. Palmer and Mr. A. Morrow. Both of these men are familiar with the country and its possibilities, and are in a position to speak authoritatively of the work which has been carried on there. The visitors to the car to-day were numerous and keen interest was manifested in the display of fruits, vegetables, grain, mineral and samples of timber. The exhibits easily bear out the contention of the pioneers responsible for the development of Northern Ontario, as to the richness and adaptability of the soil.

The Exhibits.

The grains from Temiskaming are a feature of the exhibit. Oats are shown that weigh forty pounds to the bushel; wheat that rivals Number 1, hard, and peas that cannot be beaten in Canada. In addition, the straw is of good length and of a good colour. There are apples and plums of the finest quality, and a choice collection of the smaller fruits. Alfalfa and barley exhibits are equal to the other grains shown. The exhibit of vegetables include cauliflower weighing up to ten and twelve pounds. The turnips, mangolds, onions and potatoes all bear witness to the fertility of the soil of Northern Ontario and to the excellence of the climate. A splendid collection of minerals and wood is included in the exhibit, but special emphasis is laid on the agricultural possibilities of the new land.

Rapidly Filling Up.

Mr. Palmer and Mr. Morrow are thoroughly conversant with the agricultural possibilities of the "clay belt." Their object is to make known the productiveness of the country and to induce the prospective settler to remain in Ontario, where there are abundant openings for the exercise of his ability.

Speaking of the social and educational facilities of the country Mr. Palmer states that schools are situated at convenient points and are fully equipped. Rural mail delivery and rural telephone lines are general throughout the settled districts, and roads follow, and in many cases precede the settler. Northern Ontario is rapidly filling up. Of the several thousand visitors who this fall have examined the display many have signified their intention of settling in the "clay belt".

INCREASE IN SHOE POLISH

Another branch of trade that has been more or less affected by the war is the shoe polish manufacturing industry. The large amount of wax used in the manufacture of the paste is imported from Austria and South America, while the colours come from Germany. Both of these products have advanced appreciably as a result of the war.

Although it is not generally realized by many who have their shoes shined that perfume is one of the ingredients used in the manufacture of the polish, a large amount of this sweet scented article is utilized in the production of shoe polish. Quantities of perfume are imported from England, China and Japan.

Five Per Cent. Advance.

"Another article which plays an important part in our business and which we depend upon foreign countries for supplies is tin," said a manufacturer. "We manufacture our own tin boxes and require a large amount of tin plate during the course of a year. This tin plate is manufactured from pig tin, which made a sensational advance soon after war broke out. It jumped from about 40 cents to 65 cents and then went down, but it is still higher than before the war. Our last prices showed an advance of 5 per cent.

WON'T TEAR UP THE PAVEMENT

The pavement, from McDonnel Street, south, will not be torn up, as was originally intended, and then relayed with a "binder coat". This was the Company's first suggestion to remedy the pavement, which has not proved satisfactory, but it has since been decided to lay a flush coat of pure asphalt over the present pavement. To do this the present pavement has first to be cleaned thoroughly and then the flush coat of pure asphalt is put on. A quantity of fine sand is then brushed over the final coat and rolled in. The present surface coat of asphalt is a mixture of which from 88 to 90 per cent. is sand. The flush coat will be practically pure asphalt.

"Mistakes In The Life of a Married Man"

Rev. Dr. Gordon Dealt With Subject in a Direct and Unconventional Manner—The Amusement Question will be Dealt With To-night.

The George Street Methodist church was filled last evening to the doors, at half past seven o'clock. One remarkable feature of the gathering was the large proportion of young men and business men present. These were doubtless attracted in the special subject announced, "The Mistakes in the Life of a Married Man," which Dr. Gordon dealt with in a most direct, personal and unconventional fashion.

Prior to the opening of the meeting, Mr. Edward Hesselberg, occupied fifteen minutes in providing the waiting congregation with his special musical selections. These were especially appreciated by those present, and to-night, Mr. Hesselberg will provide another unique programme, beginning promptly at seven thirty o'clock.

Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the coloured singer, sang three selections, the titles of which were, "Beyond the Hills of Paradise," "When the Trumpet of the Lord Shall Sound," and an old plantation melody, entitled "Steal Away to Jesus." He will sing this evening, "Life's Railway to Heaven," "The Lord is My Light" and "My Mother's Prayer."

Seated on the platform were the Reverend J. R. Webb, of the Baptist church, Adjutant McElhiney of the Salvation Army, the Reverend R. Pogue, of St. Paul's, and the Reverend R. G. Peever, pastor of the George Street Methodist church. The Reverend J. R. Webb opened the meeting by prayer.

Dr. Gordon answered a number of special questions and announced that this evening his whole address would be given up to the questions which bear upon the subject of amusements, answering such questions as these: Is it wrong to dance? Is it wrong to play cards? Is it wrong to go to the theatre? Is it wrong for a Christian to smoke? The address this evening, in answer to these questions, will be exceedingly practical and to the point.

In speaking on the subject announced, "The Mistakes of Married Men," Dr. Gordon made ten points:

(1st) The mistake of living for your own family alone. There are men who have no other concern, save the welfare of their own children. They are absolutely bereft of anything which might be known, as a public spirit. Their enthusiasm for humanity never goes beyond the four walls of the house in which they reside.

(2nd) The mistake of not providing for the future welfare of the family. There are women who have been married for twenty-five years, who have no knowledge or information whatever, concerning the financial affairs of the head of the house. If he were to drop into the grave to-morrow, they would be in absolute ignorance of what provision had been made for the widow and children. A marriage certificate and a life insurance policy should go together. I have known life insurance agents who joked about their business. Life insurance is not a joke and one of the best forms of modern socialism is manifested and crystallized in these fraternal organizations, associations and institutions, where we come together to help each other financially. Sir Bulwer Lytton said, "Never treat money affairs with laxity, for money is character."

(3rd) The mistake of compromising your family by engaging in a mean business. There are men who are making money in the liquor business, they get money, but I am not aware that it calls for any special application of genius or any particular meanness to relish a man of his brains and rob him of the money that he hands to wife and children. Think of the shame and chagrin which comes to the wife and daughters of the man whose business is of such a character that humanity universally crowns him with contempt.

(4th.) The mistake of supposing that your children are not acquainted with your habits. In the days of Charles the First, when a man was convicted of infidelity, they applied one hundred lashes to his back and branded him on the brow, with the letter "I." That was a mean, contemptible thing to do, but by way of illustration let me remark, that your habits are written upon your face, just as contemptible as the letter "I" was branded upon the brow of the infidel, in days gone by. Father, your children know that you swear, they know that you drink, they know that you gamble. It is hard to hide anything from the sincerity and candour of childhood.

(5th.) The mistake of permitting club life to break and blast the home life. There are clubs and clubs, and we thank God for a decent club house, but there are club houses in almost every community, which are veritable hell holes, breathing forth a moral stench and blighting atmosphere. Would to God that we held the moral courage in our day and time, to rise and blot out from our cities, the social institutions which are spreading the virus of moral leprosy.

(6th.) The mistake of neglecting the boys who shall bear your name. Wyatt L. Moodie said, that he knew twelve men in Philadelphia, who would give $250,000 apiece if their sons could be deemed to honour sobriety and industry, but these men had been so busy making their millions, that they had forgotten all about their boys until it was well nigh too late. How little joy a man can get out of his millions, when he has a drunken, idiotic, dissipated son, who calls him by the name of "Father."

(7th.) The mistake of working seven days in a week. The man who goes to his office on the Sabbath Day, to attend to some business matters which he is not able to handle, as he thinks, when crowded and jostled on the other days of the week, is unconsciously doing all his power to break down the vital institution of Christianity in the community. Voltaire was not a professed Christian, but Voltaire said, "There is no hope of destroying Christianity, so long as the Sabbath is kept sacred." The Sabbath is a physical necessity. If you do not take your Sundays regularly, the chances are, you will take them in a row. Man is so constituted that he must have one day's rest in seven. You owe it to yourself, and you owe it to the community.

No Sabbath, no religion,
No religion, no morality,
No morality, no society,
No society—Anarchy.

Blot out the Sabbath and there can be but one result, anarchy.

(8th.) The mistake of allowing your business to crowd out every other issue. E. H. Harriman said, "I would control all the railroads in the United States, if I could get them." He broke his health trying to get them? His ambition was to own a mountain. To-night, he lies buried beneath the mountain which he owned. When he was sick, there were three telephones in his room and a telegraph instrument in the room outside. He died scarcely more than fifty-seven years of age. Was it worth while?

(9th.) The mistake of living and working on stimulants. The sad thing about the man who is becoming addicted to drink is, that nobody will take him by the hand and tell him where he is drifting, and yet each day his hand is becoming more unsteady, and his power of self-control more unreliable. There are men in this audience to-night, who have uttered contemptible words in the presence of wife and children, who five years ago would never have dreamed of such a thing. Rum is beginning to rot the brain. Said a poor fellow in New York city, whose nervous system had been inflamed by strong drink, "I'm dying, hopeless, friendless, pennyless and an outcast, and it might have been different."

(10th.) The mistake of opposing your wife's religion, in the presence of your children. Even an infidel might be proud of the religion of his wife. There is no brighter crown of spiritual glory for womanhood, than that which is wrapped up in a woman's religious convictions. Whether Protestant or Catholic, a man's convictions should be revered. The daughter of Colonel Allen of Vermont, the notorious infidel of the past generation, when dying, exclaimed: "Father shall I believe you or shall I believe mother." After a moment of extreme agitation he replied, "My child believe what your mother has taught you." Infidelity always fails in the presence of death; while on the other and, there is deep meaning in the words of Hannah, "No man has ever been known to deny Christianity in his dying hour."

Dr. Gordon closed his address by a very earnest evangelistic appeal.

Dr. Gordon read, among the questions of the evening, the following, sent to him by one of the Christian women of the city. "Is it right to have five minutes of precious time taken up by men that have done more to hinder moral reform or Christian citizenship, than any man in Peterborough?

In answer to this question and other questions similar, Dr. Gordon stated that before the campaign closed he would deliver a special discourse on the subject of "A Woman's Questions Concerning the Public Men of Peterborough."

Russia Grateful

She Will Rename the Ice-breaker "Lady Grey," the "Canada"

OTTAWA, Oct. 28.—The Government steamer Lady Grey, the ice-breaker, used on the St. Lawrence river and in the Northumberland Straits, which has been sold to the Russian Government, is now at Archangel, where she will be used to keep that northern port open for general traffic and the transportation of war supplies during the winter. The privately owned breaker J. T. Hearne of Port Arthur, has also been delivered to Russia for the same purpose.

A cable from M. Timasheff, Russian Minister of Commerce, was received by H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught as follows: "I beg Your Royal Highness to accept the respectful expression of profound gratitude which I hasten to present in the name of all interested in the Archipelago sea route, for the valuable aid given by Canada in providing the fine ice-breaker, which has now arrived safely at Archangel. It is renamed the Canada, in commemoration of the assistance rendered by the Canadian Government."

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The Girls' Auxiliary of the Y. W. C. A., are very much alive to the interests of the association, and through their special efforts this winter it is hoped that every girl and woman in Peterborough will know more about what an Association means to a city, and what the local Association has to offer to the girls of Peterborough. The first on the programme is a tea to be given by the Household Science Committee, in the Green Room, on Thursday afternoon. Any lady in the City who has not visited the Association rooms is especially invited to do so on Thursday, from 4 to 6.

Bartender Charged With Breaking Law

There was no police court this morning. A local bartender was to have faced a charge of violating the liquor law by selling liquor to a blacklister, and in bottles, but he was ill and could not appear in court. His case was adjourned until a week from today when he will come before the Magistrate.

WATER SUPPLY HAS DECREASED

LINDSAY, Oct. 28—Unprecedented in a retrospection which dates back one-quarter of a century is the shallowness of the water in the Scugog River at the present time. It is a remarkable fact that the water has dropped four inches from Saturday night until to-day.

Should this diminution continue it will force the large lumber mill of the John Carew Co. to close down for a limited time, or until probably the coming spring.

It is understood that the cause of the shrinkage is through logs at Bobcaygeon, which is evidently for the benefit of Peterborough millmen.

Is Lindsay going to stand with folded arms and permit such wanton waste of water to the detriment of our mill owners and the working men of Lindsay?

Some proceedings must be taken at once to stop this waste which, if permitted, will leave many idle men around Lindsay for the winter. Action on the part of proper authorities should be taken without delay.

Voyage Was Delightful One

Mr. Herbert J. Rush, of this City, who was one of the volunteers in training at Valcartier, has written his mother upon his arrival at Plymouth, Eng., on board H.M.S. Arcadian, on the 11th inst. He embarked at Quebec on the 1st inst. He speaks in glowing terms of the voyage across the ocean. The steamship company did their utmost to make all on board happy. They had an orchestra on board and every evening there was a concert given of considerable merit, in which he took part. It was a wonderful sight to see 30 transport ships in three lines convoyed by cruisers, and one never to be forgotten. All ships that came in sight were held up to secrecy as to the whereabouts of the transports.

He also caused to be sent a large photograph of the 7th battery, C.F.A., Canadian Expeditionary Force, Valcartier, 1914, which comprised the volunteers from St. Catharines and Peterborough, who numbered about 250. The photo is a handsome one, and measures about four feet in length, and depicts each one clearly.

EXHIBITION HAS BEEN CANCELLED

Owing to the military authorities taking over the Exhibition Grounds for a training camp for the contingents of Toronto, it has been made necessary to cancel the Ontario Horticultural Exhibition, which was to have been held in the Horticultural Building, Exhibition Park, Toronto, November 10 to 14.

It was the intention to devote the entire proceeds of this year's exhibition to the Red Cross work, and the city had granted free use of the building, and were to have it heated and lighted free of cost.

In commencing this series of advertisements for the Tremendous Patriotic List the ladies would like to repeat that every cent made, above expenses, goes for this Immensely Worthy Cause.

Dr. Gordon Addressed A Century of Men At The Board of Trade Luncheon

Spoke on Appropriate Theme and Musical Programme Was Provided by Messrs. Hesselberg and Greenlaw.

DR. GORDON'S ADDRESS

In the neighbourhood of one hundred local business men were present at the Board of Trade banquet, this afternoon, to hear Dr. J. L. Gordon's address. Mr. Basil Hall, President of the Board of Trade, presided.

The dinner, provided by the Management of the Oriental Hotel, was beyond reproach, and was a credit to that hostelry. A varied and tasty menu was well served and pleased every diner.

Before and after Dr. Gordon's address Mr. A. E. Greenlaw rendered a solo, accompanied by Mr. Edward Hesselberg. His singing, the effect of which was augmented by what the Chairman styled a "perfect accompaniment," was very heartily received, he being forced to respond with an encore. He sang "His Majesty the King" and "King of the Main."

Mr. Hall introduced Dr. Gordon, explaining that he hardly needed an introduction to the audience.

Dr. Gordon took for the subject of his address "The Relationship of a True Citizen to His City." In beginning he made use of a quotation from Dr. Josiah Strong's book "Our Country." Following he made four deductions from the book. First—The Anglo-Saxon Race will one day rule the world. Second—The Central position of the Anglo-Saxon Race will be on the continent of North America. Third—The next chapter of human history will be worked out within the boundaries of the Dominion of Canada. Fourth—The destiny of the Dominion of Canada depends on the character of her 100 cities with 5,000 or more population.

A famous historian had said that Citizenship in modern times had failed for three reasons. First—Personal Indifference; 2nd—Personal Selfishness, and 3rd—Party Spirit.

"It's the hellishness of selfishness," said Dr. Gordon, "that is blighting things nowadays." This was illustrated well by the saying of J. Gould, "When I'm in a democratic district I'm a Democrat. When I'm in a republican district I'm a Republican. When I'm in a temperance district I'm a Prohibitionist. But whether I'm in a democratic district, a republican district or a temperance district. I am for J. Gould, first, last and always."

In his address Dr. Gordon made the following points. First a true citizen believes in his own land. When he was in England two years ago he noticed that four oratorical references always "brought down the house." Any special reference to peace or condemnation of war; and particular reference to the land question; and personal reference to Lloyd George and, fourth, but not least, any direct or indirect reference to the Dominion of Canada. The present European war had lifted Canada immensely in the estimation of the British people. Our investment of men and money for patriotic reasons will bring to us after the war is over a great commercial and material advantage. Immigration will increase and millions of money that would otherwise have been invested in Europe will be sent to Canada.

Secondly, a true citizen will stand for a united Community. As Edward Hale once said the great word of the future will be "Together." We have the greatest blending of nations and races on the continent of North America ever known in the history of the world. We have that same mixture in Peterborough. The Englishman is here and we admire him. The Welshman is here and we respect him. The Irishman is here and we love him. The American is here and we watch him. We are all here together and we should not be ashamed of each other. The speaker found in a restaurant in Peterborough, presided over by a Greek born in Athens, a sign on the wall reading, "No profanity or vulgar language permitted." These folks can teach us something.

Thirdly—A true citizen should wear the crown of prophecy. He himself makes four predictions concerning the future. "There will be one universal language" "The tariff walls and boundary lines between the nations of the earth will be removed." "Men and women will have political equality." "Wealth will be equally distributed according to the skill and ability of the individual," and "that the restriction of the liquor traffic will come into being to such an extent that universal sobriety will be assured."

Every member of the Board of Trade in Peterborough should wear the crown of prophecy. We had in Peterborough a splendid armoury, magnificent schools, great manufacturing concerns, a noble Y.M.C.A., a beautiful Young Woman's Christian Association, a handsome library, fine churches, a great canal and a marvel of invention and construction in the lift lock. But above all nature had done great things for Peterborough. "Therefore," said the speaker, "You should look into the future and provide playgrounds, beauty spots, generous parks and civic breathing places."

Fourthly, a true citizen is interested in the amusements of the people of the community. The days had gone by when we ignore these things, and the time had come when both divisions of the church—Protestant and Catholics—should get together and approve of some decent respectable worthy plays and see to it that performances of that sort are given the patronage of the church. In no other way could the evil be taken away from modern theatres and good be implanted.

Fifthly, a true citizen always has enthusiasm for his city's growth and its welfare. The speaker found in Glasgow, emblazoned all over the city, "Labour for the prosperity of Glasgow."

In conclusion Dr. Gordon said that the business man is the dark horse of history. Everything depends on his character, ability and co-operation. He illustrated the weaknesses of business men and closed with the famous prayer, "God grant that our principal men shall be men of principle."

Among those present were: Mayor Miller, President B. H. Hall, Adjt. McElhiney, Vice-Pres. W. C. Ackerman, Norm. Allison, Sec'y. D. Moore, Dr. Walmsley, Jas. Lewis, C. E. WARSAW NEWS

Special to The Examiner:

WARSAW, Oct. 28.—Mrs. A. S. Maguire, of Peterborough, returned home on Tuesday, having spent a couple of weeks the guest of Miss Lumsden.

Mrs. Robeson, Frazerville, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. Wasson.

Misses Ella Russell and Roxie Mack have accepted positions with Mr. A. F. Choate.

Mr. Allan Hendren, Bowmanville, was in the village on Tuesday.

Mr. W. Richardson, Norwood, was here on business on Saturday.

Professor and Mrs. Gliddon and Dr. and Mrs. Park, Peterborough, were guests of Mr. A. F. Choate on Sunday.

Quarterly Sacramental Services were held in the Methodist Church on Sunday last.

Judging from preparations under way there appears to be no lessening in the popularity of the hunt. This vicinity will be more largely represented in the back country than for some years past.

FRENCH BREASTPLATES THROW OFF BULLETS

Infantry in Argonne Region Make Gains With This Device

PARIS, Oct. 27. — The Journal of Information states that the French infantry have recently gained much ground in the Argonne through the use of a steel breastplate, which, though unable to resist point-blank a bullet, nevertheless is impenetrable at a range which permits the troops to pause before the last rush with the bayonet.

The Journal de Rennes announces that the Russian Government decided to adopt the breastplate at the outbreak of the war, and placed immense orders with the factory at St. Hilaire de Harcouet, which has the exclusive manufacturing rights. The French Government also ordered vast quantities. It has released the reservists employed in the factory, which is busy night and day.

Face Paint Tabooed; Remove Skin Instead

"A few years ago only one class of women painted their faces," says Dolly Madison in Chicago News. "It was a sign of social ostracism and was tabooed in refined circles. The custom has become so universal we must admit it is to be deplored and to be shelved as soon as possible."

How foolish to seek artificial "beauty" of this sort, obnoxious from artistic and moral standpoints, when it is so easy to obtain a truly natural complexion by the use of ordinary unrouged wax, which may be had at any drug store in original one-ounce packages. This unperfumed wax is so effective, harmless and inexpensive, no one need think of using anything else for the purpose. Applied like cold cream at night, and washed off in the morning, it at once begins to show its remarkable rejuvenating effects. It gently absorbs the lifeless surface skin in tiny particles, gradually shows the fresher, livelier, beautiful underskin. Naturally it clears away blackheads and liver spots, pimples, muddy colors and [illegible]

TO-DAY'S MARKETS

Feeders and Stockers—Market slow with prices barely steady. Choice steers, $6.50 to $6.75; medium, $6.25 to $6.50; stockers, $4 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers—Few offered at $60 to $95 each, but the bulk sold at $70 to $80 each.

Calves—Market steady on a short demand.

Choice veals, $9 to $10; common to good, $5 to $9.

Hogs.—Receipts are light but prices unchanged. Selected, fed and watered, $7.50 and $7.15 f.o.b. cars, and $7.75 weighed off cars.

Sheep and Lambs.—Receipts were large and prices easy at Monday's quotations. Sheep, $5 to $6; culls and rams, $2.50 to $4.50; lambs, $7.40 to $7.65; culls, $5.50 to $6.

Your friends will smile if you let your money talk.

Elgar And His Career

Peterboro' Choral Society to Sing "The Banner of St. George"

The announcement that the Peterborough Choral Society have taken in hand the cantata "The Banner of St. George," composed by Sir Edward William Elgar, at the time of the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria, in 1897, recalls the fact that since the days of Purcell, English composers of genius have been scarce, and whether or not posterity concedes that rank to Elgar, he has at least one valid claim to distinction—the disagreement of the critics. Born at Broadheath, near Worcester, on June 2nd., 1857, of intellectual parentage, he early developed musical ability, and at the age of 15, was assistant organist to his father, also playing in an orchestra. From 1879 to 1884 he was the leader of a unique band at the County Lunatic Asylum, composed of the attendants, for which he composed quadrilles and other kindred pieces. His marriage with Miss Roberts, in 1889, gave him the required impetus, and, removing to London, he endeavoured to place his works before the public with but little success at first. It was at Hanley, in Staffordshire, that Elgar's "Saga of King Olaf" met with such noteworthy success that it was recognized that Elgar was a candidate for the laurels. In 1900 he was asked to compose a work for the Birmingham Musical Festival, and produced "The Dream of Gerontius," based on Cardinal Newman's poem, which describes the death of a man, the passing of his soul into the presence of God, and then into purgatory. Since then this work has been given in nearly every musical country in the world. Forty years' handling of many instruments exemplifies what may be called the inductive method in musical composition. The power to apply this method in music has been seen in some foreign composers, but not in Elgar's English predecessors. Knighted in 1904, Elgar has received the degree of Doctor of Music, from Oxford, Dunelm, Leeds, and Pittsburg, (U.S.A.) The fact that an "Elgar" festival was held in Covent Garden for three whole days, in 1904, gives an idea of the prolific nature of his works. The best known of his songs are "Weary Wind of the West," "My Love Dwelt in a Northern Land," "Like to a Damask Rose," "A Song of Flight," "The Pipes of Pan," "Queen Mary's Song" and "In the Dawn." It will be remembered that the famous Sheffield Choir, a few years back, gave a chorus from the "Dream of Gerontius," which was heartily received.

The production of "The Banner of St. George," in its entirety, may lead to the production of the larger work, at some future date.

A COPY OF THE "ROYAL EDWARD NEWS"

Received by Mr. R. J. Kidd From His Son Pte. Clifton Kidd

Mr. R. J. Kidd has received a copy of a miniature newspaper issued on board the Royal Edward, from his son, Pte. Clifton Kidd, who is with the overseas contingent, and went over to England on the "Royal Edward". Pte. Kidd enlisted with a western regiment. The "Royal Edward News," as it is called, is a newsy little sheet, and contains a thrilling account of a man falling overboard and his timely rescue, as well as many other items of interest.

Mr. N. C. Cameron Removes To St. John N. B.

Where He Has Secured the Appointment of Provincial Secretary to the Retail Merchants' Association

ST. JOHN, N.B., Oct. 28 — The Provincial Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of New Brunswick is off to a good start. The new Provincial Secretary is N. C. Cameron, who has been connected with the Ontario Provincial Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, and who is also a member of the Dominion Board.

Mr. Cameron has had considerable experience in association work, having had one year as second vice-president, and one year as provincial treasurer and chief organizer; so that the Board here has been fortunate in securing the services of a secretary of Mr. Cameron's experience. The new board, headed by the President, A. O. Skinner, got into harness for the first time last Thursday night. The different committees appointed to enroll members are meeting with considerable success that it was recognized that Elgar was a candidate for the laurels. In 1900 he was asked to compose a work for the Birmingham Musical Festival, and produced "The Dream of Gerontius," based on Cardinal Newman's poem, which describes the death of a man, the passing of his soul into the presence of God, and then into purgatory. New York Herald Says the Allies Picked the Battle Ground

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—In to-day's review of the war situation in Europe, the Herald's military critic says:

Even should the tide of battle turn against them in the great lethal combat along the contested battle line from Nieuport to Arras, the Germans should be amply prepared to assume an effective defensive.

History holds no better example of military engineering than that which made possible the unshakeable stand of the Kaiser's troops at the Aisne. It is reasonable to believe, therefore, that the German engineers Corps have been busy constructing another system of earthworks at strategic intervals throughout the invaded territory under German control.

Similar work undoubtedly has been accomplished by the engineers of the allied troops, but as the great concentration to the northward the battle front has shifted so often that should the Germans effect an overwhelming advance the allies would have to retire upon a position much less complete in fortification than that which the Germans have had time to prepare.

The opinion has been advanced, however, by military engineers and experts that the ferocity of the German officers in Flanders is largely due to the fact that their defensive works have not been arranged to meet the emergency of a retreat with the allies advancing from the coast on the north-west.

Allies Picked the Ground.

A most important factor is that the choice of the Flanders battle-ground was made by the allied general staff. This has been shown in official German announcements. That the objective of the allies goes further than the carrying of the campaign along the Belgian littoral in order that the land and naval forces may operate in concert and at the same time force the Germans to cover an ultra-extended front is certain.

In view of the disaster to the extreme left wing of the allies which would accompany a decisive German victory at this point, it is apparent that the concentration of the Franco-Belgo-British troops in the south-west corner of Flanders is as strong numerically and in equipment and leadership as is the Germans.

It has developed that the appearance of the German reinforcement in Belgium, some six hundred thousand strong, was not the result of the sudden sending forward from Germany of second line troops. These men have been transported from other parts of the great front and constitute a formidable force of campaign-hardened warriors, who have been on the firing line from the commencement of hostilities.

The necessity of this vast shifting of combatants on the north is in response to the will of the allied general staff, who forced the Germans to accept the north as the principal zone of contact. The result is the stripping of other portions of the battle front, which, at many points, has ceased to become more than two lines of entrenchments, containing scattered forces of infantry and artillery, neither of which are of sufficient strength to assume the offensive.

It is also worthy of note that running at convenient intervals behind the allied line is a network of railway which appears to be in excellent operation, and which has been of inestimable value in the direction of concerted operations in force at any point within a few hours.

Two potent facts take shape, therefore, from the bewildering series of operations of the last few days. The first is that inasmuch as retreat for the allies on the extreme left flank would be a grave setback and costly, strategically in men and war material, the allied general staff is confident that they can hold their ground.

The second fact is that the Germans were forced by the allies to throw their greatest force into the north. The Germans do not control as perfect a system of railroads as that behind the allied line, and the sudden shifting of the offensive to another zone by the allies would, therefore, find their adversary at a poignant disadvantage.

"We may look, therefore, for important developments in the ragged and wooded region btween the Meuse and Moselle Valleys within the next few days."

Burgomaster Defied Foe

Told the People of the Success of the Allies

LONDON, Act. 14.—(by Mail). — At Brussels the Germans issued a proclamation stating that as the Belgian Government had fled, finding itself unable to govern the country, Germany would considerately take over the job. Burgomaster Max promptly had placards printed describing as absolute lies the statements contained in the proclamation, and he had the placards pasted up alongside. This brought down on him a peremptory notice that no posters must be displayed without the sanction of the German commander, who proceeded to warn the burgomaster that a repetition of such an offence would be sternly dealt with.

No whit dismayed, when ordered to haul down all Belgian flags, Max issued the required instructions with an addition to his own: "Let us accept temporarily the sacrifice imposed upon us; let us haul down our flags to avoid a conflict, and let us wait patiently for the hour when we shall obtain satisfaction."

This drove the German governor into a furious temper and that evening Max received a note saying, "The German Government alone has the right to issue notices. You have acted in violation of this right. Such a thing is intolerable. This is the second time you have thus offended and a last warning is now given to you not to offend again."

Max replied: "So long as I am Burgomaster of Brussels I shal lact according to my idea of duty. In this I shall never fail."

He posted no more proclamations, but he aroused the Germans to a perfect frenzy of rage by making a speech from the steps of the Exchange building. Addressing an enthusiastic crowd, he said:

"I am forbidden to post circulars on the walls, and I do not possess any newspapers by which to let you know the good news that I have received. But I cannot be prevented from talking, and I will use that means to inform you every day of the situation and prevent the false news spread by the Germans affecting your spirit."

The brave Burgomaster then detailed the defeats in the field sustained by the Germans and Austrians, and added: "Let every one of you go into the town and inform your friends and families of the good news."

After he had repeated this action several times Max was arrested, and held for deportation, but even the German commanders could not but admire his courage.

It is understood that King Albert proposes to grant titles of nobility to his brave representatives in Belgium's captured capital.

PAVEMENT DUST NEEDS MOISTURE

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—What a difference a few hours make. On Monday I was walking up George street in the rain and I saw the watering cart doing its duty nobly. To-day I had the occasion to come up street again and the dust was blowing in by eyes and nose and ears in such a manner as to make me very had tempered, and I am afraid the young lady who waited on me must have wondered what was the matter, and I think I must have strained my eyes looking for a watering cart as well.

Is there no remedy for this?

Yours truly,

A MOTHER.

VACATION TIMES FOR STREET LAMPS

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In my section of the city I notice a number of street lights out during the past week or ten days.

Is the Chief of Police or the Fire Chief reporting this fact to the Power Company. It seems to me that some person is derilect in their duty lately.

However, I suppose as long as the city don't have to pay the bills for street lights that have been out, it is not so bad, but the disagreeable weather is coming and they would be better lighted up.

Yours truly,

TAXI.

Reduction To Tenants Welcome

Dear Sir,—About rents. Some landlords are doing the square thing by making reductions where they can to assist the struggling housekeeper. But let me tell you the estruggle is not all in the kitchen. The man behind—the desk in numbers of shops is struggling violently with his finances, and the most welcome voice he could hear at the present time is that of his landlord saying:

"Mr. —— I am making a ten, fifteen, or twenty-five per cent. reduction in your rent until things clear up a little." But, then the landlord is only human after all.

Yours very truly,

Small Storekeeper.

WHY THEY WEAR SPATS.

Highlanders Given Use of Them In Honour of Heroic March.

Most civilians have noticed that all our Highland regiments wear spats, but few know the reason why.

When the British forces, which were composed for the greater part of Highlanders, were under the leadership of Sir John Moore in Portugal, in 1809, they were forced to retreat from Astorga to Corunna.

During the retreat—which, by the way, ended in the famous victory at Corunna—the very boots were cut from the soldiers' feet by the jagged rocks over which they had to pick their way.

In order to save their feet from being lacerated, the soldiers took the shirts from their backs and, tearing them into strips, wound them round their feet. The incident was remembered, and the white spats now worn by the gallant Highlanders were granted in honour of the their heroic march and defence.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

TWO CHANCES FOR MATCH FOR HARDY

Here are two chances for Alf. Hardy, the English wrestler. One is from Artie Edmunds, who has changed his mind about retiring, and the other from Andy Gibson, who last spring wrestled here with the Central Y.M.C.A. squad.

The letters follow:

Toronto, Oct. 27th, 1914.
203 Arthur Street.

Sporting Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Just a few lines for to state that in regard to Mr. Alf. Hardy stating that I am afraid to meet him to finish our previous wrestling match. I want to let you, also the Peterbrough public know, that I am not nor never have been, afraid to meet any man in the ring or mat game. However, taking into consideration that Hardy is forcing this match on me, and to protect my Peterborough backers, I hope that you will state that I am not in condition for to do myself justice, but rather than let my friends and admirers think that I have backed down ,then I will go there and wrestle Alf. Hardy on the proposition he made, that of throwing me one fall in one hour, and if I gain a fall I win the match. Therefore let the promoters pull the match off as soon as possible and I will be on the scene for to wrestle the last bout of my career; then hoping to retire in peace.

Yours respectfully,
ART EDMUNDS.

P.S.—I might state that it is immaterial to me as to how I wrestle. In other words I will agree to meet Alf. Hardy either for the best 2 out of 3 falls, so now it is up to him to settle the question for all time to come. I will meet him on any of the proposition that he made. A. E.

Sporting Editor, Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Seeing that Alf. Hardy is so anxious for a wrestling match, I, (Andy Gibson) ex-amateur welterweight Champion of Canada, will undertake to throw Alf. Hardy twice in an hour. Or will wrestle him in a finish match, best two out of three pin-falls, for $25.00 or up to $75.00. I beg to remain.

Yours respectfully,
Andy Gibson.

759 Manning Avenue, Toronto, Oct. 26th, 1914.

Football Comment

Bradford found Everton toffee bad for their indigestion.

Sunderland hope to get their "Holley" back before Christmas.

'Tis a bad season for bootball benefits, but Middlesbrough guarantee Elliott 500 pounds.

Gillespie has at last been allowed to get out of bed by the infirmary doctors at Sunderland.

At last the Chelsea pensioners have pinched both points.

Sunderland have signed on a very promising centre forward in Croft, who hails from the Sheffield district.

There is a likelihood that another McCracken, cousin to the Newcastle back, will spring into English League football very soon. He played a very attractive game against the English League the other week. At the finish, he was approached by several club managers, and many offers were made to him. Look out for the coming of McCracken the second.

Reynolds of Fulham, Buckley and King, of the Arsenal, were selected for the English League vs. the Southern, and all three played a great game.

OFF AGAIN, ON AGAIN WITH ARTIE EDMUNDS

Toronto Wrestler is Evidently Anxious to Side Step Alf. Hardy

It begins to look as if Artie Edfunds the Toronto wrestler, is side-stepping Alf. Hardy, the English grappler, who beat Jack Forbes here a short time ago. After the match with Forbes, Hardy expressed a desire to wrestle Edmunds and offered to throw him four times in an hour. Forbes went to Toronto to arrange the match and wrote the Examiner on behalf of Edmunds, accepting Hardy's challenge. A day or so after Lou Marsh, of the Toronto Star, wrote the Examiner to say that Forbes had no authority to accept Hardy's "defi" and stating that Edmunds had retired. On top of that arrangements were made by Forbes to have Hardy and Edmunds meet here on Saturday night, the two men agreeing to that proposition. In this issue appears a letter from Edmunds accepting Hardy's challenge. Forbes came down from Toronto last night to make arrangements for the match. And then at noon to-day came the following from Harvey Sproule of the Star staff:

Sporting Editor,
Examiner, Peterborough:

Artie Edmunds requested me to advise you that his doctor has forbidden him to wrestle indefinitely, and he has cancelled match with Hardy at Peterborough, Saturday.

Harvey Sproule.

If that isn't side-stepping, what do you call it?

CANADIAN TACTICS IN U.S. FOOTBALL

Ring out the old, ring in the new, and you'll have the U. S. football situation down pat. While crippled defences and a weakening in the offence in some instances on Saturday had its effect, it is about agreed that it was the "new" open game adapted from the Canadians that was chiefly responsible for many of the football reverses and surprises among the heretofore exclusively elite of the gridiron.

Wide open football left Washington and Jefferson beat Yale, Syracuse licked Michigan by out-yosting Yost in the open style. Penn., resorting to the style the Indians have long used to down the Quakers—not to mention other heretofore stand-pat eastern elevens—was victorious. The varied, almost basket ball style of triple passing and open work by little Penn. State threw a bigger scare into John Harvard than ever did the war-whooping aborigines in the days of Miles Standish. It was a quadruple pass by the crimson that enabled Harvard to tie the score in the last three minutes of play. After being badly beaten for three rounds, Brown returned to the fray with Cornell in the fourth and scored via the open game. The game played by both Princeton and Dartmouth was as wide open as New York ever was in the palmiest of Tammany regimes, and as a result there was frequent scoring on both sides, with the frequency more noticeable on the Tigers' side of the ledger.

The programme of Saturday marked the final turn of king football against the old style, straight game. It was the first time that practically every big eastern college tried it out to the limit.

As to the dope that can be drawn from Saturday's games for use in forecasting possibilities in the bigger contests that are to come, there is scant satisfaction for the college prognosticators. Even the weakest team has a chance to score against the strongest with the forward double and triple pass in vogue.

Lawrence D'Orsay in "The Earl of Pawtucket" at "The Grand" Next Monday

The announcement that Mr. Lawrance D'Orsay is coming to the Grand Opera House Monday, Nov. 2nd, is distinctly interesting and refreshing news. He will appear in his famous success, "The Early of Pawtucket" appearing in his original role of Lord Cardington.

"The Earl of Pawtucket" was specially written by the famous American playwright, Augustus Thomas, for Mr. D'Orsay and the difficulties of an English Earl in endeavouring to maintain a disguise as an American in New York are very funny. The passive reserve and dogged persistence with which the Earl pursues the object of his adoration leads to many odd but always amusing complications, but the gallant Earl proves himself a true nobleman and wins against a sea of troubles.

Fitting into the play as though he were poured into it very mild, Lawrance D'Orsay is the well defined type of the gentlemanly Englishman, who strange as it may seem to some, has the keenest appreciation of humour and his absurdly funny expressions are a great factor in the fun-making of the comedy. It has been said that the Earl of Pawtucket is D'Orsay, and that D'Orsay is the Earl of Pawtucket. This is hardly fair, but it is true that in his walk, facial expression and the delivery of certain lines and phrases, all have in them the element of original comedy and that of the highest class brand.

The scenes of the play are laid in the Waldorf-Astoria in New York and the sets show three different rooms in that famous hostelry.

The story of the trouble an Earl got into by coming incognito to America to win a girl is very amusing. Particularly as he has inadvertently assumed the name of her divorced husband in ignorance of that fact and is compelled to pay back alimony and is also threatened with arrest for murder, but the end brings him triumphantly through these and other most amusing entanglements.

Messrs. Lawrende and Sandusky have surrounded Mr. D'Orsay with an all-star cast. His engagement here will be one of the theatrical events of the season.

A Spy Reported At Stoney Lake

But He Was Not a German—Was Examining Wood Piles at Some Cottages in Interests of Firm

The Germans are not the only persons who use spies in the furtherance of their business. A well known firm in Peterborough had a spy scour Stoney Lake recently in search of stolen property. Instead of sending him around calling on the cottagers when they were there they despatched him to the scene after the Stoney Lakers had departed to their winter homes.

His mission seems to have been the minute inspection of the wood piles on the islands to see if he could discover any of their goods; and woe betide any cottager on whose premises were found any of their chattels, either in the form of fire wood in piles or logs suspiciously above the high water mark.

No doubt the reason for not calling earlier in the season was to avoid any counter claims or abuse for having the logs litter the shores of the property owners, who, naturally, resent the tardiness of the firm in removing their logs when the drives go down in the spring.

The steamers and tugs are busy every day in anticipation of the early close of navigation.

The cottagers of Stoney Lake will be pleased to learn that the Stoney Lake Navigation Company have decided to place a new steamer on the canal route, to be in commission next season.

The first snow of the season fell here last Monday. There are no mosquitoes now.

Mr. Charles Grylls and son of Lakefield spent the past week at their cottage at "Sea Breeze."

A party of students from The Grove School, Lakefield, came up to the lakes on Friday for a shoot.

Mrs. John Hunter is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Flynn, at Havelock.

Mr. and Mrs. James Stubbs paid a flying visit to their cottage, "Restmore," the end of last week.

Dr. Zimmerman, his son, Dr. Geo. Zimmerman, Mr. Frank Edmand, and Mr. Long motored from Toronto last Wednesday, to Kawartha Park, and returned on Friday.

Dr. Morrison is having a dining room added, and several other improvements made to his cottage at Kawartha Park. Contractor Ayotte is doing the work.

Mr. Blackmore has had his open-air dining room sheeted in, for the protection of his yacht, "Terah," in the winter, and his guests from gough weather in summer.

Visitors arrived in the snow storm of Monday at "Seldom Inn."

PORTUGAL PREPARING

Eighteen Thousand Winter Uniforms Ordered

LISBON, Portugal, Oct. 28.—Portugal is excited at the possibility of taking part in the war as an ally of Great Britain under the treaty which requires this country, if asked, to supply a contingent of at least 10,000 troops.

The Portuguese army is equipped with Schneider-Canet artillery which, it is said, Great Britain will be glad to have. The Government, anticipating a winter campaign, has ordered 18,000 thick uniforms and is buying great numbers of mules.

Independence Day, Oct. 5, was not observed with the usual festivities, but the money that would have been spent upon fireworks and public shows was contributed to the Belgian sufferers from the war. Addresses of sympathy were presented to the Belgian and British Ministers by a committee, at the head of a procession of 50,000 people.

ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN

Empress Theatre Has Secured the Films of this Sensational Drama.

The Proprietor of the Empress Theatre, Charlotte Street, has, at considerable expense, secured the films for reproducing the sensaton episodes in the thrilling story entitled "Kathlyn"

This story has recently been running in some of the principal Canadian and American newspapers, and its fascinating features have been much talked about. The first of the series of these pictures will be thrown out to-night at the Empress, where there will be provided comfortable seating capacity for all.

The Peterborough Choral Society held the first practice in the Collegiate Institute, last night of the new work, Elgar's "Banner of St. George" which met with a favourable reception. A good number assembled and enjoyed a good practice.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Eva Fletcher, of Benston, is the guest of Mrs. Roy Spears, Otonabee.

Mr. Maurice Mairs of Toronto is in the City to-day on business, and is leaving in a few days for a shooting trip to the north country.

NEW YORK ORGANIST IS IN FRENCH ARMY.

New York, Oct. 28.

When Mr. Jacques Ungerer, organist of St. Patrick's Cathedral, left here on 25th July last for a summer vacation in France, he did not know that he would not be able to return to take up his work in the fall owing to the needs of his native country. He has been called to serve in the French army, and until peace has been declared in Europe Professor Foley is taking his place.

Mr. Ungerer has been organist of the Cathedral twenty-two years. As he is forty-two years old, he expected to be exempt from being called to the colours. But friends here have received word from him that he is now at the front.

He wrote that as one of the fourth class of the reserves, he found himself liable to military duty on emergency summons.

Mr. Ungerer has an international reputation as an organist and choirmaster.

HOW IS YOUR WATCH RUNNING?
Sometimes a change of season will affect a watch so that it will not keep good time.
Most times, the watch needs cleaning, oiling or tightening; perhaps a part or two.
Our Repair Department is in charge of a watchmaker and no job is too hard or too intricate for us to accomplish.

WEDDING BELLS

COOPER—VANZANT.
The wedding was solemnized at the George Street Methodist Parsonage, 561 Water street, last evening at 7 o'clock of Mr. Hilliard Wilbert Cooper, of Stirling, to Miss Nora Vanzant, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D. Mr. and Mrs. Cooper will reside in Stirling.

ADAMSON—WOOD.
A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wood, of Otonabee, on Oct. 13th, when their only daughter, Aggie Lizzie, was united in marriage to Mr. Gardiner Adamson, son of Mr. Robert J. Adamson, also of Otonabee. Rev. Mr. Goodwill, of Otonabee, performed the ceremony in the presence of the two families. The bride wore a charming dress of page blue silk, while the bridesmaid, Miss Irene Adamson, sister of the groom, wore a lovely brown silk. Mr. Harry Bruce Wood, brother of the bride, acted as groomsman.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome gold watch and chain, to the bridesmaid a handsome gold brooch set with a small diamond, to the groomsman a gold stick pin set with pearls.

The happy couple will reside in Otonabee.

OBITUARY

REGINALD BLODGETT.
The death occurred last night in the Nicholls Hospital of Reginald Blodgett, the three-months'-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Blodgett, 617 Downey Street. In their bereavement Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett will have the sympathy of their friends.

The funeral will be held this afternoon.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES

Frank Day, assistant professor of physics at McGill University, has accepted the chair of physics and chemistry at Queen's University.

Eight inches of snow has fallen at Forest, Ont. There is no snow in the district beyond a radius of 15 miles of Forest. The sleighing is good.

Dr. G. A. Platt, son of ex-Warden Dr. J. A. Platt, of Kingston Penitentiary, has received the degree of F.R.C.S. at Edinburgh, where he is studying.

Among those at Winnipeg who have volunteered for active service is Rev. C. W. Gordon (Ralph Connor), the novelist. He expects to go to the front as chaplain with the second contingent.

On the initiative of the directors of the Antwerp People's Bank, there has been formed an association, including British interests, which will lend money to Antwerp house owners to help them rebuild.

The authorities of Hong Kong and of other British possessions in China yesterday issued orders for the expulsion from British territory of German and Austrian subjects, except those of military age, who will be detained.

No nurses are wanted from Canada at present for service at the front, and none will be sent from here to England or the continent unless the Department of Militia decides to send ambulance units with the second contingent.

Contract Awards Non-Partisan.
OTTAWA, Oct. 28. — Sir George Foster, Hon. J. D. Hazen, Hon. J. C. Doherty, Hon. Louis Coderre, and Hon. J. D. Hazen, the sub-committee of the Cabinet engaged in allotting contracts for military supplies required from Canada by the allied powers, met yesterday.

Most of the contracts have been awarded for the present order of supplies. The contracts are being distributed impartially, giving all localities a share and without reference to political leanings, but with the broad view of considering unemployment as much as possible and of securing delivery in the shortest possible time.

Would-Be Assassin Fails.
EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 28.—A report reached here yesterday that an attempt was made to assassinate Gen. Francisco Villa by an agent said to have been employed by Gen. Pablo Gonzalez, a staunch supporter of Gen. Carranza. The information came in a message from Luis Aguirre Benavides, Villa's first secretary. The assassin, Francisco I. Muguia, was [illegible] he had captured.

DIXMUNDE UNDER FIRE

BATTLE DESCRIPTION

The following description of fighting and the heroes wrought by fighting in northwestern Belgium has been telegraphed by the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph who visited the Dixmeyde battle field last Wednesday in company with a son of the Belgium war minister, M. De Broqueville.

"No pen could do justice to the Grandeur and Horror of the scene. As far as the eye could carry nothing could be seen but burning villages and bursting shells. I realized for the first time how complete the motor has revolutionized warfare and how every other factor is dominated by the presence or absence of this method of transportation.

"Every road to the front was packed with cars. They formed an ever-rolling, endless stream, going and returning. In every village hundreds of private cars were parked under the control of medical officers, waiting to carry the wounded to field hospitals.

Upon the firing line a terrible scene presented itself. The shell-fire from the German batteries was so severe that the Belgian soldiers and French and British marines were literally blown out of their dugouts and sent scattered to cover. Along crowded roadways and across shell-torn fields knots of peasants —old men, women and children — could be seen in flight.

"These unfortunates had to make their way the best they could to the rear and many of them were killed by bursting shells.

"Dixmunde was the object of the German attack and shells were bursting all over the city.

Houses Were Being Ripped

and torn and the streets were full of wreckage. Many buildings were in flames. At times wreckage was blown upward, falling like rain over a wide area. From a distance of three miles we could hear the German shells crashing in the streets of the town. Smoke rolled upward from the burning houses and the bursting shells. The Belgians had only a few field batteries, so the heavy German howitzers dominated the field and the infantry trenches around the town had to rely upon their own unaided efforts.

"Our progress along the road was suddenly stopped by one of the most horrible sights I ever have seen. A heavy German howitzer shell had fallen and burst in the midst of a Belgian battery, causing much destruction. The mangled bodies of the men lying sprawled among the carcasses of artillery horses and wrecked caissons presented a shocking spectacle.

"Eventually we got to Dixmunde. Every time a shell screamed into the town we Thought Our End Had Come.

The town hall was a sad sight. The roof was completely riddled. The interior was a scene of chaos. It was piled with loaves of bread, military trappings, broken bicycles and the bodies of dead soldiers.

"Wednesday evening Dixmude was a red, blazing furnace — a scene of fury and carnage. The horizon was red with burning houses. The thunder of the German guns echoed on every side and the whine of the shell was never stilled."

PRAYER MEETING CANCELLED.
The prayer meeting in Charlotte Street Methodist church to-night has been cancelled. The members are urged to attend Dr. Gordons lecture in George Street church.

DEATH OF FORMER LAKEFIELD MAN

P. W. Strickland Passed Away in Toronto—Was in Lumber Business.

TORONTO, Oct. 29.—The death took place at his residence, 555 Huron Street, of Mr. Percy Wade Strickland, President and General Manager of the Canada Lumber Company, Limited. Deceased, who was fifty-three years of age, was a son of the late George W. R. Strickland, of Lakefield. He was for many years in the lumber business at Lakefield, then went to Minneapolis, where he became Manager of Mr. Weirhauser's great lumbering concern. He established many of Mr. Weirhauser's businesses in different parts of the western States, and was the Manager of the large concern at Rock Island. From there he came to Toronto about five years ago, and established the Canada Lumber Company.

Mr. Strickland is survived by his widow and a son, the latter having been with him in the Canada Lumber Company's business. Deceased was a nephew of Agnes Strickland, author of several volumes of the history of Queens of England, and also a nephew of Susanna Moodie, another of that brilliant family, and the author of the Canadian classic of pioneer days, "Roughing it in the Bush."

RUSSIANS DEFEAT BIG AUSTRO-GERMAN FORCE

Broke the Resistance of German Reserve Guard Corps—Enemy's Retreat Became a Disorderly Rout—Russians Took Prisoners and Cannon in This Important Success

PETROGRAD, Oct. 28.—A long and detailed official communication was issued from the Russian general staff concerning the fighting in Poland, particularly to the south of the Pilitza river, which runs into the Vistula in the region of Ivangorod. In the battle which has been in progress for four days in this part of the country, "our troops," says the communication, "have inflicted upon the Austro-German forces a severe defeat. Between the Pilitza and Glowaczow the heroic efforts of our troops definitely broke down on Monday the resistance of the 20th corps and the reserve Guard corps of the Germans."

On the centre of the battle line the Russians after fighting of an extremely desperate character, succeeded in establishing a firm foothold on the border of a forest near three villages. On the left wing, it is announced, the Russians captured by assault a defensive position of the enemy, and elsewhere in this region they enveloped a portion of the Austrian troops. A disorderly retreat of the enemy's corps on Tuesday night through Radom, 20 miles west of Ivangorod, also is recorded. In this region the Russians captured both cannon and prisoners. Fighting continues with undiminished desperation on the south bank of the Pilitza, along a front some distance to the west of the Vistula.

"In Galicia," the communication adds, "the battle is raging along the whole front of the River San (north of Przemysl.) We have taken an additional ten officers and 50 men. South of Przemysl our troops are advancing at certain points.

"In Eastern Prussia the enemy has bombarded violently our positions in the operations in the regions of Dakalarjevo. Repeated attacks all have been repulsed."

The communication concludes with the declaration: "The success which we have won south of Pilitza, and the result of which was the retreat of the enemy on the main front, is of the very greatest importance."

Summary of Local News

Early this morning Mr. Frank Smith, the local blacksmith, passed away at his home in this city. He is well known here and his death will be deeply regretted. The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon.

The Board of Works Committee last night decided to ask for tenders for the snow-ploughing contracts. A number of the unemployed of the city will receive work during the winter following up the ploughs with snow shovels to widen the path and keep the sidewalk clear of snow.

Dr. Gordon's subject at the George Street church to-night will be "The Private Life of Public Men." The usual splendid musical programme will be presented. Last night the church was crowded to the doors and many were turned away.

William Ross, a local man, pleaded guilty to stealing $6 from a young woman boarding at his father's on Park Street. The girl works for her living and had the $6 saved up to pay off her doctor's bill. He was sentenced to the county gaol for two months with hard labour. This is not the first time he has been convicted of theft.

In this morning's Police Court Fred Revoy, a local youth, was sentenced to two months in the County Gaol, with hard labour, for stealing $62 from a drunken man, Thanksgiving Eve. His mother broke down when the sentence was imposed and the young fellow himself hid his head below the walls of the prisoner's box, to give vent to his feelings. His counsel, Mr. Widdifield, made a strong plea for leniency.

RUSSIANS MARCH 130 MILES IN SIX DAYS

PETROGRAD, Oct. 28.—The astonishing prowess of the Russians was again admirably demonstrated during the period of taking up positions for the latest fighting.

One column, marching to get around the flank of the Germans, covered 130 miles in six days.

THANKS, MR. "BRAINSTORM."

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—"Germany will not invade Canada. She will not try to seize any territory in either of the Americas, no matter what may happen on the other side."

Such was the opinion of Count Von Bernstorff to-day, German ambassador to the United States.

WILL INCREASE ARMY AND NAVY

TOKIO, Oct. 28.—Premier Okuma, who has hitherto opposed naval expansion and an increase in the standing army, has changed his views.

He assembled political leaders of all factions to-day and stated that Japan must expand her army and navy, and must do it quickly.

LOSS OF LIFE HEAVY

LONDON, Oct. 29.—News Agency advices from Tokio say that the British ambassador there has been informed that the German cruiser Emden, flying a Japanese flag, slipped into the Port of Penang in Straits Settlement and torpedoed the Russian cruiser Jemtchug and a French destroyer that were in the harbour. Both are reported to have been sunk with considerable loss of life.

GENERALS WERE COURTMARTIALED FOR SURRENDER

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Oct. 29. — A News Agency despatch from Petrograd, which is unconfirmed from any other source, says that a German officer who was taken prisoner declares that three German generals, responsible for the disaster to the German arms at Augustoff, were court martialed and shot. The officer, according to this story, showed a copy of the general order by the Emperor expressing most intense indignation over the surrender of Agustoff and ordering the recapture of the position under penalty of death.

ROYALTY IS WORKING TOO

Austrian Royal Family Shares in the Hardships of War—Palace at the Front

DUCHESSES NURSING

VIENNA, via Rome, Oct. 2.—(By mail to New York)—Sharing all the hardships experienced by the commonest soldiers and the nurses, every member of the entire imperial Austrian family is taking an active part in the great European war.

A 10-year-old archduke has taken his place with the troops representing his country. Archduchess Marie Valleria, daughter of Emperor Francis Joseph, has enlisted in the service of the war. The zeal with which these archdukes and archduchesses are serving their country, whether at the head of regiments or in caring for the wounded on the battlefield, has demonstrated plainer than any royal proclamation or imperial blessing for the men in the ranks, the intimate heart interest felt by the Hapsburgs in the human sacrifices devastating the dual monarchy.

In the various camps the soldiers manifest a keener understanding of the feeling of the members of the royal house than ever before. The sharing of their privations and sorrow has brought the Hapsburgs in far closer touch with their subjects than they have ever been before.

The members of the imperial family are serving their country as follows:

Archduke Frederick is at the head of the commanding staff, to which division also belongs Archduke Charles Francis Joseph.

Archduke Joseph Ferdinand, who at the beginning of the war was in command of a regiment in the army of General Auffenburg, is now in command of an independent regiment.

Archduke Peter Ferdinand is fighting at the head of his division under General Auffenburg.

Archduke Leopold Salvadore, as inspector-general of artillery, has participated in many battles.

Archduke Charles Albert is one of a staff of cavalry that has seen almost continuous action since the war began.

Archduke Joseph, as head of a division of infantry, has been on the firing line often.

Archduke Francis Salvadore is an inspector of volunteers, and, aided by Archduke Eugene, whose state of health does not permit him to participate in active war service, has developed several corps.

Archduke Maximilian, 19, is acquiring practical instruction with a regiment before being sent to the front.

Archduchess Maria Theresa, Maria Josepha, and Isabella Maria, daughters of the commander-in-chief, are serving their country as nurses and have been upon the field of battle.

Archduchess Augusta is doing similar work at Budapest.

NATIVE TROOPS DESTROY A BIG AMMUNITION PARK

Dusky Allies Crept Up on German Sentries, Killed Them and Fired Ammunition Waggons—Night Attacks of Enemy Repulsed But Both Sides Suffer Heavily.

PARIS, Oct. 28.—The vigour of the German attacks on the north was diminished greatly to-day after they had carried out two surprise assaults during the night which cost both sides dearly.

Real success has been attained by the allies, who have not only prevented a breach in their lines, but have made considerably progress and now firmly hold the line from Nieuport to Dixmunde and on to the neighbourhood of Lille.

Officers who have returned from the front describe a difficult and and dangerous task performed by the native troops during the night along the Belgian Coast. They surprised and destroyed a German ammunition Park, thus putting out of action several German baterias which had caused great annoyance to the allies, who could not reach them with their artillery.

In absolute darkness several natives crept up stealthily and killed the German sentries. They then set fire to a thicket where the ammunition waggons were sheltered, causing all the shells to explode.

Kluk Reinforced.

The German lines have been visibly thinned to the south of Lille and St. Quentin, and along the lines of trenches leading to the eastern frontier, but in the neighbourhood of Craonne and Berry-au-Bac, on the Aisne, where General von Kluk is commanding, the German forces are in great strength.

It is believed that the German troops who captured Antwerp are now massed near the Belgian Coast and that additional divisions are assisting them which have been brought from the long front where the siege has progressed for so many weeks.

A recurrence of the German offensive was expected near Craonne, where General von Kluk started a sharp diversion to test the strength of the allies' lines and was thrown back. Further east, in the Argonne region, and on the frontier, severe fighting continues incessantly, as the result of which the French troops are reported to have made constant progress.

The cavalry of the allies are performing marvels of endurance. One Regiment took part in ten encounters in a single day, at the same time covering more than forty miles of ground.

Eight French cannon put eighteen German three-inch guns out of action in half an hour between the Aisne and the Oise, and prevented the Germans from effecting a plan to cut communications.

The British fleet is still operating against the Germans off Belgium without as yet one vessel being damaged. A battleship has now joined in the bombardment, using her 12-inch guns.

PLOUGHING MATCH WAS A SUCCESS

Handsome Trophy Won by Mr. C. E. Would of Asphodel—Attendance Was Large.

THE PRIZE WINNERS

Between seven and eight hundred people turned out yesterday afternoon to witness the ploughing match that was held on the farm of Mr. Sandy Matchett, in the Township of Otonabee. It is nearly a quarter of a century since Peterborough County was favoured with a ploughing match consequently the entries were light. In fact there were fewer entries than prizes with the result that the Association will hold a special meeting to decide upon the disposition of the prizes that were not contested for. Needless to say the event created widespread interest as was evidenced by the representative gathering that was present. Farmers, bankers, lawyers, parliamentary representatives, and in fact people engaged in all walks of life viewed the performance of the contestants. A large number of the business men of the city availed themselves of the 'bus service that was operated between the two points.

Mr. Burnham's Address.

While the weather was not altogether in harmony with the spirit of the occasion it did not interfere with the work of the competitors. The ground was in excellent condition. The first teams were on the ground early in the morning(and the contest was brought to a close about four o'clock in the afetrnoon by a speech by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., and the rendition of the National Anthem.

The following remarks were made by Mr. Burnham, the donator of the first prize:

"In presenting this cup to the County Council of Peterborough as a perpetual record of the names of the best of all industries and the most satisfactory of all vocations, the farmer's, permit me to say a few words. One of the things people have most to guard against is a slump in their efforts. Grown people like children get fits of laziness occasionally when they are inclined to lie down under the shade of a tree lean back and yawn and say, "Well! Well! Why work so hard? What's the use of it? Why not take it as easily as we can? We'll be a long time dead. There's no hurry. All this high falutin' talk about high spirit hard work, honesty, the glory and satisfaction in being up and doing well our part in life, is all rot." Such people are themselves on the brink of the state of rot to which they refer. To make a long story short we all know that the difference between the successful farmers, the successful business man, and every other good man and the tramp consists solely in that high spirit which sometimes we hear decried. If it were not for an honest decent pride, the pride of true manhood and womanhood, we would be like the poor miserable tramp who laughs at everything gdecent and respectable and wallows in filth, squalour and decay. All this has a bearing on the other spirit which animates us to-day."

"Yield Not So Great."

"We are here to do what we can to maintain in the County of Peterborough the pride of our fathers, of the men and women who made this country, and we are gathered together to show that Peterborough shall not be behind other counties in this respect. The charge has been made that Peterborough is falling behind. We will show the world that this is not true. It is true that the yield is not so great per acre as it used to be, but when we learn intensive farming and proper fertilization and cultivation farming will be a delight instead of a toil. No other business is so steady in peace and war, and so capable of providing body and soul with what nature intended, the peaceful fruits of the soil. The day is not for distant when capable farmers will in large countries like Canada rejoice in snug farms or spacious estates, pretty homes, beautiful surroundings, prompted and provided by scientific and intensive farming when one acre will provide what it takes five to produce at present, and when we will save four-fifths of our labour by cutting out four-fifths of the area worked over."

FRENCH WOMEN AND GIRLS MAKE MUCH OF DUSKY WARRIORS

PARIS, Oct. 14 (by mail to New York).—Bandaged fingers mark the path of the Ghurka regiments through friendly and admiring France and the "victims" of the "blood lust" of the famous little fighters from Nepal and the French women and girls. France cannot make to much of Britain's dusky warriors, and soldiers, civilians, and girls all want to see the kukri, the wicked looking knife which the Ghurka prefers to a bayonet.

The Ghurkas, however, have their own customs, and it is against their religion to draw the weapon without drawing blood. This apparently insurmountable difficulty was overcome when British soldiers, familiar with the ways of India, suggested that the curious should allow a slight cut to be made on their fingers, in order to fulfill the letter of the law. There is no lack of volunteers, and a bandaged finger is quite popular among the French girls.

General Botha On Rebels' Heels

Headlong Rout of Beyers and His Followers Continued Throughout the Day

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The following official statement was issued to-night regarding the rebellion in the Union of South Africa:

"General Botha reports that he left Rustenburg, (a district in the west part of the Transvaal colony) on Tuesday morning and proceeded in the direction in which General Christian Beyers, with his commando, was supposed to be. He came in touch with General Beyers' men in the forenoon and drove them in headlong route the whole of the day and captured eighty of them, fully armed.

"In the fighting which took place towards the end of the pursuit one of General Botha's men and several of Beyers' commando were wounded.

"When the report was made the pursuit was still in progress."

YOUNG CANADIAN MARRIES FRENCH GIRL IN LONDON

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Lt. Jack L. Williamson, a popular officer in the Canadian contingent now encamped on Salisbury Plains, has created an interesting record by discovering and marrying a wife within a week. His young French bride is Charlotte Suzanne Josse, whose father is serving at the front.

The couple met for the first time at Plymouth about a week ago, and were married at St. Andrew's, Plymouth, on Monday.

TORONTO, Oct. 28.—The news of Lieut. Williamson's marriage in Plymouth was a distinct surprise to his mother and sisters.

"It can't be true. There must be some mistake," said Mrs. Williamson after she had read the cable two or three times. "He wouldn't do such a thing."

"But, mother," broke in one of the daughters, "you know Jack was always impulsive, and it's the very kind of thing he might do."

"You know all the reports the newspapers receive are not true," remarked another daughter, as the party tried to find some flaw in the despatch, or some reason for the lieutenant's action, if it were true.

"There's another Lieut. Williamson with the contingent," said Mrs. Williamson. "I remember seeing his name in a list of officers, but I think his middle initial is M. It might be that one."

No word has been received by Mrs. Williamson from her son since he landed. She received word from him, written on the transport, that he was well, and family was discussing whether they should cable the lieutenant, or whether they should wait in suspense for two or three days for word from him. One thing that puzzled them all was how he would get an opportunity to meet the girl so soon.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

CHAPTER XVI.

A Respite From Toil.

The bright beam of the flash-lamp in his face roused Allan to a consciousness that he was bruised and suffering, and that his left arm ached with dull insistence. Dazed, he brought it up and saw his sleeve of dull brown stuff was dripping red.

Beside him, in the trampled grass he vaguely made out a hairy bulk, motionless and huge. Bremilu was kneeling beside his master, with words of cheer.

"It is dead, O Kromno! The man beast is dead! My stone axe broke its skull. See, now it lies here harmless!"

The currents of thought began to flow once more. Allan struggled up, unmindful of his wounds.

"Beatrice! Where is the girl?" he gasped.

As though by way of answer, the tall growths swayed and crackled, and through them a dim figure loomed — a man with something in his arms.

"Zangamon!" panted Allan, springing toward him. "Have you got her? The girl—is she alive?"

"She lives, master!" replied a voice. "But as yet she remains without knowledge of aught."

"Wounded? Is she wounded?"

Already he had reached Zangamon, and, injured though he was, had taken the beloved form in his arms.

"Beatrice! Beatrice!" he called, pressing kisses to her brow, her eyes, her mouth—still warm, thank God!

He sank down among the underbrush and gathered her to his breast, cradling her, cherishing her to him as though to bring back life and consciousness.

To her heart he laid his ear. It beat! She breathed!

"The light, here! Quick!"

By its clear ray he saw her hair dishevelled; her coarse mantle of brown stuff ripped and torn, and on her throat long scratches.

Bruises showed on her hands and arms, as from a terrible fight she had put up against the monster. And his heart bled, and to his lips rose execrations, mingled with the tenderest words of pity and love.

"We must get her back to the cave at once!" he exclaimed. "Quick! Break branches. Make a litter—a bed—to carry her on. Everything depends on getting her to shelter now!"

But the two Merucaans did not understand. All this was beyond their knowledge. Ignoring his hurts, Allan laid the girl down very gently, and with them set to work, directing the making of the litter.

They obeyed eagerly. In a few minutes the litter was ready—made of fern-tree branches thickly covered with laves and odorous grasses.

On this he placed the girl.

"You, Zangamon, take these boughs here, Bremilu, those others. Now I will hold the light. Back to the cave, now—quick!"

"We need not the light, master. We see better without it. It dazzles our eyes. Use it yourself. We need it not!" exclaimed Bremilu, stooping above the body of the dead monster to recover his axe.

Involuntarily Allan turned the beam upon the horrible creature. There stood Bermilu, his foot upon the hairy shoulder, tugging hard at the axe-handle. Thrice he had to pull with all his might to loosen the blade which had buried itself deep in the shattered skull.

"A giant gorilla, so help me!" he cried, shuddering. "My God, Beatrice—what a ghastly terror you've been through!"

Still grinning ferociously, in death, with blood-smeared face and glazed, staring eyes, the creature shocked and horrified even Allan's steady nerves. He gazed upon it only a moment, then turned away.

"Enough" said he. "To the cave."

A quarter-hour had passed before they reached shelter again. Allan bade the Merucaans heap dry wood on the embers in the cavern, while he himself laid Beatrice upon the bed.

With a piece of their brown cloth dipped in one of the water-jars he bathed her face and bruised throat.

"Fresh water! Fetch a jar of fresh water from the river below!" he commanded Zangamon.

But even as the white barbarian started to obey, the girl stirred, raised a hand, and feebly spoke.

"Allan—oh—are you here again? Allan—my love!"

He strained her to his breast and kissed her; and his eyes grew hot with tears.

"Beatrice!"

Her arms were round his neck, and their lips clung.

"Hurt? Are you hurt?" he cried. "Tell me—how—"

"Allan! The monster—is he dead?" she shivered, sitting up and staring wildly round at the cave walls on which the fresh-built fire was beginning to throw dancing lights.

"Dear, yes. But hush, Beta! Don't think of that now. Everything's all right—you're safe! I'm here!"

"Those men—"

"Two of our own Folk. I brought them back with me— just in time, darling. Without them—"

He broke short off. Not for worlds would he have told her now near the borderland she had been.

"You heard my shouts? You heard our signal?"

"Oh—I don't know Allan. I can't think, yet—it's all so terrible— so confused—"

"There, there, sweetheart; don't think about it any more. Just lie down and rest. Go to sleep. I'll watch here beside you? You're safe. Nothing can hurt you now!"

She lay back with a sigh, and for a while kept silence while he sat beside her, his uninjured arm beneath her head.

His one ambition, now that he found she was not seriously hurt in body, was to keep her from talking of the horrible affair—from exciting herself and rehearsing her terrors. Above all, she must quieted and kept calm.

At last, in her own natural voice, she spoke again.

"Allan?"

"What is it, sweetheart?"

"I owe you my life once more! If I was yours before. I'm ten times more yours now!"

He bent and kissed her, and presently her deepened breathing told him she had drifted over the borderline into the sleep of exhaustion.

He blessed her strength and courage.

"No futility here," though he. "No useless questions or hysterics; no scene. Strong! Gad, but she's strong! She realised she was safe and I was with her again; that sufficed. Was there ever another woman like her since the world began?"

Only now that the girl slept did he pay attention to the two Merucaans who, sitting by the cave door, were regarding him with troubled looks.

"Master!" said Zangamon, arising and coming toward him.

"Well, what is it now?"

"You are wounded, O Kromno! Your arm still bleeds. Let us bind it."

"It is nothing—only a scratch!"

But Zangamon insisted.

"Master," said he, "in this we cannot obey you. See! While you and the woman talked I fetched water, as you commanded. Now I must wash your hurts and bind them."

Allan had to accede. Together the two Merucaans examined the injuries with words of commiseration. The "scratch" turned out to be three severe lacerations of the forearm. The gorilla's teeth had missed the radial artery by a fluke of fortune.

They bathed away the clotted blood and bandaged the arm not unskilfully. Allan pressed the hand of Zangamon, then that of his companion.

"No thanks of mine can tell you what I feel!" he exclaimed straight from the heart. "Only for you to guide me, to drive the man-brute, to strike it down when it was just about to throttle me—only for you, both, she and I—"

He could not finish. The words choked him. He felt, as never before, a sudden, warm, human touch of kinship with the Merucaans—a strong, nascent affection. Till now they had been savages to him—inferiors.

Now he perceived their inner worth—the strong and manly stamina of soul and body; and through him thrilled a love for these strange men, his saviours and the girl's.

Once more he seemed to see a vision of the future—a world people by the descendants of this hardy and resourceful folk, "without disease of flesh or brain, shapely and fair, the married harmony of form and function"—and, as with a gesture, he dismissed them wondering, not understanding in the least why he should thank them, he knew the world already had begun once more to come back under the hand, under the strong control of man.

"Sleep now, master," Bremilu entreated. "We who are new to this world will sit outside the door upon the rock and watch those fires so far above that you call stars. And the big sun-fire that is coming, too— we would see that!"

"No, not yet!" Stern commanded. "You cannot bear it for a while. Stay within and roll the rock against the door and sleep. The great fire might injure you or even kill you, as it did the—"

He checked himself in time, for "the patriarch" had all but escaped him. Zangamon, with sudden understanding, once more advanced toward him as he sat there by the girl.

"O master! You mean the ancient man? He is dead?"

Stern nodded.

"Yes," he answered. "He was so old and weak, the touch of the fire in the sky—he could not bear it. But his death was happy, for at least he felt the warmth upon his brow!"

The Merucaans kept silence for a moment, then Stern heard them muttering together, and a vague uneasiness crept over him.

He strove, however, to put it away; though in his heart the shame of the lie he had been forced to tell would not be quieted.

The colonists, however, made no further speech, but presently rolled the rock in front of the cave entrance, then wrapped themselves in their long cloaks and lay down by the fire.

Soon, like the healthy savages they were, they were fast asleep, with vigorous snorings.

Thus the night passed, while Stern kept watch over the girl; and another day crept slowly up the sky, and in the cave now rested four human beings—the vanguard of the coming nation.

How To Get Rid of a Bad Cough

A Home-Made Remedy that Will Do It Quickly. Cheap and Easily Made

If you have a bad cough or chest cold which refuses to yield to ordinary remedies, get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking a teaspoonful every hour or two. In 24 hours your cough will be conquered or very nearly so. Even whooping cough is greatly relieved in this way.

The above mixture makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the finest cough syrup that money could buy—at a cost of only 54 cents. Easily prepared in 5 minutes. Full directions with Pinex.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup preparation takes right hold of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough in a way that is really remarkable. It also quickly heals the inflamed membranes which accompany a painful cough, and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. Excellent for bronchitis, spasmodic croup and winter coughs. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children like it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex,"—do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Renewed Vigor In Old Age

This Letter Brings a Message of Cheer to the Aged—Results of Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

New, rich blood is what is most needed in the declining years to keep up energy and vitality. That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a wonderful help in maintaining good health and prolonging life is attested by the writer of this letter.

Mr. Stephen J. Leard, North Tryon, P.E.I., writes:—"At seventy-five years of age my heart gave out and became very irregular and weak in action and would palpitate. My nerves also became weak, and I could do nothing but lie in bed in a languishing condition, losing strength and weight. In that condition I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am cured. Had I not obtained this treatment I would now be in the box with the roof over my nose. At eighty-one I have an energy which means go, and I am writing this letter so that old people like myself may prolong their health and strength by using this great medicine." 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. For sale by all dealers.

November Will Open With Warmer Weather And Rain

Warm Spell Will Be Followed by a Cold Snap and Snow --Iri Hicks' Forecast

A reactionary storm period is central on the 1st, 2nd and 3rd. The moon is in apogee and full on the 2nd. The Mercury period also will painfully affect the elements at this period. The storm diagram indicates, also, that the Mars disturbance begins at this period and extends over the entire month. As we enter November a low barometer, with change to warmer, cloudiness and rain will be in transit from west to east across the country. These rains will turn to snow and sleet on the western tangents with the rising barometer and change to colder that inevitably follow in the wake of low barometer, wind and rain. A sharp cold wave will follow in the immediate rear of these storms, spreading eastward over almost the entire country, causing frosts far into the south, from about the 2nd to the 5th. If the barometer is much below normal in the extreme south at the beginning of this period, watch barometric reports from the west and north, as a very high barometer in these regions, with abnormally low barometer in the south, will be almost certain evidence that a rapid and intense change to colder for this season will spread far into the south and east.

A regular storm period is central on the 7th, covering the 5th to the 10th. The moon will be at its extreme north declination early in this period, indicating that southerly atmospheric tides will flow northward, bringing reaction to rising temperature, falling barometer and ending in renewed storms of rain, turning to snow. This storm will be at the crisis in the central valleys on and touching the 8th and 9th, being a day or two earlier in the west, and a day or two later in the east. Each section will have, first, warmer, fair weather, with falling barometer; second, areas of rain, turning to snow, and wind; third, rising barometer, with colder, clearing weather—all within the limits of the storm period and the interim lasting into the storm period next following.

A reactionary storm period has its central days on the 12th, 13th and 14th. But for the fact that we are now entering well into the Mars period, we certainly would have a minimum of storm-producing causes at this and other November periods. The storm diagram shows that we have only the regular Vulcan, and the reactionary periods, blending singly with the Mars influence, throughout almost the entire month of November. On and touching the 13th—upon which date the Moon is on the celestial equator — rain, wind and thunder storms will be most natural, followed immediately by rising barometer, winds shifting suddenly to the west and north and change to very much colder.

A regular storm period covers the 17th to the 22nd, having its centre on the 19th. The new Moon is on the 17th, near perigree on the 16th, and south declination on the 19th. This period will begin promptly on the 17th, near perigee on the 16th and barometer and threatening clouds in the western extremes. These conditions will take up their march eastwardly by the 18th and 19th, and during the 20th, 21st and 22nd they will pass the great, central valleys and into the Atlantic coast regions. If a very low barometer attends these storms across the country, high and dangerous north-easterly gales will come in from the Atlantic ocean to fill up the inland barometer depression, causing danger to shipping along the coasts, and winding up with violent northwesterly gales on and about the great lakes. These sections, especially, should watch the indications, and heed storm signals. Renewed high pressure, clearing skies and much colder weather will spread over the country behind these storms, lasting up to the 23rd to 24th.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 26th, 28th and 29th. The storms of this period will culminate on and about the 28th, on which day the Moon crosses the celestial equator, working from south to north declination. All the phases of a storm period will show at this time—falling barometer, warmer; cloudiness rain and snow; rising barometer, clearing and colder—all linked together like railroad coaches, rushing eastwardly over the country.

A regular storm period begins on the 29th, is central on the 30th, and runs three days into December. The storm of this period will not be more than developing in western sections during the last two or three days of the month. The Mars period has worked back until it is central this year on December 4th. In all reason it would seem that the outlook is for a normal or mild November; and if so, the same kind of weather may be looked for through December. The Mars influence is always problematical, but its comparative freedom from other complications at this time simplifies the proposition, and which ever extreme things take will be chargeable to his influence. A seismic period runs from October 29th to November 6th, greatly aggravated by Jupiter's quadrature on the 6th. Another seismic period extends from 14th to 20th, central 17th.

In Many Long Conflicts It Has Been German Against German

Hohenzollerns Have Always Been the Aggressors—The Napoleons of the Period.

REVEALED BY WAR

It has been said of the House of Romanoff that it is more German than Russian. It can be said more truly of the House of Hapsburg that it is essentially German, and in many bloody wars, sometimes long and sometimes brief, it was German against German, Hapsburg against Hohenzollern or vice versa, the Hohenzollerns being virtually always the aggressors.

The house takes its name from the castle of Habichtsburg (hawk's castle), built in 1027 by Werner, bishop of Strassburg, on the banks of the Aar River in the Swiss canton of Aargau. The original Hapsburg was Werner I., a nephew of the bishop, and first count of Hapsburg; yet the real founder of the house was Albrecht III., son of Werner II., 1173, who inherited Upper Alsace and took by force several districts around the lakes of Zurich and Lucerne; and to these his son, Rudolph I., added the countship of Aargau, and founded the Hapsburg-Lauffenburg line. This branch became extinct in 1415 and the possessions reverted to the Austrian line, neither line having any right to those possessions except the right of conquest at one period and another.

Rudolph was "elected" to the imperial throne of Germany and styled himself Emperor Rudolph I. One of his first exploits was the crushing of Ottokar II., king of Bohemia and forcing him to surrender the duchies of Austria and Styria. Into the game at this time came the Hohenzollerns, also a German product, taking their name from the castle of Hohenzollern, in Swabia. Frederick III., burgrave of Nuremburg, championing Rudolph's assumption of the German crown.

WERE REALLY THE NAPOLEONS.

Rudolph left these great possessions to his sons, Albert and Rudolph. The former "purchased" the interests of Rudolph, assumed the imperial crown and was assassinated by his nephew, John the parricide, or the regicide, as he was preparing to suppress a revolt of the Swiss, who had declared for liberty and independence. In this period it may be said that Bohemia and the country of Magyars, Hungary, were married into the family of the Hapsburgs, though there was many a revolt in both countries. Crowns were passed around several of the scions of the House of Hapsburg and there were no end of diplomatic schemes to hold what was in hand, the spirit of war always being superior to the spirit of diplomacy. With all the revolts of the Magyars, Hungary remained under the rule of the Austrian line of the Hapsburgs, the last attempt at revolution being in 1848, when all Europe was aflame, and when the Hungarians were led by Louis Kossuth.

The Hapsburgs were really the Napoleons of the period, meaning, of course, the original Napoleon. It seemed for a time that they would divide among them the best of Europe. Through the Charleses they usurped the crown of Spain. Through the marriage of Maximilian I. with Mary of Burgundy, daughter of Charles the Bold, they became possessed of the whole Burgundian district, which included the Netherlands, then the most opulent country of Europe. South of Prussia and Germany the family possessions included Bohemia, Hungary, Austria, Styria, Carinthia, Carniola, Tyrol, Alsace, Brein, and through the Spanish alliance of Philip by marriage in 1506 with Joanna, heiress of Spain, daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella, Naples, Sicily and Sardinia, but with Charles II. in the latter years of the seventeenth century the Spanish line of the Hapsburgs became extinct.

The assemblage of so many countries in the keeping of one royal house, it has been said, so threatened the security of other European countries, especially France, which was between the upper and the nether millstone of Spain and Austria, that rivalry and jealousy resulted in almost continuous wars. In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries there was a constant struggle between France and the House of the Hapsburgs. The Spanish branch received a death blow by the revolt of the Netherlands. The Spanish line became extinct in 1700. About the middle of the seventeenth century a rapid decline was evident in the power of the Hapsburgs. The Austrian branch of the house became extinct in the male line by the death of Charles VI. in 1740, and by the Pragmatic Sanction, signed by Charles and by all the countries interested except Bavaria, the female line was permitted to succeed to the throne where there was no heir of the male line.

PARENT OF MARIE ANTOINETTE

So the really great Maria Theresa came to the Austrian throne and her descendants have been there ever since. She married Francis I., of the House of Lorraine, by whom she had fifteen children, one of whom was Marie Antoinette, the daughter who became the hapless wife of the hapless Louis XVI. of France. When Napoleon I. divorced Josephine Beauharnais, he married Maria Louisa, a great granddaughter of Maria Theresa, and another great grand-daughter became the wife of Pedro I. of Brasil. A great grandson, Maximilian, brother of Emperor Joseph, by persuasion of Napoleon III., attempted to set up an empire in Mexico and was shot after his failure by order of Juares, who became president of the Mexican republic.

The succession of Maria Theresa by means of the Pragmatic Sanction was challenged by Charles Albert of Bavaria, who was supported by the French, the elector of Saxony, the kings of Prussia, Spain and Sardinia, and she was forced to flee to Hungary, while Charles was proclaimed Charles VII. With the support of the Magyars she again ascended to the throne of Austria in 1748. Meantime Silesia had been taken by the Prussians, and this led a few years later to the seven year war. In 1777-9 the queen had another war with Prussia, which practically ended with her death in 1780. The succession, beginning with two sons, first Joseph II. and then Leopold II., with other royalties following with brief tenure, the Hapsburgs did little to distinguish themselves for many years.

HOW TO PREVENT ACID STOMACHS AND FOOD FERMENTATION

By a Stomach Specialist.

As a specialist who has spent many years in the study and treatment of stomach troubles, I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty, is acid in the stomach, usually due to, or aggravated by, food fermentation. Acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and normal, but irritated almost past endurance by these foreign elements—acid and wind. In all such cases — and they comprise over 90 per cent. of all stomach difficulties—the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonfuls of bisurated magnesia, which is doubtless the best and only really effective antacid and food corrective known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy, normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for the bisurated magnesia, as I have found other forms utterly lacking in its peculiarly valuable properties.—F. J. G.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

Toronto, Monday, Oct. 26.—The volume of trade moving is considerably below that reported at the same date last year. There is a growing impression, however, that the war is not altogether responsible, that matters would have fallen off in any case. War has merely intensified a depression that already existed, and had been brought on by speculative real estate operations. That this is one of the principal factors in explaining present trade conditions is now recognized by such leading financiers as J. W. Flavelle, who has sounded a warning against a repetition of speculative folly. Some speculators, however, are already busy prognosticating a boom to follow the European war, and unless radical methods are adopted history will merely repeat itself in Canada's trade conditions.

A review of the market situation as it affects farm products, shows price movements that have been favorable to grain with advances in many lines and declines almost demoralizing to the live stock interests, with quotations down 25c to 50c and long even more. Eggs, however, have advanced.

WHEAT

Statistics announced by the Washington Department of Agriculture indicate that the wheat crops of all nations in 1914 amounts to 3,914,000,000 bushels, against 3,926,000,000 bushels in 1913, showing a decline of 304,000,000 bushels. This condition in itself is enough to ensure high and steady prices and the market during the week has a little more than held its own. No. 1 Northern, 91.26½; No. 2, 91.23½; new crop, 5c less; Ontario wheat, 91.05 to 91.09.

COARSE GRAINS

Here we find a market generally a trifle higher, but demand very quiet. Oats, C.W. No. 2, 40c; No. 3, 39c; Ontario oats, 36c to 40c; corn, 80c to 84c; peas, 91.25 to 91.28; barley, malting, 66c to 69c; feed, 65c to 66c; peas, 93 to 92.30; buckwheat, 66c; rye 85c to 87c.

Quotations at the port of Montreal are: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 40½c to 41c; extra No. 1 feed, 40½c; Ontario and Quebec oats, 39c to 40c; corn, 82c; barley, malting, 70c to 72c; feed, 65c; peas, 93 to 92.30; buckwheat, 66c; rye 85c to 87c.

MILL FEEDS

Quotations here are steady: Bran, 923 to 926; shorts, 926 to 927; middlings, 929 to 930; feed flour, 93.80 to 94. At Montreal demand is good: Bran, 926; shorts, 927; middlings, 930; feed flour, 94.

HAY AND STRAW

Hay has recovered from the drop reported last week and quotations are back in their old place. No. 1 baled, 916 to 916.50; No. 2, 913.50 to 914; No. 3, 911 to 912; baled straw, 97 to 97.50. At Montreal quotations have been inflated by government buying to such an extent that export is impossible: No. 2, 918 to 919.50; No. 3, 916 to 917; inferior, 914 to 915.

POTATOES AND BEANS

Receipts continue liberal. The only new feature of the potato situation is a report of rot in Western Ontario and Quebec. How serious this is it is not yet possible to say. Ontario cars, 85c a bag in car lots; New Brunswicks, 80c. The Montreal quotation is 75c to 80c a bag.

Beans here are quoted: Primes, 92.20 to 93; hand picked, 93 to 93.10. Montreal quotations: Hand picked, 93.10; one-pound pickers, 93; three-pound pickers, 92.60.

HIDES AND WOOL

Quotations: Hides, cured, 15½c to 16c; part cured, 14½c to 15½c; green, 13½c to 14c; horse hides, 94 to 94.50; horse hair, 35c to 40c; calf skins, 18c to 18½c; deakins, 40c to 50c; lamb skins, 40c to 90c; sheep skins, 91.10 to 91.25.

Coarse wool is quoted 19c to 20c, unwashed; fine, 25c to 26c; washed wool, rejects, 25c to 26c; coarse, 27c to 28c; fine, 30c to 32c.

EGGS AND POULTRY

On this market eggs have been climbing upwards at an unprecedented rate for this season. Some dealers are asking as high as 50c for fresh cases. Nominal quotations are: New laid in cartons, 45c to 50c; selects, 35c to 40c; fresh, 27c to 28c; storage, 25c to 26c. On the Montreal market there is a strong and liberal demand for No. 1 at 32c; selected, 27c to 28c; new laid, 40c to 45c. Hens at country points are quoted 12c to 13c.

Poultry quotations: Spring chickens, 16c to 18c; old fowl, 9c to 10c; ducks, 16c to 18c; geese, 9c to 10c; turkeys, 17c to 20c.

DAIRY PRODUCE

The advance of one cent in the butter market last week has been followed by a relapse of a quarter cent to a half cent, and at Montreal finest creamery remains from 27½c to 27¾c. Receipts are falling off rapidly. It is notable that the quality of the October make is very fine owing to the favorable weather conditions.

Late advances of cheese on this side of the water have had a tendency to quieten in trade but holders are firm in view of the lateness of the season and the light make on this side. Prices held up splendidly at country boards during the early part of the week, but there were slight declines at the latter dates. Prices at Montreal for finest Westerns are 15½c to 15¾c.

HORSES

The army horse trade has overshadowed ordinary trade, but as there has been a slackening up in the army demand, ordinary trade is now picking up. Quotations are about as follows: Heavy draughts, 9200 to 9240; medium, 9160 to 9180; light draughts, 9140 to 9160; general purpose, 9140 to 9160; farm chunks, 9120 to 9150; express and waggon, 9140 to 9160; light delivery, 9130 to 9150; drivers, 9120 to 9200; serviceably sound, 960 to 9120.

LIVE STOCK

This has been the price cutting week, with values down 25c to 50c, making the total drop for the past month $1. This has been the most severe drop that even many of the old timers have witnessed. For a long time drovers and commission men fought a decline, but during the latter part of the week they submitted with good grace, or as good grace as they could muster, and parted with their stock at lower quotations.

The cut might not have been so serious had not receipts been so heavy, totalling 813 cars, the biggest shipment in six weeks. The future is not bright for the cattle market unless shipments are reduced, and the reduction that packers have made not through the retailers to the consuming public. Quotations now are as follows: Choice heavy steers, 99 to 9.25; choice handy steers, 98 to 98.15; butcher cattle, com. to good, 96.75 to 98; heifers, 97 to 98.15; choice butcher cows, 96.75 to 97; com. to good, 95 to 96.75; butcher bulls, 94 to 97.25; feeders, 97 to 97.35; stockers, 95.75 to 97.15; canners and cutters, 93 to 94.

Milch cows have been in only fair demand. Choice, 990 to 995; com. to med., 960 to 980; springers, 955 to 975. Calves have not been wanted but have sold at 95 to 910.50.

Lambs have suffered a 25c to 50c reduction, and now go at 96 to 97.60; light ewes, 95.25 to 96; heavy ewes and bucks, 94 to 95; culls, 92.50 to 94.

The hog market has declined even more rapidly than packers expected, the results being directly traceable to excessive receipts and unchanging demand through the retail trade. The present quotation is 97.15 f.o.b.

At Montreal receipts were comparatively small, and the week closed with quotations firm. There were no choice steers on the market. Good steers sold at 97.50 and from that down to 96; cows, 94.25 to 94.50 and bulls, 94.50 to 95.25. Demand from canners was fairly active at 93.75 to 95. Canada animals were steady at recent declines: Ewes, 95 to 96.25; bucks and culls, 94.50 to 94.75; lambs, 97.25 to 97.50; Quebec lambs, 96.25 to 97. The weak feeling in the market for hogs continues and prices have taken a further drop to 96.25 to 96.50 for selected lots and heavy 96, weighed off cars.

HASTINGS NEWS

Deputation Attended Silver Jubilee of Norwood Epworth League

Special to The Examiner.

HASTINGS, Oct. 27.—The first snow storm of the season passed over this district on Monday, and the sudden change from summer to winter was somewhat disheartening. We are hoping that it is but the herald of our Indian summer.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church met on Thursday last at the home of Mrs. B. F. Doxsee with a very large attendance, when final arrangements were made for the annual fowl supper, to be held the second week in November. After the business had been disposed of the hostess served luncheon and a very social half-hour was spent.

A very large deputation from the local Epworth League went over to Norwood on Monday night to join in the celebration of the Silver Jubilee. Owing to the inclemency of the weather, the gathing was not as large as was anticipated, but, however, those who braved the elements were well repaid for their efforts, and were well pleased with the outing.

Dr. Edmison and Winter Runnels motored to Roseneath one day during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter were in Keene recently and spent the day with friends.

Mr. H. Masterman returned on Thursday from the hospital, and his friends are looking for a steady improvement in his physical conditions.

Mr. Lloyd Hess of Peterborough, spent the past week here ith his parents.

We are sorry to report that the condition of Mr. Luck does not show any signs of improvement, and he is still in a very critical condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Redpath of Birdsall spent Friday with friends near town.

Miss Clara McGillen of Trent Bridge, is visiting friends in this vicinity.

Miss Mable Laing of Norwood, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs J. Stevenson.

Miss Honey of Percy, has been visiting friends in town.

Mr. Baker and family of Campbellford, have been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Baker.

Miss Lilla Buck and some girl friends of Norwood called here last week, while they were out for a motor trip.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Gillespie and children of Peterborough, have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Humphries.

Mr. Love of Western Canada, gave us a call during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wilson and son, are visiting friends in Percy.

Mr. J. Stevenson, shipped a carload of cattle from the G.T.R. station here on Tuesday, bound for Toronto.

Messrs. Baker and Beavis shipped poultry from Birdsall on Tuesday. Prices are rather low as yet.

Mrs. M. J. Christie of Peterborough, is the guest of her neice, Mrs. Jas. Stevenson, town.

A DUEL TO DEATH IN MID-AIR. A MODERN THRILLER.—The London Times correspondent describes an air duel which he witnessed while on the continent recently. The lighter British airships have a slight advantage over the heavier protected German airships and in the duel which he witnessed, the British plane soon swerved into the better position above his antagonist. A puff of smoke followed, and the German swerved, then fell from his machine.

FAMOUS SIEGES—JERUSALEM

By Henry M. Snevily.

SHORT in duration, compared with the siege of Carthage, the investment and reduction of Jerusalem saw some of the fiercest, most heroic fighting of history. In this, as in many other cases, a siege was the final blow which sealed the fate of a nation, for when their great walled city fell the Jews of Palestine passed under the yoke of the Roman emperors.

Although they had been once conquered, the Jewish people rebelled against the Roman rule under Nero and his successor, Vespasian. The latter, being a great soldier by profession, had warred against the Jews during the reign of Nero and many of them had fled before his forces into the triple walled city of Jerusalem, thus augmenting the number of the defenders that Titus, son of Vespasian, was to face in 70 A. D.

Josephus tells how the Romans approached the city after landing from their boats in the Nile. In the van were the auxiliaries (light armed troops), who were followed successively by the pioneers or workmen, the impedimenta with a guard, Titus with a guard of cavalry, the siege engines drawn by mules, tribunes and leaders of cohorts, legionary soldiers, more baggage with a guard of cavalry, servants, mercenaries and a rear guard of Romans.

As the great army approached the outer walls of Jerusalem it swung in a circle parallel with the outer defences. Titus, in the midst of his cavalry, with helmet off, was observing the defensive works of the enemy when suddenly from one of the gates a horde of Jewish soldiers charged straight through the squadron of plunging horses, cutting the division in twain. Titus himself was isolated and surrounded, but by cutting down all who threw themselves upon him he extricated himself and managed to reform his guard, though darts and arrows fell about him like rain.

This showed the Romans that they had no mere foes before them, and although at the feast of the Passover a faction of the Jews under John of Giscala had gone to the temple with daggers hidden beneath their mantles and slain hundreds of their countrymen of rival factions, the very appearance of the Romans before their walls united them to a man. Their quarrels had, however, resulted in a great wastage of food and war supplies.

Titus began the formation of three camps—one to the north, one to the west and a third to the east, on the Mount of Olives. The Tenth legion, one of his favorites, was at work establishing quarters on the Mount of Olives, throwing up mounds and building huts after the Roman fashion in the case of sieges.

They had scarcely begun their work when a body of the Jews made a sally from an eastern gate, charged across the valley of the Kedron and stormed the heights, throwing the Romans into confusion before they could so much as cast aside their implements and snatch their weapons. Even the Tenth legion fled, but Titus himself led an attack with cavalry, which crashed against the Jewish flank and drove the defenders back into the city with terrific losses.

Shortly after this an aged Jew was seen to mount the wall and, standing amid a shower of Roman darts, wave a mantle several times over his head. The Romans soon learned the meaning of the signal, for a small army emerged from the city and fell upon the cavalry, again isolating Titus. But the legionaries, seeing how he refused to give an inch in such peril, returned and rescued their commander. Again the Jews were routed with tremendous slaughter, but they seemed not to mind loss of life if in dying they could but destroy a single Roman.

Titus next began the work of filling in the valleys before the outer wall, in order to give free play to his battering rams and catapults.

This work the Jews could not prevent, but a ruse almost routed the besiegers. Upon the opening of one of the gates a large body of Jews, apparently unarmed, rushed forth and, crying out for mercy and signifying submission, stampeded toward the Roman camp, while their fellows on the wall hurled stones and curses at them.

On reaching the Roman camp they declared the leaders were persecuting the Jews of the city and that the Romans could easily force an entrance at a certain point. But when the soldiers hurried to the attack, many of them forcing a passage through the gate, they found themselves in an ambush, and the Jews who had perpetrated the ruse fell upon them from behind.

Meanwhile the besieging forces were building great mounds against the walls, which were too high to scale. As the mounds progressed the soldiers built mantelets of twisted boughs covered with hides to protect the workmen. On top of the walls the defenders had catapults for hurling great darts, stones and heavy timbers, and these, especially the timbers, sometimes swept scores of laboring Romans from their works.

But the Roman "artillery" was the more powerful, some of their catapults throwing stones one hundred and twenty-five pounds in weight a distance of a quarter of a mile.

To find the range for the catapults the Romans fastened a piece of lead to the weight thrown over the wall and drew this back by a cord attached. The cord being measured, the range finders were in a position to determine the elevation at which the catapult should be discharged.

After days of battering against the walls the Romans had succeeded merely in loosening a few stones and it was apparent new tactics would have to be adopted. Accordingly Titus had constructed three great towers 50 cubits (about 100 feet) high. These towers were armored with iron and were so heavy that the missiles of the Jews could not overturn them. When they were completed the Romans were able from the tops to sweep the walls of the defenders, thus allowing their battering rams full play. At night one of the towers collapsed during the building, and for a time panic reigned in the Roman camp, but the Jews were able to take but slight advantage of the mishap. Under protection of the towers the great ram called Niko smashed a hole in the wall and the Jews, with great slaughter, were driven back from the first wall.

One of the towers of the second wall which was open to attack by the Romans was held for several days by eleven men because the attackers feared an ambush. At last a private, Aeneas, volunteered to enter the tower alone, and after he was slain his fellows stormed and took it.

Fifteen days had sufficed to capture the first wall. Five days more were required to take the second, and then began the fearful fighting to reduce the temple and the last wall. Josephus was sent into the city to attempt to induce the Jews to surrender, but they refused, though their starving condition was pitiful. To further terrorize the garrison Titus had all the Jewish prisoners crucified before the walls and even treated thus severely those wretched Jews who sought his camp rather than endure the hunger prevalent in the city.

Upon the failure of Josephus' mission Titus began the building of four great mounds, which progressed rapidly. John of Giscala was the first of the Jews to destroy one of these mounds.

From behind the last wall of defence he burrowed under the mound, excavating a great pit there, the roofs and walls of which were supported by heavy timbers. When the work was completed he filled the excavation with dry boughs and fagots and set the whole on fire. The supporting timbers, thus weakened, gave way and the mound tumbled, burying hundreds of men in the smoking, dusty ruins.

Things were getting desperate, and under the protection of a "testudo," or roof of shields supported by soldiers, the Romans tumbled under the last defensive wall, only to find that the Jews had erected a new wall at the point where they appeared.

Shortly after this the Jews employed a ruse which in reality greatly aided their conquerors in the final fighting. As the Romans attacked the temple the defenders made a show of retreating, and when a large body of Romans had entered the building they returned and set it on fire.

Goaded into fighting frenzy, the Romans put hundreds of the defenders to the sword, killing them at the very altar itself. Instead of attempting to quench the flames, the Romans carried into the temple all the inflammable materials available and fed the fire, taking the ruins after some of the fiercest fighting of the siege.

The temple fallen, the city was at the mercy of the conquering foemen, and after operations covering four months Titus had reduced the last stronghold of the Jews.

Ship Crossing and Exploding—An Operation of the Creeping Danger

Mines and Mine Laying

ON this page are given illustrations of the manner in which German mines are laid in the North Sea and the way in which passing ships striking the mines are sunk by the powerful explosives employed.

Broadly speaking, the different types of mines that be placed under three heads—harbor defense mines, which are usually connected to the shore by electric wires and exploded from a station within the fort; deep-sea floating mines, which are thrown indiscriminately on the sea and allowed to float at will, and the moored contact mines, which are moored in more or less shallow water. These are in all probability the mines now being used by the Germans, according to the London Sphere.

The deep sea floating mine can be seen floating on the surface and can be destroyed by a few well placed gun or rifle shots. The moored mines, however, are invisible from above. They are cast overboard from the minelayer with a length of a globe of light shell containing the explosive charge and detonators. These are also large air chambers which render the globe lighter than water. Attached to the air chambers is a heavy sinker consisting of a windlass, round which is coiled a light but very strong cable. When the mine touches the surface of the sea the globe containing the charge of explosive floats, but the sinker commences to dive to the bottom unwinding the cable on the windlass as it goes down. Below this, as is seen in the diagram, is another cable which is weighted with a lead plummet. This plummet dives to the bottom ahead of the sinker and naturally touches the bottom first. This action instantly sets up a ratchet inside the sinker which stops the windlass and locks it. The operation of the sinker pulls the globe under to the correct position. The twin mine is put overboard in a similar manner. It has the same type of sinker, but as it covers a wider area it is more liable to catch the bows of a passing ship.

Tactical Units of the Vast Armies at War in Europe

ONE of the results of the development of the high powered rifle and the disposition of infantry commands in open formation, as in the forces of the Allies in the western theatre of hostilities in Europe, has been a rearrangement of tactical units to meet the exigencies of a variety of unprecedented situations in warfare. Concerning the actual organization of the several columns engaged, therefore, it has largely been a matter of expediency with the respective commanders.

Although there is no hard and fast rule in connection with the organization of the various units of a field army or an army corps, as the disposition of troops may cause merging of half battalions, sections of brigades and portions of divisions, for the most part the tactical unit of the armies—that is, the complete division—will be, as far as possible, kept intact.

A field army is composed of two or more divisions, with auxiliary troops, and is under the appropriate command of a lieutenant general. The organization of a division varies but slightly in the several armies now in the field, although that of the German army is followed with more mathematical correctness than in any of the others.

The established strength of a normal army corps of the French army is 35,000 combatants. The strength of a [illegible] cavalry division of six regiments 4,700 combatants. A cavalry division nominally composed of three brigades two regiments each, with a division of four artillery of two batteries, in all [illegible] squadrons and twelve guns.

The infantry regiments comprise a brigade in the French service (from four to eight battalions). There are two brigades in a division and two divisions in an army corps. French batteries, for the most part, have four guns each, and each division has a field artillery regiment of nine batteries (thirty-six guns), while the corps artillery consists of nine field and three howitzer batteries; altogether thirty batteries to the corps.

In addition there are six reinforcing batteries to each corps, which only exist as a cadre till mobilization. If they can be placed rapidly on their war footing, as it is believed they already have in the present war, it thus gives a total of 144 guns to the corps.

To an army corps in the field, according to the French regulations, there are attached a cavalry brigade of two regiments, one chasseur battalion, several companies of engineers and auxiliary troops. There are also forty-two heavy batteries of two guns each, which are distributed among the army corps.

In the British army a cavalry division consists of four cavalry brigades of three regiments each, two horse artillery brigades, four troops of engineers, one signal squadron and four signal troops, one aeroplane squadron, one cavalry train and four field ambulances. The entire establishment is about 19,000 men, with twenty-four guns.

A British army division consists of three infantry brigades of four battalions each, four field artillery brigades, one of which is equipped with howitzer guns; one heavy battery, one ammunition column, two companies of engineers, one signal company, one squadron of cavalry, one aeroplane squadron, one divisional train and three field ambulances. The total establishment is about 19,000 men, with 6,200 horses and twenty-six guns.

Army troops in the British army include two mounted brigades, each consisting of one cavalry regiment and two mounted infantry battalions, one of two cavalry regiments and one mounted infantry battalion, with [illegible] horse artillery battery, one ammunition column, one signal troop, one train and one ambulance.

All batteries in the British army have six guns each, except the heavy batteries, which have four. The war establishment of a cavalry regiment is 25 officers and 527 men, three squadrons to a regiment. The war establishment of a battalion of infantry is 29 officers and 995 men, in eight companies.

In the German army two regiments of infantry (six battalions) form a brigade, two brigades a division and two divisions an army corps. Ten of Germany's divisions, however, have each three brigades. The manner of assigning reserve troops during war in the German army has always been a profound secret of the General Staff, but it is believed that in the present campaign several of the two division brigades have been augmented by a reserve brigade, and that army corps have taken the field with six brigades (thirty-six battalions), the artillery also being increased by reserve regiments.

To each infantry division in war are attached an artillery brigade of twelve batteries and a regiment of four squadrons of cavalry. To each army corps are attached four battalions of howitzers, also a battalion of expert riflemen and a pioneer, or engineer, battalion. The war strength of a complete German army division of two brigades, without reserve units, is about 14,000 combatants, and of an army corps of two divisions, about 30,000. The strength of a three brigade division is about 21,000 men and of a six brigade army corps 43,000 men.

It is noteworthy that the Royal Flying Corps of Great Britain seems to be assigned to duty by squadrons to the various tactical units. The aeronautical Corps of the French army is organized in three territorial groups consisting of from two to four companies, with from five to five detached sections, with the troops. The French have about thirty sections of eight aeroplanes each, ten cavalry sections of three aeroplanes each, and eleven fortress sections of eight aeroplanes each. There are also about twenty dirigibles in charge of the corps.

Each regiment of a division had two or more machine gun platoons. The packs carried by the soldiers of the warring armies do not differ materially. It is considered by experts that the scientifically arranged field pack recently adopted by the United States Army and Marine Corps is probably the best in use by any of the world forces. In this pack weight has been reduced to a minimum without in any degree impairing its efficiency and utility.

While heavier than the packs of either the French or the English soldier, the pack of the German private holds many tools which the opponents do not carry. The wisdom of shouldering this additional weight upon the hardy German trooper will be decided in this campaign, as will many other things which are peculiar only to the army of the German Empire.

The mode of fighting and the birth enumerated by the German troops from that in the armies of Great Britain, France or the United States. In addition to remaining as invisible as possible in almost every maneuver of attack and defense, the soldiers of these armies go into action with little else than their rifles, side arms, ammunition supply, water bottle and first aid package. Like naval vessels, they literally "clear for action."

Regarding the small arms of the several armies engaged, the French are armed with the Lebel rifle, whose caliber is .315 and weight 9 pounds 2½ ounces. The Guardsmen are armed with the Mignot rifle, whose caliber is .311 and weight 9 pounds. The British troops carry the Lee-Enfield rifle, with a caliber of .303 and a weight of 9 pounds 4 ounces. The Austrian soldiers carry the Mannlicher rifle, whose caliber is .315 and weight 9 pounds 5½ ounces. The Russian troops are armed with the Mosser rifle, which has a caliber of .3 of an inch and a weight of 9 pounds 15½ ounces. The Belgians are armed with the Mauser rifle, the caliber being .302 and the weight 8 pounds 5½ ounces.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Polite Stranger

By JOHN G. LARNED

The two Record girls were more pleased with the social life of Rome than the archaeological curiosities, though the younger, Edith, not only enjoyed the curiosities, but seemed bent on seeking them herself. Italy is not a safe country to go about in by oneself, but Edith Record did a great deal of rambling. She was repeatedly warned to cease hunting for relics of ancient Rome in the environs, but would not listen to the warnings.

One day, taking her brother Dick, fourteen years old, with her, she got on top of one of the double decker trolley cars that run to and from different environs of Rome and went to a place in the Alban hills. There she and Dick walked up a road till they came to a plateau. They were hunting a spot where recent archaeological discoveries had been made. Not succeeding in finding it, they looked for some one of whom to ask its location. Seeing a man on horseback approaching, they resolved to make inquiries of him. When they met him they noticed that, though dressed in a rather shabby velveteen suit, his face indicated a man of breeding.

"Could you tell us," said Dick to the stranger, "the location of the recent archaeological find?"

"I think you will find it over there—a short distance from here—about five minutes' walk."

He spoke in a soft voice, which was almost musical, keeping his eyes fixed on Edith admiringly.

"Thank you," replied Dick, while Edith nodded to the same effect.

"Perhaps," added the stranger, "I had better show you the way."

Despite their protests, he dismounted and, leading his horse, walked with them to a point near the excavations. There he stopped, took off his hat politely and said:

"Follow this path for a few minutes and you will reach the spot you seek."

"You have been very kind," said Dick. "When you are in Rome come and see us. You will find us at No. — on the Corso."

"Does the young lady join in the invitation?"

Edith inclined her head in a mute assent.

Having found the place they were looking for and examined the interior of a house of ancient Rome, they retraced their steps to the trolley and thence back to the city.

One evening during the following winter, when social functions were in order, the Records gave a ball. It was not a large affair, but very select. Among the guests who were entering Edith saw, clad in evening dress like the other men, the stranger who had conducted her and her brother to the excavations. She was surprised to see him avail himself of the invitation he had received to be present at a formal reception, but there seemed nothing to do under the circumstances except to welcome him. Moving forward to where he was, she expressed herself as pleased to see him and to present him to others of her family. He assented, and the introduction was given, though Edith, not knowing his name, was obliged to present him as "the gentleman who showed Dick and me to the excavations."

The stranger remained but a very short time, leaving before scarcely any of the guests had noticed him. He told Edith that he had made some archaeological investigations near the place where she had met him and had just opened some graves and exhumed articles placed in them 600 years before the Christian era. If she and her brother would meet him there he would be happy to have her take some of these archaeological treasures from the graves where they were found. Indeed he had called for the purpose, not knowing of the function given that evening.

To take things with her own hands that had been in one spot for 1,200 years was a delightful anticipation to Edith Record. On the day that she had appointed with the stranger she and her brother went to the place designated. The stranger met them with a carriage and drove them to a retired spot where were some graves recently opened. He opened some more near by and exposed a skeleton in each, surrounded by various trinkets, which he invited Edith to take out with her own hands. She did so and thanked him for them.

"And now," he said to Dick, putting them into the carriage, "can you find your way back?"

"Are you not going to return with us?" asked Edith, surprised.

"It would cost me my life to do so."

"Your life!"

"Yes, signorina. I risked it the other night when I went to your house that I might arrange to do you this little favor. I am Nicholi Sebastiano, a bandit. A couple of carabineers, who followed you to protect you, caught sight of me when I started to drive you here. They are doubtless much distressed about you, expecting you to be held for ransom. They are probably now deliberating what to do to save you. Go back and tell them that Nicholi Sebastiano, having been a gentleman, cannot risk an law so to rob a woman. But permit me to [illegible] signorina, not to go about in the [illegible] of Italy unprotected."

True enough, the girl and her brother found the policemen deliberating in their behalf and thunderstruck to see them return in safety.

"TIZ" FOR TIRED SORE, ACHING FEET

"TIZ" for puffed-up, burning, sweaty, callused feet and corns.

People who are forced to stand on their feet all day know what sore, tender, sweaty, burning feet mean. Those who use "TIZ," and "TIZ" only, get their feet right up. It keeps feet in perfect condition. "TIZ" is the only remedy in the world that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet and cause tender, sore, tired, aching feet. It instantly stops the pain in corns, callouses and bunions. It's simply glorious. Ah! how comfortable your feet feel after using "TIZ." You'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't tighten and hurt your feet.

Get a 25 cent box of "TIZ" now from any druggist, department or general store. Just think! a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents.

Examiner Special:

KEENE, Oct. 29.—A very pretty wedding was solemnized last Wednesday afternoon at 3 p.m., when Miss Bertha Fletcher was united to Mr. John Wilson of Toronto. The ceremony was performed at the Methodist Church, in the presence of the wedding guests, by the Pastor, Rev. A. R. Edmison. The Church was very prettily decorated for the occasion. At the Altar was erected a large arch of evergreen, cut flowers and many hued autumn leaves. The groom entered the Church attended by the groomsman, Mr. William Fletcher, brother of the bride, and was met at the Altar by the bridesmaid, Miss Lappy of Toronto, followed by the bride, leaning on the arm of her father. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Miss Laura Maclarlanelane. After the ceremony the happy couple repaired to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fletcher, where a reception was held, followed by a sumptuous wedding supper, after which dancing was indulged in till the wee sma' hours."

The bride and groom were the recipients of many elegant, costly and useful presents. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold wrist watch; to the bridesmaid a broach; to the groomsman, a tie pin. The bride's gift to the groom was a shirt set, inlaid with pearl. The bride's dress was of white silk crepe cloth, with an over-skirt of silk embroidery flouncing. She carried a bouquet of Marechsneil roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid's dress was of embroidered voile, her bouquet being pink and white roses.

Skin Trouble On The Scald

Skin Dried and Cracked and Hair Fell Out—Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Eczema is annoying and distressing at any time, but doubly so when it gets into the scalp and causes the hair to fall out. Here is a grateful letter from a lady who was cured by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. Hector Currie, Tobermory, Ont., writes:—"I was cured of a disagreeable skin disease of the scalp by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. The trouble started with itching and pain in the scalp, the skin would get dry and crack, and at times would bleed, and the hair would fall out. I tried three doctors without benefit, and suffered for three years. Reading in the almanac about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I began its use, and am now completely cured. The hair has grown again, and I am as well as I ever was. You are at liberty to use this letter, for I am glad to recommend so excellent a treatment.

Dr. Chase's Ointment has no rival as a cure for itching skin disease.

KAISER WANTS CALAIS.

He Has Issued Order To Troops To Take It at Any Cost.

LONDON, Oct. 28. — The Copenhagen correspondent of The Times wires that reports received there from German sources say that the Kaiser has issued the direct order that, no matter what the cost, Calais is to be taken.

It is reported the Kaiser was in Belgium on Sunday and listened personally to the reports of his officers. He is then reported to have stated that the occupancy of Calais and Dunkirk were necessarily vital points in the German strategical plan, but that this was especially so in the case of Calais. Therefore the order was issued that, no matter how much war material or how many men were sacrificed, the march to the Channel must succeed.

Corpl. Ogden Accidentally Shot.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Armorer Corpl. William Ogden, 11th Battalion, Canadian infantry, was accidentally shot at Bond Farm Camp, Salisbury Plains, Sunday, dying from injuries the same night. All his relatives reside this side.

Captured German Hussar.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—In the fighting around Arras, George Andre, noted French athlete, outdistanced his comrades in a bayonet charge and suddenly found himself well within the German lines. He seized a banner from the hands of a nearby colorbearer and footballed his way through the Germans surrounding him. They were so astonished at his conduct that he succeeded in regaining the French line, although wounded in the foot.

YOU'RE BILIOUS AND COSTIVE!—CASCARETS

To-night! Clean Your Bowels and End Headaches, Colds, Sour Stomach

Get a 10-cent box now.

Furred Tongue, Bad Colds, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable headaches come from a torpid liver, and clogged bowels which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

Lady's Waist.

In this design we have a model for a silken shirtwaist. The open neck is finished with a collar of medium size and this closing is in front. The sleeves are plain and small and end at the wrist in a shirt cuff. For these waists such materials as handkerchief linen, fancy linen, silk satin and the like are popular.

The waist pattern, No. 6,878, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 2½ yards of 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give number and address as well as the name and size of pattern required and age of a child.

Address — The Examiner Pattern Dept., The Examiner, Peterborough.

SECTIONAL VIEW OF AISNE VALLEY SHOWING GERMAN TRENCHES.—On the north bank are the trenches and covered ways of the Germans with their heavy artillery at the back disposed in quarries. The field artillery is throwing its shells with a flat trajectory, while the howitzer shells, one type of which have been nicknamed the "Jack Johnsons," sail in a great semi-circular sweep over the river. In the foreground are the French and British troops in their advanced trench.

Austria's Capital
A City of Lost Hope
And of Gray Despair

Only Official Statements Appear in the Newspapers — Spies Are Everywhere — Refugees From Galicia Bring News of Defeats —Many of Nobles Give Paltry Sums to the Red Cross Work.

CHURCHES ARE CROWDED

(By Alice Rohe.)

VIENNA, Oct. 28—(By courier to Rome, thence by mail to New York). —Vienna is a city of lost hope, of gloom, of grey despair.

The once gayest and most beautiful capital of Europe is to-day the saddest, the most distressed. Silent, hopeless protests against the horrors of war which have turned this wonderful, joyous city into a melancholy sepulchre for the living, permeates every stratum of society.

I have seen a procession of 4,000 mothers whose husbands have died in Galicia, carrying in their arms their fatherless babes. They filed past the great cold palace of the ministry of war. It was their mute appeal for peace.

I have seen a procession of little children, plaintive and futile emissaries of life, silently protesting against needless death.

Return of Wounded.

I have seen trains arriving, every one crowded to suffocation with the wounded and dying. From the midst of these maimed and mutilated, sickened and suffering men, I have seen uncomprehending soldiers, dazed by the horrors of war, crazed with joy at being home again, dragged from their companions and placed under arrest. Their cries? Why they cried out in the delirium of excitement their curses against the Russians who had brought such terrible defeat to the Austrian armies. For no news must be whispered by the wounded or the fugitive which reflects the truth of Austrian disasters.

And above these visual pictures of the melancholy Vienna to-day, I have sensed the touch of those grey wings of dread which cast their shadows over the town—the soiled, the sorded, the horrible wings of cholera.

I have felt with the people, stalking beside this hideous enemy, the plague—its sister spectre, Hunger.

In Vienna to-day 75,000 wounded are being cared for in the hospitals, schools, universities, hotels, churches. The Red Cross admits its inability to care for all the wounded and the sight of helpless men, suffering needlessly and hopelessly, is one which confronts the workers in the cause of humanity.

No News Published.

In all Europe there does not exist to-day another capital where the public is treated so inconsiderately in regard to war news. The newspapers publish nothing save the official statements—and this "news" can be guessed at. Arrests are made hourly of Viennese who whisper a word of Austrian defeat. Spies are everywhere. In a cafe on the Praterstrasse, I sat in a nervous crowd and saw whispering refugees from Galicia passing their story on, furtively and fearfully. Suddenly I saw a young man whose pale face told of recent suffering, deserted by his companion, who went to the door, whispered to an officer, and departed. In a moment the fugitive was arrested. He had talked to a spy.

At the station where the incoming trains bring new misery for the gray Vienna that was, I talked with a young mother whose husband lay dead on the battlefield. She had fled to the capital to plead with the government which had taken her husband and robbed her children of a father, for means of support and some of the necessaries of life. She told in patient resigned tones of her sufferings in bringing her three children from Galicia, where her home was to be her haven no longer, and where blood ran deep in the garden beds which she had tended so faithfully, waiting the return of her husband.

Scenes Were Awful.

"When we arrived at the frontier," she said, "the scenes were awful. We were herded like animals and were treated worse than we treat our dogs. I was days in securing a place in the trains because I had no money. There was a police officer on the train and he demanded our passports, such money as we had, and when we could show neither, he refused for days to let us go on."

The natural impulse of these fugitives here is to speak of the evil days which have befallen them, of their losses and the carnage—and they cannot understand why they are arrested for it.

The sight of automobiles carrying wounded soldiers past the brilliant Hof Theatre, past the opera, past the Gothic splendour of St. Stephen's, where formerly gay cars sped on, bent on pleasure, is one that moves the Viennese to despair.

I talked with one of these wounded soldiers as the car in which he was being carried was stopped in front of the Burg Theatre for repairs. He told me in whispers, while the guards were busy with the car, of the frightful ravages made by the Russians and the Servians upon the Austrians.

Terrible Artillery.

"They have buried our dead in heaps," he said, tears coursing down his face. "They were killed like sheep driven to a slaughter yard. The Russian artillery has done unbelievable things. The Russians waste their ammunition as though it were free as air. Their infantry is not good, but how terrible is the artillery—how terrible——"

The spirit of patriotism in the Viennese runs to its highest ebb when these wounded men are being conveyed through the streets.

Before the palace of the minister of war, beside the monument of Maria Theresa and Prince Schwarzenberg, the cannons and arms captured from the Russians are on view. They are insignificant arms, but the people do not tire of carressing them. The meagre signs of Austrian success are like gleams of hope in a leaden sky of despair.

And patrolling the streets one sees increasing in number daily, a nondescript army of uniforms. Every color and sort of ancient regalia has been brought forth from old storehouses.

Crowd the Churches.

In the hour when war and its horrors are keeping a pall over Vienna, the sight of religious processions, headed by priests praying for divine aid, brings out in relief the picture of faith. The churches are constantly filled with women and children praying for husbands and fathers and brothers who may never return. In the time of sorrow too great to endure alone, the people are throwing themselves more and more upon the bosom of the church which has offered them consolation so many times before.

While the devout are filling the churches and the wounded are filling the hospitals, while the wretched fugitives are bringing with them famine from Galicia, accusations and protests are rising above the murmurs of distress against the rich.

Niggard Nobility.

On different subscription lists opened for the Red Cross the sight of unbelievably small sums given by members of the nobility and by millionaires, has brought forth waves of indignation. A few days ago a prince who is among the richest men in Europe, subscribed 20 crowns ($4). Everywhere one hears criticism of the aristocracy of the high nobility and their avarice. This selfishness, say the people, is traditional, but the public believed that in an hour like this even the tightened purses of the nobility would open. It has been suggested that a list be published, giving the names of the nobility, of the rich who have been guilty of avarice, and who have added to the general public depression. Emperor Franz Joseph does not conceal his indignation against these grasping members of the nobility.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Miss Josephine Gentelet, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

Anti-Swearing Box Did Well.

LONDON, Oct. 28. — Salvationists who have friends among the Canadian contingent will learn with interest that four members serving in one company introduced an anti-swearing box, one cent per swear being the penalty imposed. Between Saturday and Monday the box received ten shillings.

German Casualties Heavy.

ROME, Oct. 28.—According to official reports received here the German casualties daily average 10,000 men in killed and wounded. All of those slightly or not gravely wounded, an average of from 70 to 80 per cent. return to the ranks after a relatively short time.

SPY AMONG CANADIANS.

German Enlisted and Was at Valcartier During Manoeuvres.

QUEBEC, Oct. 28. — A letter received here yesterday from one of the Quebec volunteers in the first Canadian contingent, says that out at sea, a German spy was caught on one of the transports.

The letter says that the man was disguised as a Canadian soldier, having been at the Valcartier camp throughout the whole length of the manoeuvres.

The letter comes from George Mills, a local constable, who wrote the news to his wife here.

Enlisting for the second Canadian contingent in Quebec is going on swiftly and already out of the 5000 computed that are to be mobilized from this district, one company is fully manned from volunteers of the 9th Regiment of Fusiliers, wholly composed of French-Canadian members.

GENERAL KILLS HIMSELF.

Hans Von Beseler Who Captured Antwerp Takes His Own Life.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—A startling development of the day in the suicide of Gen. Hans von Beseler, the conqueror of Antwerp, who, according to late advices shot himself at his headquarters in Bruges and died almost instantly. This information comes by way of Rotterdam on what appears to be good authority. No reason is assigned for his act.

Gen. von Beseler is the second high commander of the Kaiser's forces to take his own life since hostilities opened, of which information has reached the public. The first was the leader of the army which besieged Liege.

One Result of The War Is Certain

CANADA must Manufacture for part of the World now involved in War.

Europe can no longer supply the Export Markets.

If you are proud of Canada, you want to see our Factories hum, our Stores alive with Business, and our Offices piled with Orders.

Let Peterborough enlist in this movement to boom Canadian Made Goods.

Let Peterborough Manufacturers get on the job, and let us read, mark and hear more of "Made in Peterborough" Goods.

How many good-going factories in Peterborough never tell our own Citizens what they manufacture.

And if they don't tell, how can they expect to sell.

Much of the European trade that was exported into Canada should now become our own. Who but our own Manufacturers should now make the Foodstuffs, the Hosiery, the Underwear, the Toys, and much of the Chemicals, Dye-stuffs, and other things Germany has supplied us?

Advertising will soon reveal which of our industrial enterprises are most worthy and best prepared to profit by Europe's need. The Firms first to advertise for this business will be the first to profit.

Who, among our manufacturers, is willing to be left out in the cold? Who, among such Firms, will fail to Advertise?

Health and Beauty Aids

Beard: Yes, I believe men all recognize a "made" complexion. Throw away your powder and rouge and use a plain spermax lotion. Then you will have a complexion of which you can feel justly proud, because it will be real as well as beautiful. To prepare it, dissolve four ounces spermax (which you may get from your druggist) in one-half pint witch hazel or hot water. This lotion cannot be detected after a few applications as regular use banishes discolorations, blackheads and sallowness. The spermax lotion is delightful for spring shaving as it prevents the skin from getting windburned.

Dora: You can make your own sparkling and clear by this simple home treatment: Dissolve an ounce of epsom salts (at drug store) in a pint of water. Then add two drops in each eye every other night before retiring. It is necessary to make them feel strong and look bright. If the eyes are red or inflamed, stop smoking, drink a abundant water in the tonic and bathing them an hour after.

Jennifer: The ingredients of this which you write about is delightful and you will soon be wondering what beauty is if you neglect it. But try this simple treatment and I'm sure it will work wonders. Mix one ounce of glycerine (from the drug store) in one-half pint cold water (or rain) to one-half pint cold water (rain best) add one ounce of pure orange flour and shake well until the powder dissolves completely. Bathe your complexion clear after each bath. Fresh blemishes soon disappear.

Your yellowness doubtless comes from your stomach, liver or constipated bowels and I would suggest a plain buttermilk diet. This will enhance the blood and give tone and strength to the liver and kidneys and when these organs are in a healthy condition you will be free from the bilious attacks, the obstinate headaches, and the pains in small of back and groins. To prepare this tonic I get one ounce hardtac from druggist and put it into one-half pint alcohol (mercor rate whiskey), then add one-half ounfol of sugar and hot water to make a quart. Take from a table-spoonful before meals. The hardtac tonic is excellent to clear the skin of pimples, blotches and sallowness and its timely use frequently saves doctors bills.

Office: I have found the most beneficial shampoo for the scalp and hair can be made at home by dissolving a teaspoonful canthrox in a cup hot water. This is unusually soothing and healing to the itchy, dandruff-laden scalp and quickly corrected over-oiliness and other scalp-ailments. My shampooing with canthrox has restored an even color, rich gloss and soft fluffy to my hair, which was becoming dull and brittle. It seems to have encouraged a vigorous hair treatment growth.

P. S.: The styles point to a continuance of the slim figure effects and as you shape, signs of an added waist line you should take pains to conceal your figure. Make this combination of lemon and vaseline each night a table-spoonful. Get clear orange pekoetia from your druggist and dissolve in one and one-half pints of hot water. Strain and sweeten mixture before using. This is inexpensive and will be welcome to the [illegible] and that want strictness [illegible]

Lafayette: Your faded hair is not necessarily dying, though it is in danger due to a home-made tonic coming little, which I know is of great value to make hair: Into one-half pint of cut from the druggist's, then add one-half water. This gives you a full pint. I have found it very soothing and it banishes the dry, flaky, unhealthy condition of the scalp, invigorating the hair roots so a beautiful growth is certain to result.

Allies Progress Between Ypres And Arras Captured Number Of German Trenches

CLAIMS THAT CIVILIZATION IS ONLY VENEER

But the World is Slowly Getting Better, Says Thomas A. Edison, Famous Inventor

GIVES AN INTERVIEW

Special to The Examiner:

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 29 — "Our present civilization is only a thin veneer. The European war shows that, but we are slowly getting better. Materialism is the base of all our moral and intellectual advancement" said Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor, to-day. "Eventually," Mr. Edison said, "all countries will be Republics," and as an afterthought, he added, "and Republics don't care for fighting. European democracy must purge itself of patriotic institutions" Edison declared, "before there will be a possibility of world peace. It must get rid of monarchies, such as are represented by Germany and Russia. In Germany there are about sixty thousand men who run the country. These are military officers, and they represent the social system of land." Edison declared that in his opinion the United States should establish a strong coast defence and be prepared for any emergency.

Sum of Money Was Missing

$495.00 Stolen From Mazur Residence in Port Hope

PORT HOPE, Oct. 8. — A. Polak who boarded with his sister, Mrs. Mazur left town on Monday and at the same time $495.00 mysteriously disappeared from the Mazur residence. Instead of depositing the money in the bank the boarders gave it to Mrs. Mazur to keep for them. She placed it in a tin box and hid it under the cellar floor. The Polak who left town, has been out of work and had no money. Monday he purchased a ticket for Toronto, and naturally the suspicion rests upon him. A warrant has been issued for his arrest.

MANY TOKENS OF ESTEEM

When Miss Williams, the youngest daughter of Mr. John Williams, 311 Boswell Avenue, became Mrs. Brown, on the 17th inst., the charming young bride was the recipient of many presents, and among the rest, a shower of beautiful and varied presents from the young ladies of the Bell Telephone Office, where she had been engaged up to the time of her marriage and was also presented by them with a suitable address at the same time. The groom, too, was the recipient of a cheque for one hundred dollars from his parents, who reside at 600 George Street.

SPLENDID GROUP PICTURE OF LOCAL ARTILLERYMEN

In the window of Mr. W. E. Lech's store appears a splendid panorama photograph of the 7th Artillery Brigade of the Canadian Overseas forces, composed of the Peterborough and St. Catharines Artillery. The local men can be easily picked out in the group. The picture was sent to Mrs. Graham, by her son, Mr. Will Graham, formery of the 57th Regimental Band, who is now in England with the 34th Field Battery contingent.

RAISED BILLS IN CIRCULATION

Cleverly raised $5.00 Merchants' Bank notes are in circulation. The police are on the lookout for such bills. The notes have been raised from $5. to $10. It is thought to be the work of a man who raised similar Dominion Bank bills a few years ago. The "5" mark on the corners of the bills had been erased by acid and the "10" of a revenue stamp put in its place.

ARE HOLDING EVERYWHERE AND ARE GAINING GROUND

Official Communique To-day Shows That German Attacks Have Been Repulsed and at Important Points the Allies Are Making Progress.

Examiner Special:

PARIS, October 29.—The allies are continuing to make progress against the Germans. This is especially noteworthy in the region between Ypres and Arras, where the allies have taken a number of German trenches by a series of brilliant operations. This information was made public in an official communique. It was also stated that the allies are advancing in the Argonne region and in the forest of Apremont. Elsewhere along the battle line, it is stated that the conditions are unchanged.

PETROGRAD, October 29.—The entire Russian army is again advancing against the Austro-German forces. After more than a week of fighting along the San River, the Austrians have now commenced to retreat from the southern section. The only thing that is interfering with the advance of the entire Russian left wing is the stubborn resistance being maintained by the fortress of Przemysl.

Energetic efforts are being made to reduce it and it is believed that it will not be able to resist more than a few days longer. Already breaches have been made in the outer walls. Large quantities of ammunition and supplies of every sort, as well as a number of pieces of artillery, had to be abandoned by the Germans because of becoming bogged in the retreat from the vicinity of Warsaw. An enormous number of prisoners have been taken all along the battle front.

OTTAWA, October 29.—Registration bureaus will be established at Toronto, for the province of Ontario, for the registration of alien reservists in Canada, in accordance with the order-in-council passed yesterday. Steps will be taken at once to obtain a full list of these men, that every hostile reservist in Canada may be under the surveillance of the Dominion police authorities. Some will be allowed their freedom on a system of parole; others considered to be a menace to the country will be placed in detention and held. The Dominion police will be in charge of the work.

OTTAWA, October 29.—The British navy has its full complement of men and is in a state of thorough efficiency. Such is the conclusion to be gathered from an intimation received at the naval service department here to the effect that no more royal naval reservists or naval volunteers are required.

ABDUCTOR IS WANTED BY THE THOROLD CHIEF

Chief Thompson Asked to be on Lookout For Married Man, Said to Have Decamped With a Girl

Chief Thompson has received a communication from the Chief of Police of Thorold asking him to be on the lookout for one Joseph Foster, charged that he on the 26th of October, 1914, at Thorold, did unlawfully take, or cause to be taken, Grace Johnson, an unmarried girl under the age of sixteen years, out of the possession and against the will of her father.

He is wanted for wife desertion and theft of a gold watch also. Watch has engraved on back; "Guseppe Rutsuto," high grade No. 845. Waltham movement No. 16092901, open face, case No. 1257006.

Foster is Italian by birth, but does not look like one. Fair complexion, blue eyes, brown hair, 31 years, 5 feet 7 or 8 inches, 160 pounds. He is a chauffeur, was wearing blue (white striped) suit, curly blue chinchilla overcoat and cap, tan button shoes, carries red leather grip and revolver.

Wire any information at my expense. Ernest Taylor, Chief of Police, Thorold, Ont., Oct. 26th, 1914.

Ford Car Taken Tuesday Night

Mr. John Hill is Minus His Auto Which Police Have Failed to Track Down

On Tuesday night the Ford car belonging to Mr. John Hill, the George street grocer, was taken from in front of the George Street Church. Mr. Hill was attending the lecture, and when he came out the car was gone. Although the police are working on the case the car has not been restored to its owner. Outside places have been notified by telegraph and the police of adjacent towns are on their guard.

REWARD FOR STOLEN CAR

If you should come across a Studebaker touring car (License No. 20855) notify Chief Thompson when a reward of $25.00 will be paid by Chief Downey of Detroit. The car, which was stolen from that city, has a special model body, curved back, with red wheels.

PRETENDED TO HELP MAN HOME BUT TOOK $62

Fred Revoy, a Local Youth, Visited With Punishment by Magistrate Dunbar For Robbing a Drunken Man

PRISONER BROKE DOWN

Fred Revoy, a local youth, who had previously been found guilty of stealing the sum of $62 from a man named Cameron on Thanksgiving eve, when the latter was under the influence of liquor, came before the Magistrate in Police Court this morning for sentence.

Mr. Widdifield, his counsel made a strong plea for the young man. His youth, the fact that this was his first offence, and the fact that his parents were in a position to testify that he had been a good son, all indicated that he merited leniency.

"A good son—breaking his mother's heart," said the Magistrate as the half smothered sobs of the parent were heard in the room.

The Magistrate explained that he had always been in the habit of inflicting severe punishment upon thieves who stole from drunken men. There had been a school of them in Peterborough, and already there were a number of local young men doing terms in prison for the same crime. He sentenced Revoy to two months in gaol. The lad broke down when he heard the sentence, and his mother, who was in court, also made known her feelings by sobs which were audible all over the court.

Revoy, on the night of Thanksgiving day, pretending to help a drunken man home, robbed him of $62. Only his youth and his counsel's plea saved him from a heavier sentence.

$200 Reward For Arrest of P. J. Le Roux

A Boer, 20 Years of Age, Who Absconded With Funds of His Employers

Chief Thompson has received a circular from the Pinkerton Detective Agency in which a reward of $200 is offered for the arrest of one P. J. Le Roux, who has absconded with funds belonging to the Adams Express Company. Le Roux is said to be a Boer, is twenty years of age, 5 feet, 11 3-4 inches high and weighs 165 pounds. The two middle fingers of his right hand are off and he is said to be some piano player. He was anxious to join the Canadian contingent, believing he could secure passage to Pretoria, South Africa.

GROUP PICTURE OF THE CHILDREN

The Examiner will publish another group picture of beautiful Peterborough children as a supplement. This picture has aroused so much interest in previous years (the edition having been sold out entirely almost as soon as off the press) that we believe it will again be appreciated. Arrangements have been made with the Roy Studio for a large group photograph of all the children taken from date of this issue to Dec. 1st. Owing to the enormous amount of work involved it will not be possible to publish all the children taken during the year, but any parent whose child has been taken at the Roy Studio during 1914 may have the photograph inserted free of charge by requesting Mr. Roy to do so. Photographs of the kiddies make inexpensive and acceptable Christmas gifts. Make early arrangements as positively no photographs made after Dec. 1st can be used.

ENJOYABLE AT HOME HELD IN T.A.S. ROOMS

The At Home held in St. Peter's T. A. S. rooms last night proved very enjoyable. The attendance was quite large and a very pleasant evening was spent. The euchre winners were Miss K. O'Brien and Mr. S. O'Connor. Music for dancing was played by Miss M. Gorman, Miss Veronica Carveth, Miss G. Rudkins, and Miss K. Moher.

MAY TRY LONG RANGE BOMBARDMENT OF COAST

Germans Are Bringing Up Heavy Siege Guns and it is Reported They They Are to Make a New Move Against the Coast Lines---Allies Are Ready to Checkmate the Tactics.

Examiner Special:

PARIS, October 29.—Although to-day's official communique was optimistic, it furnished no new information regarding the conditions at the front. For this reason it was generally accepted that important movements are in progress. It was known that the Germans have moved far enough inland so that they are now protected from the guns of the fleet, and that they are now bringing up some enormous siege guns. With them it is believed here they may attempt a long range bombardment of the coast cities to the north, and it is said at the military headquarters that steps have been taken to checkmate any such move. Repulsed along the coast the Germans are certain to deliver their next attack from the interior, probably from a point between Lille and the Belgian frontier. Heavy reinforcements are reported by the allied air scouts as en route to the front from Aix La Chapelle, and from the left of the French centre, but the allies on their part are taking similar precautions so that the Germans will gain no material advantage.

LONDON, October 29.—Additional warships have been sent to the Channel ports along the northwest coast of France. They will furnish support to the allies in the new attack which is apparently being planned by the Germans on these ports. Incidentally they will be in readiness for either an under water or in air raid against English ports. No doubt is felt here that the Germans have massed submarines and light torpedo craft in the canal between Bruges and Zeebrugge. They are also moving their aerial navy or at least part of it into Belgium.

ON OFFENSIVE, SAYS BERLIN

BERLIN, via The Hague, October 29. — Admitting that the Germans operating in Russian Poland were forced to retreat, because of the immense superiority of the number of the Russians, the war office, in a laconic statement supplementing the original declaration issued to-day, says, "We are again resuming the offensive."

LONDON, October 29.—The German cruiser Emden was flying the Japanese flag and carried one extra dummy smokestack, when she slipped into the port of Penang and destroyed the allies' two warships.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

Sanitary Inspector Spence reports that the diptheria epidemic is moderating. This is due in a large measure to the consistent efforts on the part of the authorities in suppressing the disease. In many cases parents, of children afflicted with the disease, objected to having their houses placarded upon the grounds that the patients suffered only a slight attack.

Court of Revision.

The Court of Revision will meet on Tuesday, November 3rd. There is an unusually large list of complaints against the assessment roll. It is understood that the Retail Merchants' Association will take a hand in the matter in the way of getting reductions in the business section of the city.

Call for Charity.

Quite a few applications for charity are being received by Relief Officer Miller. In many instances the applicants are breadwinners, who have been out of work for several months, while others are cases where sickness has made inroads on the family resources.

Painting the City Hall.

The exterior of the City Hall is being favoured with a new coat of paint. The whole, when completed, will harmonize with the improvements that have been made to the Public Utilities section of the civic buildings.

Building Permits.

There has been a falling off in the number of building permits issued from the City Clerks office during the last half of the month. Except for an occasional fence or chicken house which is being constructed, building operations are at a standstill. This does not include buildings that were undertaken some weeks ago and which are yet in an unfinishing state.

Property Committee.

A meeting of the Property committee will be held this evening. It is likely that the committee will discuss the question of making arrangements of disposing of the garbage during the coming year. The present contract expires at the end of the year, and it will be up to the committee to either renew the contract or make some other arrangements.

Meetings To-night.

The Legal committee of the City Council and the Public Utilities Commission will meet this evening.

MARRIED.

TETLOCK-CLARKE—At the Methodist Parsonage, Peterborough, by the Rev. Mr. Peever, on Wednesday evening, October 28th, 1914, Mr. J. W. Tetlock, to Miss Edith Clarke, both of Peterborough.

WILL ROUND UP BRITISH IN GERMANY

Hundreds of Arrests Are Imminent in Berlin and a Clean Sweep Will be Made

NO RELIGIOUS SERVICES

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Having learned that severe restrictions are imposed upon Germans in England, the Berlin authorities have instituted reprisals, and a clean sweep of the city of Englishmen, with hundreds of arrests is imminent, according to an Hague. The unrestricted visiting of Hague. The unrestricted visiting of English prisoners at Ruhlben Race Track has been stopped, it is declared. The chaplain of the British will not be permitted to hold services until he is able to prove that the Germans held in England have religious advisors with them. The soldiers imprisoned at Ruhlben track are sleeping on straw beds in stables the news despatch declared. All travellers coming by way of Holland are closely scrutinized by the German authorities.

ADDRESS ON FRIDAY NIGHT ON CHARITIES

The citizens are reminded of the address to be given in the Assembly Room of the Public Library on Friday evening by Dr. Turnbull, former Secretary of the Associated Charities in Toronto. He will speak on charitable work, and it is hoped that many will hear him, especially those who are interested in this work. The lecture has been arranged by the local Council of Women.

All societies and municipal bodies interested in relief work are invited to be present. This includes the Board of Education, Board of Trade and members of the City Council, etc.

A CHEERFUL NOTE FROM OAK HALL

"We haven't felt any business depression," and we are not looking for any" was the cheerful remark of Oak Hall's manager, yesterday. Readers of Oak Hall's bright and spirited announcements do not have to search far for the reason of this buoyancy. It is plain that the profit-sharing campaign which they have inaugurated to help relieve the burdens of living during these disturbing times, is being appreciated. It's nothing more than values—for value includes worth; and this cheerful store is helping out buyers as few other clothing stores care to do.

Read, for example, Oak Hall's bill-of-fare to men and young men, in to-day's Examiner. Men will marvel at the splendid chances offered in the lot of overcoats selected for profit sharing for the week-end. These coats form part of the cream of this season's stock of men's and young men's smart winter top-coats, in styles and makes that have been much approved by smart dressers in larger cities. The invitation is to "come at once," look over the styles, and buy quickly if you need a coat for this winter.

KITCHENER LEAGUE CONCERT

At the regular meeting Tuesday evening, the Canadian Kitchener League decided to have their concert Thursday evening, Nov. 5th, in the Collegiate Concert Hall. The committee in charge are arranging a splendid programme which no doubt will be a success.

In a few days further announcements will be made.

Music & Drama

MONTROSE STOCK COMPANY.

The Montrose Tabloid Stock Company pleased a large audience at the Grand last night in the presentation of the two act farce, "The Runaways," which caused much merriment. The programme offered by the company is a varied one. A series of art posing pictures, consisting of Biblical and military poses is an artistic feature of merit. A feature film brings the programme to a close. To-night the company will present the comedy drama, "A Race for a Million," and the feature picture, "Fangs of Fate."

HOME LOYALTY.

Home loyalty, or loyalty to home institutions, is at this time very much in our minds and in most of our hearts. But some of us don't always think in terms of Canada first—from 'the drop of the hat" — patronizing our home merchants and our home factories — preferring Canadian-made goods.

Patriotism like charity begins at home. Canada is doing her full share in contributing to the defence of the Empire; in showing her loyalty to the Empire and what it stands for. But are we all doing our share, in standing as solidly by the defence of our home interests? This is something we can do without diverging one line from our duty to the Empire. Our spending men and money is strengthening the military forces of the Empire, is all the more reason why we should do everything in our power to strengthen the industrial and commercial forces of Canada.

The Canadian Engineer has a splendidly illustrated article on "Power Development at Wasdell's Falls"—on the Severn river, near Orillia. It is pointed out with justifiable pride that this enterprise marks

> The beginning of a new epoch in the history of the Hydro-Electric Commission, meaning as it does the entering of the commission into the field of actual power production at cost, as an adjunct to the policy of cost price transmission and distribution heretofore pursued."

There is a minute description of the watershed, of the maximum and minimum head, and of the hydraulic power, etc. The thing is all right up to the point, for we read that the turbines, etc., are supplied by a Canadian concern. But it's not right when it comes to the electrical equipment. We read that "the main generators and exciting equipment were manufactured and installed by the Swedish General Electric Company."

Why the "Swedish General Electric Company"—a foreign company? One would think that the peoples' money spent to provide benefits for the people of Ontario should be so spent as to give Canadian industries the full advantage. Sir Adam Beck, the chairman of the commission, is practically loyal to Canada and the Empire. He has made the gift of his chief prize-winning horse, at the Olympic and other horse shows, to Lt.-General Alderson, commander of the Canadian Overseas forces.

But when it comes to loyalty to Ontario, the commission, or the government, or whoever swings the influence, gives the contract, for electrical equipment for a peoples' power development plant, to a foreign country. This is not fair.

We have competent electrical companies in Canada, and the most important of them is situated in Peterborough. This was considered good enough to supply electrical equipment to the greatest power development enterprise in the world, at Niagara Falls; but it seems that it is not good enough to supply the electrical equipment to a comparatively small plant at Wasdell's Falls.

There may be an explanation of this preference to a foreign company, but it has to be a mighty good explanation to furnish a legitimate excuse for spending the peoples' money in a foreign country, over the heads of capable Peterborough and Canadian enterprises, which not only need the work, but have an incontestable right to receive it.

Our local electric company has plenty of room for employees, and the city would benefit, from filling such an order as that given to the Swedish company. The principle of preferring foreign enterprise is wrong. When a peoples' commission sets the example of disloyalty to home interests, it is no wonder, we have trouble in persuading some Canadian people that it is their duty to patronize home industries—to keep Canadian money at home for the benefit of the Canadian people.

THE POWER OF LA PRESSE.

We often speak of the power of the press, taken generically; but it is a pleasure to here pay tribute to the specific power of "La Presse" of Montreal. This enterprising French-Canadian journal, proposed and advocated the idea of the municipalities of the Province of Quebec providing for the maintenance of a Canadian Hospital at Paris. Thanks to the large circulation of La Presse, and the influence of the public spirit and enterprise, it is in the habit of displaying, the object has been largely successful and the cost of maintenance of 170 beds for the proposed hospital is actually provided for. La Presse has vindicated the power of the press. Salut a notre confrere.

NO NEED FOR THE SPUR.

A correspondent of the Toronto News—Mr. Frank Wise, who evidently possesses more zeal than wisdom—suggests that the political leaders of Canada should do some stump speaking in order to stimulate enlistment. There's no necessity for putting this extra work upon Sir Robert Borden, whose health is not at present robust, or upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who is seventy-two, though he is mentally and physically alert, can appreciate rest. There is no need to stimulate recruiting; the need seems to be to prevent recruits embarrassing the military authorities with too plentiful applications. There is no need of our Canadian young men needing to be pumped fuller of enthusiasm than they are now. Besides we are providing contingents as fast as Kitchener says he wants them; and as fast as we can equip and arm them. It is of no use to send men to the front unless they have guns and are given an opportunity to learn to shoot. Thank goodness, there is no need to foster Canadian patriotism and loyalty and sense of duty by hothouse oratorical methods. We have more need to put lead under the saddle than use the spur.

CONSCRIPTS AND COMMANDMENTS.

We cannot follow German ethics in their entirety, but we can well adopt their philosophy of keeping the dollar at home, developing home enterprise, home industries, and home prosperity. Whatever Teutonic Moses wrote the Ten Commercial Commandments of Germany, he surely knew the German people. Some parts of the decalogue contain reasons why. Most of the commandments are just—commandments. They are orders given to a conscript nation, to buy German goods—wherever possible. The code is as candid as the German ethics of war. The only reason for commanding the Germans to buy German goods is that to do so helps Germany.

Canadians, being free people and citizens of a great liberty-loving Empire, need no commandments to induce them to buy the goods made by their fellow-citizens. All they need is to recognize the situation. If ten commercial commandemnts were drafted in this country by any Canadian Moses, Canadians would tear them to tatters without being in the least degree rebellious. Canadians know that the war has precipitated an industrial crisis in which it is every nation's business to hang together as strongly as possible. The Empire, and therefore Canada, is engaged in a struggle that tests out the national character of every country under the British flag. Canada's response to that test is two-fold, sending men to fight the battle of empire, and buying goods made by the factories of the Empire. Every dollar spent in Canadian-made goods now is as good as two before or after the war. Canada needs the co-operation of Canadian citizens—now. One volunteer dollar spent to help along a great movement is worth ten conscript dollars based on commercial commandments. Canada first is a justifiable slogan.

A GERMAN BLUNDER.

One of the most unfortunate moves hitherto made by Teutonic apologists is the bringing of cruelty charges against the Belgians. Made against the French they might pass muster. But does one charge a person, at bay before overwhelming odds and defending himself against unprovoked attack, with foul fighting? — Detroit Free Press.

THIS IS OUR WAR.

The Sun of Toronto laments the unity of opinion between the two parties upon the question of what Canada should do in the war. "As a result," it says, "there is, unfortunately, no discussion whatever of the "just measure of Canada's contribution." There is no discussion because there is no difference of opinion. Canada's just contribution is what every country puts into war—her full power. This is our war.—Manitoba Free Press.

Is This True? If So It's Neither Patriotism Nor Good Business

It is charged, first, that Canadians are loyal to everything and everyone except Canadians! That they are loyal to England. That they are loyal to the British Empire. That they are loyal to their respective towns, counties, provinces, and even to Canada as a whole; but that, as between Provinces and Provinces, as between Western consumer and Eastern producer, in sort, as between Canadian and Canadian, there is often a lack of loyalty! It is said that Canadians often seem to lack confidence in the handiwork of Canadians; that they want to see the seal of foreign approval on goods before they approve for themselves; that they can be led to admire what comes from outside Canada more easily than that which is originated by fellow Canadians inside Canada; that they will insure their lives in foreign insurance corporations sooner than with the equally strong Canadian concerns; that they even prefer, when they have holidays to spend or trips to take, to spend the holidays or make the trip outside Canada rather than in it!

It is said that Canadian millionaires will pay two thousand dollars to a Dutch art dealer for a small canvas covered with a "smudge and a signature," while the Canadian artists—many of whom have been recognized abroad—have sometimes to eke out a living by drawing advertising pictures, largely because these millionaires pay even leading Canadian artists only a fraction of the rate which they willingly pay Dutch brokers.

It is said that a certain Russian music teacher enjoyed such large fees and such a tremendous clientele of Canadian pupils while he was in London that, like any other logical man, he argued he would do better still to go to Canada and so gain the extra pupils who could not come to him in London; that the disciples of Orpheus would not believe a really good music teacher would deign to come to Canada to teach.

This case is cited: Three young men inherited a considerable legacy, carrying with it a provision that it must be spent in travel. They secured leave of absence from their business and made a grand tour of Europe. All they know of Canada is Toronto, where they live: Muskoka, where usually they have spent their summer holidays: Montreal, where two of them are "courting" young women, and Cobourg, where they were born. Their daily income comes from a business dependent upon the Western Canadian farmer, yet they have never been west of the Lambton Golf Club, and they are planning a trip next year—where? To Winnipeg? To the Pacific Coast? Through our Maritime Provinces? No. To the Bahamas.

A man is named who would not think of buying, seriously, for his library, a book printed in Canada, if he could get the same volume from an English or American press.

A housewife is mentioned who has never tried Canadian cheese—recognized by foreign epicures — on her table; she buys imported cheese. Another housewife was told of who lives in a town near Montreal; she won't even buy her granulated sugar or flannelette from her local retailer, but sends to Montreal for it! A real estate dealer in Winnipeg who made all his money from Canadian land, and in short who owes everything he has including his wife and family, to Canada, is cited as having bought a foreign-made automobile, while workmen in a Canadian branch factory, who had bought lots from him, were laid off for lack of orders. It is charged that an Eastern Canadian municipality required a number of road-rollers not long ago. It bought imported road-rollers at a price which was only a little less than the price a Canadian firm had quoted. It is pointed out that a certain Church congregation in Hamilton allowed its preacher to be lured to the United States by better working conditions. Five years later when he had preached his Canadian sermons in New York and been applauded by the newspapers of the United States, his old congregation induced him to return to Canada. He is drawing big crowds twice a Sunday because he first won a United States reputation!

This was told me by a former salesman of household heating apparatus. He was waiting outside a certain newspaper office to get an early copy of the paper and look over the "Men Wanted" column. He had a wife and children and had been out of work for several weeks.

"I tell you what I feel about this country," he said, "I feel it is a selfish country, and a hard country to get a living in. Canadians include an awful lot of people who begrudge anyone but themselves a living, especially among the naturalized American farmers of our west country."

"Go out there and try to sell them a Canadian-made stove. They say: 'How much?' You quote the price—same price as the same sort of American stove. They say, 'Yes, it's a nice little stove, but have you got a Kalamazoo stove? We want a Kalamazoo stove.' Where's Kalamazoo? In Michigan. Is that right?"

That is for the Canadian public to answer.

Here is another allegation: A Winnipeg office-supply dealer has built up a large trade in cheap desks and other office equipment by keeping in close touch with a manufacturer in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Once a year the Grand Rapids man clears out his factories of all the odds and ends of the expiring season. These he offers at reduced prices. The Winnipeg dealer buys them and sells them to Winnipeg people at the regular Canadian price. Meantime, Canadian managers and workmen lose the orders which might otherwise have been theirs.

The other side of that question was presented to me in an interesting light. A Canadian furniture factory found itself overloaded with stock, owing to a sudden falling-off in trade. Desperate, the Manager paid a visit to Buffalo and interviewed buyers. "See here," he said, "I have a stock of goods that can be had very cheap—at cost, if you'll help us clean it out." The American buyers, one by one, examined his samples, pronounced them good, admitted that his prices were unusually low, and are said to have concluded to this effect:

"Thank you very much Mr. ——," with a smile, for letting me see your line. It is certainly a good line and we'd like to buy—but you must remember there are good American factories over here that are turning out just as good goods, at a price which is not much worse than yours. And why should we go outside our own country to buy? We must keep things up in the little old United States, y'know."

That seems an interesting case. Almost ironical, you say. The Canadian maker, driven from his own market by the American with a stock of bargain odds and ends, and lacking the support of his own home market is refused in the American market on the grounds of American patriotism!

You have the charge. You have the evidence.

Is there any evidence for the defence?—Britton B. Cooke in Canadian Magazine.

May Go To South Africa

Canadian Contingent to Aid Botha Is Now a Possibility

OTTAWA, Oct. 29.—While no official communication has passed on the subject, it is considered here not at all improbable that Canadian troops may be sent to South Africa to help put down the rebellion in which Generals De Wet and Beyers with their followers have now joined, as well as to uphold British arms against the Germans in Southwest Africa. Canada could send a considerable force of mounted infantry such as are needed in that country. There are thousands of men in the West who are eager to go to the front, and would probably be just as willing to fight for the British cause in South Africa as in Europe.

The greatest difficulty in sending early assistance to Premier Botha and his Government would be that of providing the equipment. This would be rushed with all speed, however, once a decision were made, and if the present trouble were prolonged, as in the former war, the Canadian forces would be in time to render effective aid.

Bernstoff Crawls Out

Trying Hard to Set Himself Right With United States

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—"Germany will not invade Canada. She will not try to seize any territory in either of the Americas, no matter what may happen on the other side."

Such was the opinion of Count von Bernstorff yesterday, German Ambassador to the United States, who continued:

"I don't want any mistake made as to Germany's attitude. Germany has no desire to come over here, no matter what may be the outcome of the war. There is no reason for this country to become disturbed on that end. Germany's intentions are the best concerning the United States."

A TRIBUTE TO MISS WEIR

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—May I as a one-time resident of Peterborough, express my regret that the children of Peterborough are to lose so wise and valuable a teacher as Miss Weir of the Collegiate Institute. Everyone knows the power a person has in a community whose life and teaching aim to uplift and strengthen the moral and mental calibre of the young people committed to his or her care. Mothers know the value and force of example and I am sure much regret will be felt at her summary dismissal. I hope I am not intruding in expressing my views, but deeming it an honour to have had my children under the influence of and taught by so wise and good a woman as Miss Weir, I owe it to her, to Peterborough and to myself to publicly express my opinion, and ask how the citizens of Peterborough can afford to lose so valuable an example of wisdom and integrity. I have not seen Miss Weir for many months, but will be glad if you will publish this very inadequate tribute to her worth

FRENCH AVIATOR FATALLY WOUNDED DICTATED REPORT

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Before dying, Senator Emile Reymond, the president of the National Aviation Commission, whose machine was brought down by German gun fire last week, dictated a long and clear report of his reconnaissance, which was very useful to the French commanders.

Senator Reymond's death also was the occasion of a feat of arms. His machine had landed between the trenches of the French and the Germans and while the latter were particularly strong. The French had sought for twenty days to dislodge them strategically, which was a slow and difficult process and costly in men.

When the aeroplane fell the Germans dashed from the trenches and fell upon the machine. Thereupon the French engaged the Germans in hand to hand fighting, which assumed great violence, and after some time the Allies succeeded in gaining the much wanted position.

ANOTHER HEROINE OF BATTERED OISSONSS

Her Experience a Demonstration of the Help Which Women of France Are Giving in This War—Unafraid and Scornful of the Germans.

HUSBAND MAY NOT RETURN

LAGNY, Oct. 28.—(By mail to New York).—The women of France are doing their half of the fighting in this war. This is my conclusion after talking with mothers and sisters and daughters whom I saw on my trip through the battle-trampled fairy-land.

Nothing else explains the heroic stand of the French against the walls of Paris after the cyclonic southward sweep of the Germans; nothing else clears up the mystery of the sudden defeat of the invaders in the battle of the Marne. The women had lent a hand.

My impression is that Germany cannot win because the women are helping the Frenchmen to fight.

They are helping by their cheerfulness; by their astounding courage in the face of the most terrifying war since men began to slay each other; by their smiles of encouragement when they know tears would take the heart out of their men; by their persistent optimism, their unwavering confidence in an ultimate victory; their light way of passing over sorrows which one would think would crush them.

Men can't help fighting when their women urge them on; they can't help winning when their women demand victory.

"Go on! Go on!" the women of France are crying. "And don't mind us."

I had always considered French women the most clinging feminine of her sisters. On the battlefield I find her made of the same stuff as the Spartan mothers.

I have told the story of Mme. Jeanne Wateau Macherez, "boss" of Soissons, and how she is managing all departments from detecting spies and running the military hospital to having dead horses buried and keeping the streets clean in order that the men of the place can take up their rifles and fight.

Another Brave Woman.

Here is the story of another woman. She, too, lives in Soissons. She asks that her name be left out of print because she "is doing nothing for the cause."

Her home is near the bridge over the Aisne which the Germans in the rock quarry on the hills north of the town shelled repeatedly. A corner room, upstairs, was exposed to the weather, the walls having been torn away by a shell. The street in front of the house was littered with stone and plaster and splintered wood. Across the river dead bodies lay and when the wind comes from that direction a terrible stench filled the air.

Along the firing line somewhere she had a husband and two brothers, she didn't know exactly where, for every thing is secret in this Secret War. She had not heard from any of them since the war began. Yet she was able to smile with a cheerfulness that was contagious. I asked her what she thought of the war.

"We will win," she said.

"But what do you think about all this fighting and killing one another?" I added, determined to get at what this woman had to say on the broader, bigger side of the great war.

"It's horrible, of course," she said simply in a French which must be in France what Mrs. Wiggs' cabbage patch language is in the United States. "And if HE doesn't come back I don't know what I shall do, though I suppose I shall have to manage somehow."

A little girl, perhaps three years old, came out and joined her mother on the littered steps, her big, mysterious blue eyes bent on me and wondering whom I could be.

"We have two children," the woman continued, "this one and a baby. Perhaps we are in for a hard time. And maybe HE won't come back; they say our losses are heavy. But if France wins where I lose, I shall feel that I, too, have done something."

"Even a great deal?" I said.

"Yes," she replied, "even a great deal, for HE was all I had."

Mind you, this was not said complainingly. The woman talked not mournfully and depressingly, but with cheerfulness born of inspiration.

Later in the day I saw another woman standing boldly and unafraid in the streets while the German shelling was particularly severe. A soldier hurried past.

"Don't be afraid, lady," he said, "the Germans are not going to get into the town again."

"Afraid?" she flung back disdainfully. "Afraid of the Boches? Hand me your gun, young man, if you're afraid, and I'll get out to meet them."

Betty Stark couldn't have done it better. Everywhere I went I saw women like these. I talked to many whose homes had been destroyed, farms ruined, their stock requisitioned, and who had little or nothing of a material kind left in the world. But they were all hopeful, even cheerful. Every soldier they spoke to they cheered up; the spirit of Jeanne D'Arc is still alive in France.

OTTAWA BUYS BULK APPLES.

Will Send Representatives to Ontario for That Purpose.

OTTAWA, Oct. 28.—The city of Ottawa is active upon the suggestion of Fruit Commissioner Johnson, and is sending a representative to Western Ontario to buy apples in bulk by the carload.

It is figured that at the prevailing prices in the orchard, and making allowance for freight charges, the fruit can be retailed in Ottawa at $1.25 per barrel. The initial purchases will be as an experiment.

BRITISH MARINES SIGNALLING.—Recent despatches indicate that British sailors and marines have played an important part in the fighting on the south shore of the English Channel. The picture shows British marines on the docks at Dunkirk, France, sending heliograph messages to transports and warships.

THE SHELLING OF RHEIMS

One of the Most Graphic Accounts of How the Famous Cathedral Was Damaged by Shells—Irreparable Damage to the Exterior Decorations of the Great Towers —Circumstantial Story of the Town Under Fire.

Now what remains of the Notre Dame itself? The outer structure—that is to say, the walls, vaulted stone roof, the famous towers, and the innumerable spires rising like the flowers in some rich garden—remains intact. That is to say, there is no fear of a collapse of any part of the building owing to the weakening of the framework. The old artisans did their work too thoroughly for that. The great thickness of the walls has dared to defy the Kaiser's heavy howitzers even after the lapse of seven centuries. The outer wooden roof of the Cathedral has, however, entirely disappeared, leaving the white stone of the vaulted roof underneath a prominent landmark when approaching the City.

The real and irreparable damage has been done to the outer and inner carvings and decorations on the walls of the two great towers which formerly could not be rivaled for richness and beauty of execution, giving the front of the Cathedral, as I have already said, the appearance of an enormous piece of lacework. All the woodwork in the interior has been completely gutted by the flames, but this can be replaced. The exterior has been charred and chipped by flames and bursting fragments of shell. The stonework and innumerable gargoyles figures and graceful spires have been seriously damaged by the heat of the flams and by the boiling lead which poured down upon them like an avalanche suddenly let loose. Many of those which remain intact will have to be removed because the stonework has become so soft that you can break off great chunks with your hand. Many of the flying buttresses have been seriously damaged by fragments of shell and the flames, and one of these topmost arches on the north-east corner has been broken in half. The same shell set fire to the roof in this quarter and the burning cinders fell into the nave, setting fire to the choir and other woodwork. Of the wondrous medley of carved figures, each representing a different Scriptural scene, covering almost to their summits the exterior of the north-west tower, the greater number are destroyed altogether or charred beyond hope of repair by the scorching flames.

Why Destruction Was Not Complete.

It may naturally be asked why this tremendous shell fire did not demolish the whole outer structure of the cathderal. The answer is this: The German batteries were firing from a distance of eleven kilometres at an extremely high angle, and by the time they reached their destination the velocity so necessary for penetrating three feet of solid masonry had been reduced to little more than that of a heavy weight tumbling from aleft. The gunners did their utmost not to leave a stone standing but we have to thank their bad marksmanship and long range for what remains. The Germans can produce no justification and no excuses. Every single shell fired at Rheims fell in the immediate neighbourhood of the Cathedral, and it is the only building in Rheims which stands out with sufficient prominence at such a distance on which the gunners could lay their sights.

The Non-Combatant Dead.

The destruction of Rheims Cathedral will surely occupy a very high and honourable place among the great crimes of history. Notwithstanding the universal cry of exceration which has arisen all over the civilised world at the damage inflicted on this venerable relic of less enlightened ages, the damage to the town of Rheims and he loss of life among the women and children have failed to arouse that indignation which they would otherwise have done. But let it not be forgotten that an area of buildings half a mile square has been completely destroyed by German shells, and of the innocents who were living in perfect security two months ago under the very shadow of this monumental tribute to the Creator, at least five hundred went to join the gallant men who died resisting the modern Attila in the broad plains outside the town.

In the Cathedral During Bombardment.

Our knock was answered by a priest, who, on seeing that we were English, at once allowed us to enter. The father then told us in language that was not altogether priestly, when speaking of the soldiers whose guns were still thundering outside, of how the Germans had bombarded the Cathedral for two hours that morning, landing over fifty shells in its immediate neighbourhood, but, luckily, the distance being very great, over eight kilometres, the solid stonework of the buildings had resisted the successive shocks of these six-inch howitzers, and how it was with that ancient and priceless glass which had suffered the most.

"Monsieur, they respect nothing. We placed scores of them inside and hoisted the Red Cross on the spire in order to protect the [illegible] but yet they fire at it all the same, and have killed their own soldiers. Pray, monsieur, make these facts known al lover Europe and America."

With these words he unlocked a wicket and conducted us toward the alter, close to which stands a small painted statute of Jeanne d'Arc. The east end of Notre Dame had up to this period suffered but little, and although some of the windows were damaged, they were not lost beyond repair. The light still shone through in rays of dark blue and red, broken here and there by streaks of pure light. Milton's description still applied to them:

The storied windows richly dight,
Casting a dim religious light.

A great wave of sunshine lit up a sombre picture of carnage and suffering at the western end, near the main entrance. Here, on piles of straw, lay the wounded Germans in all stages of suffering. Their round shaven heads, thin cheeks, and blmish-grey uniforms contrasted strangely with the sombre black of the silent priests attending them, while in the back-ground the red trousers of the French soldiers, were just visible on the steps outside. Most of the wounded had dragged their straw behind the great Gothic pillars, as if seeking shelter from their own shells. The priest conducted us to one of the aisles beneath the window where the shell had entered that morning. A great pool of blood lay there staining the column just as the blood of Thomas a Becket must have stained the altar of Canterbury seven centuries before.

"That, monsieur, is the blood of the French gendarme who was killed at eleven this morning. But he did not go alone." The priest pointed to two more recumbent figures, clad in the bluish grey of the Kaiser's legions. There they lay stiff and cold as the effigies around them. All three had perished by the same shell. Civilian doctors of Rheims moved among the wounded, who for the most part maintained an attitude of stoical indifference to everything around them. Food is scarce in the town, and meat almost unobtainable, but in the centre of the cathedral transept lay the raw quarter of a slaughtered ox, a horrid touch of materialsim amidst a scene otherwise lacking all sense of reality. We moved around collecting fragments of the precious glass which the Kaiser had so unexpectedly thrown within our reach. We were brought back to realities by hearing the unmistakable whistle of an approaching shell, followed by a deafening explosion, and more fragments of glass came tumbling from aloft. The weary, war-worn Teutons instinctively huddled closer to the Gothic arches.

Succoring the Fallen Foe.

Now we come to the crowning disaster, which took place on Saturday afternoon at four o'clock, and which has wrought such irreparable ruin. The northwest tower has been under repair since May, 1913, and scaffolding had been placed almost to its highest summit. The following facts were related to me by the Abbee Chinot, who, together with the Archbishop of Rheims, Mons. Landrieux, was alone in the building at the time. Monsieur Chinot does not know to this day how the scaffolding caught fire, because it is on the west front, which was protected from the German shells by the south side of the cathedral, the guns being fired from a line east by south-east. He thinks a high-angle fire shell must have come right over the top and landed on the scaffolding, or else that an inflammable shell, bursting in the square in front, set fire to the dry wood. Almost at the same time another German shell landed right on the northeast corner over the chancel, smashing one of the fling buttresses and setting fire to the wooden roof, which was old and dry as match wood. Monsieur Chinot is of the opinion that had the Fire Brigade been present the flames might have been extinguished without much difficulty. Unfortunately, the station close to the cathedral had already been destroyed by a bursting shell and the Fire Brigade were busy putting out conflagrations in other parts of the town.

The flames spread with awful rapidity. In a few minutes they mounted to the summit of the northeast tower and set fire to the roof, which was already burning at the east end. Boiling lead came pouring down, setting fire to the straw inside the cathedral on which the German prisoners were lying. Soon the entire cathedral was enveloped in flames and presented a majestic spectacle. The charred remains of the scaffolding came tumbling down from the northwest tower, falling with crashes into the streets beneath. It seemed as if nothing could save any part of the famous building. The Germans, now having a splendid target, redoubled their fire. The scene inside was terrible. The German wounded became panic-stricken and tried to escape when the straw inside caught fire. The Archbishop and Monsier Chinot directed them to the north door, and dragged out those who were unable to move on mattresses. Here an angry crowd, furious at this wanton vandalism, had assembled. They shouted to the two heroic priests to let the barbarians perish, and threatened them with violence. The Archbishop and Monsieur Chinot placed themselves in front of the terrified wounded, and protected them until an escort of French troops came up, when they were taken to a house some distance away. About fourteen of the wounded, not heeding the warning to leave by the north door, ran out of the door on the south side toward the burning Archbishop's palace and the Salle des Rois. Some eight or nine were caught by the flames and burned to death. Some four or five more, probably so panic-stricken that they did not realize what they were doing, ran out into the streets and were apparently killed by the mob, who imagined them to be escaping. By five o'clock the flames had burned themselves out, leaving the cathedral as I have endeavoured to describe it.—E. Ashmead Bartlett in Collier's.

NO REVELRY IN PETROGRAD BUT HOPE AND CONFIDENCE

PETROGRAD, Oct. 26.—Probably in no capital of Europe have the first two months of the war wrought such a change in the aspect and character of a city as in Petrograd. What was traditionally regarded as a city of dissipated energies and midnight gaiety quickened by the sale of vodka has become in a short period as unified and sombre in tone as a nocturne.

The streets are quiet and almost deserted at the hour when the night life used to begin. In the restaurants all the diners could be comfortably gathered around one large table. The Nevsky Prospect no longer echoes with revelry, but is as quiet and orderly as Fifth Avenue on Sunday afternoon. The capital, of course, is saddened, like all cities of Europe, by its losses and by all the misery which ebbs back from the front.

In the General Staff offices, which are at one side of the famous Winter Garden, the daily lists of the dead are published. In front of this structure a line of peasants, their black shawls like blots of ink against the blood red colour of the building, stand helpless and afraid. Some of them have found relatives in the published lists, and others, morbidly apprehensive, are trying to acquire sufficient courage to go upstairs and look.

Women of the better class, dressed in heavy furs, come forth with chalky faces and bowed heads and step into their carriages. There is no sobbing, no outward protest against the fate which has bereft them. Sometimes they stop and offer money and words of consolation to the peasant women who face the world as paupers. There is the extraordinary spectacle of aristocracy and peasantry brought together in a community of grief.

But apart from scenes such as these which abound in the capitals of every country at war, Petrograd is alive with new hope and confidence. The end of the first two months of war is the occasion for a kind of celebration which usually accompanies a great anniversary or a holiday.

The National Anthem.

One of the larger restaurants was fortunate enough last night to have as many as twenty diners. It was the same restaurant in which sixty years ago a Russian officer leaped to his feet and shot dead a student who was dining quietly with his wife. He had neglected to rise when the Russian National Anthem was played. On account of this and other similar episodes the orchestras in the restaurants had struck the National Anthem from their programmes. Last night for the first time since then, the orchestra played the national air. Every man in the place immediately rose to his feet.

Tax Increase Now.

If the Minister of Finance is successful in carrying out a project which has for some time been under the consideration of the specially appointed commission, Russia will soon have an income tax to compensate the government for the enormous loss sustained through the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of vodka. This monopoly has yielded an average yearly income of about 800,000,000 roubles (approximately $400,000,000).

quit tea and coffee and use—
POSTUM

Once convinced that tea and coffee are actually harmful to health, few parents would give tea or coffee to their children, or drink it themselves.

What proof more convincing than the unnatural aches and pains that many tea and coffee drinkers suffer?

What proof more conclusive than the scores of expert medical and scientific opinions against tea and coffee?

Brain, Stomach, Heart, Liver and Kidneys are the first organs to be affected. Sometimes it shows in headache; often in nervousness, indigestion or heart disturbance; frequently in biliousness or disturbed vision.

If you are in doubt, try this test—
Stop both tea and coffee ten days and use POSTUM

This pure food-drink made of prime wheat and a small per cent. of wholesome molasses, has a delightful, snappy flavour and is absolutely pure and free from the tea- and coffee-drug, caffeine, or any other harmful ingredient.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—needs no boiling. A teaspoonful of the soluble powder stirred in a cup of hot water makes a delightful beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Grocers everywhere sell both kinds, and the cost per cup is about the same.

THOMAS ARNOTT'S CABBAGE SPECIALTY

Mr. Thomas Arnott, market gardener—and by the way one of our best—corner Park and McGill streets, does not set up a rivalry with our educational institutions, but he has phenomenal success in developing cabbage heads. He has left with The Examiner—one of thousands, a cabbage head weighing thirteen pounds. It is, of course, at this weight very firm and solid. This season has been very favourable to the growth of late vegetables, but Mr. Arnott has the trick of making big cabbages grow every season. His loyalty is not to be questioned on account of his neutrality to cabbage, so closely associated with sauerkraut, a popular food of the Germans.

Exhausted Belgian Regiment Decimated in the Trenches --Six Feet Away From Germans at One Time

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The Daily News to-day describes the terrible experiences of one Belgian regiment during the battle on the coast. When this regiment withdrew from Antwerp through some error it was given two days' drill and inspection instead of rest and then went into action again in the network of trenches on the banks of the Yser. The newspaper's correspondent in his despatch quotes one of the soldiers in this body as follows:

"There was a farm on our right and some of our men were firing at it when the door opened and three officers in Belgian uniforms stepped out, shouting to cease fire. We sent a detachment of men to the farm, and they were swept away by the machine gun fire.

"Later we entered the trenches. They were full of water and it was firing for six hours, thigh deep in water. The German machine guns shot at us out of crevices in a raised bank only a few yards away across the river. The Germans then got into our cross trenches and fired down our lines. We had to run back. I was too sleepy to run. I must have fallen asleep and then we must have been ordered to advance. I was too tired to get up, but someone kicked me and I got up as did the man in front of me. He immediately was shot through the head and fell back on me. I got up again. A shell burst near me and three men who were running past just disappeared.

"I found myself running forward again with others with fixed bayonets on to the Germans who were firing from our own trenches. We were two hundred left from six hundred. They did not wait, but scrambled over the bank across the river.

"We crouched in a big trench in ruddy water. It was dark and we heard, we thought, Germans whispering on the riverside of our bank only six feet away from us. The speakers were three hundred Germans who had stayed on our side fearing to cross the river under our fire.

"Some stayed all night. Neither they nor we slept. Some of our men who crept up the bank to look over were shot. Some of the Germans climbed over and we fired at their heads, hands, and arms as they became visible. A few made holes in the looser earth through which we fired on each other. Then the French got around the end and there was heavy firing. We heard a few of the enemy slipping down to the river edge, and the splashing of water. Then we scrambled over the bank and won.

"Only a hundred of our regiment now remain."

Stole Six Dollars From Young Girl

William Rose Sentenced for Mean Crime—Money Saved to Pay the Doctor

William Rose, Park Street, City, came before Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged with stealing the sum of $6. He elected to be tried summarily and pleaded guilty to the charge.

The fact that he had stolen $6 did not seem to deeply affect the Magistrate, but when the Chief related the circumstances the Court, as well as all in the room were struck with the meanness of the crime. Rose is staying with his father on Park Street, and a young woman, an employee of the Bonner-Worth Company boards there. The young girl has recently been ill in the hospital, and had saved up six dollars to pay on the doctor's bill, which she left in her room. Despite the fact that he knew how hard earned the money was, and how badly it was needed, Rose stole into the girl's room while she was at work and took it. This morning he was sentenced to two months in the county gaol for theft. This was the second time Rose had been committed for theft.

MAY ELECT MAETERLINCK.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—There is a possibility that Maurice Maeterlinck may be elected to the French Academy by acclamation to fill the seat of the late Jules Claretie. The members of the Academy are considering such action as recognition of the close relations at the present time between France and Belgium.

If M. Maeterlinck is elected it will be the first time a foreigner has become a member of the French Academy.

TWENTY-FOUR BULLETS THROUGH YOUNG FRENCHMAN'S UNIFORM

Mortally Wounded He Said "I Think They Must Have Known Me"—Story Told by Opera Singer Who Reached Battle Line.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—One of the most interesting of the many stories which have been told by those who have returned from Europe since the outbreak of the war was related by Mr. Edmund Burke, opera singer, who is to begin a concert tour in this country. With a French artist of an adventurous turn of mind for a companion, he set out for the scene of actual fighting and got much nearer the front than a person with the credentials of a war correspondent was able to reach.

"We just wanted the experience," said Mr. Burke, "and it was certainly the greatest adventure we ever had. We left Paris, where I had been living, on 17th September, and got back on 28nd September. In that time we got as near the front as the battlefield of the Marne before General Joffre's order that all civilians were to be arrested brought us to a halt. And the most amazing thing of the whole trip was that our automobile cost us just twenty cents a mile.

"There are a number of incidents which stand out above the ordinary. In the town of Meaux we met several British officers. One of them was Lieutenant C. Croker, nephew of the famous 'Boss Croker. The fact that we were not war correspondents enabled us to get much nearer to the front than we otherwise could have done. We reached the town of Vareds and there were stopped by an officer, who ordered us out of our automobile. He then showed us an order from General Joffre that all civilians be arrested, and we were confined in the railroad station for several hours until a refugee train took us back.

"My comrade and myself had hoped to be able to reach Rheims, but it could not be done. Everywhere we went we were impressed by the intense patriotism of the French. At Villerets Cotterels we met a convoy of wounded. One young Frenchman's clothing was pierced by twenty-four separate bullets. Four of these had passed through his body and he knew he could not live. In spite of this, when he heard a surgeon telling us about him, he raised his head and said, smiling, 'I think they must have known me.'

"We found that one of the easiest ways to make friends was to have a supply of cigarettes on hand to offer to those who wanted them. They were always in demand, and next to them shaving soap. Unfortunately, we had not thought to carry extra packages with us.

"It is not as difficult as it has been made out to be to get from France to Britain. Twice I crossed the Channel while the war was in progress, and in neither instance did I have any difficulty."

To Collect Old Sweaters.

Mr. Burke, who will make a concert tour through this country, has promised the Red Cross authorities in Paris that he will collect as many old sweaters as possible to be forwarded to the front.

"One of the things they want most," Mr. Burke said, "is something warm, and they suggested that friends in this country send old sweaters wherever it possible. On that account my managers are going to ask for contributions in advance, and I think in this way I will find old sweaters waiting for me when I arrive in different cities."

Throughout the trip Mr. Burke, who was well supplied with films, took pictures. In every instance they serve to impress one with the great destruction which has been done in the regions through which the armies have passed.

"We feared at first," he said, "that it might get us into some trouble, but it did not. Further, we had great fortune in regard to the weather, which was ideal for photography."

LADY JELLICOE MAKES PLEA FOR THE FLEET

Lady Jellicoe, wife of the Commander-in-Chief of the Home Fleet, has sent the following letter to the press, under date 10th October:

"There is a very prevalent idea about that the Navy has enough winter comforts. I beg to state that such is not the case. Only yesterday my husband wrote saying: 'Although the Admiralty are providing some warm things for the Fleet they won't be anything like enough. Every helmet, stocking; glove, and jersey you can get will be most welcome.' Sir John also writes: 'What the men badly want are sea boots and oilskins.' I suggest that all comforts, such as gloves, mufflers, etc., should be sent to

"The Navy League, 47 Grosvenor Square, or to

who will gladly forward them immediately, as they come in, to His Majesty's ships, and I will gladly receive any subscriptions at 29 Sussex Square, W., to buy the much-needed sea boots and oilskins, and forward them to the Fleet.

"Gwendoline Jellicoe."

ARMY CHAPLAIN'S EXPERIENCES

In a letter from an Army Chaplain at the front, which has been published in the "Morning Post," he says: "I have been able to do a fair amount of spiritual work. It is remarkable how at such times as this men look for it. If ever human nature showed that at the bottom the consciousness of God is in it, it is at times like this, when men cannot tell what the day will bring. I have been able to hold Communion, and wish you could see the officers and men in big circles, not such ones as one sees in time of peace, but hundreds. And round the camp fire, where they can be lighted, we hold evening service, and sing hymns—'Abide With Me,' 'Lead, Kindly Light' and 'Holy Father in Thy Mercy,' which goes so well to 'Art Thou Weary?'—the real tune they do not know. Well, a great deal of good is done, and the desire and response of all shows that the work done has been good. Our men are wonderful, but the Germans—well, if the way they carry on here is any criterion of how they would carry on if they got to England, God help us, for no one else could. England is waking up, I see, but the full extent of the need cannot be driven home too deeply."

ATTACK IS DIMINISHING

Official Bulletin Tells of Progress of the Fighting

PARIS, Oct. 29.—The official communication issued by the War Office last night says: "In Belgium two night attacks attempted by the enemy at Dixmude have been repulsed. The German effort on the front between Nieuport and Dixmude appears to be moderating. Our offensive continues to the north of Ypres.

"Between La Bassee and Lens there has been slight progress on our part.

"On the remainder of the front there is nothing to report."

The official communique of the French War Office, issued yesterday afternoon, describes the situation in the following terms:

"During the day of yesterday (Tuesday) the German attacks in all the region between Nieuport and Arras were less violent. Our positions were everywhere maintained, and we continued to advance to the north and to the east of Ypres. We also made some progress between Combrin, to the southwest of La Bassee and Arras.

"Further information continues to confirm previous reports that the German losses in dead, wounded and prisoners have been considerable in the northern region.

"On the right bank of the Aisne the Germans attempted at night a very violent offensive movement in the region of Craonne. On the heights of the Chemins Des Dames they have been repulsed.

"In the Woevre region our troops have continued their advance in the forests between Apremont and St. Mihiel, as well as in the forests of Le Paetre."

British Prince Loses His Life

Maurice of Battenberg Killed in Action in France

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Prince Maurice of Battenberg, a cousin of King George, and a son of Princess Henry of Battenberg, has been killed on the battlefield in France. He was an officer of the King's Royal Rifle Corps. Prince Maurice was the first member of the British royal family to be killed in the present war. It was reported that the prince was not actually killed on the battlefield, but that he died afterwards from wounds received in an engagement.

Prince Maurice Victor Donald of Battenberg was the youngest son of Prince Henry of Battenberg, who married Princess Beatrice, a sister of the late King Edward. The prince was the brother-in-law of King Alfonso of Spain. He was 23 years of age, and since 1911 had been a second lieutenant in the King's Royal Rifle Corps.

Death Was Accidental

Member of Canadian Force Killed at Salisbury Plains by a Fellow Soldier

LONDON, Oct. 28. — Accidental death was the verdict returned to-day by the coroner's jury enquiring into the shooting of Corporal William Ogden, of the 11th Battalion, fourth brigade of the Canadian expeditionary force. Corporal Ogden, who enlisted at Saskatoon, was shot at 10 o'clock Sunday morning in an armoury at West Down North Camp by Private Wilson of the same battalion, while testing a rifle. Corporal Ogden, by mistake, placed a live cartridge into the magazine with dummies, Private Wilson then tested the rifle, and the second cartridge exploded and shot Ogden in the back. Before he died Corporal Ogden told Col. Dulmage that he found the ball cartridge on Saturday, but could not explain how he mixed it with the dummies he placed in the magazine to test the rifle. Private Wilson was exonerated from blame.

A party of visitors will go down to the camps to-morrow, representing the committee which was appointed to act as a link between the War Office and the Canadian contingents. The party will include Hon. George H. Perley, Albert Parker and Sir Edward Wards.

Obed Smith, who visited the camps yesterday in company with Agent-General Reid, of Ontario, and Mr. Salter, European manager of the Grand Trunk, said he found not only the officers, but the men, agreeable and cheerful, and anxious to proceed to the front. All, however, admitted the value of the training at Salisbury Plain. Mr. Smith observed that the particular part of Salisbury Plain where the camps are located is identical in appearance and contour with many parts of Saskatchewan.

Blankets Are Acceptable.

Splendid as were the recruits of Kitchener's army, the Canadians did not take second place as regards physique. He saw the Canadians return from a route march of twelve miles with as easy a swing as when they started. As emphasizing the great area over which the camps are spread, Mr. Smith stated that they motored 44 miles from Salisbury to the farthest camp and return.

The gift of a blanket to every man from Lord Kitchener is much appreciated now that the weather is rather chilly.

The London press continues to urge that the people of the metropolis should be allowed to welcome the Canadians. The Globe says that pomp and pageantry in war time have their uses after all, and that there is no reason apparent why there shouldn't be a parade of the help that has come from overseas. The Evening News says: "We are certain the actual sight of the men who have crossed the ocean to fight for the Empire would be an inspiration to thousands of young Londoners, and would cause the latter to ask themselves why they have not responded to the call which reached the ears of men thousands of miles away." The demand is supported by Sir Gilbert Parker, Sir Herbert Tree and Major-General Sir Alfred Turner.

Among the promotions published in last night's Gazette is Major-General Edwin A. H. Alderson, commanding the Canadian forces, to be Lieutenant-General.

HESSELBERG

"Musical Magnet" at Gordon Campaign

No higher tribute of appreciation could have been paid by Peterborough to the Russian Master Pianist Hesselberg, than that of after having heard him nightly for nearly two weeks, the music-lovers and musicians of this city literally packed George Street Methodist Church long before the appointed time, when the preliminary recitals were announced for the balance of this week. It was indeed a pleasure to see the eager interest of the public, shown not only in the large attendance, but also in the close attention with which they followed the musical recitations of the artist. It would be difficult to say in what branch of piano playing Hesselberg is best—in the interpretation of the classics or of romantic, or for that matter of the modern virtuoso compositions, as he has the technique for both, also the penetrating musical intelligence and depth as well as the esprit, piquantrie and brilliancy. But as the perfect interpretation of Beethoven and Chopin may be called one of the greatest tasks for the performer we would say that Hesselberg's pianistic interpretative powers were at their best in the readings of those two composers, grand though he is at a Liszt player. Hesselberg's virtuosity is full of temperament. In addition to the ideal perfection of all tone gradations he possesses a brilliancy, when required, teeming with vitalizing forces of soul and mind.

Needless to add, that the magnificent "Grand" purposely expressed by the "Heintzmann & Co. from Toronto for these occasions, was a true help and inspiration to the performer.

"The Smoking Business Is Being Overdone"

Dr. Gordon Addresses a Largely Attended Meeting on the "Problems of Questionable Amusements" and Incidentally Replies to a Few Questions---The Meeting To-night.

Dr. Gordon delivers the special address of this campaign for better citizenship, this evening. His subject will be "The Private Life of Public Men." This will be a direct and practical discussion on the qualifications necessary in the life of an individual, for the discharge of public duties. The people of Peterborough will be particularly interested in this discussion. No other address has been delivered by Dr. Gordon, or will be delivered by him before the conclusion of this campaign which is of more importance to this community.

Mr. Edward Hesselberg, the Russian pianist, has prepared an unusually attractive programme of original selections and compositions, for this evening. This will be rendered between half-past seven and a quarter of eight. The music overs of the City will appreciate this special provision for their particular benefit.

Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the coloured singer, will render this evening, first of all, his great "Crucifixion Song," beginning with the words, "Were you there when they crucified my Lord." He will also sing "When the Trumpet of the Lord Shall Sound" and "Would You Believe."

Dr. Gordon is daily in receipt of numerous questions frm the people of Peterborough .In no other community where a campaign has been conducted have so many questions been sent in. It will be somewhat difficult for the lecturer to answer all of these questions. However, a large number will be introduced prior to the address this evening. The questions will be as follows:

(1) Does the soul remain in the body after death?

(2) Do you believe that the Bible teaches that Jesus is coming to this earth again in person?

(3) Why did Jesus select Judas as a Disciple?

(4) Do you believe in a hell of everlasting punishment?

(5) Can a person be a Christian who will not allow their hired help to eat at the same table?

(6) If Jesus should return to earth, which Church would he join?

(7) If my salary is $5.00 per week and I pay $3.50 for board, what do you consider is one-tenth?

(8) Who should carry the household purse, the husband or the wife?

(9) Is it always wise for a man to follow his wife's advice?

(10) Do you believe in going to a spiritualistic seance in order to communicate with the spirits of the departed?

(11) Is it right to hold bazaars and teas in the Church?

(12) Do you approve of billiard tables being used in the Y.M.C.A.?

(13) Do you think it is right for an auctioneer who is conducting a public auction sale to bid on his own goods?

Dr. Gordon's address, last evening, was on "The Problems of Questionable Amusements". He answered four questions:

First—Is it wrong to smoke?

Dr. Gordon said that men smoked because tobacco is a mild stimulant, and that no man should use a mild stimulant, as a rule, until after he is forty years of age. Dr. Gordon said it was exceedingly important that boys and young men who are laying the foundation for physical health, should avoid anything in the nature of stimulants, even mild stimulants. I would not destroy that beautiful sight of the old man with a pipe in his mouth, sitting on the western side of the house as the sun goes down behind the western hills I imagine that the old man has a right to indulge in a luxury of that sort, but I think with many boys and young men of the present generation that the smoking business is being overdone. Men are selfish in indulging in this habit. They smoke everywhere and anywhere, without any regard to the rights of others. In this respect particularly, we need a new age of chivalry. It is an extremely poor recommendation for a man who is looking for a position, that he should present himself in the office or store, soaked and saturated with the vile fumes of bad tobacco. Please do not regard me as narrow or bigotted, but I think I am giving you some common sense on this particular subject.

Second—Is it wrong to dance?

I asked a young man that question. "Is it wrong to dance?" His answer was expressed in four words, "It is wrong for me." That I regarded as a very wise answer. Jesus once said, "If thy right hand offends thee, cut it off," and "If thy right eye offendeth thee, pluck it out." Be right with God and your conscience at any price. The question of dancing is a question of social intercourse. What amusements a Christian woman plans for her own children in her own home, is certainly no business of mine, but let me tell you, the dance hall of our modern city, and the White Slave Traffic of modern times, are more closely related than most people imagine.

Third—Is it wrong to play cards?

What possible harm can there be in matching two cards? How shall we answer the youth's question with reference to card playing? This is my solution. Do not command your son dogmatically not to play cards. Reason with him. There are just two points to be presented—(1) The question of time. Card playing is exceedingly fascinating, and time is the only thing which a young person has. Napoleon said, "Ask me for anything but time," and to the successful man, time is more than money, more than gold, more than radium. (2) The euchre deck or a pack of cards is the gambler's instrument. The hardest Christian to reach and save, is a professional gambler. Not one gambler in ten thousand is ever converted or saved. The best known gambler in the world, dying in New York said: "I have been a Gambler. Take any road but the crooked one. I wish I could gather up my influences and take them down into the grave with me."

Fourth.— Should a Christian go to the theatre? I answer this question in this way, whether it pleases you or not. This is my conviction. It is about time the church, both Protestant and Catholic, demanded and supported a clean, decent, respectable and Christian theatrical. When the church takes a stand upon this subject and practically owns its own play houses, even the preacher with his elders and deacons may go to the theatre.

Fifth.— Regarding the answers to these questions, Dr. Gordon made the following points for every man who has any regard for his Christian influences.

First—Every man should know his own limitations.

Second.— Remember that ever professed Christian is being watched.

Third.— Remember your responsibility for your own personal influences.

Fourth.—To guard well, the secret chamber of the heart.

Remember the words of Robert Burns, "Had we never loved so kindly, had we never loved so blindly." Those two lines explain the secret of a thousand tragedies.

Fifth.—The secret of solid joy is in a noble purpose.

Sixth.—There is no solid joy in an pulless life.

All these points were illustrated from history and biography, and Dr. Gordon closed his address with an earnest evangelistic appeal.

There will be two thousand copies of Dr. Gordon's little booklet, entitled "Grace's Grit," in green books distributed to night at the service.

To Assemble At Kingston

Peterborough Forces Will Leave Next Week

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 28 — It was announced at military headquarters this morning that the men of the third overseas service would commence to assemble in Kingston on November 3rd. Orders have been issued to officers commanding different regiments to have men ready to leave for Kingston on Monday.

The officer in command of this division reports that up till this afternoon 664 non-commissioned officers and men from the third division had volunteered their services for the second contingent.

On account of the quarters at the Regiopolis College being overcrowded with the No. 5 Company, Field Engineers, of Queen's University, it has been found necessary to allow 15 of the engineers, who are graduates, to leave for their homes. There are 110 students in the corps.

MILLION AND HALF ARMED IN BRITAIN

Kitchener's 800,000 Men Are Being Rapidly Drilled and Equipped

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The British army on rolls and drilling in the United Kingdom now amounts to approximately one and a half million men. Of this total about 800,000 men belong to what is termed "Kitchener's Army"—men who have responded to his two calls for 500,000 soldiers to serve three years or for the duration of the war. About 800,000 belong to the territorials, while the remainder are enrolled with the special reserves, so-called, or with the regular army, and have seen service previously. The Canadian contingent is not included in this total.

The territorials are considered the flower of the force, as a great majority of them belong to the middle and upper middle classes, and are men accustomed to athletic pursuits. Both physically and mentally they are considered by military men to be about the finest body of its numbers ever assembled under arms

They are drilling with feverish enthusiasm and are anxious to go abroad for service on the firing line. A considerable proportion of Lord Kitchener's army, of course, is not yet fully equipped, but the men are working hard. They are being armed and clothed with great rapidity.

THE WAR IS ONLY STARTING

France Prepared to Face Long Struggle, Says Fallieres

PARIS, Oct. 28.—That the war is only beginning is the opinion expressed by Armand Fallieres, ex-President of France, in an interview published by the newspaper France de Bordeaux, says a despatch to the Havas News Agency from the French temporary seat of government.

"Months and months," M. Fallieres says, "will be required to overcome the military power of the enemy, but this does not produce discouragement in France. Our country has acquired the new virtue of constancy in effort.

"We shall certainly be victorious, for without reckoning our ardent patriotism and our inexhaustible moral and material resources, we have on our side Russia and Great Britain, with her strength and her tenacity, and Belgium as well as Servia; and, finally, we possess the moral support of entire humanity, which loves the ideal of liberty."

WAR WINDOW OF OAK HALL

In the south window of the Oak Hall men's furnishing store is a very interesting display of weapons that have been used in campaigns on four continents. One sword was used by the members of the famous regiment of Scots Greys in the Battle of Waterloo.

A second sword—a cavalry weapon—was used in a cavalry charge as well as that of the Scots Greys at Waterloo; the charge of the light brigade at Balaclava. Whether its wielder fell or survived the terrible feat of arms, the sword is a momento worth seeing.

A splendid weapon that was used by a Colonel in the American civil war is also on exhibition. It is silver plated in a brass scabbard and in the hilt is inset a large ruby. In contrast to the general appearance of this weapon is that of the one which was the property of a Persian prince, which though equally fine, is of an Oriental design and manufacture that is noticeably different from the American weapon. Inset in gold in the blade of this sword is a verse from the Koran.

In the display is a cartridge belt used in the South African war, which is the property of Mark Spencely, a bugle used in the American civil war a Prussian helmet, which saw service in the Franco-Prussian war, and a French breastplate

The window is very attractive, the display being unusually interesting. A number of the swords are the property of Mr. G. H. Clarke, the local collector and archaeologist.

A LONG SEASON OF GROWTH

Mr. Goodfellow has left with the Examiner samples of well matured, good-sized, handsome-looking potatoes grown from seed planted in July 16th by Mr. George Young, 560 Park Street. This is certainly remarkable, as the 15th of June is considered to be as late as it is wise to plant late varieties of potatoes with the expectation of getting a crop.

JOHN JACOB ASTOR REPORTED WOUNDED

LONDON, Oct. 28—Captain John Jacob Astor of the First Life Guards, younger son of William Waldorf Astor, is reported wounded in active service. He is twenty-eight years old He was appointed aide de camp to the Viceroy of India last year.

CHANGE IN DEER LICENSES

Deer licenses this year are somewhat different from those issued in the past. This year a stub is attached upon which the date of sale and owner's name have to be entered and sent into the Department. The price of a license, however, remains the same, namely $2.00.

Feels Insecure

German Troops Are Being Massed on Borders of Holland

ROOSENDAAL, Oct. 29.—Holland is feeling the pressure of the war almost as much as if she were engaged in it. The report that the Germans are massing large numbers of troops on the eastern border is causing great uneasiness throughout Holland. The alleged discovery of a tennis court with cement nine feet thick on the property of a German in the vicinity of Arnheim and statements that German spies have been active near Arnheim and at other points close to the German border seem to intensify the anxiety of the Hollanders.

A Dutch army of over 200,000 trained men is scattered at strategic points along the Belgian and German borders. Roosendaal is the principal troops centre, as it is the only gate to Belgium that is now open. Hundreds of military automobiles leave here daily with messages and supplies for the border troops.

The mouth of the River Scheldt and all the canals are heavy guarded. A large garrison at Flushing is guarding the docks and railway stations in order to prevent any attempt to violate the neutrality of the Scheldt. The river is heavily mined and Dutch cruisers and torpedo-boat destroyers are lying at its mouth to give any necessary co-operation to the land forces.

AND ARE REPULSED

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The scene o. the fighting shifted slightly yesterday. Instead of the Germans continuing to direct their main assaults on the line between Nieuport and Dixmude they essayed a major operation further east, between Ypres and Dixmude. Two French columns operating from Ypres met the brunt of this new movement, and not only stopped the Germans, but actually gained considerable ground. One column advanced east and the other directly north, the latter meeting the sternest resistance. A bayonet charge finally dislodged the Germans from several lines of trenches.

The fire of the French and British warships has effectually prevented the Germans from operations along the coast line of Flanders, but it now appears that a new phase of the campaign is setting in as the heavy artillery of the invaders is being brought into position. At Zeebrugge, just east of Ostend, five train loads of artillery are reported to have arrived. A buried monument is under way to fortify the whole Belgian coast line from Heyst to Knocke. The Germans are turning to account every sand dune, wall and village commanded by their forces, and it is certain that any attempt of the allies to penetrate toward Ostend will result in a heavy loss of life. Judging from present reports, the Kaiser's leaders intend to contest every foot of the ground which the allied tacticians deemed impossible of defence.

In a battle for control of the line of canals leading from La Bassee to the sea, the French and British yesterday won a most important victory. The engagement opened with an onslaught by the Germans, which was frustrated and followed up with a counter attack of the allied forces. This action came as the culmination of ten days' fighting, in which the Germans strove to win La Bassee. They met progress for several days, but have now lost that advantage and been compelled to retreat toward Arras.

Between Roulers and Ypres fierce combats have taken place during Tuesday and Wednesday. The advance rests with the allies. Roulers has been taken and retaken many times, and the latest manoeuvre of the Germans comprehended an advance westward.

The correspondent of The Evening News, wiring from "northern France," says: "The Germans are falling back all along the line from La Bassee to the North Sea."

The correspondent at Sluis of The Amsterdam Telegraaf reports that remarkable quiet prevails along the coast of Belgium. The German garrisons at Bruges, Heyst and Knocke, he says, are not very numerous.

The Duke of Wuertemberg's army has lost heavily in the north of France, according to a despatch received by the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Paris.

The Germans, the message adds, lost 2,000 in killed and wounded in an ill-fated night attack on Craonne, and the regions mentioned in yesterday's French official communication. The French casualties numbered 100.

From all sources reports favorable to the allies reached here yesterday. Evidently the attempt of the French to drive the crown prince's army out of St. Mihiel is about to reach a successful issue. On both sides of the town new ground was won as the result of Tuesday night and Wednesday's operations. Between Apremont and St. Mihiel the Germans lost several miles, and the French gained positions on high ground, which are expected to be of immense value to their artillery. In the forest of Le Pretre, in the same zone, the crown prince's command likewise ceded ground.

In the region of Craonne, on the right bank of the Aisne, the Kaiser's forces have shown renewed activity. A long artillery dual was followed by a charge of German infantry. This was met with French reinforcements and turned back after great loss to the foe.

On the heights of Chemin Des Dames, also on the centre, another attack in force was thrown back by the French.

Seven times the Germans have crossed the Ysar, and seven times they have been thrown back, fleeing across human bridges of their own dead in the last retreat. French and Belgian artillery has made it impossible for anything animate to remain on the allied side of the river, which the Germans gained after such desperate valor on Saturday last.

Villages Shattered.

LONDON, Oct. 28. — The Times' correspondent in Belgium wires the following:

"Observation from a British captive balloon has revealed how effective has been the fire of the British warships on Ostend, Middlekerk, Lombaertzyde and other coast villages. Not a single wall remains standing in the villages of Westkerke, Hyde and Nieuk. Several other villages are also in ruins. All this damage was caused by the artillery of the British ships."

Misuse of Troops Easily Seen.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail in Paris, in a despatch to his paper, gives a copy of the German order on avoiding aeroplanes. It says:

"According to the report of aeroplane observers, our troops are very easy to discover in spite of their grey uniforms, because of the density of their formation, while the French [illegible] from aerial reconnaissance."

CONTRACTS FOR SNOW PLOUGHING TO BE ASKED FOR

Board of Works Committee Decide to Adopt Same Method This Winter—Downey Street Creek Again Troubles the Aldermen.

The Board of Works met in regular session last night. There were present Alds. Duncan, (chairman); Mayor Buller, Alds. Saunders, Stratton, Green, McIntyre and Johnston. City Engineer Parsons was also present.

Snow Ploughing.

A letter was read from the City Engineer reminding the Board that it was time to call for tenders for snow ploughing. The letter also suggested that the passing of a by-law, making it compulsory for the owners to shovel off the sidewalk after the snow plough had gone by.

Ald. Stratton—"Either have it done by plough or by shovel. If the plough is going to do it let it do it all; or if the ratepayers are going to do it let them do it all."

Ald. Green—"By-law or no by-law I'll be blowed if I'll shovel the snow off my sidewalk; I'll pay my taxes willingly, but that should cover it."

The City Engineer explained that the present ploughs could not do it satisfactorily. If the plough men were asked to do it they would ask almost twice as much money and the appropriation for snow ploughing is not large enough.

Ald. Saunders—"I would suggest that those men out of work be given work at shovelling off the walks after the plough.

Will Call for Tenders.

Ald. Stratton — "The snow ploughing was a joke last year.

City Engineer Parsons—That's just it.

Ald. Green—The right way to do is to pay one man to keep the sidewalks clean, but I would suggest that the matter be left as at present, as there will be many men available.

The specifications and contract, of last year were read showing that while it was ordered that the sidewalks be kept as clean as possible with a plough, yet the City Engineer explained that the sidewalks could not be kept perfectly clean with a plough.

It was moved by Alds. Stratton and Duffus that tenders for snow ploughing be called for, and a clause added to the contract that the contractors keep the surface reasonably level.

City Not Liable.

A report was to hand from City Solicitor G. N. Gordon that the City was not liable for accidents that occur at the Downey Street Creek, (the other side of Downey street), where the creek flows through a culvert. The culvert is on private property.

Ald. Green—Somebody is going to be badly hurt, perhaps a child drowned, and there will be a law suit. It would be cheaper to put a top on that cribwork than depend on winning a law-suit. If we put a concrete top on and get an understanding from the property owners that we may have access to the cover over the creek, when it is necessary, everything will be satisfactory.

Officials to Investigate.

Mayor Buller concurred in Ald. Green's opinion. He explained, however, that in this case the City might be liable for damages if the surrounding land was flooded. The culvert is about 60 feet in length.

Ald. Duffus—"If the City put a top on the culvert they should own the land on each side of it and put signs up saying that persons trespassed at their own risk. This would avoid liability.

It was moved by Ald. Duffus and seconded by Ald. [illegible] that the City Solicitor and the City Engineer give a further report on the matter, embodying the arrangements that could be made with the property owners. The City Solicitor was to be informed what work was being done each year by the City's men, and asked if he still adhered to the opinion that the City was not liable. — Carried.

Will Pay for Walk.

In the matter of the sidewalk which was built to the Separate School in East City and which cost the Roman Catholic Corporation $20, it was decided, on the motion of Ald. Johnston and Ald. Green, that the City pay for the walk. The City Engineer reported that the work had been satisfactorily arranged.

Temporary Crossing.

A letter was read from Ernest Telford, saying that on Benson Street, across from the Normal School, he had built two new houses. He asked for a crossing in front of the houses. Ald. Johnston said that soon another house was going to be put up there.

On motion of Alds. Stratton and Duffus, the Board decided to put in a wooden crossing to serve until such time as a permanent one should be built.

Asked for Estimate.

Ald. Green suggested that the City Engineer bring in an estimate of the cost of putting a cement cover on the creek culvert, just west of Downey street.

To Drain Street.

It was moved by Ald. Duffus, seconded by Ald. Saunders, that Stewart street, south of Perry street, be graded and drained, and the water be taken away.—Carried.

LAWRENCE D'ORSAY IN "THE EARL OF PAWTUCKET"

The following is an extract from "The Old Countryman," Vancouver's most prominent theatrical paper:

"Since I have seen Lawrence D'Orsay I realize that there is only one Earl of Pawtucket. I used to regard one Cyril Maude as the rightful claimant, but he is a mere miniature Druce to the perfect Portland when compared to that 'doyen' of stage 'dudes,' Lawrence D'Orsay. They say 'give a dog a bad name and hang him,' but you could give a thousand actors his name without making one of them a D'Orsay.

"Since the days of Richard Askew Sothern and Lord Dundreary there never has been an actor or a theatrical personality like Lawrence D'Orsay, Esquire. (It seems incomplete with the 'Esquire'!) Mr. D'Orsay (don't you love the name?) is the ideal Dundreary. 'Genius' made a Dundreary of E. A. Sothern, but God made Lawrence D'Orsay, this 'Admirable Crichton' of stage peers.

"Mr. D'Orsay is the perfect 'dude' of the later Victorian era, but he is more than that. His personality is so pronounced, his affected accent so exaggerated that one is apt to lose sight of the art that conceals art. Yet it is this intellectual subtlety of the actor that makes him the ideal 'silly ass.' His art is so absolute that it is concealed by its apparent lack of art artifice. Mr. D'Orsay is an easy and natural in the 'la-di-da' part as Charles Hawtrey is in that of a liar. But every gesture and action is a triumph of stage technique, and his 'Earl of Pawtucket' is the best study of the 'heavy swell' Englishman since the days of Dundreary and that other consummate actor, E. H. Sothern."

Signed, YORICK, "Old Countryman." Vancouver, B.C.

Mr. Lawrence DOrsay and his all-star company will appear at the Grand on Monday next. Sale opens Friday.

COMPARISON OF NAVAL LOSSES SINCE THE OPENING OF THE WAR

The Naval and Military Record of October 14 contained a review of the naval achievements of the two sides in the great struggle. The war had entered its eleventh week, and, taking into consideration only events which had been officially announced, and only ships which appear in navy lists in peace time, the comparison of losses was as follows:

Losses of the Allies.

	Tons.
Cruisers—
Aboukir (22.9.14)	12,000
Cressy (22.9.14)	12,000
Hogue (22.9.14)	12,000
Light Cruisers—
Amphion (6.8.14)	3,440
Pathfinder (5.9.14)	2,940
Pegasus (20.9.14)	2,135
Gunboats—
Speedy (3.9.14)	810
Ibex (22.9.14)	680
Destroyer—
Shirataye (4.9.14)	380
Submarine—
A.E.1 (14.9.14)	725
Total	47,110
Balance of tonnage in favour of the Allies	3,340
	50,450

Losses of Germany and Austria.

	Tons.
Battle Cruiser—
Goeben (8.14)	23,000
Light cruisers—
Breslau (8.14)	4,550
Magdeburg (27.8.14)	4,550
Koln (28.8.14)	4,350
Mainz (28.8.14)	4,350
Ariadne (28.8.14)	2,660
Zenta (16.8.14)	2,300
Hela (13.9.14)	2,040
Gunboats—
Mowe (9.8.14)	650
Hedwig Von Wissman	199
Tsingtau (17.8.14)	168
Vaterland (8.14)	168
Destroyers—
V. 187 (28.8.14)	650
S. 126 (6.10.14)	487
Torpedo Boat—
No. 19 (17.8.14)	79
Submarine
U. 15 (9.8.14)	50
Total	50,450

It will thus be seen that, in spite of the severe blow dealt by Germany when she sank three cruisers on September 22nd, the balance is still against her; and if we take into account armed merchant vessels lost, it is still more so, as will be seen by the following comparison:

Armed Merchantmen Lost.

By Allies—
Oceanic (8.9.14).

By Germany—
Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse (27.8.14)
Cap Trafalgar (14.9.14).
Bethania (9.14).
Spreewald (12.9.14).
Soden (9.14).
Itolo (9.14).
Rheim (9.14).
Konigin Luise (5.8.14).

Whilst three of the vessels lost by the Allies (the Japanese destroyer Shirataye, submarine 'AE1, and the Oceanic), have been lost through ordinary risks of navigation, every one of the German-Austrian casualties has been the result of their enemies' efforts—unless we except the Austrian torpedo-boat No. 19, which struck one of her own mines.

For the information of readers who may not have come across references to all the small craft mentioned in the list of German losses, it should be mentioned that the Mowe was sunk by the Pegasus and the Astraea in the harbour of Lares-Salem, German East Africa; the Hedwig Von Wissmann (a lake gunboat), was captured on Lake Nyassa by a British vessel of similar type; and the Tsingtau and Vaterland were disarmed and interned at the Chinese ports of Canton and Shanghai respectively. The Soden, Ieolo, and Rhein were small vessels which were converted into gunboats for the defence of the Cameroon colony, now in the hands of the Allies. The Soden was captured by the British, and the other two were destroyed by the French gunboat Surprise.

Since this list published in the Naval and Military Record the Allies have lost the cruiser Hawke, while four German destroyers have been destroyed by the British.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat, Also Take Glass of Salts Before Eating Breakfast

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys; they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Gibson Will Try To Throw Hardy Twice In Handicap Match

Ex-welterweight Amateur Champion Will Wrestle the English Featherweight at Brock Street Rink on Saturday Night —Forbes and Cutler Meet in Curtain Raiser.

Andy Gibson, the well-known ex-welterweight champion of Canada, who has turned professional, will on Saturday night at Brock Street rink, endeavour to throw Alf. Hardy, the English featherweight, twice in an hour. It should be a humaner of a match. Gibson, who will be remembered as one of the Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. wrestlers who performed here with the Central mat artists in an exhibition in the local Y.M.C.A. gym, is a decidedly clever wrestler, and one of the best developed men ever seen here. He is some twenty pounds heavier than Hardy and it will take all the latter's cleverness to save defeat. Gibson is very skillful in his leg work, using scissors hold brilliantly and slippery as Hardy is, he will have a task on his hands Saturday night. The little Englishman has a host of friends here and they will be out en masse to root for him. The sporting editor of the Examiner received the following wire from Hardy this morning:

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 29, 1914.

Sporting Editor Examiner:

Seeing Edmunds has side-stepped me I will wrestle handicap match with Gibson. If Edmunds will wrestle I will take them both on.

HARDY.

As a curtain-raiser, Jack Forbes will wrestle Kid Cutler of Toronto in a finish match, best two out of three falls.

This will provide a splendid bill of wrestling and no doubt there will be a big crowd on hand.

Would Not Trade The Mackmen For The New Champions

James C. Isaminger, official scorer during the world's series and baseball expert of the Philadelphia North American, is one of those who still has faith in Connie Mack and his defeated Athletics. He maintains in the following article Philadelphia fans never would swap their beaten Mackmen for Stallings' Braves, glorious as the latter now are. Isaminger says:

It is significant that although the Braves polished off the Athletics in four straight games in the world's series, Philadelphia fans are not imploring Connie Mack to clean house.

Mack's machine didn't crack; it simply had engine trouble, and the trouble can be adjusted readily. Fans realize that none of the regulars who took part in the honour games can be improved on by rookies.

Where can better men be found than McInnis, Collins, Barry, Baker, Oldring, Strunk and Murphy, the regulars of the Mack team?

Moreover, every one of these players is in his prime and has years of usefulness before him. The oldest of the lot is Rube Oldring, and he is only thirty; McInnis is twenty-four, Collins twenty-eight, Baker twenty-eight, Barry twenty-seven, Strunk, twenty-five and Murphy twenty-three.

Not Like Fallen Cubs.

The situation is not similar to 1910, when the Athletics beat the Cubs in the battle for the big title. Chicago fans demanded changes because many of the players were getting old and slowing up.

The Athletics, however, are still one of the youngest teams in baseball, and fans know that the material is there to regain the honours they have lost.

For instance, the Braves' infield slightly outplayed the Mack infield in the four-game series, yet if Mack attempted to swap the Athletic innerworks for Boston's four inner guards, the tall tutor would have to flee Philadelphia for his life.

Of course, slight changes are possible. Mack is too thorough a manager to pass opportunities to strengthen his team. The gaunt general will take his usual regiment of juveniles to Jacksonville next spring and retain those rookies who look good.

One fan suggested that Mack would rid himself of Chief Bender because the latter was stormed off the hill by the Braves in the first game of the series. This fan forgets that Bender won fifteen games in a row—or the American League record for the season—this year.

Never Happened Before.

This is about the first time that Bender ever failed Mack in a critical situation, and the tactician isn't going to dismiss him for that. McGraw did not ask waivers on Mathewson because he couldn't stop the Athletics in 1911 and 1913.

Bender was beaten by the Braves, but he is still a great pitcher, and Mack will retain him for next season. The same thing applies to Plank. The Gettysburg veteran was by no means disgraced in the game James beat him, 1 to 0, but had to pitch a record game for a world series to do it.

Joseph Leslie Bush, the new benedict, came out of the series with his record untarnished. It took twelve innings before he hauled down his flag. Wyckoff and Pennock did some excellent relief pitching, and, Shawkey, who started Tuesday's game was hit hard only in one round.

In a pecan shell, it was the Boston pitchers and the stunning support they received that beat the Athletics.

The Mackmen didn't collapse or waver under fire. As a matter of fact, they fielded better than they did in 1913, when they beat the Giants for the big title. The infield never looked better. Here is its record:

Name	P.O.	A.	E.	TC	Pc.
McInnis, 1b	50	1	1	52	.981
Collins, 2b	9	12	0	21	1000
Barry, s. s.	5	21	0	26	1000
Baker, 3b	10	15	0	25	1000

This shows that the $100,000 infield made the only boot in the series and the error of McInnis was excusable. The only reason the official scorers tabbed it as a misplay was because Umpire Byron, on the bases, first called the batsman out, but reversed his decision when he saw the ball squirt out of Stuffy's outstretched hand. It really was a base hit, as the batsman had the ball beaten, but Byron missed the play.

Braves Simply Were Dazzling.

But if the Athletics' infield was stanch, the Boston innerworks was dazzling. To tell the blunt truth, the Braves outplayed Mack's peerless four, good as the latter were in the series.

Maranville's work at short was the best ever seen in a world's series. Evers, Deal and Schmidt also glittered, the Braves' infield time and time again repulsing stories of the Mackmn.

The Athletics could make only twenty-two swats in the series, an average of five and one-half to a game. An idea of the effectiveness of Rudolph James and Tyler can be gained by the record of the Boston infield catching only twelve fly balls in the series.

Still some of the Athletic hitters batted in hard luck. Collins landed on the ball fairly and squarely often, but was robbed of many hits. So were Baker and McInnis. Barry swung his head off in every game. He was not near form and made only one hit in the series. Oldring was another big disappointment. He knocked the ball out of the diamond only twice in four games. One was a single and the other was a fly ball that was caught by Moran. Five times in four games the Rube whiffed.

With exhibits like these, it is little wonder that the Braves were able to cop four in a row.

This is how it came to pass that the greatest team in baseball was beaten by a rank outsider, and caused the biggest upset in sport since James J. Corbett stretched out John L. Sullivan on the rosin in New Orleans.

BASEBALL

Owner Britton of the St. Louis Cardinals is making an effort to lure Polly Perritt and Ivy Wingo back into the Cardinal fold.

If Britton is successful in getting his players to change their minds the courts will have another Killifer case to decide.

Britton is willing to give Wingo and Perritt a big boost over their last season's stipend as well as the bonus money from the St. Louis series which was withheld from the players after they jumped to the Feds.

Up to date Roger Bresnahan is still loudly demanding $45,000 as the price for separating Henry O'Day from his managerial troubles.

Roger having once managed a team in St. Louis, is a glutton for punishment, but he insists upon being well paaid for it.

In making his demand for an annual salary of $15,000 to lead the Cubs, Bresnahan says he is asking $5,000 less than the Feds are willing to pay him.

Lefty Evans of the Portland Coast League Club recently pitched himself into fame with a no-hit, no-run game against the Oakland team.

Frank Chance's troubles did not end when he cut away from the Yankees. The P. L. arrived on the Coast minus his big auto in which he intended to make the trip from New York.

Chance gave up the auto journey at Lewis, Iowa, and shipped the car to Omaha, to which point he travelled by train. The railroad is still searching for the machine.

Pat Moran, the new leader of the Phillies, has been in the big league a long time, though the fans outside of Philly know little about him.

Take it from a Cleveland scribe, the Naps may be lowly tail-enders, but they never did lose a world's series in four straight.

FOOTBALL COMMENT

Despite the fact that Manchester City are still undefeated, an English writer opines as follows:

"Manchester City are still undefeated, but how long this state of affairs will last is a moot question. Newcastle came near to repeating last season's victory, and at the same time having the honour of beating the City.

"Few will deny that they deserved to win. The City have Walter Smith and his backs to thank for their 'clean sheets.' The side at present is not well balanced, and is not working smoothly. Their position at the 'head of affairs,' if we are to judge the City on their recent showings, rather flatters them.

"There are many weaknesses forward. The effect has not yet been felt, but when once the defence gives way—and it cannot always be expected to stave off defeat—the City will find it a difficult matter to get points. Only Barnes and Taylor of the forwards are showing form which we usually expect from league leaders.

"And much of their effectiveness is being wasted by the incompetency of the other forwards. Howard is not leading the line with much success, and I think the City management would be well advised to introduce Tommy Browell at centre.

"Cartwright is not an improvement on Cumming, and if the latter is fit, he should be given the position. There is still another weak spot—at outside left—but I don't think the City have other than Dorset available for the position. Joe is not consistent; he shines occasionally, but his 'off' days are more numerous than his 'on' days.

"No management cares to alter, a winning team, but the poor displays of recent weeks have made it apparent to almost every tyro that changes in the front rank are necessary. The City cannot go much longer without a defeat unless there is a revival."

FOOTBALL'S EFFORT FOR FUND

The suggestion made by the Management Committee of the league of the graduated scale of reduction in players' wages has practically been accepted by the players.

At the conference between representatives of the league and the Players' Union, the latter pointed out that it was desirable the clubs should also give a percentage of their takings to the fund commensurate with the sum given by the players.

The suggestion that the home clubs should pay visiting clubs 10 per cent. of admission money taken at the gates was farcical as each club would receive back what it paid, as a player put it, "It would simply be giving twelve pennies for a shilling."

This was undoubtedly the weak point of the league's proposal, and it has been deleted, and a scheme is being outlined whereby the clubs will also contribute. This is as it should be.

It is also desirable that the Football Association should contribute. The wealth of the association has been mainly built up by contributions exacted from the professional clubs, and in a time of stress like what we are passing through it is only fitting that the governing body should join with the wealthier clubs in a scheme to improve the condition of the clubs that are unable to pay their way.

A suggestion has been made that the association should forego the levy of five per cent., they exact from the cup tie gates. It is unthinkable they should levy this tribute on the clubs during the war. This tax goes to pay the working expenses of the association, but during the continuance of the war all clubs should be relieved of this, and the expenses met out of the very substantial balance the association has standing to its credit.

CAUSE OF GREAT WAR GETS TWENTY YEARS

Four of the Conspirators Are Sentenced to Death by Hanging.

SARAJEVO, Bosnia, Oct. 28.—Judgment was passed to-day on the assassins of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir-apparent to the Austro-Hungarian Throne, and his wife, the Duchess of Hohenburg.

Gavrio Prindip, the actual assassin, escaped with a sentence of imprisonment for twenty years. Four of the conspirators were sentenced to death by hanging, one to life imprisonment; two, including Medeljo Gabrinovics who threw a bomb at the Archduke, but which did not explode, to twenty years, one to sixteen years, one to thirteen years, two to ten years, one to seven years and two to three years.

The other defendants were acquitted.

A Statement From Miss Weir

In Regard to the Events at Collegiate Which Led Up to Her Resignation Being Asked For

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Many persons have requested me, since the Review appeared on Saturday, to give a statement to the public, concerning the Sukloff matter which was considered by the Board of Education, on Wednesday and Thursday nights last.

I have been interested directly or indirectly in the advancement of educational affairs of the City of Peterborough for over ten years, and for that reason I feel that I have a right to explain to the public the exact situation of affairs, and of how they at present stand.

Louis Sukloff, a lad of about fifteen years of age, and son of Norman Sukloff the dry goods merchant, on George Street, in this City, has been a student at the Collegiate Institute for about two years. This boy is considered by myself, and at least one other teacher, as a "Romanticist," which is a fair description of the boy's habit of representing facts as they appear, to me. I do not wish to use a stronger term, as this probably sufficiently describes him. He had last year, what is called a "speckled record of class attendance"—that is, he was frequently absent, so that the registers showed much irregularity of attendance.

A pupil is permitted to absent himself from class, provided he furnishes forthwith, a written excuse from his parent or guardian, and the only excuses which the law apparently permits are sickness of some sufficient or urgent reason, but I believe most of the teachers, myself included, are always willing to admit pupils presenting a note from either parent or guardian, who give a valid reason for absence, but it must be in the writing of a parent or guardian.

Louis Sukloff always assured me when I enquired as to the reason of his numerous absences, that Principal Kenner of the Collegiate Institute, had accepted his reasons and excuses, and this concluded the matter as far as I was concerned, until I found that the same thing was being repeated again this Fall. I deemit wise to call the attention of Principal Kenner to the fact, and let him act if he so desired, but if he did not so desire, then I felt he might leave the way open for me to act in the matter, for I always recognized that it was the place of the Principal to act in a matter of this kind, if he felt so inclined, and in the event of his not acting, then it was my duty to take the matter up.

At my suggestion, Louis Sukloff prepared and signed a statement, of the reasons for absence, which is in the following words: "I, Louis Sukloff, fifteen years of age, on Monday and Tuesday, the fifth and sixth days of October, which are Jewish National holidays of a most serious nature, state that I was at perfect liberty to come to school if I so desired. (Signed) Louis Sukloff."

The pupil was sent to Principal Kenner with this statement of facts, and to this, according to Principal Kenner's report to the Supervision committee, is what he takes exception. I suggested that the statement be given to the Principal, because I deemed it wise to ascertain whether this pupil honestly required to be absent or not. The question was then considered closed, until after Thanksgiving, and Louis Sukloff and I, were as we have always been, on the most friendly terms. Whether the Principal told Sukloff or not to bring a note in future absences, I do not know, but Sukloff consented to bring one and indicated his willingness most freely, and, after this incident early in October, brought it. I did not open the note at the time, but opened it sometime after the difficulty had arisen with the boy, and I then discovered, that the note was not written by either of the parents. I excluded him from the room for refusing to present a proper excuse for absence, and he remained stubbornly in the room and went to Mr. Crane. Louis Sukloff's father has told me that a person in authority at the school had advised his son to resist my authority and go to Mr. Crane. It is admitted that the note was not written by either parent of Sukloff. Louis Sukloff finally admitted that the note was written by the maid servant at his home, but with his mother's knowledge. I said I wanted to be sure if it being written with his mother's knowledge, and that I expected that he would bring me a note in the hand writing of either parent, stating the cause of his absence, and that the note which he had presented, written by the maid servant, had not met with that requirement. The pupil absolutely refused to do this.

According to the statement of the boy's father, Mr. Crane went to see Mr. Sukloff, who gave his version of it to Mr. Crane. I further understand from Mr. Sukloff, that he told Mr. Crane that he would support me even if his son's contention were right, but that he did not criticize my action of blaming the son.

A Supervision committee meeting was called for Thursday night of last week, I understand, although I knew nothing about it at that time. The Principal's report was to be dealt with at this particular meeting so I am informed, but I received no notice of it, and the result of the meeting apparently was, that on Monday morning, Principal Kenner spoke hurriedly to me in one of the school corridors, saying, "You had no business to keep Sukloff out of his class. Let him in, Crane says so, too." I acknowledged his instructions with a smile and passed into the room, and I felt that I required to act at once in the interest of discipline in my class. I asked Louis Sukloff why he was there without my consent, and he stated defiantly and impudently, "I am here by a higher authority than you, and I will not go." I said, "I fear you must." He said, "I will not.' I then said, "You must if I have to forcibly take you." As he refused to go, I ejected him from the room. He was not struck. I simply took him by the shoulder and took him from the room.

These are briefly the facts upon which the committee acted, and I desire to leave this for the consideration of the ratepayers, in order that it may be ascertained, whether or not, the opinion of the public is that the School Board have acted fairly and frankly with this case. I will give a further statement of facts later on, but these I desire to put before the public, so that no misunderstanding may arise.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) Annie Weir.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Although wheat showed strength for most of the time today prices melted rapidly in the last half hour of the session. The turn in favor of the bear side was due to selling by speculators, who found the market temporarily without support. Heaviness ruled at the close, which varied from ½c to ⅝c under last night. Corn finished unchanged to ⅛c higher, oats off ⅛c to ¼c, and provisions strung out from 35c decline to a rise of 22½c.

Barley—No. 3, 69c; No. 4, 64c; rejected, 60½c; feed, 60c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Oct. 28.—That the British Government in its purchase of war materials intends, whenever possible, to secure goods made within the empire, was demonstrated yesterday by an incident at the local purchasing headquarters.

At the Windsor Hotel, among other callers upon Frederick Stobart, British war office representative, were representatives of two American firms. After stating their object in calling they were met pleasantly but firmly with the remark that:

"As far as possible all the business to be given out will go to Canadian firms. It would, therefore, be wasting your own time as well as ours for you to talk over these orders. Canadian houses will be looked after first; if we cannot secure anything here we will advise you."

CHEESE MARKETS.

MADOC, Ont., Oct. 28.—On today's cheese board 600 boxes of cheese were offered and all sold at 14⅝c.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Oct. 28.—On today's cheese board the offerings were 1150 boxes of colored, 14⅝c being bid, with no sales.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Oct. 28.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 1331 cattle, 1255 hogs, 1967 sheep and lambs and 30 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice butchers' sold at $7.35 to $7.50, good butchers, $7.00 to $7.25; medium butchers' steers and heifers at $6.50 to $6.75; common butchers' steers and heifers at $6 to $6.25; choice cows at $6.50 to $6.75; good cows at $5.75 to $6.25; canners and cutters at $3 to $4.50; bulls at $5 to $6.75.

Stockers and Feeders.

Choice feeders at $6.50 to $6.75; good feeders at $6.25 to $6.50; stockers at $4 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

Prices ranged from $60 to $100, and one extra quality cow sold at $115; the bulk would sell from about $70 to $90 each.

Veal Calves.

Choice calves sold at $10 to $11; good calves, $9.50 to $9.90; medium, $7 to $8; common, $6 to $7; inferior eastern calves, $4.50 to $5.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, light ewes, $6.25 to $6.75; heavy ewes, $5.50 to $6.50; culls and rams, $3.50 to $4; lambs, good to choice quality, $7.50 to $7.70; medium quality lambs, $7 to $7.30; cull lambs, $6 to $6.50.

Hogs.

Selects, $7.50, fed and watered, and $7.15 f.o.b. cars, and $7.75 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 28.—At the C. P. R. live stock yards there was no actual change in the condition of the market for cattle today, prices being steady. Choice steers were sold at $6 to $6.25, good at $5.50 to $5.75, fair at $4.50 to $5.25 and common at $3.25 to $4, while butchers' brought from $5.25 to $6.75, and bulls from $4.50 to $4.50 per cwt. There was a good demand for packers' stock and an active trade was done. Bulls sold at $4.75 to $5 and cows at $3.75 to $4 per cwt.

Trade in small meats was fairly active and as the supply was smaller than it has been of late, the tone of the market was steady, with sales of ewes sheep at $4.75 to $5 and bucks and culls at $4.25 to $4.50, while Ontario lambs brought $7.25 to $7.50 and Quebec $6.50 to $7 per cwt. Demand for calves was good and prices ranged from $5 to $20 each, as to size and quality.

Hogs were steady, with sales of selected lots at $7.75 to $8 per cwt., weighed off cars.

BOWLING

All men interested in bowling in the City are asked to meet at the Y.M.C.A. to-night, at 8.30, for the purpose of organizing a City Bowling League.

INDOOR BASEBALL.

Two games of indoor baseball will be played at the Armouries to-night, between "B" and "D" companies, and "A" and "D" companies respectively. Last night's games between "E" Company and the Bugle Band resulted in a win for "E" Company. The score was 12-6. The batteries for "E" Company were Meyers and McGraw, and for the Bugle Band, Gibbs and Butcher.

FRENCH FOUGHT WITH FURY IN VOSGES REGION

PARIS, Oct. 27.—The pushing of the Germans out of France opposite Nancy, and the establishing of French positions inside the German frontier is regarded as an important achievement at this juncture, proving that the allies are capable of carrying the war into the enemy's country while holding the invading army in check in the north.

The "Blue devils," as the Germans call the French light infantry operating in the Vosges, again justified the terror in which they are held by the enemy. They led the final rush which forced the last of the Germans out of French Lorrain. These troops hesitate at no sacrifice to gain an end. The second battalion, emulating the first battalion, which took the first German flag from the Germans, held the vantage ground gained despite great losses.

This seems to end for the time being the long effort against the unfortified town of Nancy, the defence of which has proved a great surprise to the Germans. In the absence of strong forts they built what is more effective in this war—field works. All through the foothills of the Vosges every thicket belched fire, every knoll was a little fortress, every gulch a death trap, and the Germans left there the flower of the Imperial Guard.

WEDDING BELLS

TETLOCK—CLARKE.

A quiet wedding took place at the Methodist parsonage Wednesday evening, October 28th, when Miss Edith Clarke and Mr. John W. Tetlock were united in marriage by Rev. Mr. Peever. The bride was given away by Mr. Dyer, Bethune Street, and was attended by Miss Wiltshire and the groom by Mr. A. Shadgett.

BOATE—DARLING.

The marriage of Miss Lillie Alma Darling, douchter of Mr. Jas. Darling of Smith to Mr. H. Ross Boate, son of Mr. Geo. Boate of Ennismore, was solemnized by Rev. Jas. Rollins at St. Andrew's Manse, last evening, at 5 o'clock. They were unattended, and will reside in Ennismore.

OBITUARY

FRANK SMITH

A very sad death occurred this morning at 7.30 o'clock, when Mr. Frank Smith, one of the most highly respected residents of this City passed away, death being due to heart failure.

The deceased gentleman was born in Millbrook, but for the past 40 years has resided in Peterborough, where until about seven years ago he carried on a blacksmithing business. His jovial, kind-hearted disposition won for him the esteem and affection of both old and young, who will be deeply grieved to learn of his demise. In 1871 he was married to Miss Mary Robson, daughter of the late Ralph Robson, who predeceased him only eleven days ago.

The deceased was a member of the George Street Methodist Church, and also a member of Court Little John, Canadian Order of Foresters. He leaves to mourn his loss two daughters, Miss Nellie Smith and Mrs. G. R. Holt, also one brother, Mr. James Smith of Mount Pleasant.

The funeral will take place on Saturday, October 31st, at 2.30 o'clock p.m. Service at the house at 2 p.m. Rev. R. G. Peever will officiate.

A CORRECTION

R.R. No. 1, Keene, Oct. 26th, 1914.

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I see in last week's items it says I went under an operation at Dr. Harrison's Hospital, "Bralesford." This is not so as the operation was performed by Dr. Ross at his house and was a perfect success. You will oblige me by putting this in your next issue.

Yours respectfully,
CHAS. HALL.

NO IRISH BRIGADE AS SEPARATE UNIT

Nationalists Disappointed But Kitchener is Practical First, Sentimental Last.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The refusal of the War Office to sanction the presentation of colours to regiments of the Irish National Volunteers has aroused intense feeling in Ireland and among the Irish in England. The Nationalists charge that Lord Kitchener is behind the order and say that recruiting in Ireland has been hampered by the Field Marshal's unwillingness to have the Irish brigade fight as a separate organization commanded by Irish officers.

It is known that Irish Nationalist leaders feel that the British War Secretary is antagonistic, but the military men say that Lord Kitchener's attitude is due to his unwillingness to sacrifice brave soldiers under untrained leaders, insisting that their officers be picked men versed in the science of war. The matter seems certain to be aired when Parliament meets.

BELGIAN ATHLETES GONE.

CYRIL MAUDE WINS CHEERS FOR THE U.S.A.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Mr. Cyril Maude, who opens in Boston at the Plymouth Theatre on November 9 in "Grumpy," has played all through the war time to good business and without lowering his company's salaries.

On Saturday night before a house filled to overflowing, despite the darkened London streets, he spoke earnestly of the delight it gave him to think that in America the war was going to find so many friends enthusiastic for the cause of the Allies, and he read a letter from an English nurse at the front, in which she spoke in warm and grateful terms of the American ambulances and their noble work.

Great applause greeted every mention of the United States and the kindly American feeling.

HOW TO MAKE SOCKS FOR THE SOLDIERS

Cast on two needles 30 stitches each and on a third needle, 31 stitches, making 91 stitches in all. Knit first round plain. Second, round knit 2 plain, 2 purl; continue until depth of 3 1-2 inches is knitted. Now knit around plain with the exception of the last stitch, on the third needle, that is the 91st, which is always knitted purl for seam stitch. After knitting plain for three inches, decrease one stitch each side of the seam stitch, knit 6 rounds plain and decrease one stitch on each side of the seam stitch again, and so on until four decreasings have been made. Then knit round and round until a depth of 7 1-2 inches from rib is attained. Now divide stitches for heel placing 41 on one needle, the odd one to be the seam stitch, in the centre, and 25 on each side of the two needles, to come either side of the one with 41. Knit the 41 backward and forward purl on the wrong side and plain on the right side (leaving the two side needles alone), for a depth of 4 1-2 inches, finishing at of plain needle. Now purl back to one past seam stitch, take two together, knit one, turn and slip the last knitted, knit to one past the seam stitch, (which is now discontinued). Repeat turn and knit to the gasp formed by the turning, taking one each side of it together, knitting one and turning again until the last two either end of the row are taken together, finishing end of plain row. With the same needle the stitches are on, knit up the loops down the side, also two off the first needle with the 20 stitches on, then take the spare needle and knit remainder of 20 with the 18 of the other 20. Knit the remaining two on another needle, and with it knit up the loops on the other side of the heel stitches. Now knit one round plain, next round decrease one stitch end of needle towards front, which is the one with 36 stitches on, knit the latter plain and decrease one stitch beginning of next needle; repeat these two rounds until these are 18 stitches on each side needle, making 72 all round; take stitches off equally both sides of front needle, so there will be 24 on each needle, and knit round plain until a length of 7 1-2 inches from the picking up of the heel. Now decrease one stitch each end of the needle all round, then knit three rounds plain, decrease again, knit 2 rounds plain, repeat, and after the second 2 rounds plain, decrease one round, and knit one round plain until there are ten stitches on each side needle, then decrease each round until there are two on each needle; take the first two together, be careful not to drop the "r" stitch on the right-hand needle, put down the one needle, put the two remaining needles side by side, and with the needle holding one stitch take one from each of the two needles together and draw the odd one over, repeat with remaining two, and pull the wool through, breaking it off and darn.

DEPUTATION TO WAIT ON GOV'T

Mayor Butler this afternoon received a telegram from W. D. Lighthall, secretary of the United Canadian Municipalities, advising him that a deputation from the Montreal Council and Board of Trade will wait upon the Dominion Government in regard to the unemployment and alien labour situation. The Mayor was asked to either arrange for this city to be represented by delegates or wire his views. As the deputation will probably wait upon the Government to-morrow it was impossible to have a local representative there, but the Mayor wired that Peterborough was heartily in sympathy with the move and he hoped that their deputation would accomplish something.

"Boul Miche" Is Deserted

Latin Quarter of Paris on a Saturday Night is Strangely Quiet—Gaiety is Suppressed.

GAIETY IS GONE

PARIS, Oct. 11.—The once gay and festive Latin quarter is now in the dreariest section of Paris.

Last night was Saturday night, the big night along the "Boul Miche," as the students love to call the boulevard St. Michel, the main artery of "the quarter," yet as I wandered up and down its length I had the creeps; a country churchyard at midnight is a Coney Island compared to this once happy-go-lucky street.

The hour I chose for my promenade was between 11 and 12 o'clock at night, the hour when ordinarily at this time of the year students are frolicking like lambkins on the green, their arms about each other or their pretty Mimiminson sweethearts, singing, laughing, shouting remarks at each other, having the time of their young lives; when the cafes are crowded with joyous youths and girls, the one absorbing his bocks and cafe-creme, the other her hot milk or syrup mixture, fighting creditably shy of beverages stronger than coffee and cream when the lights are at their brightest, merriment its fullest; the joy of living at its keenest and insouciance is at its good side.

Everything was different last night. The tone of the quarter was sepulchral. Most of the lights were out, the other dimmed, the shops were closed; the restaurants and cafes locked and barred and shuttered. As I walked down the thoroughfare from the Pantheon towards the Seine, keeping to the right-hand sidewalk—the sidewalk of the "Boul Miche," I met perhaps two-score people in the five or six squares from the top of the hill to the bridge spanning the river at Place St. Michel. Most of the people were girls, seeking, seeking, seeking, but apparently always in vain. I felt something akin to a shudder pass under me. The dark-robed girls moving noiselessly through the shadows of this once brilliantly-lighted street made me think of ghosts hunting some gilded palace of dead and gone ages, seeking vainly for those who used to revel there.

At the bottom of the hill I crossed the way and started back up the street, on the opposite sidewalk. This was entirely deserted save for a cloaked policeman standing like a disconsolate spirit deep in the shadows of the trees. No, there was one other living soul on that side of the street—the wrong of the "Boul Miche"—a woman, alone and weeping. For me she was the symbol of "the quarter." I did not approach her, so I could not swear she was real; to-day I am half-inclined to think that she was not, that she was only a creature of my imagination, the spirit of gloom, now mistress of the "quartier Latin." War has played greater havoc nowhere than here, where youth once had his kingdom.

GERMANS FAILED TO FOLLOW UP AN ADVANTAGE

PETROGRAD, via London, Oct. 27.—Reliable information received here from Warsaw, giving a detailed history of the attempted German advance in Russian Poland, says that the Russian generals are absolutely at a loss to explain what they call a German error in delaying a night attack until the opportunity was lost.

At the same time, however, the Russian generals, who always are frank in admitting the achievements of the enemy, express admiration of General von Morgen's lightning advance of five German army corps over the difficult, swampy region approaching Warsaw from the southwest. The appearance of the Germans in this quarter was most unexpected, since the German network of railway systems and the previously constructed platforms for heavy guns indicated the probability of a German advance from the northwest or west or from anywhere except the south west.

The Germans made a grave error, it is asserted, in not pursuing the advantage derived from their unexpected advance, which would have enabled them to approach within eight miles of Warsaw without their presence being made known.

For unknown reasons the Germans suddenly decided to delay the attack until morning, which allowed the Siberian and other Russian reinforcements adequately to protect the city. Papers found in the possession of German officers indicate that the general plan was to attack Warsaw at night. One explanation for the change is that the Germans failed to obtain the assistance of the Polish element upon which they had counted.

The Russian generals also admire the Germans' abrupt extrication when they found themselves outflanked, their retreat being so complete and precipitate that the Russians were unable to overtake and engage the rear guard in action for several miles. The whole affair, including the whirlwind advance and retreat, at present is a puzzle to the Russians.

The inhabitants of Warsaw say that the dropping of German bombs—which never were very damaging—now has ceased and, reassured by the presence of Russian reinforcements and the preparations to engage the enemy, the life of the city has become almost normal.

LIKENS GERMANS TO WOUNDED ELEPHANTS

The Wall Street Journal says:

"The German army is now like a wounded bull elephant in a jungle, which in time must bleed to death, but for the present is a dangerous adversary. It makes mad rushes, the ultimate effect of which must be to hasten the end, although for the time being, heavy losses may be inflicted upon those who come in the way of its frenzied charges. The Allies are not taking the offensive, and do not need to. They are content to hold their ground and await the results of the other's efforts."

THE BARDS ON BILL.

A London editor asked his readers for quotations applicable to the Kaiser. Perhaps the best sent in were the following:

Some say he's mad; others that lesser hate him
Do call it valiant fury,
—Macbeth.

Necessity,
The tyrant's plea, excused his devilish deeds. —Paradise Lost.

A man no mightier than thyself or me
In personal action; yet prodigious grown
And fearful. . . —Julius Caesar.

Who, placed by fortune on a monarch's throne,
Reck'd not of monarch's faith or mercy's kingly tone.
—Vision of Don Roderick.

France, I am burned up with inflaming wrath
That nothing can allay, nothing but blood. —King John.

HUNTING PARTY PROCEEDS NORTH

LINDSAY, Oct. 29.—The first deer hunting party of the season left yesterday to prepare for the season's hunt. It is the Green Island Hunt Club, which has hunting grounds about thirty miles this side of North Bay. Among those who are in this year's party from here are Messrs. T. A. Fisher, A. E. Gregory, Dr. White, G. H. Wilson, Dr. Irvine and Chas. E. Sutcliffe.

Mr. Brownscombe, jr., of Peterborough, joined the party here, and other members will be picked up along the line. The Club will probably stay in camp until November 15th.

TURKEY AT WAR AGAINST RUSSIA

Cruiser of the Sultan's Fleet Bombards a Town on Crimean Coast—Buildings Damaged and One Soldier Wounded

OTHER COUNTRIES MAY MOVE NOW

OKIO, Oct. 30, 11:15 a.m.—The Russian Embassy here announces that Turkey has opened war on Russia.

THEODOSIA, Crimea (via Petrograd), Oct. 29.—From 9:30 o'clock to 10:30 this morning a Turkish cruiser with three funnels bombarded the station and city, damaging the cathedral, the Greek church, a pier and some sheds. One soldier was wounded. A branch of the Russian Bank of Foreign Commerce caught fire. At the conclusion of the bombardment the cruiser left in a southwesterly direction.

NOVOROSSUSK, Caucasia (via Petrograd), Oct. 29.—The Turkish cruiser Hamidieh, which arrived here to-day, demanded the surrender of the city and the Government properties, threatening in case of refusal to bombard the town. The Turkish Consul and officials were arrested. The cruiser withdrew.

Another despatch says that as Novorossusk is an unfortified town the demand for its surrender was granted and the officials were arrested.

The Points of Attack.

Theodosia (formerly Kaffa) is a Russian seaport on the southeast coast of Crimea, about a hundred miles northeast of Sebastopol, by which it is connected by rail.

Novorossusk is on the northeast coast of the Black Sea, and is the capital of the territory of the Black Sea. It is almost directly opposite Theodosia, at a distance of about 120 miles. Both are railway terminals of some importance.

The despatches would indicate that the cruiser that attacked Theodosia is the Breslau, one of the two German cruisers recently interned in the Dardenelles and later purchased by Turkey. The Hamidieh is said to be the Turkish name given to the other cruiser, formerly the Goeben.

The Balkan Armies.

With Turkey in the war some it is likely that other nations will now cease to remain neutral. Greece, Roumania and Italy may join in the fray and add to the fighting strength of both sides. Turkey, since the Balkan war, has allowed German officers to reorganize and train her army, while a British flag officer and six junior naval officers reorganized the navy. In addition to the two German cruisers interned, and since manned and set to sea, Turkey in 1910 had three battle ships, two protected cruisers, three gunboats and fourteen torpedo boats. A 23,000-ton battleship building in England has been taken over by the British Admiralty.

Her army is a more efficient machine. In peace time it has a first line of 180,000 men, and second line and reserves number 140,000. The Turkish troops are good fighters. Roumania has an army of about 300,000, while Greece can put a quarter of a million men into the field. Italy, in addition to her fleet, has an army of about a million men.

Italy May Fight.

Italy, Roumania and Greece will fight on the side of the Allies if they decide to go to war. Bulgaria has been weakened by the Balkan campaigns, and shows no disposition to withdraw from her present attitude of neutrality. Her army numbers about 400,000 men.

SPAIN INCREASES ARMY.

MADRID, Oct. 29.—The Council of Ministers has fixed the strength of the Spanish army of 1915 at 140,763 men. This is a small increase over the present peace footing of the army, which is 122,000 men. The naval strength for 1915 was fixed at 45,000 men.

BRITISH FLEET SILENCES ENEMY

Official Report of the Admiralty Say Three Warships Were Hit by the Land Guns With Slight Loss—Splendid Assistance Rendered Allies' Left.

NAVAL FIRE WAS GRUELLING

LONDON, Oct. 29—The Secretary of the Admiralty makes the following announcement:

"The British naval flotilla continues to support the allies' left, and since the morning of October 27 the fire of 12-inch guns has been brought to bear upon the German positions and batteries. Reports received from shore testify to the effect and accuracy of the fire and to its galling character. The flank is thus thoroughly maintained.

"Yesterday and the day before, the enemy brought up heavy guns and replied vigorously to the fire of Admiral Hood's ships. The vessels received only trifling structural damage. To-day the opposition from the shore has practically ceased and the preponderance of the naval gunnery seems to be established.

"The casualities have been very slight throughout, but one shell, exploding on the destroyer Falcon, killed one officer and eight men and wounded one officer and fifteen men. One killed and seven wounded are also reported from the light cruiser "Brilliant" and eight were wounded on the Rinaldo.

"The enemy's submarines have also been reported seeking an opportunity to attack the bombarding ships which are covered by British destroyers."

The casualities announced by the Admiralty include Lieut. Hubert O. F. Wanton, of the Falcon, killed; Sub-Lieut. Theodore Robson, severely wounded; Lieut. Robert Crossman, and Paymaster Joseph Shepherd, of the Rinaldo, slightly wounded.

PRO-GERMAN SENTIMENTS COST ORDER

A travelling salesman in Peterborough yesterday left his hat and common sense at his hotel and while working for an order imagined that he was Prof. Eucken, Prof. Munsterberg, Bernhardi or some of the other brave defenders of the brave.

He had already secured an order and in a passing reference to the war began to laud the Prussians and berate the Allies with a particular sting for the British. The business man, one of the most prominent in the city, closed the conference right there.

The first order was cancelled, and the traveller was told to toddle on and tell his tale to the Turks or some other ears tuned to such impressions.

OFFERED METZ TO THE FRENCH

Germany Said to Have Tried to Conclude Individual Peace to Break Up Allied Pact

SCHEME WAS REJECTED

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The Daily Chronicle's Paris correspondent asserts that with a view of detaching France from the allies, Germany made an offer to conclude peace on the basis of the cession of Metz and possibly a portion of Alsace to France. The offer, according to the correspondent, was rejected.

Buried Under Pile of Dead.

A wounded British soldier tells a story of an experience which recalls the grim experience of Balzac's Col. Shabert, and which also illustrates the severity of the fighting.

This soldier said he remembered the start of the fierce fight in the trenches. Then his mind became a blank for many hours. When he recovered his senses it was morning, and he had an awful feeling of suffocation. When he tried to move he realized that he was in a trench, buried beneath a pile of German and British dead.

The enemy has retired temporarily and eventually the soldier was able to crawl to the next line of trenches, which were occupied by his comrades. Then he was sent to the rear.

Flee in Terror.

One element of the allies' army of which the Germans are frankly in fear is the Indian troops. The charge of the Ghurkas and Sikhs is well nigh irresistible, and on several occasions the Germans have not awaited the onslaught, but have fled, throwing away their guns and screaming in terror.

The Indians are hard to restrain in battle. They want to be in every bit of action, and insist on charging with bayonets and knives at every opportunity.

Kaiser's Dash On Dover Ports Was a Failure

Slackening of German Onslaught Indicates Success of Allies.

TEUTONS PAYING HIGH PRICE

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The slackening of the German onslaught in Belgium, of which an official Belgian message speaks, leads sanguine London journals to-day to describe the Kaiser's famous dash on Calais as a failure. This overlooks indications of fresh German reinforcements about to reach the enemy, especially the Bavarian army, whose commander is Crown Prince Rupert of Bavaria, brother of the Queen of the Belgians. In his latest orders he calls on his soldiers to wipe out the British enemy, who, he says, "has been at work for many years to surround us, and to whom we owe our present bloody war."

The war aspect becomes more incredible in the Germans' fierce effort to crush Britain "as an enemy of enemies." The present onslaught on the banks of the Yser will probably fail, but the Times anticipates further desperate efforts to do the Kaiser's bidding to make Britain's life intolerable by a direct assault from Dunkirk and Calais by siege guns, submarines, and aircraft.

Britain Confident.

Britain's confidence, however, is unbroken. Also her faith in Joffre's strategy, which is summed up in the phrase: "Leave me alone. I nibble them."

As a Paris correspondent to the Daily Mail says, the nibbling of the mouse does not represent hot work at Dixmude and Ypres, but admirably describes the process going on from Arras to Roye and Noyon from Rheims east to Verdun and south to Belfort. Everywhere Joffre's men are nibbling like untiring mice at the long German front.

Professor Julius Wolf, in a lecture in Berlin last week, shows the stupendous price Germany is paying for her false strategy in attempting a war simultaneously on two fronts. He said Germany's economic financial losses are thousands of millions of marks and the damage done by Russians in East Prussia and the French invasion in Alsace-Lorraine are not much less than £50,000,000. The losses inflicted upon Russia, Belgium, and France were, of course, incomparably greater. "Only Britain, alas, has been protected from anything more than the loss of ships and armies in the field. Together it has cost £7,500,000 a day. The German war loan suffices until the New Year. Other losses than the actual war expenditure will about equal that expenditure. They must reckon upon the total waste £50,000,000 in three months. Who will pay the enormous bill?"

SECURE YOUR GAME LICENSE

Hunters are advised to secure their licenses in proper form before leaving for the hunting grounds. This is necessary in order to avoid any misunderstanding between the hunters and the officials who are charged with the duty of carrying out the game regulations.

GERMAN ZEPPS AND FLEET ARE READY TO DASH

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The correspondent of the Times at Copenhagen writes:

"All the entrances to Cuxhaven, by land and by sea, have been closed by Imperial command. No civilians are allowed in the vicinity of the harbour, which is crowded with floating batteries, Zeppelins, and submarines."

A despatch from Sluis, Holland, to the Handelsblad, asserts that parts of several submarines have been sent from Germany by railway to Zeebrugge, on the Belgian coast, where they will be put together and the boats then sent against the British fleet off Ostend.

Strict secrecy, according to the Sluis correspondent, surrounds the German movements in Belgium, and all railway communication to Zeebrugge, Knocke, and Bruges is interrupted. Bicycle and motor traffic is also forbidden. A map in the office of the German commander at Bruges shows a straight line from Mariakerke, running south, beyond which no civilians are allowed to go.

Eight airships passed over Hasselt, on the German-Belgian frontier, going westward, and evidently making for Brussels and Antwerp where, it had previously been stated, Zeppelin sheds were being constructed, according to a Rotterdam despatch to the Daily Mail.

According to an Antwerp telegram to the Rhenania Transport Company of Mannheim, some of the ships sunk in the port of Antwerp by troops of the Allies have been raised and the river is again navigable. An inventory of the goods in the raised vessels is being made. The Antwerp Government has invited bids for the raising of the remainder of the sunken ships.

According to a Paris doctor yeast, diluted with lukewarm boiled water, is a remarkably effective remedy for burns.

A BOUNCING BABY BULLOCK

Mothers and fathers often boast of a "bouncing baby boy"; but Mr. T. M. Hunter of Elmdale Dairy Farm, North Monaghan, who is neither the one nor the other, can legitimately boast of a bouncing baby bullock—a thoroughbred in every way. Yesterday he received at the station an elegant thoroughbred Holstein bull calf, only four months' old, which tips the scales at about five hundred pounds. It was purchased from Mr. Elias Snyder of Burgessville, Oxford County, a celebrated breeder of Holsteins. The animal is a beauty, with a strong, straight back and all the points that go to make up thoroughly first-class herd breeding quality. The "Pride of Elmdale" took first prize in his class at the National Exhibition, Toronto, and will be an important addition to Mr. Hunter's already first-class dairy herd.

"Is dat a kickin' mule?" asked Erastus Pinkley. "Does you want to buy him?" inquired Uncle Rasbury, cautiously. "No." "Den whut's de use o' comin' aroun' here axin' useless questions an' temptin' me to spoil my reputation foh truth an' mendacity?"

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Col. Allen English

CHAPTER XVII.

THE DISTANT MENACE.

Stern never knew when he, too, drifted off to sleep; but he awoke to find Zangamon sitting beside him, with his cloak drawn over his head, while Beatrice and Bremilu still slept.

"The light, master—it is like knives to me! Like spears to my eyes, master! I cannot bear it!" whispered the Merucaan, pointing to where, around the interstices of the doorway, bright white gleams were streaming in.

Allan considered with perplexity.

"It hurst, you say?"

"Yes, Krommo! Once or twice I have tried to watch that strange fire, but I cannot. The pain is very great!"

"Humph!" thought Allan. "This may be a more serious factor than I've reckoned on. These people are albinos. White hair and pink eyes—not a particle of protecting pigmentation. For thirty or so generations they've been subjected to nothing but torchlight. The actinic rays of the sun are infinitely more penetrating than anything they've ever known. It may take months, years even, to accustom them to sunlight!"

And disquieting situations presented themselves to his mind. True, if it were necessary, the Folk could work and take the air only at night. They could fish, hunt and till the soil by star and moon light, and sleep by day; but this was by no means the veritable re-establishment of a real, human civilisation.

Then an idea struck him.

"The very thing!" cried he. "Once I can put it into effect, it will solve the question. And the second generation, at the outside, will be normal. They'll 'throw back' to remote ancestry under changed conditions. In time, even if only a long time, all will be well!"

But now immediate labours and difficult problems were pressing. The future would have to look out for itself.

Stern felt positive that to let the Merucaans out of the cave would not only blind them, but might also kill them outright as well.

Their unprotected skins would inevitably burn to a blister under the rays of the sun, and they would in all probability die. So said he:

"Listen, Zangamon! You must stay here till the dark comes again, which will not be very long. The woman and I will prepare another cave for your dwelling. When it is dark you can fish in the flowing water beneath. In the meantime we will bring you your accustomed food and your nets from the flying boat.

"You must be patient. In a short time all things shall be as you wish, and you shall see the wonderful and beautiful world up into which I have brought you!"

The man nodded, yet Sternr clearly saw his face betrayed uneasiness, distrust and pain. In all fairness, the Merucaans' first experience of the upper world had been enough to shake the faith even of a philosopher—how much more so that of simple and untaught barbarians!

Terror, violence, slaughter and insecurity—these all had greeted the colonists; and now, in addition, they found the patriarch was dead. Above all, they were virtually prisoners in this gloomy cavern of the rock.

But Stern was very wise. He by no means thought of commiserating or excusing. His only course was to make light of the trials and hardships, and, if need were, to command.

He arose, carefully stopped up the chinks around the rock at the doorway, and bade Zangamon replenish the fire with dry sticks. Then, Bremilu awakening, they prepared food.

Now Beatrice, too, awoke. Allan took her in his arms, unmindful of the newcomers, and there were words of love and joy, and self-reproaches, and a new faith plighted between them once again.

She was unharmed, except for a few bruises and scratches. Her nerves had already recovered something of their usual strength. But at sight of Allan's bandaged arm she turned pale, and not even his assurances could comfort her.

They talked of the terrible adventure.

"It was all my fault, Allan—every bit my fault!" she exclaimed remorsefully. "It all come from my not obeying orders. You see, I was expecting you last night. Instead of staying in the cave, with door barricaded, I lingered on the terrace, after having piled the signal-fire high with wood.

"I sat down and watched the sky, and listened to the river below, and thought of you. I must have dozed a little, for all of a sudden I came wide-awake, shuddering with a terror I couldn't understand. Then I heard something moving down the path—something that grunted and snuffled savagely.

"I started up, ran for the cave, and just got inside when the brute reached it. I rolled the stone in place, Allan, but before I could brace it with a pole it was hurled back, and in crawled the gorilla, roaring and snapping like a demon!"

She hid her face in both hands, shuddering at the terrible memory. But, forcing herself to be calm, she went on again:

I snatched up the pistol and fired. Then—"

"You hit him?"

"I must have, for he screeched most horribly and pawed at his breast—"

"So, then, that explains the blood-marks on the floor and the great hand-print on the wall?"

"Hand-prints? Was there one?"

"Yes; but no matter now. Go on!"

"After that—oh, it was too ghastly! He seized me and I fought—I struggled against that huge, hairy chest; he gripped me like iron. My blows were no more than so many pats to him.

"I tried to fire again, but he wrenched the pistol away, and bent it in his huge teeth and flung it down. But, though he was raging, he didn't wound me—didn't try to kill me, or anything. He seemed to want to capture me alive—"

Allan shuddered. Only too well he understood. Gorilla nature had not changed in fifteen hundred years.

"After that?" he questioned eagerly.

"Oh, after that I don't remember much. I must have fainted. Next thing I knew, everything was dark and the forest was all about. I screamed and then again I knew nothing. Once more I seemed to sense things, and once more all grew black. And after that—"

"Well?"

"Why—I was here on the bed, and you were beside me, Allan—and these men of our Folk were here! But how it all happened, God knows!"

"I'll tell you some day. You shall have the story from our side some day, but not now. Only one thing—if it hadn't been for Zangamon here and Bremilu—well—"

"You mean they helped to rescue me?"

He nodded.

"Without them I'd have been helpless as a child. They traced you in the dark, for they could see as plainly as we see by day. It was a blow from Bremilu's stone axe that killed the brute. They saved you, Beatrice! Not I!"

She kept a little silence, then said thoughtfully:

"How can I ever thank them, Allan? How can I thank them best?"

"You can't thank them. There's no way. I tried it, but they didn't understand. They only did what seemed natural to them. They're savages, remember; not civilised men. It's impossible to thank them! The only thing you can do, or I can do, is work for them now. The greatest efforts and sacrifices for these men will be small payment for their deed. And if—as I believe—the whole race is dowered with the same spirit and indomitable courage—the courage we certainly did see in the Battle of the Wall—then we need have no fear of our transplanted nation dying out!"

Much more than might have been to say, but now the meal was ready, and hunger spoke in no uncertain tones. All four of the adventurers ate in silence, thoughtful and grave, cross-legged, about the meat and the drink, which lay on palm-leaves or in clay bowls hard-burned and red.

A kind of embarrassment seemed to rest on all, for this was the first time they had eaten together—these barbarians with the two folk of the upper world.

But the meal was soon at an end, and the prospect of labours to be undertaken cheered Allan's spirit. Despite his stiff and painful arm, he felt courage and energy throbbing in his veins, and longed to be at work.

"The very first thing we must do," said he, "is fix up a place for the guests. They've got to stay here, out of the light, till nightfall. That will give us plenty of time. I want to get them settled in their own quarters, and bring them into some regular routine of life and labour, before they have a chance to get homesick and dejected."

He warned the Merucaans to cover their heads with their cloaks while Beatrice and he opened the doorway.

He closed it then, with other rocks outside, and covered it with his own outer cloak; then, wearing only his belted tunic, he rejoined Beatrice half-way up the path to the cliff-top. Both were armed; he with his own automatic, she with the one they had found in the crypt.

"Our first move," said he, "will be to transport the various things from the aeroplane. It will be something of a task, but I don't dare leave them out there on the barrens till night, when the men themselves could bring them in. The sooner we get things to rights the better."

She agreed, and together they took the path toward the landing-place, which they had christened Newport Heights. Stern felt grateful that his right arm, his gun arm, was uninjured. The other mattered little for the present.

An idea crossed his mind to seek out the dead gorilla and make a trophy of the pelt; but he dismissed it at once. The beast was so repellant that the very thought of it fair sickened him.

They reached the plane in some few minutes, found everything uninjured, and loaded themselves with the Merucaans' goods and chattels. Stern took the bags of edible seaweed and the metal crate of fowl; she draped the big net over her shoulders, and together, not without difficulty, they returned to Settlement Cliff.

Pass, now, all the minute details of the installation. By noon they had prepared a habitation for the newcomers, deep in a far recess of a winding gallery which thoroughly excluded all direct sunlight.

Only the dimmest glow penetrated even at high noon. Here they stowed the freight, built a rock fireplace, and threw down quantities of the long, fragrant grass for bedding.

On the Advice of His Doctor

He Used Dr. Chase's Ointment for Protruding Piles With Splendid Results.

Too often a doctor can only think of an operation when asked for a treatment for piles. Some are sufficiently broad-minded to use the most effective treatment available, which is undoubtedly Dr. Chase's Ointment, as was proved in the case referred to in this letter.

Mr. Simon E. Jones, Railway street, Inverness, N. S., writes; "I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable for protruding piles. For three years I suffered from piles, and was advised by a local physician to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. I had tried many treatments in vain, and therefore know which is the best. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and you are at liberty to use this statement."

The record of cures of every form of piles which stands behind Dr. Chase's Ointment is the strongest guarantee you can have that it will promptly relieve and cure this ailment, even in the most agravated form. 60c a box, all dealers.

"Keep the Shop Busy —Telephone."

The factory superintendent was about to lay off ten men.

The manager called several customers by long distance telephone, referred to the last order, inquired if it had been satisfactory, and with this as an opening asked for more business. The plan was so successful that he called in his best salesmen, carefully drilled them, and put them to work at the telephone. By means of this systematic telephone canvass he not only got enough business to keep all his men busy, but had to work overtime.

If your business is not as brisk as you would like, why not turn to your telephone and "keep the shop busy?"

A BATCH OF LETTERS FROM THE TRENCHES

SAVED BY HIS HORSE.

Trooper S. Stanley, of the Royal Scots Greys, writing to a friend in Edinburgh, says:

"I owe my own life and that of perhaps a whole army to my old horse. I was on outpost duty at a lonely spot, and though I could not hear or see anything, my old horse kept neighing and betraying signs of restlessness.

"I got down and came on a German crouching in the long grass. He had a sword bayonet and evidently meant to get me unawares, and then the post would have been rushed. I didn't wait to ask his intentions, but let him have a ticket for another country.

"His yells brought his mates down, but I got away, and the row alarmed the guard and spoiled their attempt at surprising us. You bet the old nag had a special feed that night."

THE END OF THE SENTENCE.

A touching story of an unfinished letter is told by a private in the Scots Guards. "In the trenches on one of our 'off' days I was sitting smoking a 'fag' and my chum was writing a letter to his mother. He had got to this: 'I have got through without a scratch so far, but you never know your luck out'— when a bullet rounded off that sentence better than you or I could do it, and his grave is in the lonely valley of the Aisne."

THE VILLAGE HEIRLOOM.

(Letter from Lieut. W. J. Martin, Army Service Corps, Mechanical Transport Section).

We were amused at one village where there was a level crossing to guard. The old French Reservists do this. They had one rifle and one cartridge, but they all had bayonets, and when relieving guard they used solemnly to hand over the cartridge, which they showed us with great pride. In fact, I think it is the village heirloom.

We have a French sergeant attached to us as interpreter, M. Jeancourt. He is a very rich man, and owns a business in Lancashire employing 3,500 men. He is an awfully decent fellow, and is jolly good at getting us billets wherever possible. He owns a house in Paris, and has a Rolls-Royce car.

THE ROLL-CALL.

The following letter is from Corporal R. W. Crow, Royal Engineers, to a friend in Co. Durham:

"After the battle we have a roll-call. The sergeant calls out the names. Perhaps the first one he calls is missing. Nobody knows where he is.

"The next one is called, and somebody says 'I saw him shot.' The sergeant puts him down as 'shot' or 'wounded.' Nobody comments or says anything. He is just forgotten.

"I paid 1s 3d for a bottle of beer a month ago. You can't get one for a pound now. You could get a motor or a cycle or anything here free, but, of course, we can't carry anything. They were selling sheep for four francs, and lambs for two francs. Geese, chickens and rabbits can be picked up. 'Twist' is a thing of the past, so we have had to give up our little luxuries."

A DUM-DUM BULLET WOUND.

(Extracts from a letter received in London from a member of a British Ambulance Corps in Ghent).

The Belgian soldiers are splendid. The Germans are absolute devils, and are now moving on Antwerp. At Alost they shot a woman in the back through a window. At the same place they cut the throats of some Belgian wounded.

We have a poor Belgian soldier here with his hand amputated, shot obviously with a dum-dum bullet. You can only see a very tiny hole where the bullet entered the front of the wrist, but the back of the hand is blown clean away. They are keeping it, sending a photograph to London.

TOMMY'S CUP OF TEA.

(Letter from Sergt. Clark, Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry).

We have just left the trenches after being in them day and night for a fortnight. We have had a pretty rough time of it lately, but still it makes no difference to us. Sunshine or rain, we are always there, because we know that we are out here for a good cause.

I can boast of having had a shot through my haversack, and through the heel of my boot, and my cap can show an honourable wound as well. I got that by popping my head too far over the top of the trench.

Every day we receive jam, bacon or ham, bread, tinned meat (commonly known as bully beef), biscuits and cheese. We do not get a lot, but enough to keep us in trim and free from want. We also get plenty of dry tea and sugar. It is quite amusing at first to see the lads making their tea, a thing they are doing all day long.

On this game the boys generally get together in groups of sixes, draw their rations in bulk, and cook mess together. You ought to see their cooking utensils. They use watercans, pails; in fact, anything that holds a decent amount of water.

A RIFT IN THE CLOUDS.

An officer in the Bedfordshire Regiment.—Tells about a rather amusing incident which happened to a battalion of the 1st Division. They were entrenched within seventy yards of the Germans and one witty fellow hoisted an improvised bull's eye target above the trenches.

The German snipers had single shots at it and the hits were signalled up. There were great cheers from our fellows when they scored a bull's-eye. After a bit they put up a target which our fellows potted at, and there were cheers and songs from both sides.

"LINE OF CLEAR WASHING."

Corporal W. E. Stones (1st King's Royal Rifles).—All day and all night long for several days we have been shelled, and the troops now take much less notice of the shells than they do of a shower of rain. Familiarity breeds ——. Had one delightful little action. Arose at 2 p.m. Moved off at 3.30. Surprised a German rearguard. Had a sharp action for a couple of hours and were about to charge with fixed bayonets—and the boys were jolly over it, too—when the blighters hoisted a line of clean washing and we were done in for the charge. We sent that little lot to England for a holiday.

We try desperately hard to keep clean. A few minutes' halt near any water finds all the troops with towels and soap out, scrambling for a wash. What a scurry when the order is given suddenly to "fall in!"

A ROADSIDE COMEDY.

(Letter from Bombardier H. Cressy, R.F.A.)

It is great fun watching the efforts of the troops to make the French people understand what they want.

One of our fellows thought he would try for some eggs at a farmhouse. Naturally they couldn't understand him, so he opened his mouth, rubbed his stomach, flapped his arms and cried, "Cock-a-doodle!" The egg came promptly.

Another chap tried to get some bread at a farm. After he had made all sorts of cheer signs the woman seemed to understand and said, "Oui, oui, M'Sier," rushed back into the house and brought back a bundle of hay!

There was a terrific roar of laughter from the troops. The non-plussed look on the woman's face and "fed-up" expression on the chap's face, made a picture worthy of the pencil of poor old Tom Browne.

AEROPLANE SIGNALS.

(Letter from Pte. A. E. Basham, 1st Bedfords, to his wife at Loughton, Essex).

It was my intention to berth a long letter thirty minutes back, but a delay in the writing was caused by a beastly German aeroplane, which circled over our improvised shelters, and dropped a stream of white light.

By that light the enemy's artillery take range and, in consequence, we fellows had to file into shell-proof trenches. . . .

Where we have followed up the Germans we have seen a trail of wine and spirit bottles, chicken, duck and pigeon feathers, cow and bullock carcasses stripped of flesh, and dead horses, besides motors, waggons, guns, rifles, uniform and equipment. We often see the filled-in trenches where the enemy have hurriedly buried their numerous dead.

EXPLOIT OF TEN BRITISHERS "OUT OF BOUNDS."

(Related by a Corporal of the West Riding Regiment, now in hospital at Glasgow.)

I got my wound in a fight that you will never hear of in official despatches, because it was a little affair of our own, and most likely we'll be hauled over the coals for it.

It was what you might call a night attack. We had some fatigue in our position along the Aisne, and there was a little village canary over lines where we used to go to for a bit of a lark.

One night coming back — there were about ten of us—we were surprised to find a light in a deserted farmhouse, and were still more surprised to find sound of revelry coming out through the window.

We peeped in and there were Germans all over the shop, drinking and eating and smoking, and generally trying to look as if they were having a jolly good time.

"It was a dare-devil of an Irish man who suggested that we ought to give the Germans a little surprise, and we were all with him. Doing our best to look fierce and create an impression that he had at least a brigade behind us, we flung open the door without any ceremony. Our first rush was for the passage where most of the Germans had stacked their rifles, and from there we were able to cover the largest party in any one room.

They were so taken aback that they made very little resistance. The only chap who showed any fight at all was a little fellow, who had good reason to fear us, for he had escaped the day before after being arrested as a spy. He whipped out a revolver and some of his chums drew swords, but we fired into them, and they threw up their hands, after the little one had sent a revolver bullet through my arm.

We fastened them up securely, collected all the smokes and grub they had not touched, and marched them off to the camp. There was a nice how d'ye do when we got back, for the sound of firing so close by had alarmed the whole camp, and we were called to account for our behaviour.

I think they were inclined to let us down lightly because of the prisoners, particularly the spy chap, but we had no business to be out of bounds that night, and we'll probably have some mark of official displeasure chalked up against us.

Even if we do, I don't worry, because we had value for our money, though I don't say if I were in the same position, and had time to think it over, I should be inclined to commit the same offence against discipline.

Indigestion And Headaches

Arising from Constipation, Cured and Regular Habits Established by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

In the western Provinces, where so many thousands live far from doctors and drug stores, very many rely on Dr. Chase's medicines to cure disease and maintain health and strength. This letter gives some idea of what perfect control Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills exert over the most common ills of life.

Mrs. H. K. Flower, farmer's wife, Eastburg, Alta., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from constipation, indigestion, headache and mangled feelings. Treatment from two or three doctors afforded only temporary relief, so I turned to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and with most satisfactory results. Headaches have disappeared, regular habits established and general health very much better. Both my husband and I can speak highly of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver pills, as we have both been greatly benefited by them." One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

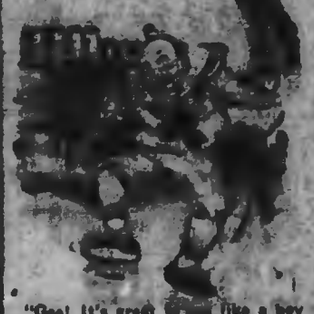
Be a Pantry Pirate Once More

By Using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets You Can Renew the Appetite of Your Boyhood Days.

Some of you suffering men and women would just as soon think of eating pin, jam and doughnuts as you would of sleeping with a pair of bengal tigers. You're afraid of your stomach. If you will only try a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after each meal and at bed time you will very soon overcome this fear of food.



"Gee! It's great to feel like a boy again!"

These little Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into the stomach just like food. They mix their new and fresh digestive qualities with your worn-out juices in stomach and intestines and thus enrich your body, stop gas, irritation and "after eating distress." The act of taking a Stuart Dyspepsia Tablet is a pleasing one. You eat it as you would an "after dinner mint" or a "bonbon." It at once mixes with your food and digests that food. It relieves the strain of that meal, of course, and thus you experience a joyful feeling from your food.

Soon your appetite will return. You will find yourself eating the foods you would dearly love to eat, but are afraid to eat; and in a very short time your old digestive system will be returned to you, for our bodies very quickly readjust themselves to normal conditions when we stop the trouble that makes them diseased.

Go to your druggist, no matter where you live, and buy a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. To any one wishing a free trial of these tablets please address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., and a small sample package will be mailed free.

A JOYOUS OCCASION

By Hilda Richmond

In a very busy country neighborhood where the hard work of the summer was always succeeded by a series of delightful social affairs—a round of good times carefully planned for in the autumn—one of the young girls surprised the group making arrangements for the first party by saying, "Why not include the whole neighborhood?" It was the first time anyone had thought of such a thing and the novelty of it took their breath away. "We can make the affair a little larger and have it in the school house, or our big new barn, or the township hall, or even out o' doors one of these mild nights and invite everybody."

Well, that was the beginning but now every good time takes in young, old, middleaged and even the little ones. After the busy fall work is over the young folks get together and carefully map out the season's pleasures. Perhaps there is a lecture to begin with, followed by the serving of refreshments, then a musical, or children's entertainment, then a Christmas tree and celebration or a Thanksgiving frolic. After the holidays come surprise parties, lectures, concerts and sleighing parties depending largely upon the weather and the state of the roads. Since they have taken in the neighborhood everything is pleasanter all around and nobody wants to go back to the old way.

The success of the plan from the very first has been due to several factors. The young people consult the elder folks and give them a share in the plans and in carrying them out, and the spending of money has always been frowned upon. Some of the people are well-to-do while others are in moderate circumstances so all are on an equal footing. The Christmas tree, which is the "big" treat of the year to the children never is loaded with anything but ten cent gifts. In the matter of food much liberty is allowed as country people like to have an abundance, but it is all home-made and not expensive. Another thing that has helped is the fact that local talent is made much of and even the little ones have a place occasionally in the entertainments. It is all so delightful and so home-like and so inspiring that it is no wonder the young people feel proud of their social affairs each year.

The entire community has improved in every way since the new venture, and even the doctor laughingly complains that people are healthier out that way and the young folks are spoiling his business. The church has received a decided uplift, the school is better in every way, the civic atmosphere is clearer and the people are happier and more ambitious than ever before.—Indiana Farmer.

"So God created man in his own image; in the image of God created he him."—Gen. 1., 27.

Lately a strange coincidence happened. One day were found those lines of Browning's:

"World, how it walled about Life with disgrace,
Till God's own smile came out,
That was my face."

The same day was seen a picture, illustrating some beautiful lines of George McDonald's. A mother was holding her little one on her knee who was looking up into her face. That mother's face represented God to that child.

Thus to many a one the only realization of what God is, is the face and characteristics of His Christians. What our ideal of Him is, that must we, His followers, strive with all strength and prayer to be for the sake of those who learn to know Him through us.

We cannot for a moment think of our God with an expression of worry, discontent, or uncontrolled anger on His countenance. Then we must so control our thoughts, feelings, inclinations and actions that none of the traits that we cannot think of Him as possessing will appear on our own faces. All the signs of true nobility of character must be stamped upon us.

Then there is also the solemn thought that others may be forming their estimate of God from the actions of our daily lives. They are not only studying our faces, but they are watching our conduct, listening to our words.

In "Madonna of a Day," a dissolute man was trying to lead a purer, better life than any of which he had had any conception, until he met a woman whom he regarded as saintly. One day he saw her in some action beneath the high standard he had thought was hers. The last time she saw him he was under the influence of his old life. His ideals, his hopes were shattered. He had lost faith in her and in God.

None of us can realize nor know to whom we are an ideal. So we must strive always to give the truest conception of God that lies within us.—I.H.N.

Hush! Listen! My soul, my sword!
Am I, too, wounded to death?
What matter? My foot can spurn
His body; the fox that skulked,
That killed in the dark. I earn
Remembrance for loyal love,
For vengeance unto death—
And this is a glorious way
For a man to yield his breath.
His life, for life of my lord!
—Japanese Song of the Sword.

No fighting man as wonderful as the Japanese soldier has ever borne the burden of battle. Apply every sort of militant test to this sweeping pronouncement and the guardian of the realm of Dai Nippon will meet it squarely, up to the extreme limit of critical comparison. He is all that is best in every other soldier of the nations; with a plus of peculiar animating impulse that is his incomparable inheritance.

The mighty battle of Mukden illustrates the vast difference between the Japanese soldier and the Russian. This final and greatest battle of the war between Russia and Japan lasted from February 20 to March 10, 1906, covering a constant conflict of nearly three weeks. Night fighting was as general as day fighting. The historian reports the undeviating practice in the brief lulls of the Japanese soldier, with his comrade, drinking to their mutual death on the morrow or within the next hour of assault. When the cup of water used in the death toast was raised to the lips the sentiment expressed was not "Success to our arms and may God watch over your life." Instead, these solemn words were spoken:—

"May you experience the ecstacy and the exquisite privilege of being killed."

The Japanese soldier, in brief, is envious of death. He feels that his slain comrade has achieved preferment and has been made his superior. He craves the distinction not of returning safely home but of falling on the field of battle. Then shall he be gratefully remembered in the worship of brave and illustrious ancestors. The Moslem soldier was promised something if he died in battle. But the "if" was not sufficient to make him walk willingly and gladly to death. The Japanese soldier is promised a sacred glory if he die in battle, and he embraces the opportunity for immolation.

Frederick the Great is reported to have cried to a brigade many times repulsed: "What, would you live forever!" And Henry V. is made by Shakespeare to say, "once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more; or close the wall up with our English dead." But, supposing something like this occurred to the Russian officer, that the Russian and the Japanese soldier had to be urged on to the mortifical point. The Japanese soldier commanses with himself and woos death without urging.

And it must not be thought that the fighting man of Japan is careless with his fighting because he would rather die than not. It is considered disgraceful by him not to have inflicted all the damage possible before being killed. He must use every art and every muscle to destroy the enemy. To perish while doing so is the acme of bliss. Turn again to the battle of Mukden to see how the Japanese battles living, despite his preference for death. His officers were willing to risk murderous losses at any time to gain an adequate object. But they were just as particular to intrench systematically and keep their ranks full as might be.

Mark this laconic utterance of the Japanese officers when instructing their men how to overcome the disadvantage of charging and fighting in the dark: "The Russians are tall; we are short. Run any tall man through that you meet." Prior to this instruction white bands had been worn on sleeves to aid in recognising friends. The attackers always stole out in silence. All of the charges did not prove forlorn hopes. Their very audacity made some of them successful. After a two days' bombardment with high explosive shells Mukden was carried by storm February 27. In another two days Kin-tu was taken after a series of desperate hand to hand conflicts in which the smaller Japanese soldier grappled undismayed with the husky Russian. On March 1 Nogi's cavalry [illegible] the frozen Liao-ho, galloped [illegible] bank, drove a brigade of Cossacks before them, dashed into the railway station and captured an enormous quantity of supplies destined for Kuropatkin's army.

This was only one of many evidences of the Japanese soldier's dash and efficiency. Day by day he closed in on his foe—always the attacker, always taking the initiative, although he numbered no more. March 7 Nogi attacked the Russian centre on a tip from Kuroki that he felt the resistance sickening there. The Japanese infantryman went forward there, took the famous fortified lines on which 100,000 men had toiled for months. Three days later Mukden was entered. The Russian official report admitted 96,500 in killed, wounded, missing or prisoners. The Japanese stated their loss in killed and wounded at 41,222 officers and men. The killed alone were estimated at 15,000.

But as it was the Samurai who was Japan's sole soldier for centuries, he may be dwelt upon pertinently for a paragraph or two of detail. His business was to "samurau," or serve, the emperor—whence the name Samurai. In his heyday he had fully developed a dress, coiffure and custom entirely his own—a distinct product of his era. He shaved his temples and sidecalp to keep his hair out of his eyes. He tied and pomatumed his queue until it lay in "gunhammer and ramrod style" on his crown, his topknot fitting into and helping to hold on his helmet. He carried two swords—one for battle and the other to disemhowel himself in defeat. Hara-kiri was a Samurai privilege. Common folk were decapitated. The Samurai code indicated an ethical display to be followed, on one hand, and shield. On the other it was ferocious and brutal. This has more particular reference to the earlier days. Later the Samurai took up letters and became the intellectual as well as the military bulwark of the nation.

The feud between the Minamoto and the Taira families of Japan—the counterparts of the Wars of the Roses of England—marks one of the martial periods of Dai Nippon. It ended in a mighty battle in 1185 near the [illegible] of Shimonoseki between rival fleets of war junks. The [illegible] of Taira was annihilated.

In a number of kind battles incidental to this great feud the Minamoto leader was the great Kwanmon. He conquered many rebellions, making a campaign to the thirty-seventh parallel and returning "victorious." In 1192 he was made Sei-i Tai Shogun, a title and office that existed until 1868. Anciently all generals were called shoguns, but with new emphasis added "the" shogun finally acquired such power that many supposed, in the following centuries, that he was the real ruler of the nation. Yoritomo is rated as one of the ablest generals of mediæval Japan.

The famous archer Minamoto Tametomo took a prominent part in the feud fight. On the strand of Oshima he aped a shaft that pierced the frame of the enemy's junk and sank it. Then, shouting defiance, he shut himself up in his house and set the dwelling on fire.

The Japanese soldier fought with desperate courage at the battle of Dainafu, in the Seventh Month of 1270. He beat back a Mongolian Tartar invasion so decisively that China never again attempted to venture toward Dai Nippon soil. There were 100,000 Chinese and Tartars and 7,000 Cathays, with an armada of 3,500 junks. They were equipped with European engines of war, [illegible] by the Venetians, hurling great stones. But the Japanese soldier daringly swam out in groups of thirty, boarded the junks and beleaguered the enemy. But he fell by scores at other points where the foe in larger junks prepared for his coming. He attacked again and again, and in the midst of the great battle a typhoon arose and wrecked the armada. Thousands of survivors took refuge on Taka Island and began building boats to escape to Corea. They were all slain or driven into the sea by the fighting men of Japan, except three, spared to take back the news of the disaster to their emperor.

Under the great war captain Toyotomi Hideyoshi the Japanese soldier marched to the invasion of Corea. This leader had put down many uprisings and was known as a valiant man. The dream of his life had been the conquest of Corea. At the last moment, owing to the infirmities of his sixty years, he had to remain behind. But the fighting man of Japan went to Corea, fought a number of battles, in one of which, before the capital Kenhitai was taken, 10,000 Coreans were killed. Hideyoshi's death called them home with Corean envoys to make peace. This campaign was made shortly after 1586.

The battle of Sekigahara, fought October 1, 1600, decided the condition of Japan for over two centuries. It was Japanese soldier against Japanese soldier, the governors of the son of Toyotomi Hideyoshi leading one faction and Tokugawa Iryasu, a general of the Corean campaign, the other. The Governor's faction had 128,000 men, Tokugawa Iryasu 75,000. Cannon were used, but the most destructive work was with the sword and spear. At noon the smoke blowers and drummers beat a final charge and the Iryasu army advanced along the entire line. A hand to hand fight resulted in carnage and butchery beyond description, according to the old accounts. Thousands committed hara-kiri. More than twenty-five thousand heads were cut off by the victors and stood in a pile, still well outlined and distinguishable. All Japan submitted to Iryasu. He was created Sei-i Tai Shogun in 1603. He founded the line of Shoguns that existed until the entire military system of the empire was revolutionized some three hundred and fifty years later.

During the war with China in 1894-1895 the Japanese soldier, as before, restricted to the diamond type, won many brilliant victories. An army was sent into Corea to bring about adequate native reform and check murders and uprisings. China hadn't done it, so the Mikado's government set about the job. The fighting Japanese, after a hard struggle, won a sweeping victory at Ping Yang September 15, 1894, and by July 1 the Chinese had abandoned Corea altogether. He stormed and took Port Arthur November 21, and his daring and bravery won Wei-hai-wei January 31, 1895. He overran Formosa after capturing the forts in the Pescadores, and made Europe sit up a bit to note how quickly he had modernized militantly.

Then came the war with Russia that placed him permanently in a fighting niche of the very highest. After a long diplomatic duel between Tokio and St. Petersburg relations were broken off. Within sixty hours Kuroki led two divisions of the Japanese soldier toward Corea. Port Arthur was besieged and fell, but not before the fighting man of Japan had performed unparalleled feats and had eagerly sacrificed his life—thousands at a time—in the explosion of mines by the Russian defenders. Liu Yang, after a pitched battle engaging half a million men, was entered by the Jap. Then came Mukden. These history making events were crowded into the brief period between February 6, 1904, and March 10, 1905. Two great sea fights won by the Japanese sailor clinched the triumph.

Although the Japanese soldier had a fowling piece placed in his hands as early as 1543, there were only a few, and the sword and spear were held the weapons for men. A military school was established in 1868, and from that date the fighting man of Japan took a fresh start in the art of war. In three closely following bounds from 1872 he landed in the front rank of modern soldiers.

How long will he continue the most wonderful soldier? Well, he's the newest of the fighting fraternity, and consequently the least stale. He may decline presently, but are the soldiers of the rival nations likely to mount as he descends? What will be the animating impulse to battle then about? What the Japanese has done up to short a time makes it seem plausible that he can do still more. He has given a convincing earnest of high performance.

The courage and spirit of many of the nations' soldiers are traced back to remote periods. Tradition is said to be a potent impelling factor to hardy conduct in discipline. Well, the Japanese has a quiver full of tradition, and when the misty realm of mythology is entered the Nippon battler can boast a militant chronology of fable unsurpassed. In the domain of the superwarring his daring demigods are quite as mighty as the shadowy heroes of the rival nations.

But where he stands unique among soldiers is in the heart [illegible] What are you going to do with a fighting man like the battler of Japan, who considers it a piece of rare good fortune to be killed?

BRITISHERS SUFFER IN SILENCE FOR THE WAR

Amusements Halted and Thousands Put Out of Business, But There Is No Complaint

(By Herbert Corey.)

LONDON, Oct. 29.—It was Tommy Crane's own fault. He wore one of those kittenish green hats they makes in Austria down the principal street of Southampton. A beggar stopped him—an old beggar, with a keen, wicked eye. Crane gave him a penny.

"Make it tuppence, mister," begged the beggar, holding on to Tommy Crane's coat tail. Mr. Crane made it tuppence in silence.

"It's little Hi can buy with tuppence, mister," pleaded the beggar. "Can't you give me another penny?"

Mr. Crane shook his head impatiently, and would have walked on. But the beggar wouldn't let him. Suspicion gleamed in his bad eye.

"Put a word to it, mister," commanded the beggar, sternly. "Let's hear you talk Hinglish—or you don't get away."

So Mr. Crane obliged, in the very warmest Anglo-Saxon at his command. The beggar listened in pleased silence. Then he intimated that he had been convinced and went away. For a time Mr. Crane was puzzled. Then the light dawned on him. He had been taken for a German spy.

That sort of thing might happen anywhere in Britain. The little island is on the job. It still firmly believes that one Briton is worth four or five other men of any race whatever, and refuses to get frightened in spite of Zeppelin scares and submarine menaces. It isn't a bit intense. It hardly bothers to send recruits to the colours, except when bad news wakes it up. But it is placidly in earnest.

No Interest in Travelling Shows.

Each year for the past four centuries a "goose fair" has been held in Nottingham. Originally, perhaps, geese were sold there. The only geese ever found in Nottingham nowadays owe allegiance to a large western republic, and have been fooled by their British cousins. To the jaundiced eye of a goose Nottingham's geese fair bears a family resemblance to the Elks' carnival at Columbus, Ohio. There are the carousals and the care-worn young women in cotton tights who stand in front of the circus tent, and Anita, the smallest woman in the world and the wonder of science. The goose fair is the great annual event of Nottingham.

This year Nottingham closed its stores as a protest against this tinsel frivolity when Britain is engaged in war. Everywhere one turned one saw disapproving placards, calling upon the citizens to keep away from the fair. They did, too. The man who has the tent in which three hundred pink rats and forty tortoiseshell cats go through evolutions in enforced amity was violently pessimistic. He had covered the front of his tent with signs announcing that the greatest show in the world—to wit, his show—was for sale, or for exchange for anything useful.

"What would you consider useful?" we asked.

"What have you got?" he asked, darkly.

We shall always believe that it was only luck that saved us from having a cat and rat show sawed off on us right there. The showman said the war had ruined his business. There was a time when people used to pay admission just to see intoxicated persons pass through hysterics into sobriety. Nowadays the pot-tossing adventurers conduct their incursions into reform in a rat-haunted solitude.

A very well known American journalist—who wears spectacles and owns a stern, bald forehead—registered at a hotel in Liverpool the other day. The first thing he saw was a police order requiring all aliens to register at once. Germans and Austrians were forbidden to leave the hotel until the precise moment of catching their train or boat, and were notified that an attempt to use the telephone would be followed by arrest. When the journalist had signed the hotel register the woman clerk called him back.

"Put down your nationality, please," said she.

Then he saw that each hotel guest had noted at the right of his name the country to which he owes allegiance.

Usually the River Mersey is so full of shipping that a dory can hardly get through. Nowadays the great piers are empty. In the channel lie warships. The few incoming steamers are not permitted to enter the river except under convoy. By this means they escape the mines with which that slimy thoroughfare is filled. At one of the great dry docks is the Aquitania, the newest of the Cunard Line, and one of the very finest passenger steamers in the world. Her nose has been crumpled up like a paper bag.

"What happened to her?" you ask.

The Secret of the Aquitania.

The man you ask looks you over very carefully. If you pass inspection he tells you that "the public has not been informed." He conveys the impression that there is something treasonable in your curiosity. He admits that it is very evident that she has been in a head-on collision with something. He tells you she went out laden with coal for the fleet. At the Cunard offices they say she did not carry coal.

"They ripped her interior fittings out with crowbars," they say at the Cunard offices. "They didn't have time to unscrew the mahogany veneering from the walls, although it had been designed expressly to facilitate the speedy transformation of the Aquitania into a ship of war. It will cost half a million dollars to replace."

One would think there would be a note of regret in the voice of the Cunarder who tells the story. There isn't. He takes the needless damage as a part of the fortunes of war. After all, the other losses on every side of his are so many and so great that he feels fortunate in that his ship was saved.

"My family has been in the lead business for four generations," an Englishman tells you. "Now I am losing $10,000 a month. In six months I shall be hopelessly bankrupt."

No "grouch" there. Just a plain statement of an undeniable fact.

At the beginning of the season the summer hotelkeepers along the eastern coast made a desperate effort to keep things going as usual. Most of these folk, and the smaller chaps who have boarding houses and garages, have their every penny invested in their business. Not many people went to the eastern coast resorts this summer. If the Germans ever do land on British shores, the landing will be on the eastern coast. There's a little man at Harwich who saved for 30 years his earnings as a butler, until this spring he opened a little "pub." To-day he is again working as butler for his old master, and his wife is in service as a lady's maid.

"Better luck next time," says this grey-haired butler, cheerily.

Britain's city streets are desolate. People do not come downtown when they have no money to spend. Her hunt clubs have either been disbanded, or the veterans are hunting on broken-winded hacks, in a valiant effort to keep the young dogs in hand. Her race meetings offer pitiful cards. Her ports are closed or empty and her wealthy folk are in too many cases living on their capital. God only knows how the poor folk live.

And yet no one complains. My guess is that one-half—perhaps three-fourths—of Britain's commerce outside of the bread and butter lines has been destroyed. And yet the dominant tone is that of complete satisfaction with the way in which the war is going, and placid refusal to believe that it could go any way but the right way. Contempt for the German is mingled with a condescending admission that the French have been fighting quite well—for Frenchmen. Even bad news only turns on the stream of recruiting for a little time, so sure is Britain that all will be well.

INDIGESTION, GAS OR SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Time "Pape's Diapepsin" In five Minutes all Stomach Misery is Gone.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvellous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who cannot get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Grey, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or grey; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

DETAILS OF THE KRUPP SIEGE GUN; HOW WORKERS KEPT KNOWLEDGE SECRET

(By Norman Draper in Collier's)

To the trust the Empire has placed in the horde of workers at Krupp's, which has been faithfully kept by them, many of the successes of the German army are undoubtedly due. Consider the new siege gun.

This ponderous weapon has been the one big surprise of the war in Europe. Its action and effect have startled every ordnance expert on the face of the earth. It has completely revolutionised the science of making war.

Nations have expended billions of dollars in construction of fortifications. The most expensive materials have been used. Cost was not considered. Men have made it their life's work to construct fortresses that were in their time considered impregnable. And as long ago as 1885, when the majority of the so-called modern fortifications before such cities as Liege and Namur were completed, they believed that that end had been attained.

The best of the fortifications scattered throughout Europe are constructed along similar lines. As an example, one of the Turkish forts on the Bosphorus was built from the identical plans used in the construction of one of the forts before Liege. Now money spent in erecting such forts is considered as good as lost. The day of the fortress has passed; the new siege gun is responsible for the passing.

MAKING THE DESTROYER IN SECRET.

It has been repeatedly asserted that no nation has any military secrets that are not in the possession of other important nations, but events have proved that this terrible weapon was most certainly an exception. Only a few high German army officials had heard of it. There are members of the Reichsrag who voted the money to construct the first gun who until this day are ignorant of its nature. The first one was built five years ago at Krupp's. It was tested on the proving grounds attached to the plant.

These grounds cover an area 4 kilometres in length and 2 kilometres in width. They are used for testing and experimenting in every kind of guns built at the Krupp plant, for tests on armour plates, deck plates, steel plates for the shields on the carriages of field guns, powder and various varieties of high-powered explosives, and for bursting trials of gun barrels and projectiles. In 1909, 35,000 rounds were fired at the Krupp proving grounds. Thousands of men were working there every day. And every day they saw the new siege gun being tested.

When, after a period of experimentation, it was determined that the gun was a success, other similar weapons were made and brought out for their tests. On some days as many as three of these gigantic weapons were being fired. Every employee of the plant knew something about the guns, and fifty thousand men at least have seen one or more of them in operation during the last five years. Each man, apparently, has held the secret in his breast as though it were his own.

A member of the Reichstag, in a Berlin newspaper of recent date, discussed the secrecy that surrounded the making of the siege gun as follows:

"The fact that the German army possessed such a gun was as much of a surprise to the Germans as to foreigners, for its construction and nature were kept secret, as the situation demanded, so that even in the Empire only a limited number knew about it. When the trials were finished and all was ready to begin the construction of the new gun, the problem presented itself of making this wonderful work of war without attracting attention.

"More than forty officers participated in the preliminary discussion over the preparation of the military budget for the consideration of the Budget Committee of the Reichstag. When the subject of arms was reached, the head of that department requested that this part of the budget be not debated at that time. At the close of the session he told me confidentially that a new siege gun was in consideration. The General Staff had, he said, urgently requested that not a word be said about the matter in the Budget Commission. Not even the officers, they declared, knew what was being done."

The Evolution of the Siege Gun.

In view of the important part this siege gun has been and is playing in this war and will play in all wars in the future, a description of it and its evolution is valuable. The first of these weapons turned out by the Krupp shops was of 11-inch bore and it was known as the 11-inch howitzer. When it was fired the recoil was so great that the gun was torn from its position and buried 100 feet away, where it buried half of itself in the earth. Ordnance experts of the German army, constantly on duty at the Krupp plant, accordingly set themselves to work to find out an effective method of reducing the recoil. Their efforts finally produced a pair of hydraulic tubes, which were placed along the barrel of the gun. A mixture of glycerine and water was prepared for the tubes, and the barrel of the gun was fitted to them in such a manner that the recoil was taken up by the glycerine and water as it was forced through a series of vents inside the tube the instant the gun was fired. Gravity forced the mixture to flow back to its first position after the recoil had been entirely taken up, where it was ready to absorb the shock of the next shot.

The recoil eliminated, vast possibilities were opened. The calibre of the gun was increased by three inches. With a 14-inch bore the gun was also a success. So the bore was increased. It then measured 16 inches—that is to say, the diameter of the inside of the barrel was 16 inches. But the rifle and its attachments were so heavy (they weigh 40 tons) that every time it was moved on its carriage, when the ground was damp, the wheels sank in several inches.

Prior to that time an officer in the Italian army had invented what the world now knows as caterpillar wheels. These were placed on the heavier pieces of field artillery belonging to the Italian army in order that the gun might be moved over swampy ground. The Germans accordingly adopted the Italian plan, and made caterpillar "feet" that could be attached to the wheels of carriages made to transport the big siege guns. In addition, many complete caterpillar wheels were made. The "feet," however, were different from those of the Italian caterpillar wheels in that they were constructed of a fibrous composition, reinforced with strips of steel. From that time on the siege guns could be dragged by horses or traction engines over any but the most marshy land in Europe.

Battle of the Aisne—Crossing the River.—Rifleman David Lloyd, of the King's Royal Rifle Corps, nowlying badly wounded in the Hospital, was one of the gallant band who crossed the Aisne, single file, over a plank bridge, while the Engineers were building a pontoon bridge. "I don't want to pretend," he said, "that I liked crossing that bridge with bullets almost as thick as hail all around, and shells bursting everywhere, but we got across somehow, though a lot of chaps fell into the water.

THE CZAR INCOGNITO

A Story Illustrating the Kindly Side of His Character

The Czar tells this story of his visit to Paris in 1896. He wanted to go to the Luxemburg, if possible, incognito, so a closed landau was provided, and the Czar, accompanied by one attendant, stepped in and drove off without an escort. Arrived at the Luxemburg the attendant got out of the carriage to make sure that a certain official was there to receive the Imperial visitor.

The Czar, left alone in the carriage, looked out of the open window at a ragged boy playing on the curb. Their eyes met and the youngster stared hard. He had never seen the Czar, but he had seen his photograph, and the likeness to this foreign-looking man in the carriage was certainly striking.

"Supposing it is Nicholas," he muttered, and he resolved to make sure of once. Stepping boldly up to the carriage he shouted in at the window, "How's the Empress?"

Picture his stupefaction—for he really thought he was only having a good joke—when the unknown foreigner replied with a smile:

"Thank you, the Empress is well, and we are both delighted with our visit to your beautiful city."

"Then," says the Czar in telling the story, "my true-born Parisian friend immediately lost his tongue, and started at me in astonishment. But after a few seconds' hesitation he raised his cap with a dignified flourish and stalked gravely away, his nose very much in the air."

TURN TO GOD TO STOP WAR

All Nations Have Cause for Self-Blame Says Correspondent

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—"Why did not God stop the war?" Reply, "God could not stop the war."

The above question and the reply, or their equivalents, are profanely uttered from those we expect better things of.

Will you, sir, kindly permit me space to quote a few well known verses from the book of books, which book ought to be the criterion of all teachers of righteousness?

In Isaiah, 9th chap., 6th verse, the prophet rings out the proclamation, "For unto us a child is born; unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulder, and his name shall be called Wonderful Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of His government there is no end."

In Matthew, 19th chap., 26th verse, Christ, when his disciples were amazed exceedingly to hear that a rich man shall hardly enter the kingdom of God, says to them, "with men this is impossible, but with God all things are possible."

In Jeremiah, 32 chap., 27 verse, we have: "Then came the word of the Lord and Jeremiah saying, "Behold I am the Lord, the God of all flesh; is there anything too hard for me?"

The Latin word "omnipotent" can only be to God. Omni—all, and potent—powerful. The all powerful. The term 'could not' has no place with the All Powerful.

Proverbs, 21 chap., 1st verse, says, "The king's heart is in the hand of the Lord; He turneth it whatsoever He will.

In Exodus, 7 chap., 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 verses, is displayed that with that man's hearts may be actuated by God, to do as he pleases, the Lord said unto Moses, "See, I have made thee a God to Pharoah, and Aaron thy brother shall speak unto Pharoah, that he send the children of Israel out of his land. And I will harden Pharoah's heart, and multiply My signs and My wonders in the land of Egypt. But Pharoah shall not hearken unto you that I may lay my hand upon Egypt and bring forth Mine armies and My people, the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt by great judgments. And the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord, when I stretch forth My hand upon Egypt and bring forth the children of Israel among them."

It was no wonder then God, the omnipotent, should take this method after Pharoah's insolence to God's messengers, Moses and Aaron, who were instructed by the Lord God of Israel to go to Pharaoh and to say, "Let my people go that they may hold a feast with me in the wilderness," Pharaoh said, "Who is the Lord that I should obey His voice to let Israel go? I know not the Lord; neither will I let Israel go."

In the long run Pharaoh [illegible] let God's people go, but it was at a great cost. God will be glorified, no matter what men may say or think.

In Daniel, 4th chap., 16th verse, we find concerning King Nebuchadnezzar in his vision, these words, "Let his heart be changed from man's and let a beast's heart be given unto him." (verse 22). "All this came upon King Nebuchadnezzar, (verse 28.) At the end of twelve months he walked in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon (29th verse), the king spake and said, "Is not this great Babylon that I have built for the house of the kingdom, by the might of my power and for the honour of my majesty, (31st verse). While the word was in his mouth there fell a voice from heaven saying, "Oh, King Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken, the kingdom is departed from thee (32 verse). And they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field; they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and seven times shall pass over thee until thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whosoever He will. The same hour the thing was fulfilled; (verse 33).

"At the end of the days, I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes into heaven, and mine understandings returned unto me, and I blessed the Most High, and I praised and honoured Him that liveth for ever and ever, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion and his kingdom is from generation to generation. And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing, and he doeth according to His will in the armies of Heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth, and none can stay His hand. For I say unto him, what doest thou?"

Nebuchadnezzar then tells that he was restored in his kingdom and excellent majesty was added to him. He says, "Now I praise and honour the King of Heaven, all whose works are truth, and His ways judgment, and those that walk in pride He is able to abase."

In 1st Samuel, 10th chap., 6th verse, Samuel tells Saul, "And the spirit of the Lord will come upon thee and thou shalt prophesy with them and shalt be turned to another man (9th verse). And it was so, when he turned to go from Samuel, God gave him another heart.

God is the same God still. There is no change in His character, or attributes. He can change men's hearts to-day just the same. How people can take out that He is not responsible for ruling of the nations is a puzzle. If the nations violate God's laws, there need there be any wonder that He visit us with the sword, or famine or pestilence?

Some years back, our Sabbaths have been kept holy as commanded. The Sabbath on the continent was practically kept as a holiday for pleasure seeking. God has borne long and patiently, but He has agencies for retirement. He can create the war-lord to destroy.

If the nations look no farther than the Kaiser for the cause of war, they will not see but the poor hard-used Kaiser, but if the nations of the earth examine themselves in their relation to God's laws, there will be found cause for self blame, and they will cry to God, 'Turn us and we shall be turned."

If the nations turn to God with all their heart, God can easily stop the war.

The sermons of to-day contain little or no warning to the wicked to escape hell. One, indeed, seldom hears repentance and sorrow for sin preached, and consequently do we see the fruit of repentance. There was a time when the burden of prayer in the House of God was that of pleading for an outpouring of God's Holy Spirit to quicken dead souls. Seldom is it that God's Spirit is asked at all. People can pray without it.

The Word of God is now getting a back seat. People do not carry their Bibles to God's house. Fancy bags take their place. A very little of the Bible is read. Indeed a very little goes a long way.

How souls "twice born" can live with so little spiritual diet is marvellous. No marvel that their spirituality is at a low ebb.

The sincere milk of the word for spiritual growth is rare. We get our spiritual food so adulterated that many of us are starving.

Regeneration now—if it be regeneration—is not seemingly as it used to be. It used to mean a new creation, a new heart, a thirsting after God, an entire change in the life of the individual, praying without ceasing was its fruit.

In 1st Corinthians, 6th chap., 9th and 10th verses, we find Paul speaks to sinners classified, according to their besetting sins, but in the 11th verse he says, "And such were some of you, but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus and by the Spirit of God." No mere patch work, but wholly clean—united to Christ.

We need ministers at a white heat on a fire of love for perishing souls. Ministers who will spend hours on their knees at God's throne pleading for a revival of His own work by an outpouring of His Holy Spirit. Till then, the question remains, "Can these dry bones live;" God has promised to give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him.

I wonder how many in this city pray in the closet for their minister to be enabled to break to them their spiritual bread on the Sabbath.

Today we enter the sanctuary tolerating music more like a week-day entertainment than anything else, and we have to march out with a like accompaniment, thus giving room to the enemy of souls to cause them to forget the Gospel message. In St. Mark's Gospel, chap. 4th, 15th verse, Christ explaining his parable of the sower, says: "And these are they by the wayside where the word is sown, but when they have heard, Satan cometh immediately and taketh away the word that was sown in their heart."

When the word of God is read, instead of prayer after it, we have to listen to a display of the art of singing, certainly of no mean order, but does God require this of our hand. "The sacrifice of a broken and a contrite heart,' we know for sure, that He is pleased with that.

I am convinced that no change of any value will be effected on corrupt man or woman in his or her depraved state, in Adam, excepting that brought about by God's own divine word and His Holy Spirit, crowned by His own intercession at God's right hand, whose word is, "And I if I be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto me."

THE HOLIDAY SEASON

In everything give thanks.

Are there some so lonely that they look forward with a great dread to this holiday? An old lady was heard frequently to say, "I always dread—and have dreaded for many years—the holiday season, because I miss so much the ones that are absent." It hurt to hear her say it, to think that a great shadow should have lingered for such a long time what to most of us is a glad time.

One wondered, if she thought of all the joys in her own life, might she not have had strength to dwell on them more than on the sorrows? There never is a time so dark and so sad, but God sends some help and some comfort. But if we do not try to notice them, we will pass them by altogether, and then in the heart of our sorrow feel so grief-smitten that we have no heart for thanksgiving.

Then there is ever the thought that we must remember others. Is it right to sadden them through our grief? A mother of several little ones lost her husband. Now they are all grown, but she is still in black. Has that been quite fair to those children all these years? Would their father have wished it?

Also there are always other lonely ones. We can surely find some to whom we can take comfort and solace. Or if the day is to be a lonely one, invite them to our homes. In the preparation for their reception and in our pleasure in their pleasure, some of the joy and thankfulness of the day must enter our own sore hearts.

Then we must not forget the word "everything." That, to the crushed and bruised heart seems an impossibility. But the everything means the sorrow and the grief, as well as the joy and gladness.

In a few years we may understand "why" and can thank Him with a full heart just as we can now for some of the griefs of past years.

Also if we have not passed through the deep waters of great sorrow and suffering, we can not sympathise with and comfort others as they need.

So at this season of Thanksgiving, in spite of national or personal grief, we must thank our loving Father for His good and tender mercy, which has been for ages past and will be for the ages to come.—I.H.N.

—Farm and Dairy

IN speaking of "Woman's Work on the Farm," we are dealing with a difficult problem for reasons that are obvious—lack of help, lack of convenience, and lack of consideration of the husband.

In the ordinary routine of housework, a woman has all the work she ought to do. So we are convinced beyond the most sanguine reasoning that she should neither be expected nor asked to do outside work, as milking, separating, attending to poultry, carrying wood or water. We would also suggest that such wages be paid hired men that they can board elsewhere, leaving it possible for the family on the farm to have more "Home Life."

A woman's duty to her husband and children does not mean that her individuality be so stunted by conditions that she becomes a mere machine, losing interest in things that make life worth while. By equality of consideration along many lines, a woman's work and life on the farm would be ideal.—Anonymous by request.

FLY'S CREAM BALM OPENS CLOGGED NOSTRILS AND HEAD—CATARRH GOES

Instantly Clears Air Passages; You Breathe Freely, Nasty Discharge Stops, Head Colds and Dull Headache Vanish.

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; [illegible] morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake to-night struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith — just once — in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Reversal

A Love Story of Wealth and Poverty

By F. A. MITCHEL

Edward Ferguson was a very good fellow, but all good fellows have their faults, and Ned has his. His father was at the head of the firm of Ferguson & Co. and understood to be rich. At any rate, he and his family lived in fine style. Ned way to take his father's place at the head of the firm and was looked upon as an excellent catch by all the young girls of his acquaintance. He could have married any one of several with a fortune in her own right.

This he would have liked to do, for he was ambitious to take a high position in the world—that is, such a position as great wealth brings—but unfortunately he fell in love with a girl who could not aid him in this respect. Marcia Fosdick was the daughter of a man who was a born experimenter. He had tried so many experiments and failed so many times that whenever he launched a new scheme it was dubbed another of Fosdick's follies.

Ned must either relinquish the plan of adding to his prospective fortune by marriage or suffer and cause Marcia to suffer, for the affair between them was mutual. I have said that he was a good fellow. He showed it by giving up so much of his ambition as pertained to an addition to his fortune by marriage. I have said that he had his faults. The way he showed one of them was this:

He wished Marcia to appreciate the sacrifice he was making in marrying a girl who could not aid him in his desire for that power which wealth is capable of giving. But how could he transmit a statement of the fact to her? It was a very delicate matter for him to handle. He was a much better writer than talker. In a letter he could say just what he wanted to say and no more; in speech he did not express himself well and was apt to say too much. It occurred to him to make his formal declaration to Marcia in a note. Under cover of this greatest compliment a man can pay, a woman he might impart the fact that he had resigned one of several fortunes for her. This, instead of making him appear to honor her by marrying her, would show that he loved her better than worldly goods.

He wrote a number of notes, trying his best to give this impression, but do what he would an appearance of condescension on his part would crop out among his most carefully chosen words. He laid the letters aside and in a few days read them over, choosing the one that he considered smacked the least of honoring the girl he was asking to be his wife. But to another it would certainly not have been so. Also of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. Salts and other harsh mineral purgatives irritate the delicate lining of the bowels. MARCIA FOSDICK RECEIVED A LETTER.

proposal, for every one knows that a lover must be nothing more than a beggar.

Ferguson laid the letter on his writing desk in his room, intending to post it the next morning when he went to business. But before leaving in the morning he read it over and concluded not to send it till his return in the evening. He put it in an unaddressed envelope and locked it up. During the day he had a good deal of business correspondence with parties in San Francisco about a matter that occupied his whole attention. On returning to his home in the evening he took out the letter with the intention of reading it again, but, being ashamed of his vacillation, refrained. Addressed it, sealed it and after dinner took it out and put it in the letter box.

When several days had passed and he received no reply to his proposal he began to worry. Could it be that, after all, the letter had appeared to Marcia as if he considered himself altogether too good for her? Every day after that added to his unrest, and when a week had passed and he received no answer he was completely demoralized. Then followed periods of sensitive fear, calculation, shame and pride. Why could he not have gone to see Marcia and said simply, "I love you—be my wife?"

Instead of taking a train and going a dozen miles to the suburban town where Marcia lived and having it out with her he undertook to analyze her feelings on receiving his note. He could see her lip curl on reading his so called delicate reference to what he had given up for her. Then he fancied her indignantly tearing the note into little bits and tossing them into the wastebasket.

Instead of going to Marcia and throwing himself on her mercy he listened to the dictates of pride. A man, he argued, conscious of right, of superiority, defers to a woman. She receives his deference and appreciates it as homage. But let him beg forgiveness for a wrong he has done her and he will only add to her contempt for him.

This reasoning decided him to stand on his dignity. He would await some word from Marcia if it killed him. It certainly were on him dreadfully. He had been used to calling on her at least once or twice during each month. They seldom met except when he called upon her, for she seldom came to the city, and when she did there was a very slight probability of their passing each other. However, a couple of months after Ned had written his proposal they did meet in a crowded street. Marcia passed him with a constrained bow.

One day Ned's father fell and was picked up unconscious. He never spoke again and died within two days. Ned now became the head of Ferguson & Co. and began his administration of its affairs by making a thorough investigation as to its finances. One reason for his overhauling its accounts was that he had noticed shortly before his father's death that he had appeared worried, and it was suspected that the cause had brought on the stroke that had resulted in his death. What was Edward Ferguson's surprise to find that his father had been engaged in speculations that had caused an enormous gap in the firm's finances. Had he lived he would have been obliged to face a failure within a very short time.

There was nothing to do but for Ned to wind up the affairs of the concern. Fortunately he was not a member of the firm and was not loaded with its debts. But now, instead of thinking for the power that wealth gives, his only ambition was to pay the debts left by his father.

While Ned was awakening from a dream of wealth, Marcia Fosdick was awakening from a dream of poverty. Her father had at last struck a scheme that paid him very largely. He had invented an attachment for an automobile which sooner or later all such machines must have. He was selling the right to use it to all manufacturers, and his royalties were already considerable.

Ned Ferguson saw in the newspapers an account of the invention and the change it made in Marcia's affairs. When he had written that condescending letter he was rich and she was poor. Now the conditions were reversed. He had lost his fortune and the girl he loved. He did not expect a continuance of the favors he had received from any of the wealthy girls he might have married. They were quite sympathetic, but none of them gave him any further encouragement.

One morning Marcia Fosdick received a letter postmarked San Francisco. Withdrawing it from the envelope, she found two letters. One was from a lady whom she had met several times socially, who said: "The inclosed has been going the rounds of this state for a long while and has finally come under my notice. I think it must be intended for you. At any rate, I send it to you."

The moment Marcia saw the address on the inclosure, covered with stamped finger pointers, "try this" and "try that place," she recognized Ned Ferguson's handwriting.

Ferguson came home one evening with a heavy heart. He had placed the affairs of Ferguson & Co. in liquidation and had offered the family home for sale. He found a letter in the hall awaiting him and, taking it up, saw at once that it was from Marcia. He opened it and read it:

Your lovely letter was only received this morning after having traveled all over the state of California. I regret that it did not come to me in time to show you how deeply I have felt for you from the moment I heard of your affliction and misfortune. I give you all the consolation I can—my own unworthy self.

Ferguson stood dazed. In an instant the fabric he had built up about his relations with Marcia Fosdick had collapsed. He had nothing to fear from her on account of his condescension in offering to marry her. But the fact that he had so considered it came down upon him with sledgehammer force. Singular it is that, while he had then considered her poverty a barrier between them, he now considered her affluence is the same light.

However, Marcia Fosdick had no desire for anything more than the comfort and comparative independence that wealth can give. She loved Ned Ferguson with her whole heart, and she would accept no withdrawal of his proposal.

Ferguson often thinks of the day that he wrote his proposal and was corresponding with parties in California at the same time. He blesses the fact that the two fell together and an interval elapsed between the writing of the note and its reply. What occurred during that interval doubtless gave him an acceptance instead of a refusal.

EDISON'S INTEREST IN WAR.

Explained by Fact That He Has Son-in-law in German Army.

WEST ORANGE, N.J., Oct. 28.—The secret reason for Thomas A. Edison's quiet but deep interest in the present European conflict became known to-day when it was learned that the husband of his daughter, Major Carl Oeser, is at the front with the German army.

He has been in the army for a number of years and is an official in the ordnance department. He is also an expert electrician and for a time was assistant chief of the electro-mechanical department of the German army.

PORT ARTHUR, Oct. 29.—Don. Hogarth, M.P.P. for Port Arthur, will go with the second contingent as a lieutenant of transport.

Donald McDonald Hogarth has been a member of the Legislature since 1911. He was born at Osceola, Ont., in 1879, was educated at the Mattawa Public School, and is in the real estate business. He is a Conservative and a Presbyterian. (Hogarth will be remembered by Peterborough lacrosse fans. He played with the local team one season.)

Rev. Mr. Tolmie, the Windsor clergyman, who was elected to the Legislature in the last election, has also volunteered for the war in the capacity of chaplain.

URIC ACID IN SPRING

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the muscles and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

For erecting posters in otherwise inaccessible places there has been invented a gun that shoots a nail carrying a rolled poster against a wooden surface, the poster unrolling and displaying itself.

Belgium A Land of Woe

Millions Face Starvation in a Ravished Country—People Wander From Town to Town and Even Nobility Are in Want

A PITIFUL STORY

BRUSSELS, Monday, via London, 4.05 p.m.—Nearly 7,000,000 persons in Belgium face famine unless they receive help from the outside at once. The American Minister to Belgium, Mr. Brand Whitlock, says that less than two weeks' supply of food remains in the cities, while conditions in the country districts are even worse. Though Germany has seized the food in some cities for her soldiers she still disclaims responsibility for feeding the Belgians.

Mr. Whitlock has had only peasant's black bread for two weeks and the supply of that is short. One hundred soup kitchens are feeding more than one hundred thousand of the needy in Brussels. Families formerly wealthy are discharging their servants because they are bankrupt. Noblemen may be seen slipping into the soup kitchens.

The factories are closed. Many stores are being operated, but the railway train service has been suspended. The supplies of coffee, tea, flour, rye and salt are practically exhausted.

Reports received by Mr. Whitlock from Louvain, Liege and Namur declare that the conditions in those cities are even worse than they are in Brussels. Louvain has only a four days' supply of flour, while Liege has no flour at all. The peasants in many districts have been forced to exist on legumes, as the crops of beets and cabbages have been ruined. The meat and milk supplies also have been cut off, the army having taken the cattle.

Victims Wander Aimlessly.

It is declared, absolutely essential that food be obtained from England and it is hoped that the first shipment is now on the water.

Nearly half of the people who have been able to remain in Belgium are wandering helplessly from town to town seeking shelter with friends and relatives. Mechlin, which formerly had sixty thousand inhabitants, has but few unflamaged houses standing. The same situation exists at Namur and Louvain.

The road from Antwerp to Brussels is black with processions of people moving in either direction. Waggons and carts are filled with the wreckage of their household effects. Thousands on foot are carrying bundles or pushing day carts always moving, but with no definite destination.

Other crowds are gathered about the ruins of forts and rifle pits, staring blankly at mounds that are covered with withered flowers and surmounted by wooden crosses upon which the helmets of dead Germans have been placed to mark their graves.

Belgians of all classes appear disheartened. Aged women and cripples may be seen sitting near their shattered homes in Mechlin nodding vacantly at the Cathedral, with its Belgians of all classes appear disheartened beyond repair by shell fire.

Similar conditions are found in the small villages between Antwerp and shattered windows and tottering walls attempting to reestablish their homes find their roofs, which have been pierced by shells, no protection from the rain that is now falling every day. The villages that stood near contested forts were razed, yet many of the inhabitants have returned and are living in rudely constructed shacks or tents.

In Brussels the sides of buildings and billboards are plastered with German military notices, printed in French, German and Flemish. The streets are filled with German soldiers and marines. The automobiles of the officers, carrying buglers to warn pedestrians, are dashing in all directions. The city is quiet. All the shops and houses are closed at nine o'clock at night, though the buildings are brightly lighted.

By an official order there have been posted throughout the country the names of Belgians and Britishers who have been sentenced from a month to one year's imprisonment for insults offered to German soldiers. Others are warned to obey the military orders and also advised that the Germans have no intention of seizing non-combatants. The Germans are paying for everything obtained in stores, the German commandant having requested that he be furnished with the names of any soldiers who commandeered bicycles and fod.

A ROCHESTER MAN'S IDEA OF FATHERLAND

Carl Lomb, of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, is back home from the war zone in Europe. But his Peerless automobile is not. That is because the well-known Rochester lensmaker and banker donated his car to the Fatherland. The machine is now being used to carry wounded soldiers from the front of the firing line under the Red Cross flag.

Mr. Lomb donated his $5,000 car as soon as he found out that Germany was going to be involved in a war that would tax not only the resources of its people, but the loyalty of their sons and daughters in other lands. He had just arrived in the old town in Germany where his parents live. That was Hanau, in Prussia, and Mr. Lomb had been taking his relatives out to ride in the big touring car which he had brought across from America, when the word came that war was declared. The offer of the car was immediately accepted and there came from the commandant of the post-division in which Mr. Lomb was then, cordial thanks for the gift.

But in consideration of the fact that Mr. Lomb is an American and that this country would assuredly declare an absolute neutrality, the German government decided that Mr. Lomb's handsome car should be used only in Red Cross work.

The car is now at the front in this mission. With it are also Mr. Lomb's best wishes, for the success of the Red Cross relief—and for the success of the Kaiser in this war.

Mr. Lomb refuses to quote. He believes that the stories printed in the American papers, anti-German in character, are far more atrocious than any real atrocities the German army has committed. Also he believes that Germany is not only going to win this war, but has won a big part of it already.—Rochester Post Express.

AN AIRSHIP SIGHTED.

NORWOOD, Oct. 29. — Reports reached town during the week from several persons in this district, that an airship had been sighted in the southern sky. Attention was drawn to the flying machine, by the strong searchlight it possessed. Mr. John Kelly, of Cottesloe, and Mr. J. Preston, of Asphodel, were among those who saw it.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

The Arrest and Trial of Jesus, Matt. xxvi:47-68.

Golden Text—As a lamb that is led to the slaughter, and as a sheep that before its shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth. Isa. liii:7.

1. Verses 47-50—Which is the master mission of the average man, love or money or loyalty to his friends?

2. What base and cruel things are men doing to-day through the love of money?

3. Why could not the chief priests have arrested Jesus without the aid of Judas, and thus have saved their money?

4. Verse 51—Who was it that struck at the servant of the high priest, with his sword, and cut off his ear, and why did he do it?

5. Was Peter's act blameworthy or praiseworthy, and why?

6. Jesus at one period forbade them to carry anything to protect themselves, but just about this time he verses this instruction, and commands them to buy swords; (see Luke xxii:36) what did he intend them for?

7. Verse 52—Was Jesus' condemnation of Peter for using the sword, meant for general application, or to apply to this particular circumstance only? Why?

8. What gracious and merciful deed did Jesus do to the servant of the high priest, and what did it indicate?

9. Why did not this miracle soften the hearts of the priests toward Jesus?

10. Verse 53—How many are twelve legions of angels and why did Jesus not summon them to his aid?

11. Where was this great company of angels that were subject to the bidding of Jesus?

12. Is there any evidence and if so, what, that all the other sons of God have equal angelic protection?

13. Verse 54 — Does Jesus here mean to say that the Jews were forced to reject him, and that it was a necessary cross, or what is his meaning?

14. Verses 55-56 — According to the fourth gospel, about how long had Jesus "sat daily" teaching in the temple, and why did they not then arrest him?

15. Was the action of the disciples in leaving Jesus to his fate, prudence or cowardice, and why?

16. Verses 57-61—Was it right for a judge then, or has it ever been right since, to seek for witnesses to convict a prisoner?

17. What does it indicate that these judges not only sought for witnesses, but for men who would perjure themselves in order to convict Jesus?

18. What did the two witnesses referred to testify, and wherein was it false? (See John ii:19.)

19. Verses 62-64—Why would Jesus not answer these false witnesses?

20. What answer did Jesus make to the question of the high priest, and what did it mean as to his divinity?

21. Verses 65-66 — For what crime did they finally condemn Jesus to death?

22. Verses 67-68 — With the power that Jesus had, what was it that caused him to bear all their insults and cruelty?

A HAPPY CHILD IN JUST A FEW HOURS

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

UNITED STATES GET BIG WAR ORDERS.

Those in Chicago and Vicinity Total Nearly $6,000,000.

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—To date it is said that foreign orders for clothing, trucks, harness, tinned meats, and the like in the Chicago and neighbouring markets amount to between seven and eight million dollars.

Purchasing agents of the British and French Governments are in the field, and the former has $3,000,000 gold in a local bank to be used against purchases. The meat packers are said to have enough European orders on hand to keep them running full time for a year.

William G. Bruce, secretary of the Wisconsin Manufacturers' Association, is authority for the statement that knitting mills of that state are swamped with military orders.

Coarse fur coats, harness, shoes, and light tonnage auto trucks, are among other Wisconsin commodities being sold abroad, he said.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

THE J. M. GREENE CO., are pleased to announce, that after several years experience, handling the different makes of talking machines and watching the evolution that took place in the production and perfection of these marvelous musical instruments, we have arrived at the conclusion that the New Edison Diamond Disc is by far the greatest triumph yet produced in a sound reproducing instrument, and have decided to handle the Edison goods exclusively, convinced that our patrons will receive more real satisfaction and pleasure from the use of the Edison Diamond Disc or Cylinder Machines than from any other we could sell them. We thoroughly believe this move is the best not only for our own interests but for those of our patrons. We must believe in the goods we sell before we recommend them to our customers, and to the Edison Diamond Disc Cabinet Machines and Amberolas, we can give our unqualified endorsement in every case. Sound reproduction by the Diamond Disc Machines is undoubtedly far superior to all previous achievements of Mr. Edison. No more record changing. The reproduction point is a genuine diamond that never wears out and requires no changing. The Edison Diamond Disc Machines are bound to be the choice of discriminating music lovers in the end, thus we are following our principle—to offer the best only.

PUT WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL

WITH the advent of our selection of the Edison goods exclusively, we want to give every home in Peterboro' and District a special opportunity to instal one of these magnificent instruments, whether they already have an Edison instrument of older style, or a talking machine of any other make already in the home or not. In case you have an instrument, which no doubt you have enjoyed in the past because it was good at the time you bought it, we will gladly take it as part payment on a New Edison Diamond Disc Amberola or Cabinet Machine, and make a liberal allowance for it. The balance we will arrange on the easiest possible terms of payment. Where there is no instrument of the kind in the home at present we will be pleased to place the instrument you may select from our splendid stock, in your house for a two or three days' demonstration, and in case of purchase can make the terms of payment most favourable and easy for anyone to handle. This Free Demonstration will put you under no obligation to buy whatever but is following out of the wish of Mr. Edison the great inventor, to see "an Edison in every home in Canada."

FREE DEMONSTRATION IN OUR TALKING MACHINE PARLOURS AT ANY TIME. LET US SHOW YOU.

BALKAN STATES MAY ALL BE INVOLVED

SWEEPING GAINS ARE MADE BY THE ALLIES IN BATTLE IN NORTH

Belgians Cut Dykes, Flooding the Country--British Repulse With Very Heavy Loss to the Enemy an Attack at Labassee and Allies Advance at Ypres and at Other Points on the Long Line.

Examiner Special:

PARIS, October 30.—Sweeping claims of substantial gains by the allies in the battleground in the north featured this afternoon's three o'clock communique. The Belgians, it was stated, have cut the dykes and flooded the regions of the lower Yser. Following this up with a violent cannonading from both the French and the Belgian entrenchments, the Germans have been forced to retreat well to the north.

The allies are also declared to be advancing in the vicinity of Ypres. The Germans essayed a violent counter attack against the British in the vicinity of Labassee, but were repulsed after some hand to hand fighting, in which the losses were very heavy. The British at the end of this fight were able to re-occupy ground previously ceded. The German losses in this fighting are said to have been very large. At all other points, the statement says, the French are advancing.

PARIS, October 30.—Reports from the fighting line along the French front received here to-day say that with the arrival of German reinforcements the fighting in the north is again very severe. The Germans are continuing their efforts to break through the Dixmunde-Nieport barrier, and also north of Ypres. The British are being hard pressed in the territory between Lille and Armentieres, and additional reinforcements have been sent to that point. Severe fighting is also in progress along the entire French front and at parts of the centre, and it is stated here that the Germans are being slowly driven back upon Metz.

the Servian-Russian troops operating in Bukowina, have again defeated the Austrians and have re-occupied Czernowitz, the capital of that Crown land. It is also stated that the general situation both in Galicia and Russian Poland, continues to improve from a Russian standpoint.

OTTAWA, October 30.—The Government has under consideration the accommodation in Canada of one thousand Belgian refugees, who are nearly all of the farming class, and who could be placed economically on Canadian farms, and will be welcomed. The details of the suggested scheme have not yet been worked out.

Russia Welcomes Turkey's Entrance Into the Theatre of War and Troops That Have Been Held in Reserve for This Purpose Will Be Used at Once--Roumania and Bulgaria Are Expected to Attack Turkey--Russian Merchant Vessel is Sunk by a German Cruiser

PETROGRAD, OCT. 30.—RUSSIA HAS ACCEPTED TURKEY'S PARTICIPATION IN THE WAR IN ENTHUSIASTIC FASHION. HIGH GOVERNMENTAL OFFICIALS TO-DAY DECLARED THAT THE CZAR AND HIS ADVISORS WELCOME THE OPPORTUNITY TO SETTLE FOR ALL TIME THE ENTIRE TURKISH QUESTION ALREADY STEPS HAVE BEEN TAKEN TO MEET THE SITUATION. ORDERS HAVE BEEN SENT TO THE BLACK SEA FLEET TO SEARCH OUT AND DESTROY THE TURKISH SQUADRONS NOW OPERATING AGAINST THE CRIMEA AND CAUCASIAN PORTS. AT THE SAME TIME TROOPS, WHICH HAVE BEEN HELD IN READINESS FOR THIS EXPECTED EVENT WILL MOVE SHORTLY. NO OFFICIAL DECLARATION OF WAR HAS BEEN RECEIVED HERE AS YET, ACCORDING TO HIGH OFFICIALS. COMMUNICATION WITH CONSTANTINOPLE HAS BEEN INTERRUPTED, AND NO WORD HAS BEEN RECEIVED FROM THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY TO TELL WHETHER THE AMBASSADOR AND HIS STAFF HAVE BEEN HANDED THEIR PASSPORTS. DESPATCHES FROM THEM, HOWEVER, ARE MOMENTARILY EXPECTED.

AT THE BRITISH EMBASSY HERE IT WAS STATED THAT THERE CAN BE LITTLE DOUBT NOW THAT THE ENTIRE BALKANS WILL BE INVOLVED IN THE WAR. BULGARIA AND ROUMANIA, IT IS STATED, MUST NOW DECIDE WHETHER THEY WILL ATTEMPT TO CONTINUE AN UNPOPULAR NEUTRALITY OR WILL SEIZE THE OPPORTUNITY TO AT ONCE AND FOR ALL, END TURKEY IN EUROPE AS A NATION. THE OFFICIALS HERE BELIEVE THAT BOTH ROUMANIA AND BULGARIA WILL STRIKE AGAINST TURKEY IN THE IMMEDIATE FUTURE. TWO DESTROYERS, FLYING THE TURKISH FLAG, SHELLED THE OUTER HARBOUR AT ODESSA, SINKING A RUSSIAN MERCHANT STEAMER. IT IS DECLARED AT THE WAR OFFICE THAT GERMANY HAS CALLED ON TURKEY IN THE HOPE THAT A DEMONSTRATION BY THE TURKISH ARMY AND NAVY WILL RELIEVE THE PRESSURE ON THE AUSTRO-GERMAN ARMIES IN GALICIA AND ALONG THE EAST PRUSSIAN BORDER. IT IS STATED HERE THAT THE GERMANS HAVE NOT ONLY BEEN ROUTED IN THE FIGHTING ALONG THE VISTULA, BUT THAT A LARGE PART OF THE GERMAN ARMY, WHICH INVADED RUSSIAN POLAND, HAS ACTUALLY BEEN CUT OFF FROM ITS BASE AND IS IN DANGER OF BEING ENTIRELY ANNIHILATED. THE REALIZATION OF THIS, IT IS BELIEVED HERE, FORCED GERMANY'S HAND AND SHE WAS COMPELLED TO BRING TURKEY INTO THE WAR IMMEDIATELY, ALTHOUGH SHE HAD HOPED TO KEEP HER AS A RESERVE TO BE CALLED ON EARLY NEXT SPRING.

OPTIMISM NOW RULES SUPREME IN MILITARY CIRCLES IN FRANCE

Official Reports Are Told of Substantial Gains for Allies Although Wintry Weather Has Interfered With Operations--Losses in Past Two Weeks Have Been Very Heavy.

Examiner Special:

PARIS, October 30.—Optimism ruled supreme in military circles today. The official reports from the fighting front all told of substantial gains for the allies. At no point apparently are the Germans able to make headway, and the fighting has materially slackened. This is due to the failure of German reinforcements who have reached the front to participate in the fighting as yet, but it is believed that they are now planning a new assault not only in the north in the territory between Lille and Armentieres, but also on the right wing from Alsace-Lorraine. Wintry conditions interfered with the operations considerably today. It is reported in the snowcovering in the Vosges and in part of the Meuse district, while a mixture rain is falling elsewhere in the Meuse and the Argonnes. The losses of the past fortnight have been staggering. While the figures are withheld it is certain that the allies lost upwards of 50,000 in that period, killed, wounded and prisoners. Reports received here place the German losses at from three to four times that number. The entire front of the battle line is covered with unburied bodies. The many small villages that extend from Dixmunde to Nieuport have been completely obliterated. Only a few houses have been left in Dixmunde and the streets of the city are littered with the dead; similar conditions prevail everywhere through the territory over which the battle was fought.

LONDON, October.—As was expected, Lord Fisher was this afternoon gazetted to be the First Lord of the Admiralty to succeed Prince Louis of Battenburg. He is known as "The Kitchener of the Navy" and was the creator of the British battle fleet of today.

TOKIO, October 30.—Official advices received here today since the committee when the cruiser Emden sank the Russian cruiser Jemtchug in the harbour of Penang, at two officers and 95 Russian sailors killed, and many wounded. Japanese cruisers were sent in pursuit but have failed to locate the Emden, which is now threatening the rich eastern trade routes.

LONDON, October 30.—Colonel Conrad Britz, who has been engaged in suppressing the rebellion started by Lt.-Col. Maritz in Northwest Cape Province, reports that the invasion of the Cape has finally and permanently been broken according to a Capetown despatch to the Reuters' Telegraph Company.

PETROGRAD, October 30.—In the highest official circles here it is said that Russia views the action of Turkey as infinitely more important to England than to Russia on account of the English communications with India and her position in Egypt. It is pointed out that the allies had previously guaranteed the integrity of Turkey only if she remained neutral.

FIRST OF THE CANADIANS TO DIE IN ACTION

Montreal Chauffeur Who Went Over With the First Contingent is Killed at Lille

SHELL STRUCK CAR

Examiner Special:

MONTREAL, Oct. 30.—William Cockhill, of Montreal, was killed at Lille, in France, while in active service. Messages to that effect were received here yesterday. Cockhill had ben a chauffeur in the employ of Sir Frederick Williams Taylor (formerly of Peterborough), and went with the Canadian Overseas Expeditionary Force, having joined the mechanical transport section of the army service corps as driver. The majority of this part of the contingent at once proceeded to the continent and joined the allied army to serve on the transport section. At Lille, a shot struck the car Cockhill was handling, and the gas tank exploded, the driver being instantly killed. A sister received official notification of the death of Cockhill. He was married two days previous to his departure from Montreal.

OTTAWA, Oct. 30.—Militia authorities here say that while the death of Chauffeur Wm. Cockhill at Lille, France, indicates that some, if not all the auto experts enlisted with the First Canadian Contingent are already at the front, it is not likely that any Canadian units are there yet, except the Mechanical Transport Corps.

WILL LEAVE FOR KINGSTON ON TUESDAY

Orders Received by 57th Quota Yesterday—Twenty-Three Recruits Needed to Complete the Squad

DRILLING EVERY DAY

The 57th quota for the second Canadian contingent will leave for the divisional headquarters at Kingston on Tuesday morning next per special C.P.R. train. Word to this effect was received yesterday by Major Walker, and was joyfully heard by the men, who are anxious to get away. Unless further orders are received the squad will wear civilian clothes, receiving a complete service outfit on their arrival at Kingston. No doubt the enthusiastic scenes that attended the departure of the first contingent will be duplicated on Tuesday morning.

For the last few days the squad has been hard at work in the armouries under the direction of Sergt. Instructor Dunkerley. They parade daily at 2 p.m. and are given three hours' strenuous drilling in which the army "setting up" drill is a feature. Already an improvement in the marching and general deportment of the men can be seen and the 57th's second contribution to the overseas forces can be depended upon to follow the example of the first contingent, who made a name for themselves at Valcartier camp.

The quota is not yet complete and intending recruits are asked to present themselves at the armouries tonight or to-morrow night for medical inspection. The roll will be closed to-morrow night, so that candidates will have to hurry up. About twenty recruits are needed.

CATTARO IS EXPECTED TO GIVE IN SOON

Combined Bombardment of Austrian Sea Port Has Been Successful in Its Effect

THE TURKISH SITUATION

Special Cable to The Examiner:

CETTINJE, Oct. 30.—It is officially announced here that the fortifications of Cattaro have ben practically annihilated by the combined bombardment from land and sea. Fort Warmata has been almost totally destroyed, its casements and cupolas being reported in fragments. Fort Lustica is also badly battered, and the surrender of the post is expected very soon.

WILL DEMAND PASSPORTS.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Advices from Petrograd say that the Russian ambassador to Turkey has been instructed to demand his passports and to leave Constantinople at once. At the same time the entire consular representatives of Russia in Turkey are recalled.

BROWNING CLUB MET

The "Browning" club met last night at the Y.W.C.A., with 20 members present. Mr. Morris conducted the study, in part, of the poem, "Childe Roland to the Dark Tower Come." The club will meet next Friday instead of Thursday and continue the study of this poem under the same able leader.

APPEALED ENTERED

Against Decision of Magistrate Dumble in the Sullivan Case

An appeal has been entered and is now before Judge Huycke, against the decision of Magistrate Dumble, who fined Raymond Sulivan $100 for conducting a gambling house. Mr. McDonald, Toronto, is acting for Sullivan and Mr. G. N. Gordon is acting for the Crown in the case. Sullivan was convicted on April 23, 1914, the case arising out of a game of pool between Ed Donoghue and Nelson Pasonson, which was played in Levasseur's pool room, of which Sullivan was manager.

An Old Offender But Good Cook

"Six months, twice a year, for the past five years." This is the history of Henry Watter's career since coming to Peterborough from the Old Country, and perhaps some of his fellow wards of the law are thankful that his record, written in the police court register, shows such regularity.

Five years ago, Henry, charged with being a vagrant, having no visible means of support, and wandering abroad, came before Police Magistrate Dumble. He pleaded "guilty" to the charge and was sentenced to six months in the county gaol. Ever since that time, at the end of intervals of six months each, Henry has found his way into the police court, being charged with vagrancy, and returned to the county gaol. He is now part of the institution, and looks after the culinary branch of caring for his fellow prisoners. He is a good cook and is useful in preparing the meals at the gaol.

This morning was one of the days when it fell to his lot to be released from the gaol. As usual he sought the familiar surroundings of Chief Thompson's headquarters, and as a matter of course and custom, the Magistrate ordered that he be confined in the county gaol for six months. This, of course, suited Mr. Watters, as it was at his request that this method of living was allowed him. Prisoners may come and prisoners may go, but Henry Watters remains an inmate of the county gaol.

"PATRICIA" ONE OF THE NEWEST DANCES

Miss Daisie Ince and Mr. Scott Paton of New York, formerly of the Little Blue Tea Room and Pavlowa Dancing Academy, Toronto, gave a most successful tea and dance Friday afternoon, October 23, to open their new studios at 206 West Seventy First Street, New York.

Their beautiful studios were artistically arranged with lighted candles and American beauties. Miss Ince and Mr. Paton assisted in their rose studio, the tea table being set in the old English room.

During the afternoon Miss Ince and Mr. Paton danced their new original dance called "The Patricia," which is gaining much popularity among the Smart Set of New York.

Their guests numbered two hundred and fifty, among them were many Torontonians.

Mr. Paton is a son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Paton, of Lindsay.— Lindsay Warder.

BIG ATTRACTION FOR RED MILL THEATRE

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of each week.

Manager Clayton has secured for his Red Mill Theatre, commencing Monday, November 2nd, 1,000 feet of authentic War Pictures, depicting scenes that actually have happened and are happening at the present day on the battle field. These pictures come to the Red Mill guaranteed to be the scenes, fought by the Allied Forces against the Germans and Austrians in the present European war. The admission will be 5c. afternoons and evenings. You cannot afford to miss seeing these most talked-of pictures of the present day. The price of admission is giving every person a chance to shew their patriotism by patronizing the Red Mill.

GEORGE STREET IN POLICE COURT

When it is reported that George Street was in the Police Court this morning, charged with vagrancy, do not confuse George with this City's main thoroughfare. For George resembles, in appearance, the street as it once was, torn up for paving, last fall, rather than in its present condition. George had nothing on John O'Brien (not a local man) who was also charged with vagrancy. O'Brien was given thirty days in gaol.

Street, who has been on inmate of the House of Refuge, at Lakefield, when asked by the Magistrate what he had to say for himself, replied:

"Well, if you could let me go, or give me three months in gaol," your Worship.

"That's an option," remarked Chief Thompson.

"If I let you go will you leave town?" queried Mr. Dumble.

"Yes," replied Street, "I will go right to Norwood and see if I can get work."

He was allowed to go, but not before the Chief had remarked that the prisoner seemed to have no preference between liberty and gaol, except that he seemed to take more kindly to the gaol idea than the thought of returning to the House of Refuge.

Prince Louis Has Resigned

First Sea Lord of the Admiralty Resents Newspaper Criticism

LONDON, Oct. 30.—It is officially announced that Prince Louis of Battenburg has resigned as First Sea Lord of the Admiralty.

Prince Louis Alexander of Battenburg, personal aide-de-camp to King George, as well as First Lord of the British Admiralty, of late has been the object of undeserved, but severe criticism from certain British sources—not on account of any fault of omission, or commission, but because of his German nativity. While not a breath about anything he has done or said that can reflect on his loyalty to the British cause has been uttered, there are, nevertheless, certain British "Fingoes" who think it is detrimental to the cause to have him continue as First Sea Lord, now that there is war with Germany. It is because of this attitude of a minority that the prince evidently has decided to stop the shafts of criticism by getting out of range.

Prince Louis of Battenberg is a vice-admiral and personal aide de camp to the King. He was born at Gratz, Austria, in 1854, the eldest son of Prince Alexander of Hesse. He married his cousin, Princess Victoria, daughter of Louis IV., grand duke of Hesse and of Princess Alice, Queen Victoria's daughter. He was naturalized a British subject and entered the royal navy in 1868.

Prince Louis of Battenberg served in the Egyptian war, was director of naval intelligence, second in command of the Mediterranean fleet, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet, commander of the third and fourth divisions of the home fleet, and Second Sea Lord. He was appointed First Sea Lord in 1912.

In 1905 he was the guest of the Canadian National Exhibition Association in Toronto.

WANTED BY THE POLICE

Chief of Police Thompson is in receipt of information concerning John Gulka of Fort Hope, who is accused of stealing $695 from Mrs. Martha Mazur. He is twenty years of age, 5 feet, 5 inches tall, fair hair, clean shaven, eye tooth on right side is missing. A warrant has been issued for his arrest and circulars giving his description have been sent out to the surrounding cities and towns.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES

Nathan Mackie, aged 32, of Mackie & Taylor, lumber contractors, has been drowned in Black Bay, near Port Arthur.

THE SIFTONS AND THE WAR.

Hon. Clifford Sifton hadn't much use for the machine gun in politics, but he is an enthusiastic in the matter of the machine gun in war. He has made important contributions to Canada's contribution to the great European war. Ably seconded by his son, Captain Sifton, he has been strengthening Canada's artillery efficience almost since the opening of the war. We shall doubtless hear of the machine gun brigade organised by the two Siftons, father and son. When the story of Canada's creditable participation in the fighting is written, there will be failure of justice if the part played in its success, by the energy and patriotism of the Siftons is not acknowledged.

WELLINGTON AS WITNESS.

Arthur Wellesley, Duke of Wellington, little thought that a letter to his mother, written a hundred years ago, would be brought in evidence to show that Prussian brutality and barbarity have not changed but rather been intensified since the early days of the nineteenth century. A letter in in existance, written by Wellington to his mother in 1807. The Prussians were his allies at that time, but that did not prevent him from privately stating his opinion of the Prussian armies, from general to the rear rank private. His use of words to describe his allies was as vigorous as his fighting methods. An extract from his letter to his mother reads:

"I can, however, assure you that, from the general of the Germans down to the smallest drum boy in their legion, the earth never groaned with such a set of murdering, infamous villains. They murdered, robbed and ill-treated the peasantry wherever they went." The spirit behind the unspeakably infamous outrages committed on Belgium—and being committed every day by the German soldiers, prompted by the orders of the Prussian spirit incarnate in the Kaiser, has not changed except for the worse in a hundred years. We must lay the spirit.

A CHANCE FOR EDISON.

Thomas Edison is regarded as one of the greatest living inventors. If his having taken a vow not to invent a device to facilitate the destruction of human life would not stand in the way, he has a job open to him. This job, however, would not infringe the spirit of his vow, but would help circumvent the most cowardly, sneaking, murderous form of destroying human life. Couldn't Edison invent something like a dirigible rocket, with a self-containing propelling force sufficient to drive it skyward into the vitals of a Zeppelin and put it out of business? This question is superfluous. One is sure that Edison could do the trick if he put his sprightly mind to the task. Seriously speaking, such an invention would be a splendid weapon for the allies of the Triple Entente, who are prevented by considerations of humanity, from using the only weapon—reprisal—that will exercise a deterrent effect upon German barbarism, which drops bombs on peaceful cities. If Edison would invent some "dead shot" contrivance that would cripple women and child-murdering Zeppelins, he would serve humanity as his inventive genius has never before served society and contributed to human convenience and happiness.

BRAZEN BARBARITY.

The Prussian way of waging war in its brutality and disregard of the rules of war and all consideration of humanity, only makes us set our teeth with grimer determination and nerves our arms for stronger effort. Every day adds in kind to the atrocities committed upon outraged Belgium. There is no crime in the calender of nations, that Germanity is not committing day after day; and her "Kultur" is stimulating ingenuity to the invention of new crimes. Sowing seas with mines to entrap neutral shipping, misuse of national flags and uniforms, and every form of crookedness, lying, spying, intrigue, bribery, are all in the Prussian programme. Dropping bombs on peaceful cities and destroying women and children, has a new development in the dropping, yesterday, of a bomb among a group of market women in a French town, La-Basse, and killing fifteen of them, and the killing of an innocent child by the same means in Dunkirk. The worst feature of this cowardly work is that it cannot be repressed by considerations of reprisal. The Prussians know that Great Britain and France, are too highly civilized—too fair-fighting—to treat peaceful German non-combatants, in German cities, as they could easily do, in the same manner. We can't retort in kind in the way of barbarity, but we can as we shall do, strain every muscle, use all our resources, to crush the monstrous military system, that breeds monsters and rid the world once and for all of a mighty menace to the peace, prosperity, and progress of the world.

OUR CANADIAN ARMY.

As they count noses in European armies, Canada's contribution of nearly 33,000 men, 7,500 horses and 70 pieces of artillery may seem small, but it is the largest army that ever crossed the Atlantic either way. A statistician reminds us that it is greater in numbers than the entire British forces, engaged in the War of the American Revolution. Mulhall says that the British force when it was at its highest in 1775, numbered only 30,000, and that the total fell to 7,000 in 1781. Of the 30,000 mentioned the great bulk was composed of mercenaries, hired soldiers from Hesse, and Brunswick, and paid for at from $675 to $1,125 per man per year, a condition forced upon Britain by her having her hands rather overfull of war in Europe. The entire American army at the close of the war was almost identical in numbers with the Canadian Expeditionary Force, which is much superior to the hired legions sent over by Britain in the War of the Revolution. Canada's soldiers now across seas are soldiers from conviction not for pay, and will be a much superior fighting force. It is to be added that Canada's European army is equal to the total forces put in the field by the United States in the war of 1812-14; and as large as the first army sent by Britain to the Crimean in 1856. If we count the next contingent Canada's army in Europe will equal the numbers of the British used by Wellington to crush Napoleon at Waterloo. However, Canada must not go according to the standard of past days. She must in proportion to her capabilities bring her fighting forces in the field up to the standard of the forces now fighting the enemy of Great Britain, and the civilization, liberty, freedom and human interest, her cause represents. We must be prepared, if necessary—and the necessity seems certain—to still further contribution of men and munitions of war. We must keep our rifle factories and the spinners of kakhi, busy. We can get all the men we want, but the work of equipping and arming them is what will keep us busy.

Receipts at Union Stock Yards Large

TORONTO, Oct 29.—Union Stock Yards—Receipts were large for Thursday. 90 cars, 412 cattle, 2,284 hogs, 479 sheep and lambs, 36 calves, and 500 horses.

Cattle—No choice cattle were on sale, a very few good, but nearly all offerings to-day were inferior common and medium. Trade was dull, and the weather being wet, dull and dreary did not help matters, prices being about steady. Choice butchers' steers, none on sale; good butchers' steers, $7.00 to $7.35; medium butchers' steers, $6.50 to $6.75; common butchers' steers, $6.00 to $6.25; choice butchers' heifers, none on sale; common butchers' heifers, $6.50 to $6.75; choice cows, $6.50 to $6.75; good cows, $6.75 to $6.25; canners, $5.50 to $6.00; bulls, $5.00 to $6.75.

Feeders and Stockers—It took a very choice load or lot of steers to even get an offer of $7, such as sold at $7.85 three weeks ago. The market was very dull for stockers and feeders, and prices were lower. Choice steers, $6.50 to $6.75; medium steers, $6.00 to $6.25; stockrs, $4.00 to $5.50.

Milkers and Springers—Market strong at $65 to $125 each, bulk sold at $75 to $5 each.

Calves—Not enough on sale to make a market, but prices remained steady as a plentiful supply of poultry is taking the place of veal. Choice veals, $10.00 to $10.50; common to good, $5.00 to $9.00.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts were light but prices remained steady. Sheep, $5.00 to $5.75; culls and rams, $3.50 to $4.00; lambs, $7.50 to $8.00; medium, $7.00 to $7.30; culls, $6.00 to $6.50.

Hogs—Receipts large and prices steady. Selected, fed and watered $7.50 and $7.25 f.o.b. cars, and $7.75 weighed off cars.

PRINTING ORDERS AND THE HOME TOWN CRUSADE

There never was a better time than the present for printers to foster what has come to be known as "the home town movement." Perhaps no business has suffered to a greater extent or more unjustly through orders being sent out of town and even out of the country than has the printing industry. Municipal bodies have been by no means the least offenders. Only a few weeks ago the question was asked in a Calgary city council meeting as to why the street car transfers used by the civic line were not produced in the city. The excuse given by the Street Railway Superintendend was by no means insurmountable and in future this work will be done at home, where it belongs. Now that the wedge has been entered in that city it is probable that no civic work will be sent east or south unless it is absolutely impossible to produce it at home. Campaigns were conducted some time ago in Edmonton and Winnipeg, and it is understood a fairly satisfactory state of affairs now exists in these cities and in Regina as well. There are some other western towns and cities, however, that have as yet given very little consideration to their local printers, despite their expressed anxiety to secure new industries and to keep as many men employed as possible. The pinch of hard times is driving home the lesson that municipal officials in both western and eastern Canada have been slow to learn that every dollar spent in the community is a cumulative investment while every dollar sent outside the community helps to build up some other community to the detriment of their own. Printers who have been unjustly treated in the past should make a vigorous campaign at the present to secure all municipal printing orders and when progress has been made along that line it will be comparatively easy to successfully approach any offenders among business concerns that have been a thorn in the flesh in the past. In doing this printers should emphasize the need for loyalty in connection with business affairs at home as well as in connection with the things that pertain directly to the great war. Don't let pass the present opportunity for diverting printing orders into their proper channels. You will be rendering a service to your community as well as to yourself by making the most of it.—Printer and Publisher.

OPPOSED TO CHIROPRACTORY

Ontario Doctors Want Building of New College Forbidden.

TORONTO, Oct. 30. — Physicians and surgeons of the province, with their legal counsel, went before Hon. W. J. Hanna yesterday to urge that the chiropractors now operating in Ontario be restrained from erecting a college and establishing their practice by the training of students. Arguments were put forth to show that the whole medical profession was opposed to any such move. On the other hand, the chiropractors urged upon the Minister the increase in numbers of their doctors and the demand for a training school. The arguments on either side were not new to the Provincial Secretary, the case having almost become a hardy annual, and again his decision was deferred. It will be remembered that Sir James Whitney at one time spoke of establishing a medical commission, which would deal with this matter among others.

READ THE EVENING EXAMINER

HEAR DR. GORDON TO-NIGHT—SUBJECT "THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER" George St. Methodist Church 7:45 o'clock

THE CHURCHES ARE NOT EXEMPT FROM TAXATION

Interesting Legal Point Raised at Meeting of Legal Committee--Claim For Damages Alleged to Have Resulted to Dr. C. S. Cameron's Automobile--Special Meeting Will Be Held.

The Legal Committee of the City Council met on Thursday evening when several matters of legal significance were disposed of. Among other things it was decided to refer the case of Dr. Cameron versus the City to City Solicitor Gordon for further information. Dr. Cameron, through his solicitors, Peck, Kerr, and McElderry, has put in a claim against the city, amounting to forty dollars; said sum representing the damage alleged to have resulted to Dr. Cameron's automobile, when it came in contact with a manhole cover on Brock street on the evening of October 21st. The street, at the time of the accident, was undergoing repairs. City Engineer Parsons, who submitted a written report on the matter, stated that the manhole cover was not in its final position when the accident occurred, and that the street which was in the hands of the paving contractors, should have been closed to traffic.

Messrs. Foley and Gleeson, paving contractors, through their local representative, Mr. E. T. Davis, submitted a statement in which they disclaimed responsibility for the accident.

The injury to the car consisted of a broken crank case. Steps will be taken to determine whether the city's employees or the contractors were responsible for leaving the manhole cover on the road instead of placing it to one side.

Churches Not Exempt.

A communication was received from the legal firm of Dumble and Johnston requesting that the assessment for garbage collection in connection with George Street Methodist Church, be refunded. It was pointed out that it was illegal to levy such assessment and that no consideration had been given for the money paid.

City Solicitor Gordon, who was present at the meeting confirmed the contention of former City Solicitor E. H. D. Hall, to the effect that all institutions including churches and charitable institutions were liable. The Provincial regulations provide that Government buildings only are exempt from such assesment.

Alderman Johnston submitted that it was wrong to levy an assessment especially for which no consideration had been given.

On motion of Aldermen Saunders and Langford, it was decided to take "no action."

Will Appoint Fence Viewers.

Mr. D. O'Connell, through the medium of a communication urged that the city undertake to appoint three fence viewers in accordance with the Provincial Act, which applies to all municipalities. Alderman Stratton recalled the time when fence viewers were appointed, but for some reason or other their services were not satisfactory. It was moved that a by-law be prepared and presented at the next Council meeting for endorsation, appointing three men for the position.

City Engineer Parsons, ex-Alderman James Brown and Joseph Metheral were recommended for the position.

Fence viewers practically constitute a board of arbitration for the settlement of disputes pertaining to the erection of fences and neighbourly differences respecting same.

Look Who's Here.

The executors of the Edward Green estate and representatives of the Peterborough Cereal Company, The Otonabee Power Company, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and other interested parties will be invited to confer with the Legal Committee with a view of settling a time worn question. The latter concerns a road allowance that runs from the corner of Charlotte and Water street to Simcoe street, and which has never been opened for traffic. A portion of the street was deeded by act of Parliament to the Cereal Company, and another portion has been in possession of the Edward Green estate, for nearly half a century. Three hundred dollars has been offered the city for that portion of the street occupied by the Edward Green estate. This offer was rushed down at a previous meeting upon the grounds that it would not cover the expenses that would be incurred in disposing of the street. Special legislation would have to be secured empowering the city to dispose of the remaining portion of the road allowance. It was originally reserved by the Government for a street. On motion of Aldermen Johnston and Saunders it was decided to call a special meeting to deal with the matter. This motion was passed in the absence of Mayor Buller and Alderman Duncan, who meandered into the office of the Public Utilities Commission where a meeting was in progress.

CELEBRATE THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

BEAVERTON, Oct. 29.—Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Butcher celebrated their golden wedding here last evening. They were married in Peterborough, and resided there fourteen years before coming to Beaverton. Many Peterborough, Sunderland, Toronto and Northern Ontario friends, in addition to many residing here, attended the celebration.

Bombs Kills Women.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—German aeroplanes yesterday killed over Dunkirk, dropping two bombs. A woman and child were killed.

Two bombs were also dropped at Bethune, west of La Bassee. The first failed to explode, but the second fell in a group of women in the market place, killing nineteen and wounding forty others.

Bureau For Aliens.

OTTAWA, Oct. 30.—Bureaus for the registration of Germans and Austrians under the new order-in-council will be established in Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, Halifax, St. John, Quebec, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Regina and Vancouver.

HALLOWE'EN TEA AND ENTERTAINMENT

Under Auspices of St. Luke's Ladies Aid—Was Great Success.

In spite of the inclement weather last evening a large number attended the Hallowe'en tea and entertainment at St. Luke's under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid. Abundant supplies of appetizing eatables had been provided, and everyone enjoyed a repast, that in the language of the vernacular, would take "some going" to beat. Mrs. J. J. Turner, Jr., President of the Society, and her able assistants are to be congratulated on the success that crowned their efforts. The decorations were suggestive of Hallowe'en and were arranged in a very attractive manner.

After all had partaken of supper, Rev. Mr. Sawers took the chair, and after a few introductory remarks, asked the audience to rise and sing the National Anthem. Misses B. Carr and A. Rahill played a well rendered pianoforte duet. Mr. Cartilage, Mr. Frank Whitehouse, and Master Sam Whitehouse were heard in vocal numbers that were greatly enjoyed. Mr. Sawers gave a reading from Stephen Leacock's "Nonsense Novels" that provided a great deal of laughter.

The programme closed with an instrumental duet by Misses Green and Calder.

HALLOWE'EN

BY F. M. DELA FOSSE

Hallowe'en is, as we all know, the eve or vigil of All Saints' Day, which was one of the greatest feast days of the ancient church, and still one of the more prominent holy days of certain Christian denominations. The vigil itself is coeval with the establishment of the festival of All Saints' Day and one cannot mention the one without making reference to the other. All Saints' Day, or, in other words, All Hallows' Day, was established as a festival as long ago as 300 or 400 B.C. In the early days the Christians were accustomed to solemnize the anniversary of a martyr's death at the place of his martyrdom, but the number at last grew so large that it was found impossible to set aside a separate day for each and the church, feeling that every martyr should be venerated, appointed a common day for all. This was the origin of All Saints' Day.

At first only St. John the Baptist and those who had died for their faith were thus honoured, but in the course of time a regular process of canonization was established and other saints were added so that to-day a mighty army of the dead is honoured in the observance of All Saints Day.

We see therefore, that originally Hallowe'en was a purely religious institution. In the course of time, however, abuses crept in until to-day it seems almost to have lost the religious side and to be characterised by acts and ceremonies which are a mixture of classic mythology, Druidic belief and Christian superstition.

This is shown in the fact that in the British isles and in other parts of Europe Hallowe'en is looked upon by many credulous people as the time upon which supernatural influences most prevail. The spirits of the dead are supposed to wander abroad, together with witches, devils and mischief-making elves and even the spirits of living persons are said to have the power to leave their bodies and join the ghostly visitants. Children born on this day are also looked upon as having the power of conversing with the spirits of the departed.

It is not hard to understand how the Roman and Druidical elements came to be incorporated in the observance of Hallowe'en. On Nov. 1st, the Romans used to hold a feast to Pomona, the goddess of fruits and seeds and it was then that the stores laid up in summer for use in the winter were opened. November the 1st was also the great Druidical festival to the sun which the Druids celebrated in thanksgiving for their harvest. The Druids believed in the transmigration of souls and that on the eve of their festival Saman, the Lord of Death, called together the souls of those who had been condemned during the past twelve months to occupy the bodies of animals. On such occasions it was believed sentences could be mitigated by means of incantations and propitiatory offerings through the priests. It was also one of the quarterly periods when the Druids lighted their bonfires in honour of Baal. This custom, it may be mentioned in passing, was kept up in parts of the British isles to a comparatively recent period. Wales was particularly tenacious of it and these fires were usually followed by feasting on nuts, apples and parsnips and by the celebration of games of all sorts.

If anything further were wanting, however, to prove the Druidical origin of some of the Hallowe'en observances it can be found in the fact that in some parts of Ireland October 31st used to be known as the vigil of Samain.

Hallowe'en is celebrated in the British isles in a very different manner from that pursued in Canada and the United States. In the United Kingdom there is much fun and merriment of a quiet and innocent character and indoor games are very much in evidence, but there is nothing approaching the rowdyism which at times prevails on this side of the water. There is no wrenching of door bells, ringing of fire alarms, and taking of gates off their hinges, and gangs of youngsters do not parade the streets making night hideous with improvised musical instruments and kazoos. Much more might be written on the subject of Hallowe'en but the reader must be referred to the Library for additional information which he will find in Chambers' Book of Days, Brand's Antiquities, Brewer's Curiosities of Popular Customs, and in the various Encyclopaedias.

Hesselberg's Farewell Here

Notwithstanding the inclement weather, the usual capacity house greeted Hesselberg, at his farewell appearance at George St. Methodist Church last night. The artist was in splendid form, and his renditions of the Schubert-Liest Serenade, and original transcriptions of the Thais "Intermezzo," as well as the "Russian Nightingale," with its thrills and cadenzas, left an instilled longing for some more of this Russian's music, which has won itself a warm place into the hearts of Peterborough musicians and lovers of good music. Performances of his kind, full of poetic content are of unusual worth to the great mass of people. As to the playing itself of this artist, who is treasured here, as elsewhere, as a matter of his instrument, there is at this time nothing new to say, except only to mention the complete success, which again was attained by him.

RESISTANCE IS BROKEN

Russia Has Inflicted Severe Defeat on German Legions and Made Big Step Towards Berlin

SECOND GREAT STAGE

PETROGRAD, Oct. 30.—The Russians have won another great victory which marks in all probability the penultimate stage of the struggle between the Slav and Teuton. The German-Austrian armies operating from their northernmost position in about the same latitude as Warsaw down to well south of the River Ellshanka have been broken in two. The northern part, which was defeated a week or more ago in an attempt to march into Warsaw, is still fighting desperately north of the River Pilitsa. South of the river Grand Duke Nicholas has inflicted a heavy defeat on the enemy, who is in full retreat, leaving a gap between the two main groups of armies equal to one day's march.

This victory portends the defeat of the group of armies north of the Pilitza, since these two will now have the Russians on their right flank. Indeed, Russian cavalry and horse and gunners are probably already in the rear of the northern forces.

The victory has been won by four days of the severest fighting on a front extending from Bialobzeszgi, on the River Pilitza, twelve miles west of the Vistula, southeastwards through Glevachev and Politchna to Ianowatz, on the left bank of the Vistula, opposite the village of Kazimerleff. The length of this front is 42 miles.

The two theatres of the main struggle are divided by the River Pilitza, which flows into the Vistula from the west, twenty-eight miles south of Warsaw.

North of the Pilitza the Germans were by Sunday driven from fifty to seventy miles back from the line of the Vistula. The greater part of this area is covered with thick forests, traversed in all directions by tracks, which at this time of year are clay sloughs

CITY WILL ASK FOR TENDERS

In Connection With The Collection of Garbage—Improvements Suggested.

It is the intention of the Property Committee of the City Council to again ask for tenders in connection with the collection of garbage through out the City for the year 1915. The majority of the Committee are in favour of having the collector go into the backyard for the garbage instead of having it placed on the edge of the sidewalk. It is claimed that under the present system the garbage is attacked by dogs, cats, and not infrequently by small boys. The latter sometimes take a special delight in kicking it over. Then again it has been adjudged unsightly, by the Committee, who are at present in a mood to pay a little more money and have the garbage collectors invade the back yards. The Committee met on Thursday evening to discuss ways and means of improving the system. One of the Aldermen suggested that the collectors be asked to replace the lids on garbage cans and other receptacles after they are emptied. It was pointed out by another alderman that this is not always possible. He inferred that the cans after being emptied were sometimes in need of a tinsmith.

ALL SAINTS' MEN TO HEAR ADDRESS ON JAPAN MISSIONS

A banquet will be held in All Saints' School Room on Thursday November 5th, at 7 p.m., under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the Anglican Churches. Rev. R. M. Millman, a missionary recently returned from Japan, and R. W. Allin will be the principal speakers. Both addresses will be most interesting and Rev. Mr. Millman will deal with conditions in Japan that have been experienced by him in his years of work among the natives.

HARVEST FESTIVAL AT NEW MISSION

Formal Opening at Brownton Last Evening—Rev. Canon Davidson Spoke

The formal opening of the new Browntown Church of England Mission, at 108 Western Avenue, was marked last evening by a harvest festival service and an eloquent sermon by Rev. Canon Davidson of St. John's Church. That the new mission is needed is plain from the large congregation present last evening, and this in spite of the very inclement weather. Judging from the heartiness with which the service was entered, the majority of the people are Church members. The mission was decorated with symbols of the harvest and the hymns and prayers were appropriate to the occasion.

In a short but eloquent speech Rev. Canon Davidson stirred the hearts of the people to greater efforts on behalf of the new work. The first part of the service was conducted by Rev. J. Price and Mr. C. A. G. Spence assisted. For the future, the Mission will be in charge of Mr. Spence. Sunday School will be held at 2.30 and evensong at 7 o'clock. The first evening service of the Mission will be held Sunday, Nov. 8th. His Lordship Bishop Sweeny of Toronto will address the people of the Mission Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

Y.W.C.A. NOTES.

Hist, all ye girls, it is not too late;
Come to the "Y" when the clock goes eight;
On Friday night, when the witches roam;
See that they don't catch you staying at home.

MAY SECURE REFUSE GROUND

The Property committee of the City Council are considering the feasibility of purchasing a dumping ground for night soil. Ald. Stratton vigorously opposed the suggestion. He pointed out the necessity of putting the city's incinerator plant to the test with a view of ascertaining whether it would be possible to consume the night soil in conjunction with other garbage. A dumping ground as proposed by Ald. Duncan would cost the city from three hundred to four hundred dollars.

Ald. Duncan claimed that the city was not getting sufficient garbage and for that reason it was impossible to operate the incinerator at its maximum capacity. Only a certain percentage of night soil can be consumed with the garbage.

It was finally decided to leave the matter in the hands of the chairman of the Property committee to report back.

PIPER FACES SERIOUS CHARGE

Elected Summary Trial and Pleaded Not Guilty

Frederick Piper faced a serious charge in this morning's police court. He is alleged to have attempted to procure a local girl named Margaret Duncan for immoral and illegal purposes. He is supposed to have tried to make arrangements with the girl and certain other young men of this City which constitutes an indictable offence. Margaret Duncan, the girl in the case is at present in the Mercer reformatory, to which place she was sentenced by Magistrate Dumble a short time ago for questionable conduct. Piper pleaded not guilty to the charge and elected summary trial.

Case Interrupted.

When Piper was being confronted with the charge one of those incidents which always tickle the crowd behind the rail occurred. John O'Brien (not of local connection) had been previously charged with vagrancy and the fact that he had been sentenced to thirty days in gaol made him oblivious to what was going on around him. So, when the Magistrate said to Piper:

"How do you wish to be tried in this case?" O'Brien rose to his feet and addressed the Magistrate.

"You see, your Worship," he said, "it's like this."

"Who is this man?" asked the Magistrate in surprise, and Piper turned with a look of gratitude to his new-found vindicator. But it turned out that O'Brien merely wished to say a few words in his own behalf, so that with the aid of the constable on duty, he sat down suddenly, and hid his face in his hands to hide his embarrassment.

ELECTRIC POWER COMPANY IS WILLING TO DISPOSE

Of That Part of the Peterboro' Light and Power Company's Distributing System Which is Outside the City

The Utilities Commission met last night, and were waited upon by a deputation consisting of Messrs. Henthorne, Lancaster, Callander and Hall, who asked that a water main be laid on Maud and Lansdowne streets. The Secretary was instructed to enquire from the Solicitor as to whether there can be more than $10,000 worth of extension work issued in any one year.

A Timely Move.

The Secretary was also instructed to find out, through the Solicitor, if, under the provisions of the Municipal Act, it would be possible to group all extension work done during the year, and show that the additions to the waterworks system bring in sufficient revenue to comply with the Act. At present, if a petition for water extension is made, the work is not done unless the revenue is sufficient to pay the interest and sinking fund on the debentures issued to pay for the work. If in some cases the revenue exceeds the amount demanded by law, the Comissioners feel that that surplus could be used to make up the deficiency in revenue from other construction work, and in this way water might be provided in many cases where it cannot be at present.

Willing to Sell.

Communications were received from the Electric Power Company and the Otonabee Power Company. The former signified their willingness to sell that part of the Peterborough Light and Power Company's distributing system, outside the City, and suggested that the price be fixed by arbitration. The latter are willing to sell that part of their system that did not duplicate the system formerly owned by the Peterborough Light and Power Company. Both letters were received.

Permission Granted.

Mr. Bruce Johnston, Clerk of the Township of North Monaghan, notified the Commissioners that the North Monaghan Council had passed a resolution granting the Utilities Commission permission to erect poles, wires, etc., and carry on the electric light and power business in the Town ship; all poles, etc., to be erected in accordance with the directions of the Council.

Request fr Service.

The request of the Board of Health for a water main on Rubidge Street, north, to Murray street, was received.

Will Report.

The Waterworks Superintendent will be asked to report on the application of Mr. J. Rogers for a service on Frank street.

Feeder Lines.

Manager Howse of the Utilities Commission will be asked to report on the feasiblity of having the street railway power feeder lines strung over City poles.

Will Install Machine.

The Commisaion decided to install a Burrough adding machine, at a cost of $800. This includes motor.

Audacity of Indian Troops Amazes the Regulars

LONDON, Oct. 30. — One of the most stirring incidents of the recent fighting concerns the British East Indian troops, all of whom would seem to be on the front. A wounded English officer who reached London yesterday says a few Indians a couple of nights ago slipped forward through the grass to a German detachment protecting a supply train and several batteries. With the stealth of jungle creatures they came upon the sentries of the foe and strangled one after another of the outposts. Then they set fire to the thicket in which the artillery and supplies were concealed. A fierce attack immediately followed, preventing any effort to extinguish the blaze. When it was burning fiercely the Indians suddenly fell back, and almost immediately there was a series of terrible detonations as the ammunition wagons blew up, scattering death in every direction. The Germans in the vicinity of the spot were almost totally destroyed. This officer says that the British commanding the Indians have great trouble in restraining their men when once their blood is up and the excitement of the chase gets hold of their fierce natures. They are for rushing the Germans in and out of season, going forward with wild shrieks, which strike consternation into the opposing ranks. Their audacity is said to have amazed even the British and French regulars, who for three months have battled night and day.

CONDITIONS DESPERATE IN BELGIUM

LONDON, Oct. 30.—"It is feared that in their desperation the hungry people will attack the authorities. This would cause serious loss of life." So stated Captain T. F. Lucey, representative of the American commissions for relief in Belgium, in a telegram sent to Herbert C. Hoover, chairman of the commission, from Rotterdam yesterday. Captain Lucey added that he had been told by representatives of the National Relief Committee that in Brussels, Charleroi, Liege, Namur, Mons and Dinant, 3,000,000 persons were being fed by charity and that only four days' supply of flour was on hand. In the vicinity of Liege, conditions were more desperate than elsewhere, if possible. There the necessaries of life were urgently needed.

The message concluded:

"You may be convinced that any statement you have received or heard has underestimated conditions in Belgium. Great danger is threatened. To avoid it you must get flour to the people and get it at once."

German Submarines at Seebrugge.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 30—(Via London.)—A despatch from Sluis, Holland, to The Handelsblad asserts that parts of several submarines have been sent from Germany by railway to Seebrugge, on the Belgian coast, where they will be put together and the boats then sent against the British fleet off Ostend. Strict secrecy, according to the Sluis correspondent, surrounds the German movements in Belgium.

BRUSSELS FRETS UNDER THE IRON RULE OF THE GERMANS

A correspondent of the New York Herald writes:

THE HAGUE, Oct. 28.—I am able to give you an authoritative and accurate picture of the terrible situation in Brussels under German rule. There is not the slightest doubt that a revolution will break out in the Belgian capital if the Germans are not soon brought to their senses. Their perpetual bullying of the people has caused such exasperation that in the near future all weapons which the people are hiding in the houses will suddenly go off.

Since the Germans have been in Brussels the atmosphere has been unbreathable. They have thousands of spies everywhere. The citizens cannot utter a word of criticism in public without being arrested and brought to the commandant. Thousands of persons are brought in daily and sentenced by courts made up of young and uncontrolled officers. The courts inflict a month's imprisonment for laughing in front of a German officer or for refusing to alight from a tram car to make room for German soldiers.

The Germans are treating Brussels as they treat their African dominions. They have eaten all the provisions and drunk the Belgian cellars empty. Champagne flows every night in the lobbies of the leading hotels, where the Germans turned out the [illegible] to make room for themselves [illegible]. Food is scarce and bad. There is no white bread, and the bread available is unfit to eat. The flour has been confiscated by the German authorities. Even invalids are forced to eat black bread, despite the protests of the physicians.

The officers steal automobiles from private citizens and dash through the city at night, with no lights. By their mad speed they have killed and wounded many.

From the Belgian villages come sorrowing reports of cruelties and starvation. Hundreds of residents of Brussels have been imprisoned and given long terms in jail for insisting that the "junkers" treat them as white men.

OLD STEEPLECHASER OFF TO BATTLE FRONT

The famous old race horse "Bilbarry," once one of the best steeplechasers in Canada, passed through Montreal yesterday, to be shipped to Salisbury Plains, Eng., as a charger for Amilius Jarvis, Jr., of Toronto, Lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Dragoons. The military field will not be new to the grand old jumper, for besides his racing career, he has for several years been used by Captain Frank Proctor, of Toronto, as his charger at Niagara Camp, and last year was used by Lieut. Amelius Jarvis, Jr., in the same capacity. He has also been employed as a leader in the class of riding instruction for the [illegible], and [illegible] horses of the Governor-General's Body Guard.

HOSPITAL SHIP LOST ON ROCKS

Nurses Were Saved But It is Feared Remainder of Passengers and Crew Will Be Drowned

Special to The Examiner.

WHITBY, Eng., Oct. 30. — The Hospital Ship Rosilla, en route to Belgium with a party of Red Cross nurses and hospital supplies, was totally wrecked off this port. The second officer managed to get a lifeboat over and brought the nurses safely to land, but sixty members of the crew and other passengers are still clinging to the bow of the wrecked vessel, fast on rocks. It is feared all must be lost as the weather is so heavy that lifeboats cannot live in the sea that is running. Seven bodies have already been washed ashore.

APPEARANCE OF CHARITY HURTS

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The Committee in charge of the Patriotic Fund and our excellent City Charity Officer, Mr. Millar, are doing the very best they can, but the Charity Officer is [illegible] the man to administer a fund, that is [illegible] and I know people who will not apply for relief because they do not want anything to do with charity. They are in a bad way in some cases, and I know one family that has sold most of their furniture and will not apply for relief, although they are entitled to it, for the above reason. I think, Mr. Editor, that you will admit that the Relief Fund should be handed out by men who are not connected with charity and in the way it was intended. Everything is working smoothly except this and for the reason I have given.

Mr. Miller is very kind, but he is a Charity Officer, and people are inclined to point at other people and charge them with getting charity when it is only relief. At any rate they think so and they don't like it.

Yours truly,

West End.

Has Exceeded Ten Thousand

The campaign fund has reached the magnificent total of $10,079.95 in the Town of Lindsay alone. This morning a large committee of prominent Lindsay citizens waited on the County Council, with a view to securing a grant of $16,000 to the fund, which will bring the result of the whirlwind canvas up to $26,-079.95, with the county at large still to canvas.

After several weeks' effort the Patriotic Fund is in the [illegible] and they [illegible] dollars.

MR. HILL'S CAR IS RECOVERED

Item in the Examiner Responsible For Return of Ford Automobile to The Owner

The Ford car, owned by Mr. John Hill, the George Street grocer, which was taken from outside the George Street Church, Tuesday night, has been located by the Police and returned to Mr. Hill. The car was in town, standing near a residence in the north of the City. The item in last night's Examiner concerning its loss, was seen by the resident, who got in communication with the Police. The item was responsible for the car being returned to the owner. The automobile was in good condition and outside of the inconvenience of having to do without his machine for a couple of days, Mr. Hill has not suffered as a result of the car being taken.

Allies Occupy Edea.

PARIS, Oct. 30. — A despatch to the Havas Agency from Bordeaux says:

"A report received from Gen. Dobell, commanding the French forces operating against the German Kamerun, equatorial West Africa, says that two Franco-British columns occupied Edea Oct. 26, after serious fighting, in which the allied troops showed great bravery.

"Edea is an important railroad station on the Sanaga, 90 miles from the coast."

LABOUR GAZETTE REPORT FOR THE MONTH OF SEPT.

Labour conditions during September showed little change from the preceding month. Unskilled labour was better employed, due to the city council going ahead with the paving of streets and sewer work that had been stopped on account of no funds. Money was raised by selling short-time debentures to the citizens, about $200,000 being secured. The paving contract amounted to $93,000, and the outfall sewer and sewage disposal plant well over $100,000.

There was a falling off in the building trades, and at some of the factories. The textile factories and flour mills were busy, some of them running night and day.

House rent came down. $10 houses renting for $8 and $25 houses renting for $18 and $20. There were quite a lot of empty houses in the city. Real estate was quiet in the city, but there was a good demand for farms.

The barbers made an effort to raise their prices, but on account of depressed financial conditions have gone back to the old schedule.

Farmers had a busy month. The warm weather which prevailed the latter part of the month was having a beneficial effect upon the root crops. The apple crop will be the best in some years. There was little demand for apples, the uncertainties of the war having completely dislocated the market, with the result that the regular apple buyers were not making purchases. Farmers were getting good prices for their horses from the Militia Department. Farm help was plentiful, but wages are not very high, the average is fifteen dollars per month.

The sawmills were still running, but reported business quiet.

The Grand Trunk Railway track commencing from Lindsay and running through Peterborough will be completely reconstructed this fall, and new heavy rails will replace those in present use.

Women Workers as Patrol.

LONDON, Oct. 30. — In order to help soldiers observe Lord Kitchener's injunction to be no more than courteous to women, the National Union of Women Workers has undertaken the duty of patrolling the territory outside the sentry lines. The services of the women police is gladly accepted, since the army authorities complain that the soldiers are being lured from Lord Kitchener's Meal by women camp followers.

Meantime an effort is made to increase camp diversions, such as concerts, and to provide other means of diverting the men.

Battleship Sunk?

PARIS, Oct. 30. — It is reported here this morning that a first-class British battleship has been sunk by a mine.

The name of the battleship is not reported. The news is unconfirmed.

Transferred Through Threats.

OTTAWA, Oct. 30.—Owing to the numerous threats against his life Malcolm Reid, immigration agent at Bagcounar, who deported the Hindus on the Komagata Maru, has been transferred to Ottawa. His assistant, Hopkinson, and two others have been assassinated since the deportation.

"THE PRIVATE LIFE OF OUR PUBLIC MEN" WAS DR. GORDON'S SUBJECT

"The Prodigal Daughter" or "The Curse of a Double Standard" will be His Theme To-night

TEN POINTS CONSIDERED

"The Prodigal Daughter," or "The Curse of a Double Standard," will be Dr. Gordon's special address in the George Street Methodist church this evening, and two thousand copies of his address entitled "The Crystal Christ," will be distributed at the close of the service.

Many requests are coming in for Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw to repeat certain of his songs which he has sung from night to night. This evening, by special request, he will sing, "The Recessional" by Kipling, "Will There be any Stars in My Crown," and "Would You Believe."

Dr. Gordon's address last evening was on the subject of "The Private Life of Our Public Men," and had special reference to the future welfare of the City of Peterborough, concerning which, Dr. Gordon affirmed that nature had done so much, geographically for the city in which we live, that with the growing prosperity of the country and the steady increase in population, Peterborough would gradually take its place amongst the more prosperous communities of Canada.

He recited incidents of the life of great men for their native cities. Savanarola's love for Florence, Stirpers' love for London, Chalmers' love for Glasgow, Beechers' love for Brooklyn, and the love of Phillips Brooks for Boston.

No man is saved until the city is saved. There is no soul salvation short of social salvation. Stephen Phillips once said, "I would build a city with room in the streets for the soul." That would indeed be a great city.

The city depends on the men of the city. Walt. Whitman once wrote, "'Produce great men and the rest will follow," and Thomas Carlisle made a remark which was almost an equivalent. "Find your men and all the rest will follow." A man must be measured by his thought. The difference between a politician and a statesman is this. One thinks for the days, the other thinks for the deckage Byron wrote for his age. Milton for the ages. It was said of David Bennett Hill, who died several years ago, that he had the brains of a statesman and the heart of a ward politician. He knew so much. He did so little. Every true man will serve his city in spite of criticism and contempt. No public man can hope to serve his city and to escape criticism. Lord Randolph Churchill, writing to his wife in 1891, says: "I am through with political life. There has been no consideration, no indulgence, no kind memory, no gratitude, nothing but spite, malice and abuse. I am sick and tired of it all." This is the experience of most public men, but the public man who is heroic persists in spite of all such criticism.

Dr. Gordon's address followed the line of ten points, delivered in a brief, pungent and pertinent fashion.

(1st.) The future of the city lies in the quality of the home life. Thos. Carlisle said "No great man ever had a fool mother." The saddest individual in the world is the individual whose memory of the home life is uncomplimentary to the home. Thomas Payne said, "The first five years of my life made me an infidel," and Robert G. Ingersoll was brought up in a home which blighted his faith in fundamental principles of Christianity. The home is only a divine institution.

(2nd.) The future of the city lies in the power of the pulpit. Mary Queen of Scots used to say, that she feared the prayers of John Knox, more than an army of ten thousand men. Excepting the home, there is no power comparable to the power of the pulpit. The age calls for a courageous preacher. The women who do not care what women say, the preacher who does not care what preachers say. A preacher's conscience ought to dictate what he shall say in the pulpit, and not the Official Board.

(3rd.) The future of the city lies in the vitality of the churches. The average Christian who is rich, thinks more of his automobile than he does of his church, and the average Christian who is poor is better posted on the number of cards in the euchre deck, than the number of books in the Bible. A true citizen is a true friend of the church. Oliver Wendel Holmes once said, "I go whether I can accept all their creeds or not." When Roosevelt became president, he found the church of his denomination in a small building, on a back street, but he attended that church just the same. The modern Christian is apt to select his church according to his ideas of social standing, and his principles in the line of social aspirations.

(4th.) The future of the city lies in the character of its public men. John Morley made this remark in his life of Cromwell, concerning John Pym, the great parliamentary leader, "I think it part of a man's religion to see that his country is well governed." You cannot vote a straight ticket unless you vote for a straight man. God save us from the type of citizenship represented by an American politician in San Francisco, who said, "Away with the moral issue, let us have prosperity." That was a great prayer offered by Lionel Beecher a generation ago. God grant that our principle men be men of principle.

(5th.) The future of the city lies in the character of her merchant princes. It was said concerning J. Pierpont Morgan, "that he thought in millions, and that he thought in continents," but his thought was mostly and mainly for money. He believed in the doctrine of the atonement, but he left his millions to his family and made small provision for the proclamation of his religious belief. He was a fair representative of the wealthy type.

(6th.) The future of the city lies in the purity of her young men. Gladstone's indignation was magnificent when somebody told him an indecent incident, with reference to a neighbouring politician ad statesman. The grand old man exclaimed, "You call that witty; I call it devilish."

(7th.) The future of the city lies in the moral character of her young women. A Toronto girl came into my manse once upon a time, and told me how she had broken her engagement with a young man because of his weakness for strong drink. That young man did not have the courage to turn the wine glass down, and this particular young woman turned him forever out of her life and affection. I call that a splendid form of character, and our future home life must be built upon granite as stern as that.

(8th.) The future of the city lies in the honesty and purity of those who administer the law. The most ungodly thing in the realm of jurisprudence, is an unjust judge. An English judge, passing through an English prison, and asking the matron a thousand questions, suddenly became embarrassed. It was at the place where the judge stood, exactly opposite the cell of a young woman. The matron went back to the young woman for an exclamation of the judge's embarrassment, and she answered, "As God is my judge, had I never met that man, I would have been an innocent girl to-day." There is nothing in the world which shames a man's confidence in a democratic government, like a representative of the law who is unfaithful to his vow and covenant.

(9th.) The future of the city lies in the spirit of her school teachers. Garfield said of Mark Hopkins, "He taught me how to think." Professor Agassiz was asked, "What is the best thing you have ever done?" His answer was, "I have taught four or five young men how to observe and how to think." A school teacher no matter what his department may be, day school, Normal or Collegiate, has no right to impose his own particular religious views upon the minds of the young people who are under his influence, and it is exceedingly important, that those who occupy the high positions in the school realm of education, shall be all that can be desired, in the matter personal conduct, character and morals. There is no calling more sacred, not even that of the priest or preacher, than the calling of those who have been appointed to instruct the childhood and young of the community, in the matters which pertain to truth, righteousness and knowledge. An immoral or reckless teacher can have only a blighted influence upon the young people of the community, and the community ought to demand for this sacred work, men absolutely unobjectionable in their private life.

(10th.) The future of the city lies in the welfare of the children. A young woman chilled me somewhat by the remark, "I despise children. - I have no love for children." A love for children is a sign of grace in the heart. I think of Mozart in his childhood, going from stranger to stranger, as they entered the home, and asking the tender question, "Do you love me, do you love me?" I have read a thousand biographies during the past ten years, and great men and great women of the world have been lovers of children.

Dr. Gordon closed his address with an appeal to the citizens of Peterborough to exercise their gifts and talents, and work for the future welfare of the city, linking city with the Dominion and the Dominion with the Empire, and closed with the lines:

"Strike til lthe last armed foe expires,
"Strike for your altars and your fires,
"Strike till the last armed foe expires,
sires,
"God and your native land."

Dr. Gordon will answer the following questions this evening.

1. Will a heathen to whom the Gospel has not been preached be saved?
2. Why does God permit good people to die and bad people to live?
3. Why are many church members so luke warm in the support of the temperance cause?
4. Should a sensible person be guided by dreams and visions?
5. Should a converted man have any fear of death?
6. What do you think of Pastor Russel's teachings?
7. Is it right to call a man or a woman "a fool" in a public address?
8. Is it a sin to tell a lie in jest, when you know it will not cause harm?
9. Should professed Christians play golf on the Sabbath day?
10. If God is good, why are circumstances so unkind?
11. What do you think of the woman who is busy attending Women's Council, Ladies' Aid, etc., that she has no time for the proper supervision of her home?
12. What is your opinion of higher criticism?
13. What do you think of the Christian who takes a very active part in church work, and does not speak to her neighbour?

Britain Offered Aid.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 30—(Via London.)—The Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant says it learns upon good authority that the British Government offered Holland pecuniary assistance for the relief of Belgian refugees in the Netherlands. Holland declined, saying she would bear the burden herself of a duty spontaneously undertaken.

Crown Prince Wounded?

ROME, Oct. 30.—(Via London.)—It is reported here that the German Crown Prince has been wounded while leading an attack on Verdun.

Will Enemy Try To Make An Advance On Boulogne

Attempt at Extreme North Has Been a Flat Failure and They Are Changing Their Tactics.

ALLIES ARE HOLDING

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The German attempt to cut through the allied line between Nieuport and Dixmude frustrated, the invaders are making preparations to attempt a movement against Boulogne rather than Dunkirk and Calais. This is evidenced by the massing of troops believed to number 250,000 men in the region between the River Yser and the Ypres-Hazebrouck-St. Omar road. The Duke of Wurtemburg is in supreme command, and the new assault may begin at any moment.

Whatever the next effort of the Kaisers' leaders, it is manifest that the coast campaign, which started with the capture of Ostend, has come to a poor end. The Yser was an impassable barrier, with British and French warships spreading destruction in the ranks of the foe whenever they came within range. Wednesday a big British battleship arrived off the Flanders coast, and by means of its 12-inch guns was able to rout the Germans further inland than was possible with the guns of the lighter vessel.

It is owing largely to the fire of the fleet that the next German assault will be made well beyond the farthest range of even the heaviest guns.

However, the German concentration on the new line of operations is not being made without resistance. Reports from Ypres say that the French won decisive engagements yesterday north and east of that town. In the same zone the Germans lost ground both Wednesday and Thursday. Heavy rains have rendered the discomfort of troops on both sides almost unbearable. Canals and rivers in all of northwestern France and western Flanders are overflowing their banks, and it is practically impossible to move heavy artillery for the present. For this reason the German efforts to fortify the coast line southward from Ostend has not made much progress. It is true that big guns are now planted at Zeebrugge and further east, but as yet they have in no wise troubled the allied fleet. There is a persistent rumor of Zeppelin sheds being built at Ostend.

At every point the situation favors the allies, in spite of grave losses, and all the stress of the three months' campaign. South of Arras, French columns yesterday dislodged the Germans from favorable positions, which they took a couple of weeks ago as the initial success in their move toward the coast. This victory is regarded as important.

There are many reports of German reinforcements numbering 200,000 men to be brought from the Russian front for the effort directed at Boulogne. But whatever the extent of German reinforcements, it is declared that the allies are prepared to meet them man for man. French mobilization is now complete, and Gen. Joffre is showing the capacity to produce fresh troops whenever needed.

In the vicinity of Apremont fresh gains are reported to have been made by the French. Pressure on the lines of the German Crown Prince in that region continues to bend back his front. The complete isolation of St. Mihiel is almost effected, and the French hold strong positions in the Argonne forest. On the Aisne there was bloody fighting yesterday, and a number of trenches held by the foe were taken in a series of bayonet charges.

In a despatch from Flushing, the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. says: "There has been a slight advance by the allies toward Ostend. The British are occupying two villages which they carried by bayonet charges. A Bavarian battalion refused to fight and surrendered."

Telegraphing from northeastern France, a correspondent of The Central News says: "The situation around La Bassee is being carefully watched. The Germans have adopted the tactics which proved so successful at Antwerp. They are apparently endeavoring to drive a wedge" to the allies by sheer weight of gunfire.

"North of Lille all continues well, though the Germans have brought up powerful reserves.

"The Belgians once more are in the thick of the fray."

Change In Names of Corps.

MONTREAL, Oct. 30.—It was announced officially yesterday that the three battalions being raised in Montreal for the second contingent, and which have heretofore been designated as "French-Canadians," "Gunn's," and "Fisher's" battalions, will in future be known as the Twenty-Second, Twenty-Third and Twenty-Fourth battalions.

The French-Canadian battalion under Lieut.-Col. Gaudet will be the 22nd Battalion Royal Canadians. Lieut.-Col. F. W. Fisher's command will be the 23rd battalion and Lieut.-Col. Gunn's will be the 24th battalion.

Gibson-Hardy Match Should Be Hummer

The announcement that Andy Gibson, the well-known Toronto welterweight, and Alf. Hardy, the English featherweight, would meet at Brock St. Rink on Saturday night has aroused much interest among wrestling fans. Gibson is instructor of wrestling at the Central Y.M.C.A., Toronto, with a class of fifty. He has a couple of 200-pound policemen among his pupils, and after throwing them around will find Hardy pretty light. The English boy is slippery as an eel, however, and it should be a grand bout. Gibson will try to throw Hardy twice in an hour. Jack Forbes and Kid Carter, of Toronto, will wrestle as a curtain-raiser, the best two out of three falls to decide the match.

T. C. S. THIRDS WON EASILY

The Trinity College School third team and the Grove School of Lakefield met in a friendly game at Lakefield on Wednesday and the Port Hope Collegians won easily by 63 points to 1. The half-time score was 40 to 0. They were in better condition and better trained. The T.C.S. boys spent the evening in Peterborough and had tea at the Empress Hotel. They were in charge of Rev. M. G. Orchard, their head master.

She Wants Marriage Annulled.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Mrs. Harriet C. Jackson, 70 years old, testified yesterday in a suit to annul her marriage to Frank D. Wright, of Toronto, Ont., aged 45, that Wright hypnotized her and obtained $15,000 from her soon after their marriage.

She said Wright told her he was "one of the immortals" and that she would be destroyed if she did not marry him. She averred that Wright married her under the name of Jackson.

A Travesty On Evangelism Says Writer

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I should be glad if you would allow me space in your valuable paper to call the attention of your readers to the travesty of Evangelism, which has been proceeding during the past fortnight in two of our prominent Churches.

For some time we have been informed by the "Higher Critic" that the world was getting better, that war was no longer possible, and that we were going forward to a perfect state of existence on this earth; also, that original sin was a thing of the past and that the Bible was worn out as the foundation for intelligent thinking. In the midst of all this, human nature, poor, weak human nature, which yet delights to dwell on the thought of its own self-sufficiency, breaks forth from the leash of "culture" by which it had been fenced by the "Higher Critic", and goes headlong into a war which has no precedent in the history of man, for bloodthirstiness, ferocity, and the primitive instincts which we were supposed to have left behind us with the skins and staves of prehistoric days. During the years in which we were told most comfortingly that we were really becoming too cultured for the simple Bible and the faith which has really been the secret of our Empire's greatness, men have been puzzling their brains and paying large sums of money to invent and manufacture the cleverest death-dealing machines which would blow the greatest number of men into eternity in the shortest space of time. That is how much our "culture" and "Higher Criticism" has been worth, revealing to us the fact that human nature behind the veneer which we call civilization, apart from the grace of God, is not one inch removed from the savage who went forth in days gone by with club and spear to settle his quarrels.

And yet, when the hearts of men are aching and stunned by the terrible reality of this dread war and cannot but realize that no earthly power can cope with such a state of affairs, that our only hope is reliance on the Power of the Infinite to whom men and women have been so indifferent, and Who alone understands all mysteries. We are informed that the "Age" is too advanced for old time Evangelism. We need something "cultured," and so we are given a series of lectures on "Christian Citizenship," which, when analyzed means a Citizenship without Christ, with an apology for the Bible and an apology for God!

At such an hour, when men at the front of the battlefield cry upon their Maker in their last hours of agony; agony assured that the Christ and the God of the Gospels and the deity which has been enshrined to us by the faith of the people in these infallible deities, shall continue unmolested, in two churches, Methodist and Presbyterian, the pulpits have been occupied for fourteen nights, without any reference to the Blood of Christ applied to the heart of man, as being the only remedy for sin. Instead we have been given shallow platitudes, which any intelligent child in a High school essay could give as a model for right living, entirely apart from religion. We are still told that we are moving on towards that wonderful "brotherhood of man" of which we have hear a great deal and to which we shall get no nearer until man acknowledges Christ and His power to save from sin.

When the world is plunged into the greatest vortex of blood and grief, what do we want to hear about churches providing theatres? When a crisis comes and we are faced with the issues of life and death we find out how very superfluous such things are, and that life in its fullness, can be lived very well without them.

Lastly, let me say that I consider so-called evangelists who do not believe in the wonder working power of the blood of Christ, (and if they did, it would be impossible for them to face large audiences seeking for comfort and help hungry for something more than the world and its intelligence to satisfy the heart of man, without preaching Him) should be honest and declare their views, not enter the pulpits of churches, pulpits which have been consecrated to the preaching of the Gospel, as wolves in sheep's clothing, poisoning the minds of the very young and the illiterate.

Thanking you for your kind consideration. Believe me,

Yours sincerely,

E. M.

DAILY WAR BILL TOTALS $40,225,000

Does Not Include the Destruction of Property in War Zone Nor Some Other Losses.

PARIS, Oct. 18.—The war bill which Europe is meeting daily is now figured up as follows:

Russia	$14,000,000
Germany	7,225,000
France	7,000,000
Great Britain	5,000,000
Austria	4,000,000
Various	3,000,000
Total	$40,225,000

Reliable Figures.

The French appropriation is from official figures as announced by M. Ribot, Minister of Finance; the British estimate by the London Statist; the German total from "an authoritative source" in a Geneva paper; and the other sums from various conservative estimates which have appeared in one place or another.

The item "various" represents the probable expense to which Servia, Belgium, and the neutral countries of Switzerland, Italy, Roumania, Turkey, Greece, Holland, and Denmark have been put.

National Debts Go Up.

The vast total does not include the destruction of property where fighting is taking place, nor the well-nigh incalculable losses to Europe of 20,000,000 men under arms being taken from production. There are no indications in France that exhaustion has set in, but it is evident that the accumulated treasure of even the richest country on the Continent is being poured out at a rate that adds $200,000,000 a month to the national debt.

THE WORLD AT WAR

If Italy, Greece, Bulgaria, Portugal and Roumania are Drawn Into Conflict by Turkey

Fierce Assaults Of Germans Have Been Fruitless

Crossed the Ysar River in Their Advance But the Belgians Opened the Dykes and They Were Forced to Retire Before a Heavy Fire—Allies Show Wonderful Spirit.

GERMAN ATTACKS WERE MAINTAINED

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The Official Press Bureau at 11 o'clock to-night issued the following statement of conditions in the western theatre of war:

"Severe fighting continues with little intermission along the allies' line, especially towards the north. The German resistance is stubborn and fierce counter-attacks are made by them frequently.

"Nevertheless, the British are steadily gaining ground. In a counter-attack one brigade delivered a brilliant bayonet charge, accounting for many of the enemy, whose losses throughout the fighting are heavy."

PARIS, Oct. 30.—Officials returning here from the battle-front declare that success for the allies has grown out of the series of furious conflicts on the extreme left wing, lying near the coast, as well as in the vicinity of Ypres and Arras. Everywhere, they say, the Belgians, French and British forces have been able to resist the onslaughts of the German columns and to reply with counter-attacks so full of vigour that they carried the allies always still farther forward in the movement to recapture Belgium.

The unhesitating manner in which the Germans threw their masses of men at the allied positions time after time, these officers declare, caused astonishment. In the lines of the allies the impression prevailed that it was the determination of the Germans to break through at any cost. Their heroic sacrifices were vain, however, for after they had used themselves as a human battering ram they were compelled to fall back without having accomplished their task.

Opened Dykes Beat Enemy.

The opening of the dykes by the Belgians near the mouth of the River Yser placed a formidable obstacle in the way of the Germans, who were compelled to recross the river, and during this operation suffered severely from the allies' artillery.

The attacks of the Germans to-day are reported not to have been accompanied with the violence of their previous assaults. The opposing forces were constantly in contact.

The behaviour of all the allied troops under the terrific strain has been wonderful. Battalions of French marines, formed of supernumeraries from the fleet, covered themselves with exceptional glory in the great bayonet charge along the coast line, which did much toward forcing the Germans to retire.

THE BALKAN NATIONS TO ENTER WAR

Turkey's Participation is Likely to be The Torch Which Will Set Eastern Europe Aflame.

MORE BRITONS NEEDED

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The complications of the European war have been increased by the entrance of the Turkish empire into the conflict on the side of the Teutonic allies. Following the Breslau's exploit in bombarding Theodosia, Russia, Turkish destroyers have sunk the Russian gunboat Donets in Odessa harbour and damaged three Russian and one French merchantmen.

No official declaration of war has been made, but Turkey's action seems to make it probable that the area of conflict may be greatly widened and the issues complicated. The Balkans, whence sprung the present European conflict, present such a network of hostile interests that Greece and the other Balkan nations may easily be drawn into the vortex.

Greece it is believed will likely be the first state now neutral to throw her weight against the Ottoman army. Bulgaria holds a remarkable position. She is bound to Russia by racial ties and to Great Britain by obligations for financial support in the last war. But her interests and sentiments are violently hostile to Turkey and Greece.

Turkey's Programme.

An attempt to invade the Caucasus on one side and Egypt on the other is the programme military men think the Turkish army is likely to endeavour to carry out. Turkish forces have been gathering recently in Syria and Palestine but a march across the Sinai Peninsula will be a hard one, because the country is virtually a desert. The English papers are confident that the protection of the Suez Canal against a raid and of Egypt against invasion are well provided for. They recognize that the addition of Turkey to the belligerent forces probably will prolong the war and increase its horrors. They say that this means that Great Britain must raise more men. How long Italy can remain aloof is a question being asked by the newspapers.

The Portugese government describes the German invasion of Angolo as a small affair, but it is thought here that it may result in bringing Portugal definitely into the general war on the side of the triple entente.

Dominion Government Will Be Asked to Finance Big Proposition

CALGARY, ALTA. Oct. 30.—A pretentious scheme, which contemplates the cultivation of a million or more acres of land that is now raw, and the seeding of it to grain with the idea of bringing the trade balance of the Dominion up to normal, will be presented to the Dominion Council of Agriculture, which convenes in Winnipeg on Tuesday. The plan is sponsored by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and a delegation representing that organization will confer with the Council. The idea is for the manufacturers, the farmers, the banking and railroad interests to shape up the plan and give it support, and ask the Dominion to finance it. In addition to the revenue that it would produce, and the land it would reclaim and the money it would put into circulation, it would do much to safeguard the Empire against any shortage of foodstuffs in war time.

HUNGARY READY TO QUIT.

And Servia is About Exhausted, Result of Three Years' Fighting

LONDON, Oct. 30. — The Russian reoccupation of Czernowitz, in Bukowina, is considered important as this town is a railroad junction, and its possession frees another railroad line to Lodz, which again is in possession of Russian troops.

Rumours are again current in London to-day that Hungary, weary of a war in which she has nothing to gain, would welcome a chance to quit.

It is suggested also that Servia soon may be compelled to retire within her own boorders and assume a purely defensive role in consequence of the national exhaustion resulting from the fighting of three campaigns in as many years.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY

"My boy Frank seemed weak-chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mr B. Stevens, Wingn, Man. "The usual medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and found it to be exactly what was needed to cure him." No treatment is so thorough nor effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

British Prepare To Meet Turkish Attacks In Egypt

Cavalry Force Near Red Sea and Scout Ships in Suez Gulf --Germans Create Trouble in the Italian-African Colonies -- German Officers Command Sultan's Warships.

WENT TO WAR WITHOUT WARNING

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Turkey is not merely at war with Russia. She has flagrantly thrown the gauntlet to the Triple Entente. Her warships within 24 hours have attacked the cities of Odessa, Theodosia and Novorossysk, have sunk the small Russian gunboat Donets, have shelled the French steamer Portugal and have destroyed or damaged five Russian merchant vessels.

Simultaneously she has put her troops in motion, evidently launching troops against the British in Egypt. A despatch from Cairo states that Turkish cavalry divisions are approaching the gulf of Akabah, the most easterly portion of the Red Sea, and the British and native forces in Egypt are preparing for an attack.

It is reported that Turkish scout vessels equipped with wireless have appeared at the entrance of the Gulf of Suez, and reports from several sources to-night indicate that industrious efforts are being made to foment anti-Christian sentiment in North Africa and in Asia Minor. The governer of the Italian Province of Cyrenaica has sent a report to his Government stating that a critical situation exists in the Italian African colonies owing to the Pan-Islam movement spread by the Germans and Turks among the Arabs.

War Without Notice.

The Ottoman Empire, casting her lot with Germany, went to war without warning, scorning the usual preliminary notice of hostilities. The bombardment of Theodosia and the threat at Novorossyk was quickly followed yesterday by a destroyer raid into the harbour of Odessa and the attacks by the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau upon Russian shipping in the Black Sea There are credible reports that the Turkish warships are comanded by German officers, and that navy and army are in full control of the German Government.

Reports have been received here from Constantinople that the Russian and Turkish fleets are engaged in battle off Odessa.

Despatches from Berlin say that Russian ships tried to prevent the Turkish fleet from entering the Black Sea from the Bosphorus on Wednesday, and that in the fighting which followed two Russian destroyers were sunk. Another report in Berlin says that four Russian gunboats and one torpedo boat were sunk in this encounter.

It is officially reported by the Russian Government that two Turkish destroyers ran into the harbour of Odessa, yesterday, and opened fire on the city and shipping It is probable that the authorities at Odessa were not aware that a state of war existed, and that Turkish ships had already attacked elsewhere in the Black Sea.

CLOSE TO THE EMDEN'S SMOKE

PARIS, Oct. 30—Advices received here to-day show that it was the French torpedo-boat destroyer Mousquet which, with the Russian cruiser Zemtchug, was sent to the bottom yesterday at Penang, Straits Settlements, by the German cruiser Emden.

Another version of the affair is given in the Matin. This says that the Emden entered Penang disguised as a Russian warship, flying the Russian colours and skillfully concealing her identity until she got well into port. Then, according to the Matin's correspondent, the Emden suddenly hoisted the German flag and opened fire on the Zemtchug, which, taken by surprise and unable to defend herself, was sunk in a few minutes.

The Emden then dashed out to sea, with the Mousquet courageously following her The torpedo-boat destroyer tried to torpedo the cruiser, but the fight was too unequal and the Mousquet was sent to the bottom.

The correspondent adds that all the cruisers of the allied fleet in the vicinity of Penang, notably those of Japan, are now pursuing the Emden

The Battle of The Press Agents

Serbs Capture Austrian Band and Austrians Take Servian Poet

ROME, Oct. 11 (by mail)—Press agents for warring nations introduce an incredible element of humour into the great European war tragedy.

Following the Sabatz encounter in which the despised Servians were triumphant, the Servian press agent, adding insult to injury, sent forth the story that the famous Austrian regimental band had been captured in the battle and had been forced to play Servian national airs in the cafes of Nish.

No sooner had the humiliating account gained publicity than the Austrian press agent sat down at his desk in Vienna and launched a denial of the story. He declared it was only an invention of the Serbs, who had in reality dressed up one of their own bands in Austrian uiforms and marched them from cafe to cafe, in a desire to bring ridicule and humiliation upon their superior enemy.'

The Austrian press agent was not content, however, with the denial, and shortly after the publication of the captured regimental band story, the press department of Francis Joseph's dual kingdom setn out a report worthy of an ingenious theatrical publicity promoter

The great Servian poet, Wukitichivitch, said the Austrian press agent, had been captured and was being held in prison at Vienna. So impressed with the heroic exploits of the Austrians, and with their national nobility of character, had Wukitichivitch become that he could not restrain himself from bursting into son praising Austria's valour

The story of the imprisoned Servian poet inditing poems to the enemy had no sooner been released from the mimeograph, than a wild cry arose from the Servian press head quarters at Nish.

"The is no Servian poet named Wukitichivitch," said the Serbs, "the Austrians have merely invented him."

Thus while the whole of Europe is involved with tragic consequence in the bickerings of Austria and Servia, the busy press agents of the two nations are carrying on their party warfare of words

OUTLOOK FOR ENEMY IS NOT PROMISING

PARIS, Oct. 30.—General Berthaut, a French military critic, in summing up the situation to-day in a published article, declares that the outlook for the Germans is bad all along the line. He predicts another effort against the allies' left which will be a serious one. The idea is advanced by some observers that the Germans will abandon their effort to get through to Calais, and try instead to reach Boulogne, but it is not believed that this slight change of route will increase the chances of success.

WAITING POLICY TOWARD TURKEY

Allies Will Make No Decision On Attitude to be Taken for a Few Days.

BORDEAUX, Oct. 31, via Paris, 1.15 a.m.—Turkey's entrance into the war was the sole topic of conversation here to-day. It occupied the attention of the ministers at a council of the cabinet. Speculation was rife as to the consequences which Turkey's action would have on the European situation.

In official circles it was said that the attitude of the French Government for the present will be a waiting one. Complete solidarity exists among England, France and Russia, it was said, in the face of the situation created by the action of the Turkish warship in the Black Sea, but no decision as to what move will be made is expected for a few days.

According to advices received by the French Government there are now 1,300 German military officers and engineers in Turkey.

WHEN BABY IS ILL

When the baby is ill or out of sorts give him Baby's Own Tablets. They are the ideal medicine for little ones and never fail to relieve constipation and indigestion; cure colds, allay simple fevers and promote healthful sleep. Concerning them Mrs. F. Wnrker, Ingersoll, Ont., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for eight years and can highly recommend them to all mothers for babyhood and childhood ailments." The tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"How did you come to vote the prohibition ticket?"

"They appealed to me at the psychological moment," replied Col. Stillwell. "They made up a convivial party the night before election and the next moring's headache was such that I was willing to do anything in my power to show my hatred for the demon rum."

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

They returned to their own cave, bade the colonists once more cover their heads, and entered, carefully closing the doorway after them. All four dined together, in trure Merucaan style, on the familiar food of the Abyss. The colonists seemed a little more reassured, but talk languished none the less.

The afternoon was spent in preparing a second cave; for, in spite of all the girl's entreaties, Allan was determined to make another visit to the village of the Lost Folk as soon as his arm should permit.

"Nothing can happen this time, dear girl," he assured her as she sat resting by the mouth of the newly prepared dwelling. "You'll have two absolutely faithful and efficient guards always within call by night. By day you can barricade ourself with them, if there's any sign of danger."

"I know, Allan, but—"

"There's no other way! Our work is just begun!"

She nodded silently, then said in a low tone:

"Yours the labour; mine the waiting, the watching, and the fear!"

"The fear? Since when have you grown timid?"

"Only for you, Allan! Only for you! Suppose, some time, you should not come back!"

He laughed.

"We thrashed that all out the first time. It's old straw, Beta. My end of the task is getting these people here. Yours is waiting, watching—and being strong!"

Her hand tightened on his, and for a little while they sat quite still and without speech, watching he day draw to its close.

Far below, New Hope River chattered its incessant gossip to the vexing boulders. Above, in the sky, lazy June clouds, wool-white, drifted to westward, as though seeking the glory that there promised to transmute them into gold and crimson.

A pleasant wind swayed the forest, wherein the scarlet birds flitted like flashes of flame. The beauty of the outlook thrilled their hearts, leaving no room for words.

But suddenly Allan's eyes narrowed, and with a singular hardening of expression, a tightening of the jaw, he peered away at the dim, haze-shrouded line of far horizon to northeastward.

He cast a sidelong glance at Beatrice. She had noticed nothing.

One moment he made as though to speak, then repressed the words, and once more gazed at the horizon.

There, so ague as almost to leave a doubt in the mind, yet, after all, only too terribly real, his keen sight had detected something which caused his heart to throb the quicker and his eye to gleam with hate.

For, at the very rim of the world, dim, pale, ominous, three tiny threads of smoke were hanging in the evening air.

SERIAL—2—Monday

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE ANNUNCIATION.

A week later all was ready for Allan's second trip into the Abyss.

His arm had recovered its usual strength and suppleness, for his flesh, healthy as any savage's, now had the power of healing with a rapidity unknown to civilised men in the old days.

And his abounding vigour dictated action—always action, progress, and accomplishment. Only one thing depressed him—idleness.

It was on the second day of July, according to the rude calendar they were keeping, that he once more made farewell to Beatrice and, borne by the Pauillac, headed for the village of the Lost Folk.

He left behind him all matters in a state of much improvement. Zangamon and Bremilu were now well installed in the new environment and seemingly content. By night they fished in New Hope Pool, making hauls such as their steaming sea had never yielded.

They wandered—not too far, however—in the forest, gradually making the acquaintance of the wondrous upper world, and with their strangely acute instincts finding fruits, bulbs and plants that well agreed with them for food.

Allan had carefully instructed them in the use of the wonderful "fire-bow"—the revolver—warning them, however, not to waste ammunition. They learned quickly, and now Beatrice found her larder supplied each night with game, which they dressed and brought her in the evening gloom, eager to serve their mistress in all possible ways.

They fished for her as well, and all the choicest fruits were her portion. She, in turn, cooked for them in their own cave. And for an hour or two each night she instructed them in English.

Short are the annals of peace—and peace reigned at Settlement Cliffs those few days at least. Progress!

She could feel it, every hour. And her thoughts of Allan, now abandoning their melancholy hue, began to thrill with a new and even greater pride.

"Only he, only he could have brought these things to pass!" she murmured sometimes. "Only he could have planned all this, dreamed this dream, and brought it to reality; only he could labour for the future so strongly and so well!"

And in her heart the love that had been that of a girl became that of a woman. It broadened, deepened and grew calmer.

Its fever cooled into a finer, purer glow. It strengthened day by day, transmuting to a perfect trust and confidence and peace.

Allan returned safely inside the week with two more of the Folk—warriors and fishers both. Beatrice would have welcomed the arrival of even one woman to bear her some kind of company, but she realized the wisdom of this plan.

"The main thing at first," he explained, as they sat again on the terrace the evening of his return, "the very most essential thing is to build up even a small force of fighting men to hold the colon yand protect it—a stalwart advance guard, as this were a military expedition. After that the women and children can come. But for the present there's no place for them."

Now that there were four Merucaans, all seemed more contented. The little group settled down into some real semblance of a community.

Work became systematised. Life was beginning to take firm root in the world again, and already the outlines of the future colony were commencing to be sketched in.

So far as Stern could discover, no disaffection as yet existed. The Folk, in any event, were singularly stolid, here as in their own home. If the colonists sometimes muttered together against conditions or concerning the lie Allan had told about the patriarch, he could never discover the fact.

He derived a singular sense of power and exaltation from watching his settlers at their work.

Strange figures they made in the upper world, descending the cliff at night, their torches flaring on their pure-white hair bound with gold ornaments, their nets slung over their brown-clad shoulders.

Strange, too, were the sensations of Beta and Allan as they beheld the flambeaux gleaming silently along the pool or over the surface when the Folk put forth on the rude rafts Allan had helped them build.

And as, with the same weird song they had used in the under world, the heavy-laden Merucaans clambered again up the terraces to their dwelling in the rock, something drew very powerfully at Allan's heart.

He anaylsed it not, being a man of deeds rather than of introspection; yet it was "the strong man yearning toward his kind," the very love of his own race within him—the thrill, the inspiration of the master builder laying the foundations for better things to be.

Allan and the girl had long talks about the character of the future civilisation they meant to raise.

"We must begin right this time at all hazards," he told her. "The world we used to know just happened; it just grew up, hit-or-miss, without scientific planning or thought or care. It was partly the result of chance, partly of ignorance and greed. The kind of human nature it developed was in essence a beast nature, with 'Grab!' for its creed.

"We must do better than that! From the very start, now, we must nip off the evil bud that might later blossom into private property and wealth, exploitation and misery. There shall be no rich men in our world now and no slaves. No idlers and no oppressed. 'Service' must be our watchword, and our motto 'Each for all and all for each!'

"While there are fish within the river and fruit upon the palm, none shall starve and none shall hoard. Superstition and dogma, fear and cruelty, shall have no place with us. We understand—you and I; and what we know we shall teach. And nothing shall survive of the world that was, save such things as were good. For the old order has passed away—and the new day shall be a better one."

Thus for hours at a time, by starlight and moonlight on the rock-terrace or by the fire-glow in their cave—now home-like with rough-hewn furniture and mats of plaited grass—they talked and dreamed and planned.

And executed, too; for they drew up a few basic, simple laws, and these they taught their little colony even now, for from the very beginning they meant the germs of the new society should root in the hearts of the rescued race.

The third trip was delayed by a tremendous rain and poured with tropic suddenness and fury over the face of the world, driven on the breath of a wild-shouting tempest.

For the space of two days heaven and earth were blotted out by the grey, hurling sheets of wind-driven water, while down the canyon New Hope River roared and foamed in thunder cadences.

Beta and Allan, warmly and snugly sheltered in their cave, cared nothing for the storm. It only served to remind them of that other torrential downpour, soo after they had reached the village of the Folk; but now how altered the situation! Captives then, they were masters now; and the dread chasms of the Abyss were now exchanged for the beauties and the freedom of the upper world.

No wind could shake, no deluge inmade, their house among the everlasting rock-ribs. Bright crackled their fire, and on the broad divan of cedar he had hewn and covered thick with furs, they two could lie and talk and dream, and let the storm rage careless of its impotent fury.

"There's only one sorrow, in my heart," whispered Beta, drawing his head down on her breast and smoothing his hair with that familiar, well-loved caress. "Just one, dear—can you guess it?"

"No millinery shops to visit, you mean?" he rallied her.

"Oh, Allan, when I'm so much in earnest, how can you?"

"Well, what's the trouble sweetheart?"

"When the storm ends you're going to leave me again! I wish—I almost wish it would rain for ever!"

He made no answer, and she, as one who sees strange and sad visions, gazed into the leaping flames, and in her deep grey eyes lay tears unshed.

"Sing to me!" he murmured presently.

Stroking his head and brow, she sang—as aforetime at the bungalow upon the Hudson:

Stark wie der Fels,
Tief wie das Meer,
Muss deine Liebe,
Muss deine Liebe sein! . . .

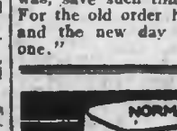
WOMAN'S MOST SUCCESSFUL MEDICINE

Known All Over The World —Known Only For The Good It Has Done.

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, as received so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In nearly every community you will find women who have been restored to health by this famous medicine. Almost every woman you meet knows of the great good it has been doing among suffering women for the past 30 years.



Fox Creek, N. B.—"I have always had pains in the abdomen and a weakness there and often after meals a soreness in my stomach. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better and I can work with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. WILLIAM S. BOURQUE, Fox Creek, N. B.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, many of whom state that it has saved them from surgical operations.

Dr. Chase Is No Stranger

In This Home — Receipts Book and Medicines Kept at Hand All the Time.

There is no better safeguard against disease and suffering than a good cathartic medicine. In the great majority of homes Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are constantly kept at hand, because they quickly awaken the action of liver, kidneys and bowels, and cure the most common ills of life.

Mrs. Thos. Smith, Jamestown, Ont., writes:—'Dr. Chase is no stranger in our home, for we have two of his Receipt Books in the house. My father and my husband's father each had one, and I ahve been familiar with it ever since I can remember. It was only natural that we should use the Kidney-Liver Pills, and we found them so satisfactory in regulating the digestive system and curing the common ills of life that we always keep them on hand. Many a time these pills have saved me much suffering and prevented serious disease. We also keep the Ointment in the house

BRITON'S WAR TAX BURDEN IS ENORMOUS

Many Face Bankruptcy Because of It, But Few Complain—Government Exercising its Ingenuity to Find Subjects for New Levies —Income Tax Must Advance

(By Herbert Corey.)

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Britain is now talking about two things—and about two things only. The first is the war. The second is the cost of the war.

"What will be the next income tax" I asked a man connected with the Government. He threw up his hands:

"I don't know," said he. "No one knows. Maybe five bob in the pound."

Five bob in the pound would be just one-quarter of the taxpayer's income. It seems outrageous. No doubt it is outrageous. But nations cannot have such luxuries as war without paying for them. The remarkable item of the situation is the resignation with which every one is facing the inevitable. One doesn't hear any anticipatory protests. The man who can just make ends meet on his salary to-day views the certainty of comparative poverty in silence.

"What are you going to do about it" asked the man in the Government. "We didn't want this war—but we got it, and we'll have to pay for it."

Britain's total debt is now greater than she has ever before carried. In 1854 the gross debt of the state stood at 802 million pounds. In 1913 the gross debt was 716 million pounds. Almost every form of taxation was found by Lloyd-George and the Liberal party to meet the new forms of expenditure, discovered, such as old-age pensions and the like. The revenue of the state was just a trifle better than the outgo. Then the war came on.

What Churchill Threatened.

"I must have fifty million pounds for the Navy," announced Winston Churchill before hostilities began.

"Impossible," said various Conservative members of the Cabinet. "We can't' afford it."

"Then you must take my resignation," said Churchill. "I have already spent seven million pounds."

Churchill didn't resign. The total expenditure directly and indirectly authorized in those first furious days, amounted to 150,000,000 pounds. That sent the public debt nearer the top of the thermometer than it had ever been. And the war had just begun. No one knows how long it will last or how much it will cost.

"Suppose that Britain has 1,000,000 men in the field," said one authority upon war costs. "They will cost her not less than three dollars a day per man. That does not take into consideration the destruction of material, the building of ships and guns, and the original outfitting of each man."

It costs $50 to put a soldier in the field, for clothes, equipment, ammunition, and the initial transportation. Britain now has 200,000 men in the field. She has 600,000 recruits in her training camps. There is $2,400,000 a dozen cruisers. They were old and a dozen cruistrs. They were old and of slight value, it is true. It has cost her $5,000,000 to bring back her wounded and organize her hospital services. The war has barely started.

If the sources of taxation had remained normal, the expenditures to date would ensure that the next tax rate would be at least one-sixth higher than the last one. But the expenditures have only begun. The sources are anything but normal. Dozens of ports have been actually closed. Hundreds of manufactories have been shut down. At least one-fifth of Britain's employees are out of work. Business has been shot to pieces.

"I have just returned from my annual trip to see my customers," said a tailor in a large way of business. "I sold just one-quarter of what I usually do."

Digging Up Subjects of Taxation.

Britain now taxes almost everything that is taxable. When you pay your bill at the hotel a penny stamp is stuck on it. If you keep a manservant you pay 15 shillings a year for the privilege. If your wife delights her soul by the contemplation of your armourial bearings upon the door of your motor car you pay two guineas each year. If your crest is merely displayed on her notepaper, the cost is reduced by half. For the car itself a tax of a pound or more must be paid. If the youngster has an air-gun, papa must cough up 10 shillings annually. If there is a death or a birth or a marriage or a burial in your family and the fact gets on the record, a tax must be paid. When you lease a house or inherit money or go into an inebriates' home, someone must settle with the state. Maybe the state's necessity may mother some more sources o frevenue. Just now it seems that everything has been taxed, from the dog to the grandmother. The only way out is to raise the tax.

"Everyone agrees that the tax on earned incomes will be not less than half a crown in the pound," said a banker the other day.

That amounts to one-eighth of the annual earned income. I have a friend here, a working newspaper man, who is in receipt of 1,000 pounds a year salary. The rent of his modest "maisonette" is 125 pounds each year. If the half-crown in the pound becomes a reality he will pay to the state each month for the privilege of vicariously fighting the Germans just the same sum that he pays to the landlord for keeping a roof over his wife's head.

"The kid," said my friend, "comes out of school next year. I can see that. His mother will teach him what she knows, and I'll teach him what I know, and he'll have to hustle for the rest."

Taxes in One Case.

This newspaper man, I may add, is an American. He's a perfectly good citizen of Uncle Sam. But that makes no difference. He'll have to pony up his 125 pounds each year just the same. His city editor presumably gets a larger salary. He also inherited 10,000 pounds not long ago from a distant relative, for which he paid 11¼ per cent. to the state. By his own savings he made up the amount to the original 10,000 pounds, and invested it in 3 per cent. bonds. They yield him 300 pounds' income each year.

To-day he pays ninepence in the pound on the salary he earns, and a shilling and tuppence on the income on the money inherited and saved. If his unearned income had been more than 3,000 pounds, he would have been paying a sixpence in the pounds for the difference. Now he expects to pay half a crown in the pound on the income he earns and five shillings in the pound for the income he doesn't earn. What is he going to do about it? The best that may happen is that the war will come to an end sooner than any one can reasonably expect and that the income tax will not go as high as everyone reasonably fears.

"The net result of this war," said a man in high place the other day, "is that everyone in Europe and Britain will soon be stone broke. One thing is certain: The more money one has, the greater proportion one must pay. We are all ruined to that in Britain."

Always Keep Them In The House

That's what Mr. W. J. Hastwood, of Carleton Place, Ont., says about Gin Pills.

"I have taken Gin Pills and find them good for pain in the Joints, Swollen Hands and Ankles, and all symptoms of Kidney and Bladder Trouble. We always keep them in the house."

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

If you are feeling badly, perhaps it is your Kidneys or Bladder that is causing the trouble. If there is pain over the Bladder—if the urine is hot and scalding—too free or scanty—if the urine shows brick dust deposits or mucus—if there is constant pain in the back—restless sleep and loss of appetite—then you certainly need Gin Pills. Get them to-day and feel better to-morrow.

Gin Pills are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 boxes for $2.50. Free trial treatment if you write

WORLD'S GREATEST KIDNEY REMEDY

"Fruit-a-tives" Have Proved Their Value in Thousands of Cases

WONDERFUL RECORD OF A WONDERFUL CURE

Only Remedy That Acts On All Three Of The Organs Responsible For The Formation Of Uric Acid In The Blood.

Many people do not realize that the Skin is one of the three great eliminators of waste matter from the body. As a matter of fact, the Skin rids the system of more Urea (or waste matter) than the Kidneys. When there is Kidney Trouble, Pain In The Back and Acrid Urine, it may not be the fault of the kidneys at all, but be due to feeble Skin Action, or Constipation of the bowels.

"Fruit-a-tives" cures weak, sore, aching Kidneys, not only because it strengthens these organs but also because "Fruit-a-tives" opens the pores, sweetens the stomach and stimulates the action of the skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

LAWRANCE D'ORSAY WOULD LIKE TO BE A SOLDIER

Always Loves a Military Part He Tells a Vancouver Interviewer.

"Lady Van," in the Vancouver Saturday "Sunset" says:

"I am never so happy as when in uniform. I love to play a part in which I can be a soldier," enthused Mr. Lawrance D'Orsay as he stood resplendent in uniform between acts at the Empress Theatre the other night. 'I have always wanted to be a soldier; when a young man it was my ardent desire. But you know it costs an awful lot of money to be an officer in the British army, and as my dear old governor couldn't afford that for me, I rather gave up the idea for a while and dug into law. All my family for heaven knows how far back have been lawyers. Uncles, cousins and the whole jolly lot took to law, so I was expected to follow suit. But, don't you see, I love the out-of-doors, long tramps and, that sort of thing you know, and the musty old law books didn't agree with me at all. So as I finally decided I would not make much more than an ornamental lawyer at best, I cut it and became an actor and—here I am you see."

The chuckle that followed this characteristic speech was so much the Earl of Pawtucket that I looked twice to see if Mr. D'Orsay and I were not occupying the centre of the stage with all the accompaniments of footlights and hundreds of almost unseen people just beyond them.

Mrs. D'Orsay, dimpling and charming, perched on a trunk, and Mr. D'Orsay fondly fingering the feathers of his plumed helmet, brought me back to the star's dressing-room with a sense of relief however, and then we talked about the present conflict in Europe.

"It's an awful thing," fumed Mr. D'Orsay, looking ready to step into the front rows of the fight at a moment's notice. "If I could be accepted, I would wish to be there, but as it is I guess I'm better off here."

"I would love to be there!" exclaimed Mrs. D'Orsay excitedly keeping her balance on the trunk top. "I would like to be right in the middle of it and help do things."

"Oh, but we have been happy here in Vancouver," went on Mr. D'Orsay after the crisis talk had drifted. "You can't imagine how we have appreciated it. There we were in New York absolutely gasping in that awful heat when the wire came from Mr. Lawrence. I said 'yes' to his proposition without thinking twice, and we got our duffle together in less than no time and got a train for here. Then when we got off the train and into this beautiful climate—. Well, you would have to experience it as we did to appreciate it. Isn't this climate lovely? It seems absolutely perfect to me. Oh, I tell you we have been happy here.

Speaking of his new play, "The Rented Earl," Mr. D'Orsay was very enthusiastic. "You know," he mused, "if I had not been living, the 'Earl of Pawtucket' would never have been written. Mr. Thomas, the author, came to me one day, and said he: 'D'Orsay, I've been to the Empire once to see the play and five times to see you, and you've given me an idea and now I'm writing a play for you, so that's how it happened, you see. Now Mr. Field, who wrote the book, 'The Rented Earl,' saw me and connected me up with the book immediately and got to work on the play. It was to have been produced in New York later, but Mr. Lawrence is so clever he has arranged to have its very first production here in Vancouver next week. Mr. Field has advised me that he and a number of his friends have left New York, coming directly here to see us put on the play. We are very hard at work at it, and my wife has a part in it," he ended up triumphantly, evidently very pleased that she should be included in his successes.

Just then the inevitable call for the next act came and I hurried away, knowing full well that Mrs. D'Orsay wanted to give that fine uniform a touch here and there and so be quite sure her big handsome husband would look every inch the soldier when he stepped before the footlights a few minutes later.

—Lady Van.

LOCAL PEOPLE SHOULD PURCHASE PROPERTY IN STONEY LAKE

The most casual observer who visits Stoney Lake, invariably remarks about the scarcity of Peterborough citizens holding property in that popular resort. As he passes through the many channels and enquires the names of the cottagers, his surprise becomes increasingly great as he hears the names of people from Toronto, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Rochester and other American cities, and so few from Peterborough.

"What is the matter with your people, anyway?" they ask.

The only reply that can be given is that the resort is too near — too handy—therefore, they do not appreciate the treasures at their back door.

Outsiders are busy and have been for the last four or five years—picking up the cream of the inlands and points, at fairly reasonable prices.

Some day the citizens of Peterborough will waken up—the day of the advent of suburban cars direct to Young's Point and Burleigh Falls—and find all the good sites gone. Then they will make frantic efforts to possess a plot and will likely end up with a tiny lot in some out-of-the-way obscure bay, full of stumps, into which a steamer would never venture.

I fancy I hear someone laugh at the suburban car idea.

They are coming—put your ear to the ground—Sir Adam Beck has begun his triumphant march in the interest of radials. The Hydro Commission needs power. Where can they get it, but at Burleigh Falls, and plenty of it? The power line would serve as an auxiliary to a radial line and there you are.

Then up will go values in all parts of Stoney Lake. Property bought now would prove a good investment. Compare the prices paid for islands this last few years with the paltry sums paid fifteen or twenty years ago—an advance of 500 or 1,000 per cent., and you will get a fair idea of the appreciation in the next period of five years.

Go Up and Possess the Land.

Stoney Lake will then be at Peterborough's front door. Assuredly far-away hills are green," or has-e-citizens would value more the wonderful heritage that is theirs.

There can be no question as to the value of a summer home for any family. We have only to look around us and see the results in the way of health, and proficiency in aquatic sports, which children acquire during their residence at the lakes.

Now is the time to buy. Real estate is going down on account of the war and other economic reasns. Property holders, especially the larger ones—may be desirous of unloading, they may need the money, and need it badly; so, keep your eye open, good times are coming, they always do, when values will again go skyward. Then sell the property if you must; better still, keep it till the last member of the family is gone from under the parental roof, then you may look at it from a different view-point, and decide to spend your few remaining summers in peace and quietness on the shores of Stoney Lake.

Bulgarian General Tells Russians How to Win Battles.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—A Petrograd to Reuter's Telegram Company, says:

"In the recent fighting near Przemysl two generals reported to their commander, the Bulgarian General Radko Dimitrieff, who is leading the Russian army investing Przemysl, that they were unable to hold out owing to the overwhelming numbers of the enemy.

"General Dimitrieff replied with an aphorism which will doubtless become historic. He said: "Don't count the enemy. Beat him.'"

Copeland's Cure For Consumption
WINS CONFIDENCE BY ITS WONDERFUL CURATIVE POWERS.

MR. W. R. COPELAND,
Dear Sir—Now that I am well and strong again, I write to state that the fact I am alive to-day witnesses to the merit of your medicine.

My doctor, a specialist, said that I had the worst kind of consumption and that it was impossible for me to live. He gave me only eight to ten days before the disease would terminate fatally. He also said that it was of no use in treating me, as I was too far gone.

I was left to die, but a friend of mine told me about your medicine and procured me a bottle. Without much hope, I tried it. It did wonders. First the weakening perspiration stopped and the food I took stayed in my stomach. After a second bottle, I commenced to regain my appetite and was up in a few days of the time that the doctor said I should die. Five weeks later I was at work and have been working ever since.

I only wish I could impress the worth of your medicine, especially those afflicted with consumption as I was, for I undoubtedly owe my life to its use. I will at all times cheerfully answer any correspondence, and you are at liberty to publish this letter if you think it will help to recommend your medicine to others.

I remain, Gratefully yours,
DAVID WARNOCK, Street Car Conductor,
302 Withrow Ave., Toronto.

The remarkable power of this medicine marks it as one of the greatest discoveries of this century. Its work is only just started, but it is safe to say that its reputation will grow world-wide.

It is a blessing, as all who have used it testify. To the real "down-and-out" consumptive, the chronic sufferers from bronchial and lung troubles—it is something more than a blessing. To them it means the difference between happiness and misery, and sometimes life instead of a grave.

It is a medicine that is honest. No false claims are made for it. It is good, most beneficially good for the ailments specified above. There, even consumption, it will tackle, fight and OVERCOME. If you have a bad cough or cold—take this medicine. If you are a consumptive—take this medicine, for a greater medicine for consumption has NEVER BEEN KNOWN. If you are troubled with bronchitis and can't sleep at night for coughing—take this medicine. Your trouble will become a memory. If your throat or lungs are in any way weak or sensitive—take this medicine—and they will become strong and normal.

Cavities heal under its healing influence. Congestion is freed by its action to remove phlegm and the lungs are clear and work naturally without pain or distress. Hemorrhages, night sweats, poor appetite, inability to retain food in the stomach—all these effects of disease are mastered and the system built up under its curative and nourishing powers.

Ask your druggist, or send direct to us. Price, $1.00 per bottle. Testimonials of many others can be had on request. 544

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Own Your Home.

No man who has the opportunity should fail to acquire title to the property in which he is to reside. Until one owns his own home, his life is not as complete as it should be.

Even if a man must go in debt to secure his home, it is the thing for him to do. Paying for a home is as good a game as one can engage in, and the difficulties attending it but lend zest to the struggle. Those who enter the lists almost invariably come out better for the effort.

Really, the chances taken are not formidable. In almost any city, purchase of real estate at a fair valuation is a good business investment. Land values are going up all the while and they will continue to go up for years. In cities like ours with desirable influence and every advantage as a residence city, there is not even the prospect of a reversal.

If there did not exist the commercial argument in favour of owning one's home, there would be plenty of other reasons for recommending it. Some one has remarked that it is like reaching the state of parenthood. When one acquires a home he has somthing worth living for—fighting for. It makes him a better citizen and a better member of society. It gives him a substantial interest in the great organization known as government.

And while it increases a man's sense of obligation to society and his country, it gives him a new sort of freedom. In his own home a man feels at liberty to do things he does not feel like doing in the homes of others. He expands and develops his energy. Perhaps he establishes a talent for mechanics. Perhaps he makes a garden and satisfies an inherent longing to dig and plant. He may never become an inventor or a successful grower of plant life, but he can have the fun and satisfaction of trying without feeling that he is imposing on someone else. If he wants to have a work-bench in the cellar or tear up the lawn for his experiments in gardening, it is his own business.

It costs money to keep up a home, but what of that? It costs money to enjoy any of the pleasures of this life, and there is nothing that gives so big a return for the expenditure as does an abode wherein one can exercise his own will. No other possession he may acquire ever means quite so much to a man as does this first home.

* * *

There is no manhood mill which takes in boys and turns out men. What you call "no chance" may be your only chance. Don't wait for your place to be made for you, make it yourself. Don't wait for somebody to give you a life, Lift yourself Henry Ward Beecher did not wait for a call to a large church with a big salary. He accepted the first pastorate offered him, in a little town near Cincinnati. He became literally the light of the church, for he trimmed the lamps, kindled the fires, swept the rooms, and rang the bell. His salary was only about $200 a year—but he knew that a fine church and a great salary cannot make a great man. It was work and opportunity that he wanted. He felt that if there was anything in him, work should bring it out.

The average boy of to-day who wishes to obtain a liberal education has a better chance by a hundred fold than had Daniel Webster or James A. Garfield. There is scarcely one in good health who reads these lines but can be assured that if he will he may. Here, as elsewhere, the will can usually fin dthe way, and never before were there so many avenues of resource open to the strong will, the inflexible purpose, as there are to-day.

The three most difficult things to do are—to keep a secret, to forget an injury, and make good use of leisure.

SPARE MOMENTS.

What do you do with your spare moments? Do you use them to better yourself, or do you use them for a good time?

You have ambitions, every intelligent person has. Why don't you show the world what you can do? Are you waiting for something to turn up that will give you promotion? That is mighty uncertain. You may be waiting thirty years from now for something to turn up and your best days are past. Then what will you do when you realize your life has been a failure? When you go down the street, look around and you can see examples of people who have been waiting for something to turn up. Ask them and they will tell you where they made their mistakes.

Make use of your spare moments by training yourself for a better position. Make your own opportunities. Show the business world you are a live one, then they will receive you with open arms.

Make something out of yourself. Make up your mind at once.

Take one moment now, and sum up the number of hours you are actually wasting each day. Many of our most prominent men of this country have won their distinction by making use of their spare moments.

Precaution: Any good housekeeper knows that if a tear or hole in a garment is not promptly mended it is liable to soon be past the mending stage. There is one big difference between the worn garment and the human being with a sore place. The garment may be laid aside until a more convenient time for mending, but the sore finger or decaying tooth must be used constantly.

There is only one safe method of caring for ourselves and that is "do it now." I once had a letter from a woman who said that her family physician had told her that she was suffering with a tumour and should have an operation performed at once. She wanted my advice in the matter, and also wanted to know if I would see that she was treated properly if she would come to me to have the operation performed, the cost and probable length of time she would be laid up. I answered all of her questions in detail and she replied that she would come as soon as she could. I heard nothing further from her for fifteen years, when she walked into my office and handed me the letter I had written her.

As I had not been operating a hospital for several years I took her to the best I knew of and when the operation was performed the amount of tumor removed was 42 pounds. She made a complete recovery; but just think of the mental and physical suffering she endured all these years, putting off the dreaded thing when she knew there was no other way, to say nothing of the danger she was incurring from delay.

Another case was not so fortunate. A gentleman wrote of his affliction, and I told him what he ought to do and do it at once. He waited two years and then come to me in great distress, but it was too late. No human agency could do more than make him fairly comfortable for the few months that remained for him.

One of the most frequently neglected conditions and at the same time, one of the most important, is defective teeth, cavities, looseness and Pyorrhea. Conditions of this kind are readily corrected if properly treated in time, but if neglected too long serious constitutional troubles may follow and many, if not all of the teeth may be lost. In nearly all cases of loose teeth there is more or less Pyorrhea, in which case there is more or less pus passing down the side of the tooth and into the food. It is now generally admitted that in these secretions the cause of Rheumatic Arthritis and Endocarditis. The first being that form of rheumatism that enlarges the joints and twists them out of shape, while the latter is a disease of the heart that is serious indeed.

An antiseptic mouth wash should always be used before each meal by everyone who has decayed or loose teeth, and this use should continue until the cavities are filled and the gums made hard and firm by proper treatment.

Dear Doctor—I want to write you again in behalf of my mother. I am so thankful for the relief she has derived from what you advised for her bowels. She has now a regular movement each morning and no more trouble all day. For the last 2 or 3 weeks she has been troubled with an eruption of the skin which itches terribly over her whole body. The blotches are small and dry, no festers or blisters just a little red spot slightly raised up. Sometimes it feels like little pimples. It itches so terribly that she often says, "I believe it will take my life." I have tried rubbing it with salt and water, with soda and borax, with acetic acid and olive oil, with carbolated vaseline, with camphor oil and with sour milk with the cream stirred in. I got an ointment at the druggists, that did no good. The doctor recommended an alcohol bath after a thorough soda bath. It does no good. I suppose the trouble must be eczema, though I do not know. The doctor wants to examine the urine to see if the kidneys are the cause. If it should be so I supose he could do little good. The urine a short time ago was rather excessive, now it is somewhat scanty. If you can tell me any thing that will stop the itching I shall be grateful.

I want to write you shortly with regard to my own condition.

E. R.

Am glad to learn that your mother is now free from the constipation. Much can indeed be gained by keeping the bowels in order and many years added to her life by so doing.

It is difficult for me to state positively just what causes that severe itching. There may be any one of a half dozen different causes and the doctor who advised you to have her urine chemically tested was right; it should be done without delay. Many are the cases of severe itching of the skin due to certain disorders of the kidneys. In case of Diabetes for instance, there is a considerable itching frequently found on the limbs and also in cases of Bright's disease. In various liver troubles the itching is also frequently a permanent symptom. Intestinal and stomach disorders are apt to cause itching of the skin, but as a rule such an itching will not last for any great length of time. Then we come to the diseases of the skin such as Eczema, Salt Rheum, Hives, Erythema and various eruptive diseases. The so-called seven year itch, due to a parasite burrowing itself into the skin may also be the cause. The itching is often almost intolerable. This trouble is also known as Scabies. You have certainly tried a number of different things. Let her try the following: Mix one dram of sulphur with an ounce of vaseline and apply thoroughly to the skin. Repeat the application every 48 hours. Too free use of sulphur will cause rash.

Before each application she should thoroughly wash her body with tar soap. If the trouble is so-called itch, a few days will thus completely cure it, but she should be very careful so that it does not spread.

It will be a good plan for her to wear drawers, stockings and gloves night and day during the treatment, also to wash the clothing with boiling water afterwards. If it is a variety of Eczema, something that could easily be, a special preparation of tissue foods is needed for internal use besides some local preparation. If it is caused by any irregularities of the kidneys, then it is necessary to take up a treatment which will favourably effect such a condition.

For Hallowe'en Party

A reader asks for suggestions for games and entertainment for a Hallowe'en party, and there are, no doubt, other prospective young hostesses who would like a few suggestions.

The most successful kind of Hallowe'en party is usually one in which characteristic costumes are worn. The decorations, of orange paper with black cats and witches, pumpkin lanterns, etc., add to the chances for success.

At a Hallowe'en party as described a good deal of amusement was provided by the use of slips of paper on which were written messages in "witches' ink." Squeeze out and strain the juice of a lemon, and write with it as you would with ink, using a perfectly clean pen. Let the writing dry, and it will be invisible until held over a candle or otherwise exposed to heat. At the party referred to, curious "fortunes" were written on slips of paper and put into a "cauldron," from which they were given to the guests in turn by a girl in witches' costume, and read aloud. Another suggestion is to write "yes" on a number of slips and "no" on about an equal number, and mix them up in a bag. Each guest makes a wish, draws a slip at random and holds it over the heat to see whether the answer is "yes" or "no". It is a good idea to try the lemon-juice writing and see that it works out all right before "springing it on the party."

Among the many games that evoke laughter at Hallowe'en is "blowing out the candle." A prize is offered to anyone who can blow out a lighted candle at the first attempt when blind-folded. The person is blindfolded, turned and twisted and finally led within arm's length of the lighted candle and told to blow. It is quite likely that no one on the whole party will be able to blow it out.

On the same lines is "pinning the tail on the donkey." In this a large paper donkey, minus tail, is hung on a door. The player is blindfolded, given the missing paper tail, and told to pin it on the donkey. These endeavours are often ludicrous in the extreme.

Another game which is very confusing is "Hands". In this all the girls stand behind a paper or old cotton sheet and thrust their hands through slits in it. Those in front guess to whom each pair of hands belong. The one making the greatest number of correct guesses should be given a prize. It is hard to recognise hands when they are detached from the rest of the body in this way. You will pass by your best friend's hands without knowing them. Extra confusion may be added by having the tall girls stoop down and the short ones stand on a stool so that their hands wil come out in places quite different from where they are expected. Having shadows or silhouettes thrown on a white sheet, and guessing who the silhouetted persons are, is another game that arouses interest.

ECONOMICAL COOKERY

The meat chopper is one of several weapons with which the housekeeper is arming herself for the fight against the high cost of plain living. Chopping meat is one of the principal methods of making tough and inexpensive meats tender, that is, dividing it finely and thus cutting the connective tissue into small bits. Such meats have another advantage in that they may be cooked quickly and economically.

In broiling chopped meat there is no reason why it should not be cooked like the best and most expensive tenderloin. The only reason that ever existed for difference in treatment was the toughness of the connective tissue, and this feature has been overcome by the chopping.

The idea to be reached in broiling steak is to sear the surface very quickly, so that the juices which contain the greater part of the flavouring of the meat shall be kept in, and then to allow the heat to penetrate to the inside until the whole mass is cooked. To pass the point where the meat ceases to be puffy and juicy and becomes flat and hard is very desirable, as the palatability is then lost. Exactly the same ideal should be kept in mind in broiling chopped meat. If this were always done, hard, compact, tasteless balls or cakes of meat would be served less often. To begin with, the broiler should be even more carefully greased than for a whole steak. This makes it possible to form the balls or cakes of chopped meat with very little pressure without running the risk of having them pulled to pieces by adhering to the wires of the broiler. They should be heated on both sides evgn more quickly than the steak, because the chopping has provide more ways of escape from the juice, and these openings should be sealed as soon as possible.

Chopped raw meat of almost any kind can be very quickly made into a savoury dish by cooking it with water or with water and milk, for a short time, then thickening with butter and flour, and adding different seasonings as relished, either pepper and salt alone, or onion juice, celery, or tomato. Such a dish may be made to "go further" by serving it on toast or with a border of rice or in some similar combination.

Savory Gravies.

The preparation of savory gravies and sauces is more important in connection with the serving of the cheaper meats than in connection with the cooking of the more expensive.

There are a few general principles underlying the making of all sauces or gravies, whether the liquid used is water, milk, stock, tomato juice, or some combination of these. For ordinary gravy two level tablespoonfuls of flour or one and a half tablespoonfuls of cornstarch or arrowroot is sufficient to thicken a cupful of liquid. This is true excepting when the flour is browned. In this case about one-half tablespoonful more should be allowed, for browned flour does not thicken so well as unbrowned. The fat used may be butter or the drippings from the meat, thes allowance being two tablespoonfuls to a cup of liquid.

The easiest way to mix the ingredients is to heat the fat, add the flour, and cook until the mixture ceases to bubble, and then add the flour, and cook until the mixture ceases to bubble, and then add the liquid. This is a quick method and by using it there is little danger of getting a lumpy gravy. Many persons, however, prefer the old-fashioned one of thickening the gravy by means of flour mixed with a little cold water. The latter method is of course not practicable for brown gravies.

The good flavour of browned flour is often overlooked. If flur is cooked in fat until it is a dark brown colour, a distinctive and very agreebale flavour is obtained. This flavour combines very well with that of current jelly, and a little jelly added to a brown gravy is a great improvement. The flavour of this should not be combined with that of onions or other highly flavoured vegetables.

Savoury Dripping.

As a substitute for butter in seasoning vegetables there is nothing better than sweet savoury drippings. Not all meats supply fats that are savoury in the sense in which the word is employed here. The following fats may be employed alone or in combination for seasoning vegetables: The fat from fried sausages, ham, bacon, and pork, and from roast pork, veal, and chicken. Fats trimmed from poultry, veal, pork and ham may be fried out carefully, and saved for use in cooking vegetables. Such fats have a flavour which comes from seasoning, as in sausage, from smoke as in ham and bacon, or from brown material, as in roast meat. The fat skimmed from the water in which poultry has been boiled and the fats skimmed from the gravies of most roast meats may be clarified and also employed in the preparation of vegetables for the table.

Great care must be taken that all these fats are clean and sweet, and that the temperature at which they are fried out shall not be so high as to impair the flavour.

Directions For Knitting Socks

Some knitters who have hitherto confined their efforts to wristlets and straight mufflers would like to knit socks for the soldiers in the field, but do not quite know how to shape the stock. Following the the directions, as obtained from a member of the Red Cross:

Needles, No. 13. Yarn same as for caps, "Ladyship's Wheeling." Cast on 96 stitches on each of three needles. Rib three inches, knit six inches plain with one purl stitch in centre back. Narrow one stitch on each side of centre purl stitch on back needle; knit six rows, narrow one stitch on each side of centre purl stitch; knit three rows. For heel, put half the whole number of stitches now on three needles on the purl seam needle, knit three inches plain, then when on seam side, purl until three stitches past the seam stitch; knit 4th and 5th together. Purl one, turn, slip 1 knit back plain until the third past the seam stitch, narrow, 1 plain, turn and continue, having each narrowing one stitch further from the seam stitch until there are no more left to take in. Take up the stitches on each side of heel and knit the foot narrowing one stitch on each side needle just before you go on to front needle, till you have 72 stitches on your three needles. Make the foot nine inches long before you narrow for toe: Toe—Narrow every sixth stitch, knit four rows, narrow every fifth stitch. Knit four rows, narrow every third stitch; knit three rows, narrow every second stitch; knit two rows, narrow every stitch, bind off and sew up.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Important Analysis

By EUNICE BLAKE

We hear a great deal about happy brides going to the altar. I have long been a happy wife and the mother of children, but in my case, so far as my feelings were concerned the word should be halter instead of altar. Sensitive women are liable to collapse on the eve of their marriage. And why not? Every one knows that marriage is a lottery. But to say that one will either draw a prize or a blank is absurd. One doesn't draw a blank in the lottery of marriage; it is either a prize or Tartarus.

I confess that as a girl I was emotional, and I have now eradicated emotion from my nature. I had several offers of marriage and chose John as the most desirable of the lot. I felt every confidence in him. My only trouble was that I didn't seem to feel any different the day after I became engaged to him than the day before. There was a lot of emotion during the middle day of the three, but somehow on the third it seemed to have vanished.

I was frightened. What had I done? Engaged myself to a man whom I did not love? How could I have felt all that lovingness—I use the word for want of a better—I experienced the day John proposed to me and I accepted him? From the heavens I had sunk to a bottomless pit. I would have given the world to undo what I had done. Why not undo it? Because there was a sort of subconsciousness in me that I was making a ninny of myself. How could I, who had responded to my lover's words and caresses one day, tell him the next that I had made a prodigious mistake? Besides what assurance had I, should I make this confession, that I would not be as much cast down a day later because I had broken the engagement?

I had the good sense to keep away from John for a couple of days, at the end of which time I recovered from my reaction and wondered at it. Indeed, when I met my fiance again I was back in that emotional condition commonly called love. Love! In four letters are described that which is the foundation of the world. And yet when we speak of it between young persons who are about to mate I think it would better be called emotional insanity. This is not real love, though I admit it may be the beginning of real love.

I soon recovered my equanimity and sailed on smoothly for the four months of my engagement. I was occupied preparing my trousseau, and that kept me from asking myself every few minutes whether or no I was really in love. I think if John had paid a bit of attention to another girl I should have known quite definitely whether I loved him or not. But he was not that kind of a fellow at all. He was perfectly satisfied with me, and I concealed from him the fact that I was constantly fighting doubts whether I loved him well enough to marry him.

I remained in this condition of mental hesitancy till a few days before the day appointed for the wedding; then I had a terrible breakdown. I analyzed my feelings thoroughly, and the analysis was very unsatisfactory. There is nothing so incapable of analysis as love unless it be a poem. But I made what I considered a number of analyses, and every one proved more conclusively than the preceding that I was about to marry a man for whom I had only friendship.

I resisted the temptation to tell him so till I could withstand it no longer, then sent for him. He saw the moment he looked at me that there was something the matter.

"What is it, sweetheart?" he asked anxiously.

There was something in the word sweetheart that threw me back on myself as an engine reversed. But I felt that what was troubling me must come out.

"I am very miserable."

"That's singular. I'm very happy."

"I am afraid I don't love you well enough to marry you."

He took my avowal in a very unloverlike manner. He should have ground his teeth and torn his hair. He did nothing of the kind.

"A sort of stage fright?"

"No; I have long been in doubt. And today I have analyzed my feelings and"—

"In what laboratory did you do it?"

"In the laboratory of introspection."

"Did you put your love into a test tube?"

"I suppose that would express it figuratively."

"Well, if it didn't turn out to be love what did it turn out to be?"

"I don't know."

"It doesn't matter to us since it isn't love. I'll countermand the orders given in preparation for the wedding. The cards are out. We can't recall them."

"That's the most terrible thing about it."

"Terrible! There's nothing terrible in that. We were not going to be married to please these persons. If at the last moment we find we're going to make a mistake we must withdraw of course."

"Of course."

"I'll go at once to countermand the orders."

He turned to go. I called to him. "Haven't you forgotten something?"

He turned and saw me looking at him wistfully.

"Oh, a kiss!"

He came back, took me in his arms and kissed me. I didn't release him.

Germans Report Denied.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Official denial was given in London yesterday to the report sent out from Berlin, Oct. 27, saying there had been sanguinary encounters between the British garrison and Indian troops at Alexandria, Egypt, and that a court-martial held in Alexandria had sentenced 30 men to death.

This German report was from official sources. It was declared yesterday to be an entire fabrication, the best proof of which was found in the fact that no Indian troops are stationed at Alexandria.

First Beef Extract Factory.

Something over a hundred years ago the Ascendados (ranchmen) of Uruguay complained to the government that over 450,000 head of cattle were being killed annually for their hides alone. The carcasses were thrown to the dogs or left on the rolling pampas for the vultures to devour. Beef in Uruguay was so plentiful that it was something of a nuisance evidently. Of course that day has passed, but they still have cattle enough down there to convert some 700,000 head into 112,000,000 pounds of jerked beef in one year, most of which is sold to Brazil, Cuba, Porto Rico and other tropical countries. Perhaps but few people know that the first great factory for the production of beef extract was established at Fray Bentos, a little city on the Uruguay river about a hundred miles above Buenos Aires, the cosmopolitan capital of Argentina, and that it is still operating. Fray Bentos has been called the greatest kitchen in the world. On some days 2,500 head of cattle are slaughtered.—Argonaut.

WAYS OF SAVING

Cold rice should always be saved. It can be added to a soup, mashed into croquetts, mixed with eggs and fried like hominy, or used in a scallop dish.

Leftover vegetables, when the amount is too small to be served again may be mixed in a soup, sliced together, and boiled with gravy for a ragout, or used separately or together for a salad. Cauliflower, potatoes, and cabbage ade good broken in small pieces covered with grated cheese and baked in a baking dish, "a la gratin."

Small portions of left over cereals may be aded to the pancake batter, and will greatly improve the cakes. Or they may be rolled into balls and friend, or added to the soup stock.

The tough ends of steak may be chopped very fine, seasoned well with peper, salt, butter and a little onion juice, and formed into balls or cakes for sautes or broiled for luncheon. Scraps of white meat may be chopped, mixed with a white sauce warmed up and garnished with parsley and hard-boiled eggs. The carcasses of fowl and the bones of roasts should be used to make a nourishing soup. Beef fat and drippings and the fat from poultry should be clarified and kept for frying. Wings and legs of fowls that are left over are good grilled for luncheon.

Sour milk may be used for corn bread, griddle cakes, ginger bread and biscuits. It may be made into a refreshing drink by icing it and whipping it for about five minutes with an egg beater.

Among the new holders for feed bags intended to give horses free movement of their heads is one suspending a bag by rods projecting forward from the tops of the harness hames.

A pump in which the explosion of a mixture of gas and air operates directly against the water without the use of a piston is working successfully in a drainage plant in Egypt.

By pulling out the pin a new spring hinge for screen doors may be detached without losing the spring and with the parts left where they be long for easy erection of the door again.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES
"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. E. W. Lear, Port Plumford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her, and on recommendation of a friend, I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

THE GAME OF OLD GAUL!

Soldiers Say It is a Handicap to Them in Battle.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Wounded soldiers belonging to the Highland regiments who wear the kilts in action now state that their experience at the front has convinced them that the kilt in modern warfare is a serious handicap.

They have been in the trenches through long vigils and protracted periods of fighting often under heavy rain. The cloth of the kilt becomes laden with the wet. When they require to advance from the trench they find the extra weight of the soaked kilt a hindrance. In rushing the enemy in a charge the kilt flaps against the soldiers' limbs, so much so that the friction has often left sores behind and made marching painful.

Another disadvantage of the kilt is that it offers a clear mark about the knees for the rifle fire of the enemy. In proof of this many of the wounded soldiers from the Highland regiments who have arrived in London hospitals are suffering from slight wounds about the knees by which they were put out of action.

We think that one of the glories and attractions of the Highland regiments would pass with the banishment of the kilts.

HOW THIN PEOPLE CAN PUT ON FLESH

A New Discovery

This man and woman—that big, hearty filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and fussy sawdust diets. Omit the flesh cream rub-ons. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of these 5 grain Sargol tablets. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay there" fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best flesh-producing elements known to chemistry. They come 40 tablets to a package—are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive, and all druggists sell them subject to the absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

DAILY FASHION HINT.

Lady's Shirt.

This is one of the more unusual yoke blouses, with a two-gore lower portion and a shaped train, slightly circular in cut. It is usual to employ two materials for these skirts, but one may be used if preferred. Taffeta in contrast with the voile shown is a favorite, and also striped and plaid cheviot.

The shirt pattern, No. 6857, is cut in white 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 1¾ yards of 44-inch material, with 2¾ yards of 36 inch striped goods.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age if a child.

German Professor Claims Superiority And Other Things

This Doctor of Philosophy Just Rates Himself—But It is Nothing to His Hatred of the British—And the Russians Must Not Be Tolerated.

LISTEN TO HIS WARBLE

LONDON, Oct. 30.—A letter written to a friend in Holland by Dr. Rudolph Lassen, a German Privy Councillor and Professor of Philosophy in Berlin University, is thus translated into English by the Daily Chronicle:

"For months I have not written to a single foreigner. Foreigner means enemy, dum probatur contrarium (though the contrary may be proved). No one can remain neutral to the German State and people. Either you consider it as the most perfect creation that history has produced up to now or you acquiesce in its destruction—nay, in its extermination. A man who is not a German knows nothing of Germany.

"We are morally and intellectually superior beyond all comparison, as are our organizations and our institutions.

"Wilhelm II., Delicise Generis Humani (the Delight of the Human Race) had in his possession a power with which he was in position to smash everything, yet he has always protected peace, justice and honour. The greater his successes the more devout and humble he has become.

'Our army is the epitome of German excellence. We must sacrifice our dearest, our best, our most noble ones to fight with Russian beasts, English mercenaries and Belgian fanatics. The French are the only ones at all comparable with us.

"We Want Peace"

"There shall be no peace until the three mischief plotters, who would not let Europe rest, are completely subjugated. We want peace and safety for ourselves in order to be able to guarantee it for others. We wish to carry on untiringly our work of culture in peace.

"We have nothing to apologize for. We are no bully State. We threaten no one so long as we are not attacked. We do good deeds to all people.

"Louvain was not destroyed—only the houses of murderers.

"The Cathedral of Rheims is not destroyed. The French caused the damage.

"England acts in politics as if we lived in the eighteenth century. Germany has taught the world how to carry on war and politics in a conscientious and proper manner.

"England will come to naught. France can still be saved, let us hope—but Russia must no longer be on our frontier.

"This time we will have a clean slate.

The real enemy is England. Woe unto thee, England! God is with us and our just cause."

Threat to Holland.

Regarding Holland Professor Lasson writes in another letter:

"The Kingdom of Holland lives an easy life at our expense. It lives on its old reputation and old money bags in complete historical nullity. Holland is a mere appendage to Germany, living a comfortable existence in dressing gown and slippers, taking little trouble and little thought. Holland is perfectly free as to its sentiments, but any action that might be hostile to the German Empire would have the direct consequence.

"We Germans have little esteem, less respect and sympathy, for Holland of the present day. In its isolation Holland sinks more and more into dull narrow-mindedness. That is the mark of small sects. Without its hold on Germany it would have long ago disappeared.

"God be praised that the Dutch are not our friends. We live in the free breath of history and have nothing in common with this miserable bourgeois sentiment of theirs. We Germans have no friends anywhere because we are efficient and morally superior. All those who cannot attain our moral strength are afraid of us, and think us dangerous. We are the freest people of the earth, for we obey and our law is reason."

NEW YORK CLOSES STREETS SO CHILDREN CAN PLAY IN SAFETY AS RESULT OF YOUNG WOMEN'S CAMPAIGN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—"Close some of your streets for a few hours every day and let the kiddies play all they want on them and any kind of games they want to, and you will have less child crime."

That is the statement hurled at the city officials by Miss Ruth Robinson, chief "play organizer" with the People's Institute. The city officials hearkened to Miss Robinson's advice. Several public streets are being closed in New York from three to six o'clock every afternoon. A sign board reading:

"Street Closed for Play," is posted at each end of the section which is closed, and an officer posted there to see that no motorist, truck driver or anyone else gets past.

And you should see the kiddies troop out to this temporary playground. They come singly, in twos, threes, and in whole crowds.

It is a mighty interesting sight to watch these kiddies when they are turned loose on the street playground for the first time. They are shy of it, mighty shy, for they have always been taught—by officers of the law—that no playing was allowed on the street.

One of the People's Institute play organizers has to come along and start the kiddies playing before they really cut loose and do anything. It is mighty hard to teach them at first that they can play hop-scotch, "beanbag," "London Bridge Falling Down," or any other of the games dear to childhood without fear of being run down by auto or arrested by a policeman. But once they do get into their minds that they can play, then with what a zest they do go about having their fun.

They have been restricted from playing so long, have been squelched by parents, brothers, and by the policemen so often for even attempting anything like a game on the sidewalk that when they are turned loose they act much like starving persons would if they were pushed into a room full of food. They try to play games they never heard of. They run actually wild with joy for a while—so joyous are they in being allowed to play as they please.

"It brings an ache to the heart," said Miss Robinson, "to see how reluctant some of these babies are to cut loose and play in the open street. Play seems inextricably associated with their little minds with guilt.

"Indeed child crimes in New York is built on play, which street conditions necessarily prevent until it becomes moral crime.

"The first arrest of any small boy is unusually punishment for some attempt at play, pitching a ball, perhaps, or swatting a cat or kicking a can or blocking the pavement with a game of marbles.

"Naturally, resentment grows in the mind of such a child. The idea of retaliation creeps in. The mite wants to 'get even.' So he breaks a window or steals from the corner grocer or upsets Mrs. McGinnis' garbage barrel, and puts himself eventually on the road to the reformatory.

"If street play could be carried out in exactly the same way as in the open country, it would have no suggestion of crime in it. It would not lead, as it does now, to a natural antagonism between the child (for being a nuisance) and the adult citizen (for being a tyrant).

"Childhood tends by nature to develop play leadership. With a little adult guidance and encouragement this can be made more useful than any play supervision.

"No one, after watching for an hour or two, the healthy spirit that grows among the children in these allotted play streets, can doubt their benefit to the little people of New York."

Miss Robinson's statement that the arrest of children first starts over playing on the street is verified by the figures of the police department. There were 12,000 children arrested last year on charges of obstructing the sidewalk. These children were all playing, either marbles or some other such innocent game.

Playing on the street may not be such fun as diving in the old swimming hole, climbing apple trees, or such sports that are dear to the country kiddies, but it is certain that it is better than nothing. And if the city officials gave them the streets for a few hours each day to themselves, keeping all traffic off, it is a cinch that the children will have more arms and legs than they probably would otherwise have.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog, and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach, or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

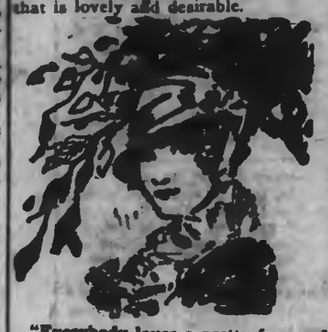
Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

A Pretty Skin Makes a Pretty Face

Stuart's Calcium Wafers Cleanse the Skin Very Quickly and Make It Clear and White.

Do you envy the girl with the delicate tints and the rosy glow of good health on her face? Do you long for the perfect freshness and beauty of her complexion? The means of gaining them are within your reach this very minute.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will work this wonderful miracle of good looks for you within a very few days. No matter how covered with pimples, rash, eczema or any sort of skin eruption your face may be—no matter how dull and yellow yours kin appears —your complexion will be transformed almost instantly into all that is lovely and desirable.



"Everybody loves a pretty face and a delicate skin."

Face lotions and creams merely alleviate the irritation of the skin—they are of no permanent value. Stuart's Calcium Wafers go right after the cause of pimples—they poisons and impurities in the blood. They chase them into the pores, change them into gases that are easily eliminated and then stimulate the pores into throwing them out. There is now aste of time—no fooling around. These little Wafers assimilated into the blood, work night and day until every impurity is gotten rid of and you not only have a clear complexion but pure, vigorous blood that endows you with new life and energy.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers contain nothing harmful—nothing but what thousands of physicians have used and recommended. Its chief constituent, calcium sulphide, is universally recognized as the most powerful of blood purifiers.

Surprise your friends by meeting them with a face radiant with loveliness instead of the disagreeable, pimply one they are used to. Give yourself the supreme happiness that the consciousness of good looks and the power of attraction will bring you.

Buy a box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers to-day and see how quickly the pimples will disappear. They can be obtained at any drug store at 50 cents a box. They come in a form convenient to carry and are pleasant to the taste. A small sample package will be mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Count von Bernstorff—Whose remark that Germany might contemplate the invasion of Canada, was commented on by several American newspapers, one of which said: "As long as the British navy is afloat Germany has no more chance of invading Canada than she has of invading the moon."

LAXATIVE FOR OLD PEOPLE—"CASCARETS"

Salts, Calomel, Pills Act on Bowels Like Pepper Acts in Nostrils

Get a 10-cent box now.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets, and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

GERMANS ARE CONFIDENT OF FINAL VICTORY

Canadian Lady Tells of Intense Hatred Against Britain—Kaiser's Subjects Are United.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Miss T. M. Watson, Ottawa, recently returned to London with her sister from Mecklenburg and Berlin and Silesia, entirely discredits the notion that the war is unpopular in Germany. She says all are perfectly confident that God is on their side, and they are fighting for truth, honour, and right, and are certain to be victorious. Patriotic songs are sung day and night. The wounded only ask to be cured quickly to return to the front and fight for the Fatherland.

Treatment of Prisoners.

It is represented in Germany, Miss Watson says, that British, French, and Russian prisoners are well treated and have work to do, but not much, and are fed according to the nationality. German women are busy knitting socks, scarves, and woollen vests for soldiers.

The hatred of Britain is terrible. A few months ago everying British was admired; now when anyone does anything fearfully unpopular the saying is they behaved in the British way. Every advertisement of British goods, such as tea and soap, is torn down by the people, who refuse to buy anything British. The alleged atrocities in Belgium are all attributed to British incentive.

Eager to Raid Britain.

Belgium and France are pitied. Russia is despised as wild and uneducated, but Britain is bitterly hated. Germans are simply burning to see Britain raided by troops with bombs.

Miss Watson adds: "O, how lovely to be in free Britain again and see how silly are all the tales we heard about a revolutin."

A New Principle in Complexion Treatment

Most creams are injurious when used habitually. They clog the pores and eventually form a permanent, coarse, stillum film which interferes with eliminative action and makes the skin sickly and muddy. There is an application—mercolized wax—which acts upon an entirely different principle. While perfectly harmless, it has the peculiar property of removing by absorption the dead and half-dead particles of scarf-skin as well as unhealthy matter in the pores. Thus it takes away from instead of adding to the complexion, differing in this respect from cosmetics. The result is a perfectly natural and healthy young complexion. Mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, (one ounce is sufficient), is applied at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning.

The correct principle in the treatment of wrinkles is to tighten the skin, which naturally irons out the lines. A face bath, remarkably effective in this direction, may be made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel.

Butter Makers Should Know The Demands of Act

During the past few weeks produce firms in Toronto, doubtless with the best intentions, but without authority from this Department, have been sending the following notice to their correspondents in the country:

Important Butter Notice.

All butter in packages of wrapped in parchment paper must in future be labelled "Dairy" or "Creamery".

This means no butter can be bought or sold in plain wrappers, or in unbranded packages. No butter can be sold or bought under brand of "Separator". The word "Dairy" or Creamery" must appear on wrapper or package.

Failing to comply with the above Government Act you are liable to a fine of $10.00 to $20.00 for each offence.

For further information write the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and ask for copy of the Dairy Industry Act, 1914, Bulletin No. 42.

The information in the above notice is not quite correct. The regulations made under the authority of the Dairy Industry Act, 1914, came into force on September 1st, and provide that when dairy butter is put up in blocks, squares or prints and wrapped in parchment paper, the paper shall be printed or branded with the words "Dairy Butter," in letters at least one quarter inch square, in addition to any other wording that the buttermaker may desire to use. There is nothing in the law or regulations to prevent the use of the word "Separator" in addition to the words "Dairy Butter," but no such grades of butter as "Separator" is recognised by the law. The Butter Act of 1903 defined only two grades, namely, "Dairy" and "Creamery." The Dairy Industry Act of 1914 defines a third grade as "Whey" butter. Buttermakers may use any form of printing or branding including the words "Dairy Butter" which is not inconsistent with the definition of dairy butter. Butter in rolls, crocks or tubs is not required to be branded. Dairy butter in 56 pound boxes must also be branded "Dairy Butter."

The underlying principle of this legislation is protection to the consumer, the honest buttermaker and the honest trader. The whole object of the law is to prevent misrepresentation. No reasonable practice is interfered with.

I would suggest the following forms as suitable for the printing of dairy butter wrappers:

What's the Use of Missing So Much Pleasure that you Could Have?

YES, you can live without music and brightness and happiness and friends. But—why should you, when these things cost so little and mean so much?

Lots of people, who said they "could do without an Edison Phonograph" before they owned one, now say they "would not do without it"—it has brought so much pleasure into their lives!

The Edison appeal is universal. To those who love good music—to those who enjoy most the old airs—to those who prefer instrumental music—to the younger set and even to the children—the Edison is a daily source of pleasure and recreation.

Great singers—famous actors and entertainers—bands, orchestras and instrumentalists—are ready to entertain you when you will.

And the prices for Edison Phonographs and Edison Records are so moderate—the variety is so great—that there can be no question as to our ability to suit you. What's the use of missing so much pleasure? Get

ONTARIO INDIANS FOR WAR.

Six Nations Tribe Will Contribute a Complete Company.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 30.—The Six Nations Indians will furnish a company of 120 officers and men, all redskins, for the second contingent. The company is being formed at the instigation of Major-General Lessard, Toronto, who asked that the Indians, on account of their relation to the Crown, should send a separate and distinct unit.

COBOURG, Oct. 30.—When the volunteers of the 40th Northumberland Regiment leave they will have a number of Alderville Indians, who came in from the Rice Lake Reserve to enlist.

PILES FOR FIFTEEN YEARS

Cured by Zam-Buk

To those who suffer from this painful malady the following letters will be of deep interest. Mr. J. McEwan, of Dundas, Ont., writes: "For fifteen years I suffered with piles and could get no permanent cure until I tried Zam-Buk. After having given Zam-Buk a fair trial I found that I was getting better, and in the end it completely cured me.'

Mr. James Ruddy, of Killaloe, Ont., says: "I suffered greatly from piles. The pain from these, as anyone who suffers from them will know, was at times almost unbearable. I tried first one remedy and then another, but all without effect. The piles still continued as bad as ever. I heard about Zam-Buk and commenced with the treatment. To my great joy, after perseverance, I obtained relief from the agonising pain of the piles. Having been cured by Zam-Buk I heartily recommend the balm to all sufferers from piles.

Why not end your suffering? Take the advice of the hundreds who have done so, and give Zam-Buk a fair trial. This marvellous remedy quickly relieves the suffering, it soothes and heals the inflamed, irritated hemorrhoid veins, and perseverance with Zam-Buk effects permanent cures.

Every home needs Zam-Buk—accidents will happen, and Zam-Buk is the best "first-aid." It quickly takes the sting out of a cut, the fire out of a burn or scald, the soreness from a bruise. Blood-poison or other complications cannot creep in where Zam-Buk has been applied. It is a sure cure for piles, eczema, ulcers, children's scalp sores, varicose veins, cold cracks, chaped hands, etc. Fifty cents at all druggists and stores, or post paid from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse substitutes and harmful imitations.

MOSTLY A NAVAL WARFARE.

London Expects That Greece Will Be Glad of a Chance to Get Into Grips With Turkey.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Unless Bulgaria joins the enemies of Turkey, an invasion by land of European Turkey is impracticable, according to British observers, and the warfare will be naval. The Turkish navy, assisted by the former German cruisers Goeben and Breslau, is considered in London to be far more formidable than her army, which is said to be inefficiently equipped and poorly fed. Greece will jump at the chance of again measuring swords with her ancient enemy, it is felt in London, and with the two battleships recently purchased from the United States she will be in a position to meet the Turkish ships on equal terms.

In the Black Sea the Russian fleet has no single units as powerful as either the Goeben or the Breslau, but the number of her vessels it is argued in London will give her command of this inland sea.

DRINK AND UNEMPLOYMENT HAND IN HAND

When the test comes and the factory and office forces have to be cut down, drinkers are the first to be let go. This falls hardest on their wives and families, for the man who has the whisky or alcohol craving spends so much on it that there is nothing laid aside.

Alcura stops the craving for drink and helps the man help himself in his desire to get away from the drink demon and keep his work. It is guaranteed to give satisfaction or money is refunded. Alcura No. 1 can be given secretly by wife or mother, and will render drink distasteful, even obnoxious. Alcura No. 2 is the voluntary treatment.

Can be had at our store, $1.00 per box. Ask for free Alcura booklet.

Turkey Has Not Yet Declared War

THE ALLIES HAVE IMPROVED THEIR POSITION

THE ALLIES OCCUPY TRENCHES HELD A WEEK AGO BY THE GERMAN TROOPS

Enemy Will Be Swept Out of France in a Few Weeks is Statement From Gen. Galliens' Office---British Indian Troops Cover Themselves With Glory in Desperate Bayonet Charge.

BAVARIAN TROOPS LOST HEAVILY

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, October 31.—Positive assurances were received to-day from the front that at no point have the Germans been able to resume the offensive, and that to-day at nearly every point on the line of battle in the north the allies are occupying trenches which a week ago were in possession of the Germans. Their enormous losses and their failure to force any advance, has disheartened the Germans. This is very evident from the increasing number of prisoners reported captured. Although the Germans can be expected to attempt to reinforce their line, there is not a single high military official here who believes that they will be able to do so.

The sending into action of the crack Bavarian army was the Kaiser's trump card, and it failed to take the much wanted trick. The Bavarians have lost an enormous number in killed, wounded and captured. They fought with great dash and stubborness, and gained some early advantages, but the action of the Belgians in cutting the dykes of the canals and flooding their trenches disheartened them, and this was followed up by a series of desperate bayonet charges on the part of the British Indian troops, who have covered themselves with glory during the fighting of the last fortnight. The German lines of communication are already threatened.

Reports from several sources say that the Germans have been forced to evacuate Lille, and retreat to the eastward; while there is as yet no official confirmation of this report it is so circumstantial that it is very generally believed. If true it must inevitably be followed by the retirement of the Germans who are holding the line from Lille to Arras. The Germans generally have retired from the sea coast in Belgium, and from Ostend south. It is the intention of the French Government —unless something unforseen develops—to return to Paris about November 20th.

It is now considered that the German channel attack is a complete failure. At the offices of General Gallieni to-day it was stated that in a few weeks the Germans will have been forced entirely from French soil.

It is likely that the stock exchanges of London, Paris and probably New York will all again be in operation by New Year's Day.

WELL, BUT TOO WISE

Love-Letter to Toronto Girl Removed by the Censor.

"Your friend is quite well, but he knows toto much."

This short message, in a strange, official-looking handwriting, was received this week by a young Toronto lady, whose gentleman friend—a naval reservist from Toronto—is serving on one of the British warships in the North Sea. The envelope was addressed in the sweetheart's handwriting all right, but it had been cut open, the original contents removed, and the plain sheet bearing the above message inserted.

Across the envelope was the explanatory word, "censored."

The young lady states that her friend is quite a descriptive writer, and the conclusion is drawn that his love-letter innocently contained more news of the British fleet's movements that the censor considered good for the welfare of the Empire.

This treatment may be given to lots of letters from Canadian boys at the front, now or later, and may explain the meagreness of news from the Canadian contingent.

A LARGE CONTRACT

Has Been Awarded to the Canadian General Electric Company—Order Includes Three Electric Locomotives.

WILL BE OF LATEST TYPE

Contracts, approximating $135,000, for three electric locomotives and electrical equipment for five cars have been given to the Canadian General Electric Company, Peterborough, by the London and Port Stanley Railway Commission.

Sir Adam Beck, chairman of commission, who made the announcement, declared that the locomotives would be of 1,000 horse-power capacity, and the cars of 600 horse-power. He further stated that all equipment would be of the latest type and would be provided with the latest automatic safety devices.

The cars and trailers of the line will be of one pattern, and will be of steel construction. Engineers are now passing on the design, and tenders for the supply of this part of the equipment will be opened on November 20.

Mr. Kennedy Is President

Former Peterboro' Man at the Head of the Edmonton Stock Yards Limited

The many friends in Peterborough of Mr. H. P. Kennedy, formerly of this city, will be interested in learning that he has been elected president and managing director of the Edmonton Stock Yards Limited, a copy of whose prospectus has been received by the Examiner. The object of the company is to erect and establish stock yards in the City of Edmonton for the purpose of handling live stock and the manufactured products thereof and farm products generally. The head office of the company is at Toronto and there is an English office in London.

BISHOP SWEENY WILL SPEAK

As announced in another column, the Lord Bishop of Toronto will preach at St. George's to-morrow morning at eleven, and will also give an address at the new mission, 103 Western Ave., in Brownton, in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. Evening services at the new Mission on Sunday, November 8th.

KAISER HAS NOT GIVEN UP HOPE OF CALAIS

Report From Berlin Says That Army Corps May Be Transferred From Eastern Frontier to West

GERMAN REPORTS

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Oct. 31.—That Germany has not given up its determination to take Calais, is indicated by the significant report from Berlin, by way of Copenhagen, that the German general staff has decided that the army in Poland shall fall back to the frontier of Silesia and remain there on defensive until the battle in Flanders ends with the capture of Calais. Such a movement would release three or four army corps to be transferred from Silesia to Belgium, but it also admits a complete German defeat on the Russian frontier.

"LUCILLE LOVE" IN STORY AND ON THE SCREEN

Story Will be Given in Examiner and the Picture Shown at the Royal.

Commencing in the issue of Friday next, Nov. 6th, The Examiner will publish in serial form the story of "Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery." On the following Monday the Royal Theatre will show the corresponding film play of the same story. For fifteen weeks this arrangement will continue, so that readers of The Examiner may read the story and then go to see the thrilling representation of what they have read. "Lucille Love" in print and on the screen is a rapidly moving story. Its heroine is taken into a succession of strange situations, braving the perils of land and sea for the sake of her love. The fortunes of Lucille and her foe, Loubeque, the International Spy, present a wonderful story of adventure amid scenes of shipwreck and the wildness of nature, among the islands of the cannibals and elsewhere.

Don't forget to read "Lucille Love" in The Examiner and see the pictures at the Royal. For the first nine weeks the story will appear on Friday and Saturday, a chapter being given each day. On the first three days of each following week the pictures will be on view at the Royal. Then for six weeks a chapter will be given on Saturday only, so that the story will be finished at the same time as the series of pictures.

ENVOY WESTLAKE'S SPECIAL SERVICES

During Next Few Days at the Salvation Army Temple.

Envoy Westlake, of Cobourg, will be in the city during the next few days, and will address several services in the Salvation Army Temple. The special services which he will conduct this week-end will begin tonight, when he will give a talk on the sidelights of his old and new experiences. Envoy Westlake has a message that will appeal to all, and it is thought that a great deal of interest will be taken in this and the following meetings.

DEDICATION SERVICES AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

To-morrow will be the dedication festival of St. John's church, the church having been reopened after a complete renovation on November the first, 1913. The services will be of an appropriate character and special music will be presented. In the afternoon a men's fellowship tea will be held at five o'clock to which all men of the congregation are invited. The Bishop of Toronto will be the guest of honour, and in the evening he will present and deliver the special sermon at the dedication service at seven o'clock.

AUSTRALIAN NAVY CAPTURES TWO CRUISERS

A Despatch From New South Wales Says That the German Warships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau Were Caught

CARRIED CREW OF 700

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A despatch from New South Wales says that the Australian navy has captured the German armoured cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, as a result of the failure of their coal supply. These cruisers are very swift and have been interfering with trade considerably lately. They were launched in 1906. They carry a crew of seven hundred men each, and these presumably have been taken with the ships.

The Attraction Of The Season

Company of Half a Dozen Stars Will Present Their Acts at the Princess Next Week

Next week at the Princess Theatre will be the vaudeville attraction of the season. A company of half a dozen performers, all stars in their particular lines and acts will be playing all week and will present a number of different high class vaudeville acts. There has never been a like bargain offered to moving picture patrons since the theatres opened in this city, and in various cities the company has played to enthusiastic houses. Their acts are sparkling with wit and replete with clever individual work and company "stunts." Manager Clayton is to be congratulated on the fact that he has been able to secure this splendid attraction, when high class amusements are at a premium here. The company will be here all next week giving a different set each day, and is certain to make a good impression on the Peterborough public.

Bishop O'Brien In Lindsay

Conducting a Forty-hour Devotion in St. Mary's Church

LINDSAY, Oct. 31.—The forty-hour devotion which is now going on in St. Mary's Church is being largely attended by the parishioners each day. The customary indulgencies to be gained at this particular time is being sought for by the congregation, which will be continued till Sunday evening.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, of Peterborough, celebrated high mass at 10.30 yesterday morning, which service was largely attended. The masses started at 5.30 a.m., and were continued during the forenoon.

HE PRACTISED DEEP BREATHING

Volunteer Increased Chest Measurement An Inch and a Half.

What a man can do when he really sets his heart to it has been demonstrated to Recruiting Officer Captain Little at the Armouries. A few days ago a man offered himself as a volunteer, was was turned down because he lacked the proper chest measurement. Medical Officer Lieut. Hale told him to try deep breathing for a time and it would develop his chest. Morning, noon and night, the volunteer walked the streets practicing deep breathing. To-day he appeared at the Armouries, was examined again, and it was found that he had added one inch and a half to his chest measurement. He will be accepted.

An almost similar experience has befallen nearly half the men on guard duty around the Armouries. Through exercises, swimming, deep breathing, and outdoor work they have increased their chest measurements until new uniforms had to be issued to them.

Only two volunteers appeared at the Armouries to-day. Captain Little will have to enlist at least 20 more before next Wednesday in order to meet the demand upon the Seventh.—London Advertiser.

War Has Not Yet Been Formally Declared By Turkey

Still Hopes That the Sublime Porte Will Remain Neutral, Throwing the Blame for the Bombardment of Russian Ports on the German Officers of the Vessels Involved

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, October 31.—(Special Cable.) — The fact that up till noon Saturday neither Turkey nor Russia had declared war against one another, makes a peculiar situation and gives some ground for the hope that the Sublime Porte will yet disavow responsibility for the actions of its German-officered fleet in the Black Sea, and keep peace with the allies. The Turkish ambassador is still in Petrograd, and is known to be trying earnestly to induce his government to offer an indemnity for damage caused by the fleet, recall these vessels to Constantinople, and discipline its commanders. The ambassadors for France, Britain and Italy are still at Constantinople endeavouring to impress on the Sultan's government the fact that war against Russia means war against France and Britain as well.

In the meantime Britain is taking no chances. A large fleet is already guarding each of the entrances to the Suez Canal, and there is a steel fence of British bayonets on both sides of this important highway from one end to the other. When Kitchener was the military governor of Egypt he laid plans to cover just such an eventuality as that existing at present; those plans are now working out to the very best advantage of the allies.

PARIS, October 31.—To-day's official communique told of a sucession of gains and losses by the allied forces. It emphasized however the heavy German losses, which all agree are out of all proportion to the number engaged. All along the line from Nieuport to Labasse, the Germans yesterday attacked with vigour, the communique said, with the result that the fighting was featured with alternate advances and retreats. The French lost some ground south of Ypres and gained to the east of that city. The German assaults in force between Labasse and Arras were repulsed with very heavy losses. The French are making substantial progress in the regions of Chaulnes, Aisne, Soissons, Souain and the Woevre, but have been forced to cede ground in the region of Vailley.

By-Law Will Be Prepared

Nominating Miss Jessie Swinton to the Position of Deputy Treasurer

At a meeting of the Finance committee of the City Council which was held on Friday afternoon, it was decided to support the nomination of Miss Jessie Swinton to the position of deputy city treasurer. The appointment to remain effective for a period of six months or until such time as City Treasurer Adams is in a position to return to his duties. He is contemplating undergoing an operation for eye trouble. The by-law confirming the appointment of Miss Swinton will be presented for confirmation, at a meeting of the City Council which is called for on Monday evening. Mr. Adams has agreed to furnish a personal bond to the amount of five thousand dollars.

An interesting situation arises out of the appointment in that Miss Swinton ceases to be an employee of Mr. Adams and therefore cannot be discharged by him. The position of deputy treasurer places Miss Swinton in the position of a city official.

GERMANS REPORT SLIGHT PROGRESS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, via the Hague, Oct. 31.—Beyond the statement that the "campaigns are progressing satisfactorily and we are making slow but substantial gains in both eastern and western theatres of war," the War Office had no comment to make on the general war situation to-day. It was announced that at no point on either front is the conflict approaching a decisive stage. Wireless despatches from Vienna say that the Austrians have gained a sweeping victory over the Russians who crossed the San River south of Uienkow.

WILL PREACH IN ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

Rev Dr O'Meara, Principal of Wycliffe College, Toronto, will preach in All Saints' Church to-morrow evening

MOVEMENT OF GRAIN TO EAST

Hundreds of Carloads Will Pass Through City en route From Midland to Montreal

Two hundred cars have been ordered to Midland by the G. T. R. Last night and this morning trains of empties were passing through this City northward bound. This means that the movement of grain to Montreal, thence to Europe, has been commenced, and the elevators at Midland will give up their contents. Some of the grain will go directly to England, where it will be used to provide food for the allied armies. The eastward movement of cars laden with grain will soon commence They will all pass through this City.

SPECIAL MUSIC AT ST. ANDREW'S

The music at St. Andrews' Church on Sunday evening will be of a special nature. Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw will sing "O Eyes that are Weary" (Brackett). The choir will render "Sun of my Soul" (Turner), and a quintette consisting of Miss Mae Laing, Miss A. Telford, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Lockand Mr. C. Thorpe, will sing "O Come Let Us Worship" (Himmel). Mr. Treanor's offertory will be "Traumerei" (Schumann).

TURKEY IN THE RING.

The entrance of Turkey into the war ring gains its largest importance from the fact that it will probably draw in other countries — Italy, Greece, Roumania and Bulgaria. This will mean almost universal European war. It will mean thirteen of the nations of Europe, engaged in war. On the side of the Triple Entente will be Britain, France, Russia, Belgium, Italy, Servia, Roumania, Bulgaria, Greece and probably Portugal, and in the East Japan; and on the side of the new Triple Alliance, Austria and Germany and Turkey. What this will mean, if it happens, can be judged from the horrors of war arising from the nations at present actually engaged. It will strengthen the cause of the allies, for Turkey, the third member of the Alliance, will not equal the strength of the opposition her entrance into the fight will array against her. There is fear expressed that Turkey will draw in the Moslem peoples and provoke a Holy War. We have heard this so often that it has become a good deal like the proverbial cry of "wolf!" There does not seem to be much danger of the great Moslem population of India being drawn in. The spiritual head of the Mohammedans in India, a great potentate, is, we are told, an Oxford graduate, and he, doubtless, fairly expressed the feeling of his Hindu coreligionists, when he addressed King George, Emperor of India in these strong metaphorical words: "What history does our lord, the King-Emperor, want written? Let us know, and we will write it with our blood." A Holy War provoked by Turkey would not be in her interests, because it would be against all Christendom, including Germany, which has brought Turkey into the war, unless as he has reason to do, the Sultan, thinks Germany should not count as a Christian nation—that she has, as is really the case, forfeited the title. Whatever else she may do Turkey has signed her own death warrant as a nation. She will go utterly to pieces in the shaking up her allies, Germany and Austria, will get before the nations of the Triple Entente sheathe the sword.

GOOD TIMES AND LIVE SMOKESTACKS.

Good times and bad times are not uncontrollable conditions. They depend largely upon individual activity operating in a national unison. We have a ripple of hard times owing to the war, but with national effort, rightly directed, good times are bound to come back to the world and to this country. But good times don't come by any meandering of fat kind after lean ones They are not controlled by blind cycles now forecasted by people like Madame Thebes. They are not phantoms that wait for the rise and fall of the real estate booster —they have nothing radically to do with the price of land. They have still less to do with the policy of any government. All the world needs to keep good times all the time, is good crops over most of the world, plenty of people getting what they earn for their labours, and the placing of the red god Mars on the retired list.

Crops come naturally—with a little human help. The crops of 1914 are on the whole more profitable in this country than in 1913, or any of the fat years of the last decade. We have in this country a larger army of efficient, industrious people than ever we had. We have more factories than ever. We have more railways and steamships We have all the machinery for keeping the times good without resorting to poetry or legislation or witchcraft All we need in Canada to keep this machinery operating for our benefit is for the people to stand behind the machinery. The factories of Canada were built primarily to satisfy the home market They represent capital enough to build Britain's navy three times over That investment is practically owned by the people of Canada because prices it is operating at full strength it maintains good conditions in the country. Slacken up on the smokestacks and you lessen not so much the supply as the demand. The good times that depend on warm smokestacks are entirely in the hands of those who now and hereafter buy gods made in Canada, and help keep business going as usual.

PROMPT PAYMENT.

The war throws upon us many new obligations, and intensifies existing ones. Business at the best under the new conditions is difficult, and it should be the part of every citizen to facilitate business operations, in the general interest, as well as in the interest of our fellow-citizens engaged therein. It is not too much, perhaps, to say that many, if not most of the business men of Peterborough, in common with other cities, are not doing business, with an eye or the result of profit, but merely to keep going, till better trade conditions come. With high taxation, high rents, and uncertain trade, it is a pretty stiff problem to finance business now-a-days—to meet obligations and meet the weekly payroll. It stands to reason that to do these things, business must have its dues. At the beginning of every year for years, the Examiner has urged prompt payment of accounts in the interests of comfortable business. It can, therefore, now consistently urge the same course. Any citizen who can pay a bill due to a business man will be doing an honest as well as patriotic and neighbourly thing by paying promptly and helping a fellow citizen to do likewise. Men, and women, too, in easy circumstances, who financially reside on Easy street, who do not have to skirmish, plan, contrive and scheme, to make ends meet, cannot realise how hard it is for a business man or other creditor, sailing close to the wind to steer his business clear of the rocks. It only needs a little thoughtfulness, a little of the golden rule realised, and applied, to show people of comparatively easy means, who can pay bills without embarrassment, how much it will help to pay bills promptly. We are told of a man of considerable means who owned a fairly large bill to a small business concern, and when urged for payment, he not only neglected payment of the bill but withdrew his patronage to pay cash for the same kind of goods at another place. It is to be hoped that this is not the case. It shouldn't be so. We may sing loyal songs and extol our patriotism, but patriotism and loyalty begin at home. We should begin by practicing British fair play upon our neighbours before addressing ourselves to more remote obligations.

GROWING WHEAT.

The Grain Growers' Guide doesn't know which way to point. It says "A year ago everybody shouted to the farmers—'you must get into mixed farming.' To-day these same advisers say—'you must grow more wheat.'" The conditions have changed. The farmers of the West were growing more wheat than the world market required to assure profitable prices; and besides the farmers were drawing too much upon the vitality of the soil by continuous wheat cropping; and mixed farming was needed to restore the soil, in something the same way as dairying was adopted in Ontario with the result of overcoming the bad effects of overcropping. But circumstances have changed. With the change of the wheat situation; with those European countries given to large wheat growing rendered barren in this regard by the war, the guide board points to the advisability of Canada growing more wheat; and Britain with the European paying crop. The demand and consequently the price will grow. While the wheat-growing countries of Europe have quit growing for the present, they will still have to have wheat; and Britain with hte European supply cut off, will need our wheat in increasing quantities. The progressive farmer will not only study his soil and seasons, but he will study the market and the demands of other countries. By growing more wheat at the present time the farmers will add to their own profits and put more money in circulation to help maintain the business of the country in healthy condition. In Canada the wheat field is largely the pivot on which the national prosperity turns. When the war is over and things settle down to the usual running order, then the farmer can think of more mixed farming. The emergency created by the war, has made all business beside farming considerably mixed. The war creates extraordinary demands upon everybody as well as farmers. Now increased wheat growing is their cue, as "business as usual" is the appeal to our people at large.

ANOTHER SOMETHING THE SPIES MISSED

"The allotment of two battalions to Manitoba and Saskatchewan in the second Canadian contingent, is bound to be the cause of considerable disappointment. These two provinces could supply at least ten thousand men, partially trained, for early service." — Manitoba Free Press.

This is the kind of thing that never entered into the Kaiser's calculations. We will wager that not one of the reports of German spies sent to Berlin ever mentioned that Canadians would regard it as a grievance not to be allowed to get into the scrap quick enough.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

WATER-PROOFING CONCRETE.

The following mixture has long been used by the United States Army engineers in water-proofing cement: One part cement, two-parts sand, three-quarters of one pound of dry powder alum to each cubic foot of sand. Mix dry and add water in which three-quarters of one pound of soap has been dissolved to each gallon. This is nearly as strong as ordinary cement, and is quite impervious to water, besides preventing efflorescence. For a wash, a mixture of one pound of lye and two pounds of alum in two gallons of water is often used.—Canadian Engineer.

THE RIGHT COURSE.

We feel sure that the country at large will welcome the announcement which was made by the Government at Ottawa on Sunday night that the work of organizing and mobilizing the Second Expeditionary Force will proceed immediately, and that, as we have urged, a system of continuous recruiting is to be maintained, so that Canada will be in a position to send forward a constant stream of reinforcements for the British Army. We are glad to notice, also, that the Government has pursued the wise course of consulting with and acting on the advice of the expert military advisers in the Department at Ottawa, and that the work of mobilizing and organizing future forces will be under the personal direction of competent military officers throughout the Dominion.—Halifax Chronicle.

BAD DIPLOMACY.

Germany has given its mind to militarism, and we may freely admit that Germany understands the art of destruction. When the corpses are counted, and the wounded tell their tales, and the ruined cities are displayed, nobody can say that the work of the junkers and the war-crazed professors has not been well done.

But in diplomacy and world politics the same efficiency does not appear. All the world has been turned against Germany by its treatment of Belgium and France. Now Count Bernstorff, German Ambassador in Washington, is trying to make trouble in Canada. Does he realise that he is making trouble for German citizens of Canada?

There are in Canada about 400,000 persons of German birth and descent. They are mainly industrious people, good citizens, generally respected. What would be their position in case Canada were invaded by German soldiers, as Count Bernstorff suggests? Does not the Count realise that as an Ambassador of Germany his first duty is toward Germans on this continent, to make them secure and comfortable in Canada as well as in the United States? Does he think he is serving their interests when he involves them in quarrels with their neighbours?

A far better ambassador in the real broad sense is Professor Riethdorff, of Woodstock College, Ontario, who tells his German brethren in Canada that they are better off under British than under Prussian rule.—Toronto Star.

COURIER'S COMMENTS ON THE FARM AND THE FARMER

City men with country residences are working great changes, if nothing else, in the social status of the farmer. At one time, to be called a farmer was a term of reproach. The professional man, the clerk, and the mechanic, with their more fashionably-cut clothes, were apt to look down upon the farmer as a sort of country bumpkin. Those days are past, and it is the farmer's turn to look down upon the city-dweller as a man to whom Fate has been unkind. I remember, a year ago, while standing outside the horse-ring of the Guelph Fat Stock Show, having seen H. C. Cox and some of his Oakville friends pass along the aisle. A small urchin, seated with a pal on a railing of the ring, whispered audibly, "Gee, there is some class to us farmers these days." He no doubt referred to the fashionably-cut overcoats of the Oakville farming enthusiasts.

Business on the Farm.

Notwithstanding the number of city men who in recent years moved to the country, out-door life is not as popular as it deserves to be, and little wonder when it is considered that all of our treasures of art, our libraries, our drama, and architecture are confined to the cities. The Y.M.C.A. has been formed mainly to look after the youth of the country when they come into the city. There is no such movement to look after them before they leave the farm. Monuments to the memory of great men are erected in the centres of population, but are seldom seen on the country side. The only memorial really worth while near Toronto is the Eaton Road, constructed by John Eaton in memory of his father. The present head of the Eaton business inherited a love of country life, and, in addition to having been a pioneer in the good-roads movement, was one of the first to systematize and bring business methods to bear upon the conduct of a farm.

"Life" Is the Point.

Farming, to be attractive, should not be merely a matter of production. The life must be made attractive. Country improvement societies should be organized everywhere. The care of public property of the township or neighbourhood is at present a responsibility which no one cares to recognize. The spirit of the community should be stimulated, with an organization of a corps of public-spirited men, to look after waste places, lake shores, river banks, cemeteries, church grounds, and bits of scenery. History has been made in the country, as well as in the city. Great men have lived there. The lives of men and the passing of men can well be commemorated by the erection of drinking fountains or other useful structures, which, while inexpensive, would add to the pleasure and attractiveness of rural life.

Empty Saddles.

Captain Sifton was one of the judges of the Namur Horse Show in Belgium a year ago, if my memory serves me right. Rumour has it that upon his return to Canada he made a report to the Canadian Government that the Belgian cavalry was the most effective in the world. The only pity is that they were limited in number to fifteen thousand, and many of them doubtless ere this have fallen in gallant defence of their homes. The public will miss many a customary figure in the saddle at the horse shows this spring, particularly in New York, where cavalry officers—British, Canadian and Continental—were wont to compete.

"R. J." and Farming.

R. J. Fleming, of City Hall and Street Railway fame, is an omnivorous reader of farm journals. He has joined the grow-more-wheat movement as naturally as a duck takes to water, and on his Pickering estate, which is one of the largest in Canada, has sown one hundred and twenty acres of fall wheat. While I am sure Mr. Fleming does not wish a prolongation of the war, or any further destruction of farm lands within the war zone, I am inclined to think he would not be disappointed if, next autumn, wheat went to $2.50 a bushel, which would mean a handsome profit. Mr. Fleming acquired the Pickering property from Sir Henry Pellatt, and is building up a herd of Jerseys which will soon be among the best in America. This is a broad prediction, as there are many herds of Jerseys in the United States where single cows command thousands of dollars apiece. Farming is not entirely a matter of pleasure with the railway magnate, and with an eye for the commercial he has contracted to supply Dunnings with cream. — "Pepys" in the Daily Courier.

THE WHOLE CAUSE OR NONE.

No denials or explanations can alter the fact that Mr. Blondin was one of the chief speakers in the Drummond bye-election held in 1910, and was one of those who urged the electors to vote against the Laurier Government because it was pledged to a policy of naval defence in co-operation with Great Britain. The policy was agreed upon by both parties in 1909; but when the Conservatives saw that political capital could be made by breaking the agreement they broke it, and they assisted and rejoiced in the defeat of a Government candidate and of a policy to which both parties were pledged. They obtained some partisan advantage by bad faith and by advocating one naval policy in Ontario and another in Quebec.

Mr. Blondin's appointment recalls this very unpleasant and discreditable incident. It is part of the history of the development or non-development of naval policy in Canada. If it is not to be discussed, the same silence must be observed as to the whole history. One party will not be allowed to give garbled versions of part of the history for the purpose of insuring its opponets and then claim immunity for its own acts.—Toronto Star.

CANADA YEAR BOOK.

The Canada Year Book for 1915, just to hand, is better than ever. If it does not give so many kinds of information as the Canadian Almanac, or attempt such a connected history as the Canadian Annual Review, it presents with great fullness all the statistics of much popular interest in the various departments of the Dominion government, and especially those of the department of trade and commerce, which is responsible for the publication. But there are more than statistics. The work is now attractive and readable. It includes a very fine map of the Dominion; the usual statistical summary of Canada for 1913 and preceding years; a short history of Canada by Dr. A. G. Doughty, C.M.G., the Dominion archivist, with photographs, and portrait of Lord Durham and Lord Elgin; an article on geology by Prof. R. W. Brock, late deputy minister of mines; another on flora and fauna by Mr. James Macoun, C.M.G.; etc. In the department of parliamentary information, in addition to the retrospect since Confederation, there is given a showing of the new distribution of seats in the house of commons. The volume has been prepared under the care of Sir George Foster, and Mr. E. H. Godfrey is its immediate editor.—Hamilton Spectator.

He (disagreebly): What the mischief is the matter with this dinner?
She (mildly): I cooked it, dear.
He: Well, I was wondering what made it so much better than usual!

Militarism, Said the Critics, Has Crushed Out the Militant Spirit---"The Armies Are Not Such Fools to Go to War"--Governments Had Not Wish for It---Recent Events Develop the Contrast

VIENNA, Feb. 14.— Europe's million-strong armies don't want to fight. That is why there are no great wars. That is the new discovery of political philosophers. They aim a nasty gibe at the foreign offices. The foreign offices just now are shaking hands with themselves over the supernal wisdom with which they keep the peace; they are saying: "What great men we are; how astute, moderate, resourceful, practical, how magnificently, despite fiery soldiers and fiercer newspaper men, we compel peace. Did we not stop the Balkan conflagration spreading?

Foreign Minister Sazonoff has been saying this about himself; Foreign Minister Sir Edward Grey, says the same thing (about himself), and Foreign Minister Count Berentod is about to say the same thing to the delegations. And now along comes the political philosophers, and vow that this is all humbug. The European war was avoided because the armies don't want to fight."

Too Well Fed to Fight.

The armies will never fight willingly again because they are far too big, complicated, bureaucratically organized, comfortable, brightly uniformed, nicely pensioned. War, henceforth, will be fought by small powers; by barbarous powers, and by powers with no armies worth mentioning. Where there are genuine, big, splendidly organized, first class armies there will be no war. The armies are not such fools.

The first clew to the discovery that armies don't want to fight was given by Sukhomlinoff, Russia's minister of war, who made the novel declaration that militancy (that is, the fighting spirit) is the very opposite of militarism (that is, the army spirit). Sukhomlinoff, of course, does not say that Russia's army won't fight—that would cost him his job. He said that great dangers for the fighting spirit lie in organization, red tape and bureaucratic methods, all indispensable in the management of an army machine like Russian's which controls 1½ million men.

The old Russian military sprit was the fighting spirit that led to the conquests of the Eighteenth Century. This stage is now passing. The army which fought in Manchuria was admirably organized, but its fighting spirit was weak. It was all organization. "The danger of a modern army is that it may fall a victim to its own perfection."

Sukhomlinoff's theory that militarism is killing militancy has been much of late in the Austrian and German army press. Militarism, it is admitted, is spreading. The typical continental great state is becoming, in all its relations, merely a branch of the army. But such states and such armies have no desire to fight.

War Spirit Dying in Germany.

In Germany the army, or military spirit is undoubtedly higher than ever. The military caste is absolutely on top. But there is no signs of militancy. Commanding generals are appointed because they are good administrators, who see that their men are properly fed and who save for the state as much as possible out of the annual uniform allowance.

In the Austrian delegations two years ago the complaint was made that "among all the higher commands there is only one fighting man." That was the present chief of staff, Conrad von Hoetzendorff. Hoetzendorff is notoriously the bete noir of the bureaucrat-soldiers who run the army and who imagine that as long as regiments look smart and accounts are honestly kept, the army position is satisfactory. The delegations remember said that Austria is returning to the Eighteenth Century. The army then existed for peace. The bad results of this system was shown in the Seven Years' War, and half a century later when Austria's well organised army came into collision with the ill-organised militant enthusiasts of the French Revolution.

The causes of the decline of the army fighting spirit are believed to be not individual, but "mass psychological." Prussian, Austrian and Russian officers are pronounced to be as brave as ever. But the collective spirit of great armies is not militant.

War Would Spell it All.

War offices are under the dominationof political and social fear. They dread that a great war would produce political and social conditions which would do away with armies altogether. Armies exist to-day only because of the popular belief that, burdensome as they are, they are indispensable for defence. This belief is the foundation of vast vested interests. It keeps hundreds of generals and inspectors in highly paid positions; it maintains a vast commissioned hierarchy and thousands of pensioners; and it feeds miscellaneous outside interests; arms manufacturers, supply firms, inventors and others. All these interests, from generals down to army boot makers, see that militarism is already threatened by the Socialist propaganda. But the threat from Socialism is nothing compared with the threat which would come from a great war. A great war might overwhelm all the interests.

THE PLEASURES OF READING

By F. M. DELA POSSE

Amongst those studies to which from distant ages thinkers and philosophers have devoted themselves with the greatest assiduity, religion takes the premier place. It is easy to see why it should be so. Man, a thinking, observing creature, finds himself surrounded by a universe of wonders and mysteries. For these his nature forces him to seek a Maker. Within himself also he feels a world of longings, fears, thoughts, hopes and visions quite as wonderful and mysterious, and he seeks for the source of these also. He thinks of them in youth, when health and happiness are uppermost, and when probably the very enchantment of living has a tendency to dim the truths that, like stars, are beginning to shine in the firmament of the imagination. He thinks of them in the very zenith of his career when the thousand and one activities that belong to life are usually uppermost in the mind. But he thinks of them most when the evening shadows approach, and suffering, and grief, and death show him the necessity of a closer communion with a spirit greater than himself.

It is not surprising that this, the most powerful, the most essential of forces, should have produced an immense amount of diversified literature, and that many doctrines, touching upon the worship of a Supreme Being, should have been enunciated are the light of Christianity shone upin the world.

I have before me as I write a little volume entitled "Religious Denominations." In it the tenets of no fewer than 151 forms of faith are set forth, some of them Pagan, most of them professedly Christian. It is an interesting book to read, and it makes one realise what gigantic efforts mankind is making and has ever made in the search for religious truth. Whichever way we turn, whether to Plato, to Aristotle, or even to the lowest forms of idolatry practised by the African savages, we still find the idea uppermost of the necessity of worshipping or propitiating a Great Spirit. At the time of Christ's appearance all the heathen nations worshipped a multiplicity of gods and demons whose favour they courted by obscene and ridiculous ceremonies, and whose anger they endeavoured to appease by the most abominable cruelties. Their conceptions were entirely based on the belief that the universe was governed by evil and not by good and the consequences were seen in the absolute lack of morals they displayed.

At this period the religion of the Romans, as well as their arms, had extended itself throughout a great part of the known world. Yet, in spite of the seemingly insurmountable obstacles in the way of Christianity it soon found its way to the remotest bounds of that great empire. This was due in large measure to the fact that a profound peace had descended on the earth and because it was an age universally distinguished for science and erudition. Discerning minds were beginning to see the absurdity of worshipping spirits in stocks and stones and readily lent an ear to teachings that appealed to heart and understanding alike.

The perusal of a book like the one I have mentioned does more than provide a glimpse of the religious efforts of the centuries. Whilst it shows the influence of external circumstances on internal belief and the effect of perfect freedom of religious inquiry in multiplying branches, it also inculcates a lesson of charity and forbearance towards those who may entertain theological opinions different from our own.

There are in the Public Library over 800 volumes dealing with religious subjects, and the enquirer into matters spiritual need go no further than our shelves for the matter of which he may be in quest.

CANTEEN QUESTION GROWS.

Many Favour Canteen Sergeant—Officers Want Regimental Messes.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The canteen question at Salisbury is likely to take on a new phase. At any rate, among a section of the dwellers in the camp there is a strong feeling growing that the canteens should be in charge of a canteen sergeant, who will see that proper regulations are enforced, instead of such institutions being under the control of contractors from outside, who may only show an anxiety to establish as big a trade as possible.

Amongst the officers there is a strong desire to establish regimental messes, instead of the present brigade messes, which prove expensive.

Eczema Only Skin Deep

A few skin troubles originate in the blood. But very few. Dr. Evans, ex-Commissioner of Health, and a famous writer on medical subjects, says:

"We shall begin to make headway with skin diseases when we learn two things: first, that skin disease does not come from impure blood; second, that so-called blood purifiers have no such action."

The skin can be cleared up, and the almost intolerable itching and burning stopped, by local treatment, applied directly to the parts affected, and give yourself a smooth, velvet complexion.

You can do it with the aid of the wonderful D. D. D. Prescription, a cooling, refreshing lotion—not a salve or grease. It soothes your tender skin, opens the pores, drives out the old impurities and gives you a skin like a baby—smooth and clear.

We sell D. D. D. on a positive no-pay guarantee.

You don't risk a cent. Don't suffer another day. Call at our store today. Ask also about D. D. D. Soap—best for tender skin.

No increase in price. Notwithstanding heavy increase in cost of important ingredients price remains the same.

HOSPITAL EFFICIENCY.

A highly developed efficiency system in saving time and trouble for the staff is used in a London Hospital. Indicators bearing the names of the officials, house doctors and some of the staff doctors are located in many rooms and hallways, and these indicators show at all times whether or not any one of the officials is in the hospital and available for consultation. When each doctor comes into the building a button is pressed that makes it known on all the indicators that he has arrived; and when he goes out the indicators are made to record that fact. The indicators also show the word "engeged," which means that the official or doctor is not to be disturbed—a push on a button in the official's room accomplishes this. Thus in any part of the hospital, at any time, each doctor knows and each nurse knows when the various officials and doctors may be asked to give attention to any matter.

NOW IS YOUR CHANCE.

Great reduction from $30.00 to $23.75. All the sideboards, buffetts, combination buffetts, all finished in Imperial oak. Your choice of any in the store, marked up to $30.00, at $23.75. See our show window. E. B. CLEGG & CO., 27 George Street.

YOUNG NURSE THROWN INTO TUB BY HAZERS

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 27.—A young novitiate nurse in the Hartford Hospital was denuded of her dress and ducked in a tub of water as a part of a hazing process, according to an official statement issued for the hospital by Miss Lauder Sutherland, principal of the nurses' residence; but this statement does not satisfy the young woman's relatives and friends nor does it explain why she was compelled to retire from duty a nervous wreck.

The city has been buzzing for several days with the story that the young woman, who had ben prominent in amateur theatricals, and whose family is prominent and popular, entered the hospital to become a nurse and was subjected to such a severe hazing by half a dozen or a dozen of the older nurses that her health was undermined.

Her relatives informed friends that she was lured into a room one night, soon after she was accepted as a novitiate nurse, and was there seized by the young women who had been graduated as nurses. Her dress, which happened to be an expensive street costume, was stripped from her and she was doused into a large tub filled with ice water.

This caused such a severe nervous shock that she became ill, was transferred to her home and since then, it was said, had been an invalid and subject to extreme nervous weakness.

These stories become so persistent about the city that Miss Sutherland on behalf of the hospital, issued a statement that when the young nurse returned to the hospital after an evening out "she was informed that she was to be bathed. She herself took off her best clothes, which she was wearing, and was then gently dipped in the tub of water, which was not cold. Later she was sent to her home as she was fragile, was of a nervous disposition, and had an attack of nausea."

Miss Sutherland said she had rebuked the hazers, and that such a thing would never occur again in the hospital.

Would They March Through New England?

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Commenting on the suggestion made by Count Von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, that Germany has the right to invade Canada, the World to-day says editorially:

"It is true that technically there is nothing in the Monroe Doctrine that would necessarily interfere with the landing of German troops in Canada, provided Germany did not try to hold territory. But as long as the British navy is afloat, Germany has no more chance of invading Canada than she has of invading the moon.

"The German attitude toward the Monroe Doctrine has always left a great deal to be desired from an American point of view. German political writers have habitually treated the Monroe Doctrine as a piece of contemptible Yankee impudence and this is rather a dubious occasion for a German diplomatist to raise hypothetical questions as to the extent and application of the doctrine in a hypothetical campaign against Canada.

"Should German troops ever invade Canada, the application of the Monroe Doctrine to the specific case will be defined in Washington, not in Berlin.

The American sarcastically says:

"If the German Ambassador really holds this theory, it would have been the part of diplomacy for him to keep it discreetly to himself. It will not add to his popularity in this country.

"We trust the Count will not supplement his interesting remarks on Canada and the Monroe Doctrine with the proposition that should Germany wish to invade Canada the Belgian precedent would afford ample justification for marching her troops through New England."

The Herald says:

"Can Von Bernstorff imagine that Americans are so enamoured of Germany 'kultur' as exemplified in Belgium that they would welcome its appearance on this continent.

"If there is one thing more calculated than any other to make Americans give ear to the foolish talk of persons who would have the United States break its neutrality and give its aid and comfort to the allies, it is the picture Count Von Bernstorff paints of German armies 'hacking their way' in Canada."

THIS NIOBE NOT ALL TEARS.

In spite of the many "black eyes" the cruiser Niobe received before she was dismantled as useless her crew are not ashamed of her, and they desire nothing so much as a fight with the Karlsruhe. She is "slow," but she can make eighteen knots an hour, which would be considered not bad for a merchant vessel.—Globe.

WHEN HE WENT TO SCHOOL.

I bought him such a dainty suit,
A pretty silken plaid cravat,
New sturdy shoes and such a cute
Becoming sailor hat.

A bag to hold his one book wee
(He was, of course, just a beginner),
A pencil box with lock and key,
A basket for his dinner.

The day at last arrived for school,
With clinging kiss and fond rehearse
Of how he should observe each rule,
I sent him off with nurse.

Then laid aside his half made kite,
His horse and waggon put away;
I thought when he'd come home he might
Be anxious quite to play.

I told the good old cook to make,
And have it surely done by three,
His favourite jelly-layer cake—
He would so hungry be.

A thousand times I thought of him,
(He was my only one, you know)
My little laughing, romping Jim,
I missed him, missed him so.

I tried to sew, to read, but, slow
So slow the hours dragged by.
Now mothers you won't laugh, I know,
I had a good, long cry.

Fleets of Russia and Turkey Are Now Reported In Conflict

Bedouins Have Been Massed On Frontier of British Protectorate.

EGYPT THREATENED

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Rome says:

"It is reported from Constantinople that a battle between Turkish and Russian fleets is in progress off Odessa.

A despatch, however, received in Vienna from Cairo and forwarded to London by the correspondent at Amsterdam, of the Central News Agency, says that the entire Turkish fleet is reported to have left the Black Sea in which Odessa is an important grain port. It is also said that strong Turkish cavalry divisions have arrived in the neighborhood of the Gulf of Akabah on the Red Sea about 200 miles from the Suez Canal.

A despatch from Amsterdam says: "It is reported that scout vessels of the Turkish fleet have been observed at the entrance of the Gulf of Suez. The vessels are equipped with wireless apparatus.

Reports to Lloyd's agency in London yesterday were that the Russian gunboat Donits was sunk by a Turkish torpedo boat in a raid on the forts of Odessa on Thursday and part of the crew drowned. The Russian steamers Lazaroff, Willas and Whampia, and the French steamer Portugal were damaged by shell fire and a number of sailors killed or wounded.

The suburbs of Odessa were shelled and some civilians killed. Some American property was damaged.

It was also stated that the Russian Ambassador at Constantinopel has been withdrawn and Russian consuls ordered to leave Turkey.

The Berlin newspaper, Zeitung Am Mittag, published yesterday what purports to be an official communication from Constantinople. It states: "Russian torpedo boats attempted to prevent the Turkish fleet leaving the Bosphorus and steaming into the Black Sea. The Turkish ships opened fire and sunk two of the Russian vessels. More than thirty Russian sailors, saved by the Turks, were made prisoners. The Turkish fleet sustained no losses."

In anticipation of the possible invasion of Egyptian territory British Ambassador Maller, acting under instructions from his Government, has plainly informed the Grand Vizier that if the Turks cross the frontier it would mean war with the entente powers.

A clamorous mob surrounded the Turkish Embassy at Petrograd, manifesting against Turkey. The people were restrained from violence by mounted gendarmes.

Earlier the same mob paraded the streets with bared heads, singing and cheering. They called the orchestras out of the hotels and demanded that they assist by playing the national anthem. The excitement in Petrograd is the greatest since the declaration of war against Germany.

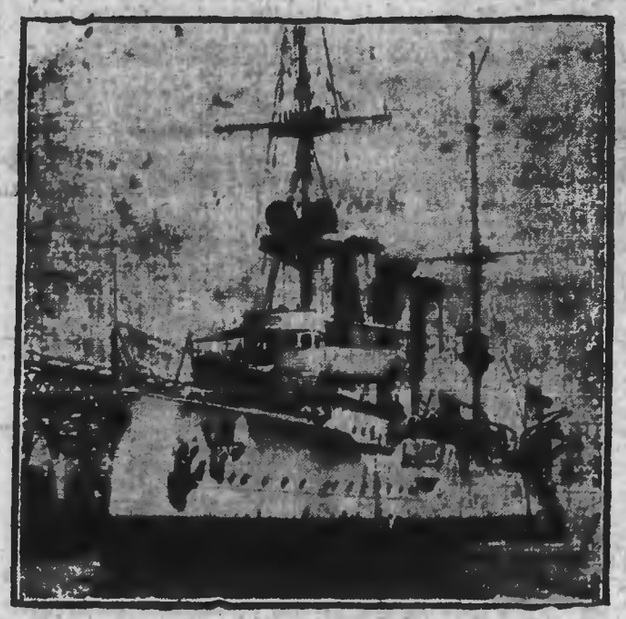
Now that Turkey has cast the die the most important news from the near east is the unrest among the Bedouins, who are reported to be massing on the Egyptian frontier. At Damascus, in Asiatic Turkey, great demonstrations have been held in favor of a holy war against Christians, with Britain as the particular enemy.

In Russian circles the Turkish outbreak is described as of more vital concern to Britain than Russia owing to the religious sympathies which the Turk may excite among his co-religionists of India and Egypt. Egypt has been described as "the meeting place of East and West, a jumping-off place in which Imperial forces can be concentrated for action in Europe, in India, in eastern Asia, or in South Africa. Recently German shipping in the Suez Canal excited suspicion, and the Khedival Government, acting under British advice, ordered the vessels to clear.

The canal could easily be blocked by the sinking of one or several mercantile steamers, or by the blowing up of some of the locks. All these contingencies have engaged British attention, and precautions have been taken to prevent German secret agents doing any damage to this important strategical waterway.

Petrograd accepts the situation quietly, and disclaims any idea of aggressive warfare against the Turks. Russia asserts her intention merely to protect Russian interests around the Black Sea from attack.

English newspapers take an equally philosophic view of Turkey's action, and express the belief that, while the military situation will not be greatly changed, Turkey in Europe is doomed to extinction. Unless Bulgaria joins the enemies of Turkey an invasion by land of European Turkey is impracticable, according to British observers, and the warfare will be naval. The Turkish navy, assisted by the former German cruisers Goeben and Breslau, is considered here to be far more formidable than her army, which is said to be inefficiently equipped and poorly led.



THAT WILY GERMAN CRUISER EMDEN—Which has done greater damage to the allies' commerce than the rest of the German fleet together. The Emden operates in the Pacific and is heard from at extremely different points from day to day. She is credited with sinking several British merchantmen near India and lately she slipped into Penang harbour in the Straits Settlements, a British possession, and sunk a Russian cruiser and a French destroyer. She flew a Japanese flag and was fitted with a dummy funnel.

Ethel: Oh, Jack, darling, be careful to-night. Papa's brought home a bulldog. Jack: That's all right. The dog used to belong to me, and I got the dealer to sell him to your father.

A KICK ABOUT STREET LIGHTING

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Judging by your unusual silence, it would seem as if you were not aware of the very bad lighting of our streets during this month. This has been so apparent to many that some wonder has been expressed why the newspapers have not drawn attention to it.

Without any exaggeration, it is safe to say that never before since electric lighting has been introduced in Peterborough, have the suburban streets been so badly lighted as this month. Darkness—almost Egyptian darkness—has prevailed in many sections; so dark that residents have confessed that it was with some difficulty that they reached their homes at night.

What is the Chairman of the Light and Power Co. doing about it? He and his committee must be aware of the state of affairs?

A city's lighting contract should be reviewable. The ideal contract for any public service is adjustable at any moment, as changing methods and new economics may develop.

The taxpayers of a city and the dwellers who depend on its lights have an unquestionable right to insist that its system shall be made as completely and continuously subject to revision as it is possible for a rigid contract to be written—and not to be coerced and dictated to as if the people had no business to know the true inwardness of new-fangled methods.

It has seemed as if some public bodies took a long time to glimpse the fact that they are in existence by public favour. And, that, therefore, the public welfare should in all their transactions, be a main consideration.

"Let there be light."

A. CITIZEN.

GOVERNOR GENERAL OBJECTED

Ottawa Says He Stepped in on Hon. Bob Rogers' Plan to Snap Four More Years

SOFT PEDAL ON INCIDENT

OTTAWA, Oct. 30.—Canada is not going to go through the throes of a general election this all. That much has been decided. The day for gethering the harvest has been postponed, and thereby hangs a tale that is being told with considerable relish here—a tale that is fast spreading across Canada.

No official denial has been or will be made, and the story is vouched for by one who knows what is transpiring in the inner circles where the political pot is always kept, if not at boiling point, at least ready for an emergency.

The story concerns His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, and the Conservative party, more particularly the Hon. Robert Rogers, and deals with how it came to pass that Canada hasn't a general election to help to divert its mind from the European catastrophe.

A Capable Electioneer.

Hon. Bob Rogers is the Cabinet Minister whose open statement is that "while I may not know everything in the world, at least I do know how to win elections." He has proved that to be the case. The West will recall the fact if the East has forgotten it.

Under the circumstances it was to be expected that the Hon. Bob would not be the one to overlook the chance of securing a snap verdict from the people of Canada. The Empire was at war. Canada was endeavouring to do her part. Men and money were being sent to Britain. What more natural then than to feel reasonably sure that the people of Canada would feel in duty bound to allow the Government in power to remain, to carry out the work it had begun? The Liberal party had declared a truce. Issues of such supreme moment to the Empire could not be discussed at such a time. It was betting on a sure thing. How foolish it would be to overlook the opportunity?

This was the plan and feelers were sent out. The first one appeared in a New York paper and was duly wired back to Canada—as it was intended it should. Liberal papers could hardly believe any such scheme was afoot, and even a few Conservative ones, notably the Montreal Star, stood aghast at the effrontery of the thing.

However, Mr. Rogers, who "knows how to win elections," wasn't going to give in so soon. Four more years in power without having to struggle? It was too much to give up.

Began to Prepare.

And so orders were sent out to prepare the lists. Galleys of names covered with dust were unearthed in the job office of a printing plant whose boast it is that it has secured more Government business since its Ottawa representative became the personal aide-de-camp—press agent, if you will—of Major-General the Hon. Sam Hughes than it did in any quartef of a century in its long existence as one of the chief Conservative organs. An extra staff was put at work.

Then trouble began. It came to the ears of those so busy that it mightn't be possible to put it through. Premier Sir Robert Borden was known to be, if not actually opposed, at least not altogether too pleased. Still the Hon. Bob insisted.

Before an election can be held, however, it is necessary to secure the consent of the Governor-General. He has to sign the warrant. Emissaries were sent to Rideau Hall.

And then the bubble burst!

There is no authentic record of what His Royal Highness said, but it did the trick. With the future of the Empire in such dire peril, was it to be expected that the uncle of the King would allow such an obvious piece of political trickery to be played in the Dominion in which he exercises the Royal prerogatives?

WAS KILLED AT THE FRONT

Auto Driver from Canadian Force Loses Life at Lille.

MONTREAL, Oct. 31. — William Cockhill, of Montreal, was killed at Lille, in France, while on active service. Messages to that effect have been received here.

Cockhill had been a chauffeur in the employ of Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, and went with the Canadian overseas expeditionary force, having joined the mechanical transport section of the Army Service Corps as a driver.

The majority of this part of the contingent at once proceeded to the continent and joined the allied army to serve on the transport section. At Lille a shell struck the car Cockhill was handling and a gas tank exploded, the driver being instantly killed.

A sister received official notification of the death of Mr. Cockhill. Mr. Cockhill was married two days previous to his departure from Montreal.

"Elliott's Horse" Independent Corps Has Reached Montreal

MONTREAL, Oct. 30.—After being held up and prevented from going through United States territory, there arrived in Montreal yesterday a troop of hardy-looking veterans, known as "Elliott's Horse." They have travelled across the continent from Victoria, B.C., and are on their way to Britain, where they hope to be given an opportunity to go to the front at once.

It was planned that they should go from Victoria to Seattle, and thence across the United States to New York, to take steamer there for Britain. One of the main reasons for this plan was that a saving of several thousand dollars in transportation would be effected. After boarding the steamer at Victoria, however, it was learned that they would not be allowed to pass through the United States, as it would be a violation of neutrality, so arrangements were made to take the Canadian route, and sail from Montreal.

An Independent Corps.

Elliott's Horse is an independent organization. It has no connection with the Canadian Militia, nor yet with the Imperial forces. The corps was raised and equipped by R. T. Elliott, K.C., of Victoria, and named after him. Mr. Elliott also financed the men through six weeks' training in barracks at Victoria, and is paying their transportation to Britain. The commanding officer is Capt. G. Smith, who is already on his way to Britain to make arrangements for the men on their arrival there. The acting commander with the troop is Capt. W. A. C. Underwood. Other officers are Lieutenants Holgate, Roberts, and Sloan.

Some of the men are veterans of several campaigns, as only men who had seen active service were accepted. The men assuredly have the appearance of being able to give a good account of themselves. They are big strapping fellows, and are very impressive in their khaki uniforms and wide sombreros.

When they arrived at Montreal yesterday, and it was learned they could not sail for some time, the problem of sleeping accommodation had to be solved. With the assistance of Col. Stewart and Major Long, they secured quarters in the old High School Building. The troopers are amusing themselves in "taking in the sights" pending their departure.

WAR BREAKS UP A ROYAL LOVE MATCH

Princess Patricia Reported to Have Chosen a German Prince After Many Suitors Had Been Refused

NOW WITH KAISER'S ARMY

The Princess Patricia of Connaught, the Princess "Pat" of popular affections, is the victim of a most cruel war romance.

After rejecting more kings and princes than any girl in Europe, the handsome Princess became engaged shortly before the war to the hereditary Grand Duke Adolf Friedrich of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. The engagement was not formally announced, but was universally accepted as a fact.

Now the Duke is a German officer and his country is at war with the Princess's country. The engagement, of course, must be at an end, and whether it can ever be resumed is very doubtful, as the feeling between the two countries is such that a marriage between these two would be execrated in both places.

In spite of the Duke's high rank, there is no doubt that the engagement was a love affair. The Princess had declined so many suitors, including several of much higher position than the Duke, that it is certain she is determined to marry only for love, or at least for reasons of personal inclination.

The Duke is a handsome young man, who has made himself very popular in society. He is heir to the reigning Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, who is one of the sovereign Princes of the German Empire. Although this family is not of great political importance among rulers, it is very ancient and possesses immense wealth.

The young Grand Duke Adolf Friedrich has mingled much more in cosmopolitan society than is usual with German Princes. He has met many Americans in London and Paris. He took part in several of the costume balls that have lately been so popular in those cities, and was considered the best-looking figure in historical costume at them.

It was after an extended experience of society and suitors that the Princess chose the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. He was the ideal of a woman who had seen many men of different types and understood their ways. Society is therefore convinced that he must be a very brilliant and attractive man, even though a born Prince.

Not only is the Grand Duke now logically an enemy of all that is British, but it is conceivable that the chances and strange coincidences of war may bring him to sword points with a member of the family of the woman he expected to wed. Princess "Pat's" brother, Prince Arthur of Connaught, is at the front with the British expeditionary forces in France. As a Major in the Scots Greys, his capture and detention as a prisoner of war would be well worth the while of any German officer.

The ancient Greek dramatists, with a Princess "Pat" for their tragic heroine, would not have denied themselves a climax even more harrowing. To meet that dramatic ideal all future possibility of Princess "Pat" being reunited with her royal lover would be obliterated by a personal combat in which Prince Arthur of Connaught would be slain by the Grand Duke.

Considering the heavy casualties that have more than decimated the British officers sent to France, it would not be strange if the Princess should read the name of her brother in the list of dead or wounded almost any day now. And this is another of the worries and griefs she is compelled to bear.

Floating on two pontoons, a tower 80 feet high has been built as an English port to lift coal from barges and load it into vessels at the rate of 150 tons an hour.

Stoplogs Are In Position

Have Not Been Removed in Interests of Peterboro' Lumbermen

LINDSAY, Oct. 31.—The John Carew Lumber Co. has received word from Engineer Kellally, Acting Superintendent, Trent Valley Canal, concerning the low water in the Scugog. The engineer states that an effort will be made to supply water from Balsam Lake. He also stated that the stoplogs have not been taken out at Bobcaygeon.

A few days ago it was stated that the stoplogs at Bobcaygeon had been removed in the interests of Peterborough lumbermen.

Hallowe'en Social Was Great Success

Enjoyable Affair Under Auspices of Girls' Delta Alpha Bible Class

A successful Hallowe'en social and concert was held in the basement of the Park St. Baptist Church, on Friday, Oct. 30th. There was a very large attendance, Mr. C. Barrie was in the chair. A splendid programme was provided, several numbers being heartily encored. The following was the programme:

Hymn.
Prayer.
Violin Solo—Miss Braund.
Solo—H. Murdoff.
Duet—Misses G. Batley and E. Saunders.
Reading—Miss Shurie.
Solo—Miss G. Batley.
Pianoforte Duet—Miss N. Moore and Mr. H. Hill.
Solo—Miss E. Saunders.
Pianoforte Solo—Miss A. Braund.
Solo—Mr. H. Hill.

Refreshments were provided by the social committee and a very pleasant evening was spent by all present. The basement was very nicely decorated by the class girls, with Hallowe'en and patriotic emblems, and the class colours were draped around the basement.

Great credit is due to the different committees for the splendid concert and social evening that they provided. There was a silver collection, the proceeds to go to the church organ fund.

The very enjoyable evening closed with the singing of "God Save the King."

Some Need of Charity At Home

To the Editor of The Examiner

Sir,—Does charity begin at home, first? If so, then, if some of the patriotism that is being shown to the Belgians was shown to some of our own citizens, who, in times of prosperity, were good loyal citizens, and who are now struggling along, trying to keep body and soul together, then, I think, they would be showing charity.

My sympathy is with the poor Belgians who have done bravely indeed, and deserve the help and praise of the whole world, but, however, so do some of our citizens deserve more help than they are getting at the present time

I know, personally, of one poor woman, with three small children to support, who is working for a local firm, works eleven (11) hours, at night, Saturday and Sunday nights included, for the magnificent sum of $5.70 a week. Out of that sum she has rent to pay, food and fuel to buy; also warm clothing for herself and children, and not in the best of health herself; in fact, on the verge of a breakdown; yet no notice is taken of this sort of bravery and sacrifice.

If some of the money that is given so freely to the patriotic fund were given to such as these and "I can name more than this one" it would be patriotism indeed.

By the way, the firm that employs these people just donated over $100 to the fund. Wouldn't it have been more to their credit to have given it to their employees, or else give them a decent wage.

Hoping, Mr Editor, that this will find space in your valuable paper, I remain,

Yours truly,
"One For Justice"

THE BARRIE BUILDING IS TO BE COMPLETED BY FIRST OF MARCH

Conditions of Contract Involve the Employment of Local Labour and Local Materials.

The foundation of the Barrie Building George street, has been completed by the contractor, Mr. W. H. Lytle, and the building is to be completed by March 1st, 1915. The lowest and, consequently, successful, tenderer, for the construction of the new Barries' Limited building, was the National Construction Company, Toronto, and the contract was not closed till the company had incorporated in the agreement the condition that local labour and local materials were given the preference in every case.

The building will consist of a basement and four stories of brick, steel and concrete, with the finish of the front of stone and tile.

The basement will be fitted for stores and offices at the front, and contain fire-and-damp-proof vaults for fur storage, and steam-heating plant, etc.

The ground floor will contain two retail stores, one to be occupied by Barries Limited for the retail branch of their business, and the other will be for rental. A central entrance between these two stores will give access to a spacious vestibule, where the passenger elevator will be installed and operated, and give access to all parts of the building.

The second and third floors will be devoted to suites of modern offices, steam-heated and with modern sanitary arrangements, and electric elevator accommodation. These offices will also be for rental.

The whole of the fourth floor and a part of the third will be devoted to the fur manufacturing and shipping of Barrie's Limited.

At the rear there will be a goods elevator; so that the city's desire that the pavement will not be used for piling packages and boxes will be met.

Altogether the new building will be in architectural features and solidity of construction, an ornament to the chief business street of the city, and a substantial addition to our business structures.

Supplies Plentiful On The Market

This morning's produce market was largely attended. Supplies of all kinds were plentiful with little in the way of price advances to indicate that the Empire was in the throes of war. Potatoes were selling freely at from fifty-five to sixty cents a bushel. There seems to be an unusually large crop this year, so it is probable that this particular commodity will be obtainable throughout the winter months, at prices consistent with conditions. Apples that would easily grade number one were selling at from to two dollars and a half per barrel. The apple crop was the best that Ontario has had in years. Besides it is claimed that the European conflict has restricted the foreign market in consequence of which the home consumer may expect to benefit.

Onions were offered in fairly large quantities at one fifty a bag. Cabbages five cents a head and beets at ten cents a bunch.

The Inside Market.

The inside market was crowded almost to the limit. Like the outside market prices showed very little change from those of last week. Butter was selling at thirty cents a pound and eggs at thirty-five. The latter were to be had only in limited quantities. In fact they were about as slim in point of quantity as of quality. Fowl was very plentiful. Chickens found a ready sale at sixty cents a pair and upwards, geese one dollar and a half and turkeys twenty cents a pound.

Will Make Shrapnel For War Office

The Electric Steel and Metals Company, Limited, whose plant was recently completed in Welland, Ontario, have received orders from the British War Office through the Canadian Department of Militia and Defence, for the manufacture of shrapnel shell.

A number of the directors of the Electric Steel and Metals Company have been engaged in the making of shells in English arsenals and this experience enables them to turn out the complete shell in the Welland plant.

The present contract will keep the plant going day and night until April 1915.

The stock in the Electric Steel and Metals Company Limited, was recently issued by Rooke, Bickle and Company, Toronto.

The Ketchecum Lake Hunt Club left this afternoon for the wilds of the north country around the lake after which the club has been named. The party will motor to their restination, and will spend the next two weeks on the trail of the deer.

For Mr. H. C. Winch, who will be a member of the party, this will be the fiftieth year that he has travelled north for the purpose of winging the roving doe and buck. The trip this year will be made by auto, and the easy journey to the hunting grounds will form a strange contrast to the trip that was made the first year the club was organized, with Mr. Winch as one of its promotors. Among those who are going are: Messrs. H. C. Winch, R. J. Munso, Dr. McPherson, W. G. Morrow, M. Comstock, J. D. Collins, Dr. Frederick, Alex. Collins, Bruce Gillespie, and F. L. Roy.

Messrs. R. Gibbs, C. E. Pennyfather, and others will follow in a few days.

City Sets A Fine Record

A new record has been set during the past month, in this city. In October there were only six fires within the city limits, which is the least number that have occurred in the space of a month since the new fire department was organized. Not since the 14th of the month has the brigade been called out to answer a fire alarm for any reason. The only fire of any consequence during the month was at the residence of Alderman Stratton, when his auto and garage were burned. The damage by fire was several thousand dollars. In October, 1913, there were eight fires amounting in all to $5,635.

FARMER WAS STABBED BY A FARM HELPER

His Assailant, George Wilson, is now Under Arrest at Galt

GALT, Oct. 30.—While working in his barn this evening Alex. Goodall, a well-known farmer of Cedar Creek Road, was attacked and stabbed by a farm-hand, George Wilson. Mr. Goodall's arm was frightfully gashed and one finger was nearly severed. e had nearly bled to death when Dr. MacKendrick arrived, and is in a rather serious condition Chief Gorman went to the country and arrested Wilson, who is now lodged in the local jail. No cause for the young man's dastardly act could be given this evening.

BRITISH HOSPITAL SHIP WRECKED OFF YORKSHIRE

Steamer Having Doctors, Nurses, and Hospital Equipment Was Caught in a Gale.

100 DROWNED

WHITBY, Eng., Oct. 31.—The loss of life on the British hospital ship Rohilla, which crashed on the rocks of the Yorkshire coast near here before dawn yesterday, is a matter of doubt to-day. It is believed at least 100 perished. The vessel, however, is a total wreck, having broken in two, while lifesavers on shore were shooting lines and trying vainly to make one fast to the ill-fated ship.

Bearing physicians, nurses and hospital supplies, the Rohilla was on her way to a Belgian or a French port to succor the wounded, when she was driven ashore. It is understood that all the women on board were saved, including one who was a survivor of the Titanic disaster. The fate of the physicians is uncertain, as is that of the captain and the crew. The total number of people on board is not definitely known, but some estimates place it at 200.

When the stricken vessel broke in two, eight men could be seen from the shore clinging to a piece of wreckage from the afterpart of the ship, and it is assumed that they were swept to their death in the boiling sea.

Rain was falling in torrents, a gale was blowing and the seas were mountainous when the vessel hit the rocks. Distress rockets immediately flared above the Rohilla, attracting the coast guards, but as the sea continued violent it was possible to launch only two boats from the shore. These boats brought back all the people they could carry.

Most of the ship's boats were crushed in the attempt to launch them, and only one got away bearing a handful of survivors. Even these had to be dragged upon the beach, as the boat capsized in the breakers.

For four hours members of the crew and others could be seen clinging to the rigging, their plight becoming more desperate as the tide rose. In an effort to reach them the lifesavers shot many rockets. Then at 8.30 o'clock the inevitable came—the ship's back broke.

It is believed that most of those on board perished. Eleven physicians were among them, it is said.

GREECE WILL BE THE NEXT

Likely to be the First Neutral State to Throw Her Weight Against Ottoman Army.

AN ANCIENT ENEMY

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The complications of the European war have been increased by the entrance of the Turkish empire into the conflict on the side of the Teutonic allies. Following the Breslau's exploit in bombarding Theodosia, Russia, Turkish destroyers have sunk the Russian gunboat Donets in Odessa harbor and damaged three Russian and one French merchantmen.

No official declaration of war has been made, but Turkey's action seems to make it probable that the area of conflict may be greatly widened and the issues complicated. The Balkans, whence sprung the present European conflict, present such a network of hostile interests that Greece and the other Balkan nations may easily be drawn into the vortex.

Greece it is believed will likely be the first state now neutral to throw her weight against the Ottoman army. Bulgaria holds a remarkable position. She is bound to Russia by racial ties and to Great Britain by obligations for financial support in the last war. But her interests and sentiments are violently hostile to Turkey and Greece.

An attempt to invade the Caucasus on one side and Egypt on the other is the program military men think the Turkish army is likely to endeavor to carry out. Turkish forces have been gathering recently in Syria and Palestine, but a march across the Sinai peninsula will be a hard one, because the country is virtually a desert. The English papers are confident that the protection of the Suez Canal against a raid and of Egypt against invasion are well provided for. They recognize that the addition of Turkey to the belligerent forces probably will prolong the war and increase its horrors. They say that this means that Great Britain must raise more men. How long Italy can remain aloof is a question being asked by the newspapers.

A COMPLAINT FROM A MOTHER

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—I am a mother of thirteen children. I lost three of them in one month with diphtheria five years ago. Then, is it not most dangerous? I should say it is! I have seven children living now, nearly all small and I do not want them running into the danger of catching this disease. But there is one case of diphtheria three or four doors down Dublin Street, at the corner the card is down already and it is not up three weeks. Another case down Aylmer Street, another case on Denison Avenue, where there is diphtheria and the members of the family are running all over the street. Don't you think it is about time to let our Chief of Police know about it. I won't let my children go to school until it is looked after. We were closed in six weeks.

Yours truly,
An Anxious Mother.

SUSTAINED A BROKEN ARM

While Trying to Crank an Automobile—Mayor Buller's "Tin-horn Sports"

"Tin-horn sports," was the way His Worship Mayor Buller characterized a party of Toronto sportsmen, who after journeying to the Rice Lake district, abandoned their chauffeur when the latter was unfortunate enough upon reaching Port Hope to fracture his wrist while trying to crank the car. The chauffeur in question eventually found his way to Peterborough, and applied for admission to the hospital as an indigent patient. This was refused. The Relief Department was appealed to with the result that the man was supplied with transportation to Toronto.

Admission Refused.

It appears that the man was engaged in Toronto, to accompany a party of sportsmen on a hunting trip to the Rice Lake district. The chauffeur, who at the time was out of employment, agreed to go providing that he would be released in event of securing a more remunerative position. In due time the party arrived in Port Hope, where they remained long enough to secure supplies. It was when they were about to depart, that the chauffeur sustained a fractured wrist while in the act of cranking the car. The injured man was given medical attention in the Lakeshore town and eventually, the party proceeded on its way; the chauffeur taking his usual place at the wheel. It was not long before the pain became so intense that when their destination was reached, the chauffeur was invited to walk to Bailieboro and consult a doctor. This he did, and through the kindness of the doctor in question was provided with transportation to Peterborough. Upon arriving here, the injured man interviewed Mayor Buller with the object of gaining admission to one of the local hospitals. This was refused and the city to relieve itself of any possible addition to its charity list, purchased the man a ticket for Toronto. There are the facts of the case as given to Mayor Buller by the unfortunate chauffeur.

This is not an isolated case. It is one of many that come to the notice of the Relief Department. In many cases it is possible to solve the difficulty in the way that the above was solved. Only a few days ago a man was provided with transportation to the Old Country. This was an exceptional case attended by unusual circumstances and one that the department will not repeat.

Grant of $16,000.

County Council Makes Generous Response to Patriotic Fund

LINDSAY, Oct. 31.—The County Council made a most generous response through its Finance Committee to the appeal for aid to the Patriotic Fund. Reeve Mulligan, chairman of the committee, presided, and after some discussion a by-law was carried amidst enthusiasm empowering the council to lay a rate of one mill on the county assessment, said levy to cover a period of four years. This will provide a fund of $16,000 for patriotic purposes.

THE VITAL STATISTICS

Deaths.

The death rate during October has been more than double that of the corresponding month of last year. There was a total of twenty-five deaths during the month, which closes today. Last year there were twelve deaths for the same period.

Marriages.

The casualties in the ranks of bachelors shows a decrease of eleven for the month. Last year there were thirty-one marriages; this year only twenty couples plunged into the matrimonial sea.

Births.

The stork had a busy month, as shown by the statistics. Fifty-seven births were recorded during the month, which is an increase of fourteen over last year.

Building Permits.

Building permits suffered a slump during the month. Seventeen permits were issued, representing a total valuation of $6,5050. In October of last year, thirty-nine permits were issued, representing a total valuation of $29,-385.

CALEDONIAN HALLOWE'EN FESTIVAL

Annual Social Was Well Attended by Club Members and Friends

The Peterborough Caledonian Club held its usual annual Hallowe'en party in W. O. W. Hall on Friday evening. Mr. Robert Burns, the president, occupying the chair, when the programme was opened by the following artists, after the chairman's customary remarks:

"There a Wee Bit Laird" was sung to perfection by Miss Rowan, who had to respond to an encore.

"The Dear Home Land" by Miss Duffy was a song that appealed to the audience.

The 'cello solo by Mr. T. Smith came in for special praise, as he mastered the various items selected.

Mr. Wilson gave an excellent solo and Mr. John Smith gave an appropriate song in his usual masterly style.

The singing of Mr. William King called for special attention as a singer with the powerful voice necessary for 'Macgregor's Gathering.'

The songs rendered by Mrs. French were of a Scotch character which bright recollections of the native land back to many.

Mr. Light heart delighted the audience with an excellent song.

Mr. Robert Henry came to the front again, appearing in the character of a tramp, singing "A Long Way to Tipperary" and gave al la hearty laugh. He had to respond to an encore.

Miss G. Jay, a little girl, gave the audience excellent recitations that entertained the company. This brought the musical programme to a finish.

The hall was then cleared to enable members and friends to participate in the pleasure of "Old Time Scotch Dances," under the able directorship of Mr. Robert Sinclair of the Big Four orchestra, which responded to the necessity of musical items of catchy character

Great credit is due to the committee who were responsible for the night's enjoyment. The proceedings were brought to a close in the usual Scotch fashion by the company singing "Auld Lang Syne."

The purveying was well carried out by Mr. Hooper of George Street.

HONOURED BY CHOIR

Member of 57th Contingent Receives a Wrist Watch

The George Street Methodist church choir said farewell to one of their members last night in the person of Mr. Leonard Fraser, who has enlisted with the 57th second contingent and leaves with the squad for Kingston on Tuesday morning. Mr. Fraser has been a member of the choir for the past year and one half and has been most popular with his fellow singers. Last evening he was presented with a handsome wrist watch. The presentation was made by Miss Allie Bennett, while Mrs. McCarroll read the following address:

Peterborough, Oct. 30th, 14.

Dear Mr. Fraser,—We the members of George Street choir, having learned of your intended departure with the second Canadian contingent, wish to express in some slight form our deep appreciation of your valuable services in the organization of which we form a part.

We ask your acceptance of this small token of our esteem for you, with the hope that it may bring to your memory the happy times we have spent together.

Signed on behalf of the choir.

John H. Renwick,
Organist and Choirmaster.
M. Higgins,
Secretary.

Rev. Mr. Peever spoke feelingly of Mr. Fraser's departure and Mr. Renwick expressed the regret of the choir in losing such a valuable member as Mr. Fraser.

The latter thanked the choir for their gift and said that his connection with the choir had been a great pleasure to him.

The gathering broke up with the singing of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Short Term Debentures

The City Treasurer reports that the receipts from the sales of short term debentures to date are as follows:

For sewer contract number thirty-three	$41,600.00
For paving contract number three	$61,734.00
Total	$103,334.00

Members of the Finance committee are highly pleased at the result of their latest financial venture. The response to the appeal of the authorities, for people to invest in the city's short term debentures, has been very gratifying has shown by the above report.

A WOMAN'S RIGHT TO HEALTH

The Reason Why They Should Suffer From Backaches and Headaches

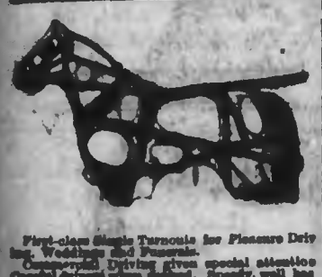
To every woman belongs the right to enjoy a healthy, active, happy life, yet nine out of ten suffer, often in silence, from splitting headaches, torturing backaches, violent heart palpitation or some other of the many ills that follows anaemia, or bloodlessness.

That is why one sees so many women with pale, thin cheeks, dull eyes and drooping figures—sure signs that the blood is out of order. All suffering women should win the right to be well by refreshing their weary bodies with the new, rich blood of health that promptly transforms them into healthy, attractive women. There is no other medicine can supply this new, rich blood so speedily and so surely as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Through this medicine thousands of tired, suffering women have found new health and strength. Mrs. James Drost, Chipman, N.B., says: "For years I did not know what it was to be entirely free from headache or backache. My hands were cold and clammy all the time. It was difficult for me to get my work done, and to walk even a short distance would leave me completely worn out. My life was one of constant worry and I thought I would never be better. I was doctoring all the time but without a bit of benefit, and finally the doctor stopped giving me medicine as he said he could not help me. Do you wonder that I was in despair. My mother urged me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but I said, "what's the use, medicine can't help me." However, my husband got six boxes of the pills, and to please him I began to take them. By the time I had finished them I undoubtedly had improved and there was the signs of returning health in my cheeks and hands. My husband thought the improvement so great that he got another half dozen boxes, and before these were completed I was enjoying such good health as I had not had in years, in fact, I was a well woman, and have since enjoyed the best of health. I sincerely feel that I owe my life to Dr. Williams Pink Pills, and shall always recommend them to all sick people."

You can get these pills at any medicine dealers, or they will be sent by mail, postpaid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SPECIAL POLICE FOR TO-NIGHT

The usual Hallowe'en precautions are being taken by Chief Thompson to safeguard the property of local citizens from acts of vandalism tonight. The police are well aware of the fact that all the youth of Peterborough have not gone to the war, and will swear in special constables for to-night, to put a damper on the germs of Germanism which might be fanned into flame by the annual advent of Hallowe'en.



First-class Simple Turnouts for Pleasure Driving, Weddings and Funerals.

Commercial Driving given special attention Careful drivers when required. Speedy, well housed horses and comfortable rigs.

A Double Standard Dangerous For a Nation or An Individual

Dr. Gordon Spoke on "The Double Standard" Last Evening

MEETINGS TO-MORROW

Dr Gordon will conduct two special services in Peterborough on Sunday. He will deliver his second confidential talk to men, in the Grand Opera House, at four o'clock in the afternoon, and also conduct, in the same building, a question drawer, at half-past eight o'clock Sunday evening. Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw will sing at both these meetings. It is Dr. Gordon's special desire that a particular effort should be made to secure the presence at the evening meeting of those who are not in the habit of attending any Church service

The meeting last evening, in the George Street Methodist Church, thronged the edifice to the doors fully forty-five minutes before the opening exercises began. There were seated on the platform, the Reverend Richard G. Peever, Pastor of the George Street Methodist Church, the Reverend Robert Pogue of St Paul's Presbyterian Church, Adjutant McElhiney of the Salvation Army, the Reverend John R. Webb of the Murray Street Baptist Church, the Reverend Fred A Connors of the Park Street Baptist Church, and also the Reverend Mr Rollins, who read in a beautiful fashion a selection from the New Testament, giving a spiritual picture of "The Prodigal Daughter".

Mr Greenlaw sang two selections, "The Holy City," by special request, and also the selection entitled "Will There be any Stars in My Crown?" The congregation joined heartily in the chorus of the latter

The following is a brief outline of Dr Gordon's address on "The Curse of the Double Standard".

I desire to speak this evening concerning "The Curse of the Double Standard," and have selected for my text a passage to be found in the first part of the Old Testament, Leviticus XXIV., 22: "Ye shall have one manner of law, as well for the stranger as for one of your country, for I am the Lord your God".

A double standard is a dangerous thing for a nation or an individual. When the Roman Empire was fast falling to its doom, it was said that every man had two religions, namely, the one which he professed, and the other one which he believed. There is not room in the universe for more than one God, nor room in the heart of man for more than one God, nor room in the heart of man for more than one religion A man should be honest in his religious thinking and sincere in his attitude toward God This is the corner stone in the granite wall of character.

There was a time when men of genius like Byron, Burns and Goethe were supposed to be above the laws, rules and regulations which have been ordained to govern ordinary people, but God never recognized the distinction. When our beloved Scottish poet, Robert Burns, swept by the social dissipations which were sadly characteristic of the day in which he lived—when "Bobbie" Burns, in a drunken stupor, lay down one chill night on the cold flagstones to sleep off the results of an over allowance of Scottish hospitality—nature, seemingly, failed to recognize the fact that he was "A child of genius". The chilling winds of the north swept over him just as ruthlessly as though he had never written a poem or breathed a brilliant syllable, and in less than a year the great man was in his grave. Nature recognizes no such thing as a "double standard."

The double standard! I know how that phrase is applied in a special and particular way in the social realm We have witnessed such plays as "A Man's World" and "As a Man Thinketh." Splendid dramatic productions—aimed to strike a blow at such shallow standards of social ethics as permit the opening of the doors of modern society for the admission of moral lepers, who possess gold and fame, and power, while the victims of their foul leprosy are crowned with contempt and thrown out into the cold night of social exclusion and pious disdain—but I am trying to deal with the subject in a broader way. We have a double standard in society because we have a double-faced sophistry interwoven into the very fibre of our modern thought. We are crooked in our cogitations and lame in our thinking. For the social leper I have a supreme contempt. But what must be the sensualists' contempt for himself when memory speaks, when conscience speaks, when the shadows of time begin to gather, when his own children cluster about his knee, when parental concern for his own loved ones brings into view a standard of morality which he saw fit to ignore or violate in the days of his youth

But I prefer, this evening, to deal with my subject in a more general way For I am convinced that the need of the world is sincerity. Honest thinking is the foundation of every true achievement and the secret of all genuine progress Let us clear our minds of cant. In dealing with "the curse of the double standard" I wish to remark in the place.

First: There is a double standard at work in the Church, socially, where one man is more welcome than another, where a pure democracy ought to be enthroned it is in the Church.

The social circle of Christian men and women which is not large enough to lovingly and sympathetically contemplate and include all humanity in its desires and designs is not large enough to be spoken of as "New Testament Christianity."

It is a sad day for the Church when it begins to bid for the "influence" of fashionable society. Then the question of admission into the Church is not "How much of God has he in his heart?" but "How much gold does he bring in his hands?" It is not "What does he believe?" but "How much can he bequeath?" The question then, is not, "What are his convictions?" but "What are his connections?"

Second: There i s a double standard at work in the pulpit when the pulpit orator preaches one thing while he believes another. A true preacher must think his own thoughts and speak his own mind. Hypocrisy is a thousand times more dangerous than heresy The one sin which blights and blasts the influence of a preacher is insincerity.

What a compliment was that which was paid to Savonarola, and what a reflection on the priesthood of the middle ages, too, were the words of Lorenzo the Magnificant: "This man is a true Monk and the only one I have ever seen." Lorenzo did not like Savonarola, but he was compelled to respect him. Respect is better than admiration I would rather be powerful than popular:

"He is a slave who dare not be
In the right with two or three."

Third. There are two standards in operation in the Legal Realm when the rich man receives more consideration at the bar of justice than the poor man. If Harry Thaw, the murderer of Stanford White, had ben as poor as most of us he would have been sent to the gallows or the electrical chair within six months of the date of his crime, but because he was the son of a millionaire, he enjoys every comfort which can be provided in an asylum for the insane; while every possible influence has ben brought to bear on judge, jury, district attorney and state legislature to secure his release. So we judge men on this continent not by the Golden Rule but by the rule of gold.

Fourth. There is a double standard in operation in the commercial realm when a young woman receives only six dollars a week for doing the same work for which a young man would receive ten or twelve dollars a week.

"Girls" are employed because they are "cheap." Cheap girlhood opens the door for cheap womanhood. Cheap womanhood means cheap morality, cheap character, cheap virtue, cheap religion, cheap Christianity, and cheap civilization. There is something wrong with our social system and commercial realm when young women and girls, by the thousands, are compelled to leave the homes where they are needed and where they belong and seek for a subsistance in competition with their male companions who should naturally be their guardians and protectors. But once in they should be treated on an equal footing with all others, and compensated according to service and ability

Fifth. There is a double standard in operation in a man's soul when he forgets the principles of his youth in order to gain wealth, favour, or social position "Where, oh where, are the visions of the morning?" Gone, alas, like our youth, too soon!" Visions of purity! Visions of virtue! Virtue of home! Visions of character! Visions of destiny! Gone, gone, gone—dissipated by the force of an earthly gravitation. The voice of God in the soul drowned by the rattle of moving wheels and jostling chariots. The clear air of the morning has become the dusty, smoky atmosphere of the noon hour

Sixth: There is a double standard in operation in the social circle where the successful man is admitted without any regard to the moral quality of his success. We live in an age when men and women, especially women, worship success. Blessed is the man who succeeds All past sins—sins of omission and sins of commission are judged in the light of a present success What difference does it make if a man only succeeds. If he only "gets there." He may neglect his Church, scorn his Bible, reject his Christ, break the Sabbath, forsake his friends, turn his back on everything which is pure, healthy, holy, and honourable and fling his conscience overboard, but what difference does it make if he only gets there—say some.

The meetings of the campaign will be continued in the George Street Methodist Church next Monday evening, and will probably close on Thursday evening.

Dr. Gordon states that this is one of the most successful campaigns for interest and depth of feeling which he has had the privilege of conducting in Ontario.

MASQUERADE WAS MUCH ENJOYED

The Hallowe'en masquerade party at the Y.W.C.A. last evening was a great success. One hundred girls joined in the fun and merriment. The costumes were wonderful creations showing inventive minds and skillful fingers. The gymnasium was gaily decorated. Pumpkin lanterns threw their mystic shadows everywhere. The home of the witch with her broomstick and cats was a popular resort, as what lassie does not wish to know her fortune. "Who was who" was the game of the evening and much fun was the result. Everyone was glad she came and sorry there were only sixty minutes in an hour, as the time went all too soon.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

A son of Premier Roblin, of Manitoba, C. D. Roblin, was accepted as a member of the second contingent. He is a member of C Company of the 90th Rifles.

Heavy storms prevail over Southern Italy. The weather at sea has been tempestuous, and it was found necessary yesterday to postpone the naval manoeuvres.

An Amsterdam despatch says that the Germans have transferred the guns of the Antwerp forts to the Belgian coast to defend their positions against the British warships.

Principal Gordon of Queen's makes an attack on the students in yesterday's issue of Queen's Journal for their slowness in offering themselves for military drill and instructions.

N. D. Peacock, Anglican rector at South Sandwich, and Grand Chaplain of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario, west, is going to the front as a lieutenant in the second contingent.

A barn on the Carton farm, near Cornwall, owned by the Longue Sault Development Co., of which Charles Cornell is tenant, caught fire from some unknown cause and was completely destroyed.

The City of Montreal is "dead broke," and cannot undertake any new work until next year, and then only a small amount. This was admitted by the financial officers of the municipality yesterday.

A special steamer carrying a cargo of foodstuffs for the Belgian sufferers will be sent from New York to Rotterdam at the earliest possible date, it was announced last night by the Belgian Relief Committee in New York.

Explosion an Accident.

MONTREAL, Oct. 31. — The supposed bomb outrage in the tenement block on Frontenac street, which resulted in the instant killing of a Russian inmate, Peter Dishtura, and the deaths the following morning of Mrs. Morris Surinsky, one of the tenants whose limbs had to be amputated as a result of the explosion in the tenement, was declared by the coroner's jury yesterday to have been an accident, and not a crime.

The jury, however, could not decide as to the cause of the explosion, whether it was due to dynamite or gas.

Another Zeppelin Over Paris.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 31. — According to The Frankfurter Zeitung, a Swedish paper published at Gothenburg, declares that on Wednesday of this week a Zeppelin dirigible balloon flew over Paris and dropped six bombs on the city. Three of the missiles, according to this account, did considerable damage, killing eight persons and wounding several others. French airmen, the newspaper adds, attacked the Zeppelin, but without success.

German Teachers at Front.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Amsterdam says that according to the Berlin newspapers the usual course of instruction in the schools of Germany cannot be continued as 40,000 teachers are now at the front.

ATTACK ON TSING TAU.

Allies Opened General Assault Early Friday Morning.

TOKIO, Oct. 31. — It is officially announced that a general attack was opened at dawn yesterday on the German position at Tsing-Tau. The shelling of the fortress continues at this hour. The spirits of the allied troops are said to be high.

The Emperor's birthday are being celebrated to-day.

LONDON, Oct. 31. — The Official Press Bureau announces that an Indian contingent has joined the British and Japanese forces operating against the Germans before Tsing Tau, China.

Mad Nervous Dyspepsia

With Frequent Sick Headaches and Much Pain After Eating — Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured.

This letter is from a lady who gained 14 pounds by using the great food cure. It did wonders for her in improving her general health. She is enthusiastic in its praise, and refers to her neighbours as witnesses of the splendid results obtained.

Mrs. Susan oDbson, Spring Hill Mines, N. S., writes:—"It is with pleasure that I write to you in praise of Dr. Chase's Nerve ood. I was troubled with dyspepsia, and could not eat without suffering much pain; also had sick headaches frequently, and my nerves were in bad condition. About ten years ago I took a thorough treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, using altogether 21 boxes, and since then can eat anything, have been freed from headaches, and my health has been greatly improved in every way. I gained 14 pounds in weight, and feel sure I owe everything to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You may use this letter, and my neighbours can tell you of my condition before using this treatment."

Horses Killed

Springville Farmer Suffers a Heavy Loss.

Three valuable horses belonging to Mr. James Heron, of Springville, were killed early this morning presumedly by a passenger train coming from the west. The horses which were found shortly after the accident, were badly mutilated. Two of them were draught horses, and the third was a valuable driving mare.

"NO, I DON'T NEED TO ADVERTISE"

That's what a merchant said to the writer other day. He is one of those men who hold a nickel so close to their eyes that they cannot see a dollar a foot away. He has a good business, but it isn't growing as fast as it should. Many other business men all over the country, say the same thing and are in the same boat They look on advertising in the newspapers as an expense instead of an investment, which it really is. Constant, steady, intelligent advertising in your town newspapers is the only thing that will keep the mail order houses from getting your business—and it is cash business at that.

On Monday of this week, a total of 19 mail sacks came to a certain postoffice, each one containing 20 catalogues from a big mail order house. These catalogues were consigned to their customers at the postoffice. The postage on each catalogue was 25 cents. This made a total of 380 catalogues in one day, the total cost for postage alone being $95. These catalogues cost this company approximately $1 each to publish. This makes the cost of the catalogues sent to one post office on one day a total of $380, and adding postage, makes $475, or $1.25 for each customer.

Now, Mr. Business Man, do you spend $1.25 per year on each one of your customers in advertising? This is only a portion of the money spent by the big mail order houses. When the cost of the magazine advertising (most of the country newspapers won't accept their advertising) and the circular advertising is added onto the $1.25, it runs up to two or three times that amount and you can plainly see why it is that the business of these monster concerns is steadily increasing.

Berlin Threatening Reprisals.

BERLIN, Oct. 31.—(By wireless to Sayville, L.I.)—Germany has notified Great Britain, through American Ambassador Gerard in Berlin, that if German civilians in England, excepting those against whom there are grounds of suspicion, are not liberated by Nov. 5, all British subjects in Germany will be similarly arrested The feeling on this subject in Berlin is high.

BEWARE OF FALSE PROPHETS!

The daily sensational rumours from "authoritative" sources should not guide the intelligent and thoughtful man. It is not sufficient merely to have the "news"—

WHY NOT HAVE THE FACTS?

The Peterboro' Evening Examiner through its unexcelled sources of information, coupled with its Information Bureau, furnishes a service of unsurpassed value.

Canadians have never been in greater need of accurate knowledge than at the present time.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

GIBSON AND HARDY ARE BOTH CONFIDENT

There will be a splendid wrestling bill at Brock Street, rink to-night when Andy Gibson of Toronto will endeavour to throw Alf Hardy twice in an hour. In addition Jack Forbes will meet Kid Carter of Toronto, and two local boys, Harold McLean and Jim Cartledge will settle their differences in a preliminary bout. Hardy and Gibson arrived last night and both are confident of winning. The conditions are that Gibson must throw Hardy twice in an hour to win the match. The posters do not state this fact and there is some confusion among fans because of this fact. Gibson is a wonderfully developed athlete, weighing about 160 pounds, and he will have nearly twenty-five pounds on Hardy. The latter, however, feels that he can defeat the big fellow under the handicap conditions. Bob Long will referee the preliminary bouts and Joe Dwyer the main bout. There is great interest among the fans and a big crowd should see them perform.

Old Country Football Comment

The Arsenal is Drawing the Best Gates in London---The Evolution of McCracken

It may have taken some time to convince the most of us that "Ayr United "arrived" on the scene as a real fighting force, not only as spoilers, but as aspirants for the championship. However unlikely their chance of seeing the flag wave over Somerset Park may be, they must be regarded seriously. Perhaps it was unfair to look upon their defeat of the Celtic as a surprise, for they lost by a goal less to the Hearts at Tynecastle than Celts did, and overwhelmed the Hibs at Easter road, where the Parkhead team could only draw. And, although that manner of reckoning up form is not very reliable, these are facts which cannot be altered.

Happy "Gunners."

Although like all other clubs, feeling the pinch of the time we live in, the Arsenal are drawing the best gates in London. Against Clapton Orient last Saturday they took over £800, which was easily the best gate in the Metropolis.

The enterprise of Messrs. Norris and Co. in removing from Woolwich to Highbury is being splendidly rewarded, and it is as well that it should be so, for it required a deal of courage to open up a practically new district and put up such a substantial stake as the laying out of an up-to-date football field involves. Readers should note that Woolwich has now been dropped from the club's name.

A rumour, perhaps made in Germany, the George Law had asked Leeds City to place him upon the transfer list was settled by inquiries at the club's headquarters.

The only comment was a smile and the news "You can say that it is not true." Further comment was apparently regarded as unnecessary, and the facts that Law was playing with the first eleven at Derby is evidence that player and club are not dissatisfied with each other.

Bobby Again.

Bobby Walker is training regularly with the Hearts players, and keeping quite fit.

Don't be surprised if you hear some day soon that he has been signed on again, and, perhaps, taking his place in the Tynecastle team. There is good reason to believe that such might be the case.

Another Cracker.

There is a likelihood that another McCracken, cousin to the Newcastle back, will spring into English League football very soon. He played a very attractive game against the English League the other week. At the finish he was approached by several club magnates and many offers were made to him. Look out for the coming of McCracken on the Second.

THE BROWNING CLUB

On Thursday evening, Oct. 29, in the Y.W.C.A., the Browning Club held their first meeting There were sixteen members present, and the leader, Mr. F. J. A. Morris, read the poems "Love Among the Ruins" and "Two in the Campagne." Both poems were then discussed and the proceedings closed with an interpretation of the latter poem. On the following Thursday the subject before the Club was "Childe Roland to the Dark Tower came." Some questions of general bearing on the poem were first suggested, and the members were asked to have these in mind in their study of "Childe Roland." The poem was then read and a discussion that promises to be of some interest arose on detailed passages throughout the course of the poem. Next week and the week after, the Club will meet on Friday; the interpretation of "Childe Roland" will be continued, and then two short lyrics, "Home Thoughts from Abroad" and "Prospice" will be taken up. In the interests of English poetry and its lovers the Organising Committee of the Club decided to admit visitors and guests to the meetings.

A reading of "Two in the Campagna".

A pair of lovers wander through the Campagna, viewing the crumbled relics of Ancient Rome, now almost buried beneath a living mantle of grasses and flowers. The sight of these pathetic ruins makes the two pensive and silent. At last they sit down, hand in hand, and lose themselves and each other in lonely reverie. The speaker's mind (in the state where thought and emotion are indistinguishable) broods over the mystery of life.

Of all things living, man is the only creature to whom death causes a terrible wrench Look at that tomb, there, built with tears and sighs, centuries ago, over some loved one lost, by men and women who have themselves passed away; the very tomb has crumbled, and out of its ruins has sprung a plant of fennel—cradled in a grave These same plants were growing here in the days of the Romans; they have sprung up, blossomed, seeded and withered away, generation after generation, and never any sense of sorrow or loss in the death of individuals. In all nature, below the scale of man, there seems absolute peace and contentment, happiness everywhere; whatever need or desire is felt among flowers and insects is immediately satisfied; there is no such thing as "their reach exceeding their grasp"; no problems of personality, no yearnings after the infinite, no stiflings of nature. See that orange-red flower; in a few days it will be withered away, but there's no death struggle, no sorrow among survivors; indeed, its life-purpose is already fulfilled, for there's a cluster of tiny beetles feeding in its pollen-meal, and, all unconscious, helping to pass on the torch of life to the next generation They, too, in their tiny span of a few weeks, fill out the whole round of their desires far more completely than any of us in our three-score years and ten. And it's the same all over the Campagna. What an expanse of grasses! And the wind, blowing where it listeth, as it plays through their feathery tops, wafts the pollen-dust all over the and; and everywhere in the grass, flowering pants, and feeding in them, or hovering over them, what a wealth of insect life, beetles, bees, butterflies, all apparently happy, and, in their play, performing miracles — God's blind instruments in handing in the torch of life. Everywhere nature runs not; no concealment, no thwarting; perfect fruition in the full blaze of God's sunlight.

In all this harmony of nature the only jarring note is—man. What a strange thing is Human Nature. With the birth of self-consciousness there awoke in each of us a sense of shame and a desire to conceal our inner thoughts and yearnings from the light of day We hardly know our own nature, each of us, and far more of it remains hidden from our fellowmen; even friends and lovers, the nearest and dearest, are often utterly alone in thought I wish it were a law of nature that, when twin souls meet their union made the two wills one, so that neither had any longer a wish or an ideal that the other had not. If only when once we love, our whole life became love and nothing else. But no! As often as I try to live in love alone this barrier of personality and self-consciousness thrusts in between, and I find myself in solitary pursuit of ideals, and with yearnings after an infinite that I cannot communicate or express in words. And so it is doomed to be always; man, the only one of God's creatures, conscious of creation, in the midst of universal happiness and contentment, remains alone, sad and unsatisfied.

FULTZ SUES SPORT PAPER.

Ball Players' Fraternity Head Says Story Damaged Him $50,000.

Suit for $50,000 against the Sporting Life Publishing Company of Philadelphia was begun in the Supreme Court yesterday by David L. Fultz, President of the Baseball Players' Fraternity. Mr. Fultz charges that the Company caused the publication, about Aug. 29, last, of an article accusing him of having "hobnobbed" with James A. Gilmore, President of the Federal League; that in the presence of two dozen newspaper men he was asked to explain certain matters; that he presented a sorry spectacle, and that everybody pitied him. Some criticism was also directed against him concerning the management of the fraternity.

Fultz explains in his complaint that the fraternity has a membership of about 1,600, and that all professional ball players may join it save those playing with the Federal League, which he calls an "outlaw organization." He says that this publication has brought him into ridicule and has injured his standing.

Fultz is a lawyer and his own firm —Murphy & Fultz—are his attorneys.

STALLINGS IN VAUDEVILLE LIKE NAPOLEON AS ORATOR

Napoleon was a poor figure on horseback, George Washington never achieved success as an after-dinner talker, Wellington could not tango, and George Stallings cannot act. In fact, the manager of the Boston Braves all but cracked under the strain when he made his first vaudeville appearance at the Palace Theatre, says Heywood Broun in the New York Tribune.

The Miracle Man did not have even a parlour trick at his command when he found himself face to face with a big matinee crowd. For a moment or two the architect of the best baseball team in the world could not build a sensation, and when he did begin to talk there were cries from the back of the house of "Louder, George; we can't hear you."

When Joe Connolly dropped a fly back in the days of the big series, when Johnny Evers held the ball and let a runner score, when Herbie Moran allowed a single to roll through his legs, George Stallings spoke, and not one of these men felt constrained to say "Speak up." They heard him.

Although Stallings cracked, he did not crumble. He recovered from his nervousness after a little and talked interestingly of his team and the world's series. Yet it was apparent throughout that not even the famous tenth inning of the third game against the Athletics could have tried him so sorely as did his brief stage appearance.

HOCKEY

The Toronto Rowing Club will have a stronger team than last season in the senior O.H.A. this winter. All of last year's players are available excepting "Ack" Hunter, and his position on the defence is likely to be filled by Harry Reynolds, who was last year with North Bay. Reynolds was a member of th 'Varsity juniors two years ago. He is a big boy, weighing now over 180 pounds. Caldwell, an ex-'Varsity player, who was also on the Bay team last winter, is in the city, and he will probably turn out with the Oarsmen. Parks, the good junior last winter with Brampton, is also slated for the T. R.C. team. With Farr, Laird, Sidley, Skinner, Burrell, and Doop, an aggregation that should take a lot of beating can be rounded out. Condition was a big factor with the T.R.C. lads last winter, and "Billy" Breen, who handled them then, has again been engaged as trainer. The two battles between the champion T.R. and A.A. team and the Scullers last season, when they played two games, lasting 2½ hours, and at the end of which only one goal separated them, is still fresh in the minds of hockey fans.—Toronto Star.

"Ack" Hunter, captain of last winter's T.R.C. seniors, is now located in Peterborough, where he will most likely play this winter. He will be a valuable addition to the defence of the Petes.—Toronto Star.

With the Arena opening for skating about November 20, there is no reason why all of the local hockey teams should not be in shape when the bell rings for the opening of the 1914-15 season.

T.R. and A.A., O.H.A. champions, will take a trip to New York, Boston, and Cleveland, before the regular season opens. There is a possibility that they may also go to Winnipeg during Christmas week.

'Varsity juniors, last year junior O.H.A. runners-up, will have Stratton, Saunders, Smythe, and Mathers, of last year's team.

"Jock" Harty will coach Queen's University hockey team again this winter. H. Box wil be captain.

Seaforth will have junior and intermediate teams in the O.H.A. this season.

Hugh Aird, 'Varsity star for four years, will not be available for the students this winter. Aird is a good enough forward for any of the city teams and is slated to join the T.R. and A.A.

Jimmie Freeman, the Cobourg intermediate forward, is in Preston Springs line-up. Freeman has a good turn of speed.

The Toronto Rowing Club senior O.H.A. players will commence training on Monday night next, when they will have a workout in the "Gym."

FOOTBALL COMMENT

In an interesting game of football played on the Central school grounds yesterday afternoon, the Central school eleven defeated the Queen Mary school team by 2 points to 1. Centrals scored the winning goal in the last minute of play. Mr. Downie refereed the game.

MIGHT BLAME McGRAW FOR THE EUROPEAN WAR?

It appears that every good ball-player who ever was passed up by anybody as tried and found wanting was passed by John McGraw. The latest is Benny Kauff. Not long ago it was Davis, the young pitcher of the Braves. Kauff and Davis were once the property of McGraw about as much as Alaska once was the property of Timbuctoo.

Naval Casualties Light.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—An Admiralty statement issued last night gives the casualties of the British flotilla operating off the Belgian coast. The statement is dated Oct. 30, and reports one man as having been killed on board the sloop Rinaldo, one man dangerously wounded and eleven men wounded. None of these are officers. Five men previously reported as missing from the monitors Severn and Humber have rejoined their ships, according to the statement.

SPIES POSED AS BOY SCOUTS

Were Discovered Tampering With Sentries.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—German spies disguised as scout-masters, and in some cases, even as boy scouts, a correspondent learns, have been giving considerable trouble to the military authorities recently, although it is understood that this latest espionage scheme so far has gleaned little information of value to the Kaiser's General Staff. The Home Office and Sir Robert Baden-Powell have been co-operating to stamp out the spies' activities along this line, and already many arrests have resulted.

A notice posted at the Boy Scouts headquarters in Victoria street, however, shows that at least one German secret agent is still roaming about in the uniform of a British scout-master. The scouts are directed to watch out for this man, a full description of whom is given, and who is characterized as "a dangerous international spy." His method appears to be to visit strategical military points, ostensibly performing the scout-master's duties, but really supplying sentries with Honor which he apparently hopes will lead them to divulge secrets, or at least permit him to enter forbidden places. He is considered the most daring of all who have adopted this form of disguise. At present the Boy Scouts have access to many areas, such as military camps and closed parts barred to the ordinary public. There is grave peril in alien enemies donning Baden-Powell's world-famous uniform to satisfy their illegitimate curiosity with regard to British armaments.

SENTENCED TO HANG.

Vancouver Hindu To Pay Penalty of Crime on Jan. 11.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 31. — Mewa Singh, the self-confessed slayer of Immigration Inspector Hopkinson, was yesterday morning tried and found guilty of murder and sentenced to be hanged on January 11. He made no denial of the offence.

A lengthy written statement was made by the accused, in which he protested that the shooting of Bhag Singh and others in the temple had burned into his soul. He alleged that last Inspector Hopkinson had tried to get him to swear falsely to secure the freedom of Bela Singh, charged with the temple shooting, and protested that he gave up his life for what he believed to be a righteous cause in the hope and belief that the sacrifice would benefit his fellow-Hindus in Vancouver.

Seizing German Property.

PARIS, Oct. 31. — A court order was issued yesterday confiscating the chateau of the Princess Hohenlohe, near Brest. The property of 20,000 firms and 100,000 individuals is expected to be seized as a result of the Government's new policy of sequestrating all property belonging to alien enemies.

Peace Proposals Denied.

LONDON, Oct. 31. — "The report that Germany has made peace proposals to France, offering special concessions, was repudiated yesterday by the German Consul-General at Amsterdam as completely unfounded," says a despatch from the Amsterdam correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co.

Italy's Premier Better.

ROME, Italy, Oct. 31.—The health of Signor Salandra, the Italian Prime Minister, was much better yesterday, his temperature being normal. He hoped to be able to go to the Foreign Office to-day and preside over the meeting of the Council of Ministers.

BASEBALL

STAR PITCHER BIBLE WORKER.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 26—Pitcher Doak of the St. Louis Cardinals is proving one of the foremost workers of local Bible classes, and the Sunday school class of which he has taken charge has grown to exceptionally large dimensions.

"One must lead a white life," Doak tells his charges, "to succeed in any walk of life. It is right living that helps a man win games, whether on the diamond or in the stress of business."

Moran came to the Quakers in 1910 from Chicago and played with the Boston Nationals from 1901 to 1908.

It is said the Quaker manager is a second Wilbur Robinson in developing young pitchers. Alexander's success is attributed to the coaching of the new chief.

Although Buffalo fans were dissatisfied with the work of Hal Chance, the former Yankee first baseman finished the season with a batting average of .304 in 75 games.

This is a far better mark than Chase made while wearing a Kilties' uniform

Dutch Zwilling, the White Sox cast-off, was the champion home run counter in the Federal League. He poled sixteen circuit clouts over the fence for the Chiefs.

Bill Kenworthy, who once wore a Washington uniform, also made a fine record with the bat. The St. Louis Fed outfielder had fifteen homers to his credit for the season.

If O.B really wants to befriend the Feds, why try to wish the Yankees on them?

George David Weaver, despite recent sertions that he would not do it, has hustled into the matrimonial league.

The fact that Weaver has taken a better half cancel a Chicago fan to remark that Buck, however, will continue to be the "better half" of the White Sox.

Comfortable Quarters For Local Men

Arrangements Made at Kingston For Housing Second Contingent Battalion

Peterborough's soldiers will evidently have comfortable quarters at the concentration camp, judging by the following from a Kingston despatch:

As soon as the men arrive in Kingston they will be quartered in the Armouries, the barracks and the cereal mill building.

On Tuesday morning a number of carpenters, employed by Campbell & Wright, contractors, commenced the work of putting up the bunks. Although the work was only commenced on Tuesday morning at nine o'clock 20 bunks were ready for use by the men of the 14th regiment on Tuesday night.

It has been arranged that 400 bunks will be built at Artillery Park barracks. The bunks are three deep. A mattress is supplied to each man. The barracks building, which is divided into four separate parts, will be well heated.

It is expected that about three or four hundred men will be quartered in the cereal mill, while the remainder will be put up at the armouries. The work of putting up the bunks will not require very long.

As soon as the volunteers arrive in Kingston they will be be put under hard training under the direction of officers who have been selected to accompany the battalion. The work will be a great deal more thorough than what the first contingent received. The use of the bayonet will be taught to far greater extent.

Although the call for men was only sounded a few days ago the officers in command of the corps report that the response has been very good. Out of 1,000 men required the officers have been able to sign up about 650 men until Tuesday noon, which is certainly a good showing.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

DETROIT, Oct. 31.—A blazing line of bonfires will mark a path of flames across the continent to-night (October 31st), when the cities and towns all along the 3,405-mile route of the Lincoln Highway will celebrate the successful completion of a year of progress. Celebrations are planned in over 2,000 towns and cities for Hallowe'en and these include in almost every case the burning of immense piles of tar barrels and great piles of brush and leaves, as well as the lighting of red fire.

So general will be the observance of the first anniversary of the dedication of the great route that an aviator, should his machine be swift enough, could almost follow the line of the route from New York to San Francisco by the trail of illumination which will express the sentiment of the thousands living along the way.

On the stroke of ten the match will be applied and amid the blowing of whistles and the tooting of horns the flames of 10,000 fires will leap up along the route where last year's dedications were held.

From the quiet streets of little Pennsylvania towns to the desert ranches and mountain settlements of the West, word has come that the celebrations of this year will outdo even the extravagant ovations of a year ago.

Many of the bonfires of last year were pretentious affairs, some of them being built up as high as 50 feet and soaked with oil and pitch. Some of these fires could be seen for a distance of 20 miles.

Hunters Leave For The North

OBITUARY

ROBERTA MAY ROSS.

The death occurred early this morning of Roberta May Ross, the nine-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Ross, 426 Park street. In the loss of their young daughter Mr. and Mrs. Ross will have the sympathy of the community. The funeral was held this afternoon from the family residence to the Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. JAMES IRVINE.

The death occurred this morning at the residence of her daughter, Gordon avenue, city, of Mrs. James Irvine, who for years had been a resident of Peterborough. Mrs. Irvine had been in failing health for some time, but only for a short time before her death had she been seriously ill. A large number of friends in the community will mourn her demise.

She is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Thos. Scott, Smith; Mrs. Walter Libby, Parnell street; Mrs. George Curtain, Monaghan, and Mrs. D. Oliver, Gordon avenue. Her husband predeceased her some years ago.

The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon at half-past-two o'clock, from the residence of Mrs. David Oliver, Gordon avenue, to the Little Lake cemetery. The service at the house will be at two o'clock.

MONTREAL DEAD BROKE.

Cannot Undertake New Work Till Next Year.

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—This city is "dead broke," and cannot undertake any new work until next year, and then only a small amount. This was admitted by the financial officers of the municipality this morning.

The city began the year with a borrowing power of $13,250,000. Of this sum $10,000,000 has already been spent, together with $[illegible],000 which was on hand, and the remainder has been appropriated for work soon to be completed. Next year the city's borrowing power will be limited to about $6,000,000. The only way money can be obtained for any purpose is to take it from the present appropriation.

Italy To Act For Russia.

ROME, Oct. 31.— Turkey's attack on Russia without a declaration of war is causing a serious impression, as it is generally taken to mean a further extension of the war and also its indefinite prolongation.

On the request of the Russian Government the Italian Government has instructed the Ambassador at Italy at Constantinople to protect Russian subjects and interests.

Fighting In East Africa.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. — In a brief message yesterday from Consul Hays, the American Government learned of the complete interruption of communication between the British Island of Zanzibar and Dar es Salaam, a port on the east coast of German East Africa. Mr. Hays, at Zanzibar, cabled north by way of British East Africa. This was believed to indicate a renewal of activities between the German and British colonial forces.

TOMMY'S WAY

Don't you hear the distant rolling of the drum,
Don't you hear the bugle calling us to come.
'Tis our country needs us men, and we must go
To the battle far away to fight the foe.
Leave your sweethearts, boys and come on right away,
Leave your loved ones far behind and join the fray.
And the echoes still are ringing
Of the songs that they are singing,
As they bade good bye and left the Portsmouth quay.

Chorus.
That's the way the British soldier marches off to meet the foe,
While he keeps right on a-smiling for we know he loves to go,
With his musket on his shoulder he's a soldier through and through,
When he's fighting for his country neath old red and white and blue.

2nd Verse—
When the Frenchmen heard the tramping of their feet,
And they saw them in their uniforms so neat,
Sure their welcome brought a smile on Tommy's face;
And each man was good and ready for his place.
They were eager for to reach the battlefield,
While each Briton swore the dear old flag to shield,
What though battle lines were thinning
Still the Tommies keep a'grinning,
For they went to fight and die but not to yield.

E. S. HOPKINS.

(Sung to tune, 'God Bless You Tommy Atkins.')

HE WILL CHANGE POLICY.

Lord Fisher Likely To Curtail Activities of Neutral Vessels.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Fred. T. Jane, naval author and journalist, whose intimate acquaintance with naval matters makes his statements authoritative, writing in The Evening Standard, says that under the Fisher naval administration "we may expect a rapid curtailment of the rights of neutrals to come and go as they please in our waters."

"Ruthless, remorseless, and relentless," the writer says, "was one of Lord Fisher's war maxims in the old days. We may look for short shrift from him for any German captured who has achieved results by using any flag except his own. It will probably be a case of hang first and inquire afterwards, and if public opinion or the Cabinet object let them object."

Mr. Jane suggests that the humanitarian element in the British Cabinet has hitherto interfered in a question like that of mine-laying, and he says that Lord Fisher will not permit such interference.

Hungary Exhausted; Weary of War.

LONDON, Oct. 31. — Rumors are again current in London to-day that Hungary, weary of a war in which she has nothing to gain, would welcome a chance to quit.

It is suggested also that Servia soon may be compelled to retire within her own borders and assume a purely defensive role in consequence of the national exhaustion resulting from the fighting of three campaigns in as many years.

Too Cold For Suicide.

KINGSTON, Oct. 31.—George Reddon, a youth, tried for the fourth time to take his life Thursday night when he went to the Cereal Company's wharf and jumped into the river. The cold water made him change his mind, and, clinging to the wharf, he called for help. A watchman pulled him out and handed him over to the police. He was fined $2 and costs in the police court yesterday for being drunk and disorderly. Two weeks ago he took an overdose of laudanum and was saved by a doctor, and before that he drank carbolic acid. On another occasion he jumped in front of an automobile which was traveling at a fast rate of speed, but received only minor injuries.

The back of a new hair brush can be removed, permitting it to be cleansed by pouring water through it.

50 Days' Attempt At New Advance Fails

Germans Are Really In a Less Favourable Position Than on Sept. 13—Allies Have Parried Every Thrust and Gained Decided Advantages.

DEFEND NEW GROUND

PARIS, Nov. 1—The official reports by the French Government indicate that in Belgium to-day the allies successfully defended grounw won yesterday while steadfastly holding positions north of the Aisne and making some progress in the centre and in the east.

It would appear that the fighting was less violent to-day in Flanders, and in the north of France, probably because each side found it necessary to slacken effort. Allies and Germans have suffered teribly in these hard-fought, prolonged and indecisive struggles. Each side, it is assumed, is bringing up reinforcements to fill the ranks depleted by exhaustion and injuries.

Powerless to make progress in the extreme north the Germans strengthened their attack to-day near the hinge of the old battle line north-east of Soissons and along the heights of the Aisne. They were beaten back at Lihons-en-Santerre, Le Quesnoyen-Santerre and Vailly-sur-Aisne. In the region northeast of Rheims, where the French have developed a powerful offensive, they continued to bend back the German line north of Souain. This seems to show that the German centre is breaking.

Severe at the East.

At the east of the battle line the fighting was severe. The German army in the Argonne forest renewed its attempt to approach Verdun from the north-west and was checked in the forest of Grurie. Simultaneously the French made progress to the east of Verdun and captured the heights around Sainte Marie.

There is unofficial news that Germany is determined to break the allied line if possible, even at the cost of her offensive in East Prussia and Silisia, and in sending army corps westward as rapidly as possible. This report causes no apprehension here, because complete confidence is felt in the ability of General Joffre to detect and defeat every effort against the allies left. This confidence is supported by a review of the operations in Belgium and France.

Every Effort Fruitless.

For fifty days the Germans have struggled with ever increasing energy to put in motion a new advance and are actually in less favourable positions on November 1st than they were on September 13. The allies have matched reinforcements with reinforcements, manoeuvre with manoeuvre while slowly gaining strength in numbers and in confidence. For seventeen days the Germans have sought to profit by their occupation of Antwerp and Ostend, but are as far at least from Dunkirk and Calais as they were the day after they reached the Belgian Coast. The opinion of the military writers, therefore, is that the Kaiser has lost every advantage counted on from sudden attack, and that every day is a gain for the allies, even though the battle issue is indecisive.

GERMAN PLOT DISCOVERED

U. S. Secret Service Men Give Valuable Information to Dominion Authorities

TORONTO, Nov. 2.—Secret service men employed by the United States Government have discovered a German plot to blow up the Welland Canal and the T. H. and B. railway tunnel in Hamilton. The information was given to the Dominion Government on Saturday. Last night every secret service man in the employ of the Dominion Government and all detectives and secret service men of the C.P.R. were summoned to Toronto. Many of them reached the city last night and more will arrive this morning. They will leave to-day for Hamilton and Welland, to patrol the Hamilton tunnel and the canal from St. Catharines to Lake Erie. The Welland Canal already is guarded by Dominion troops. These will be doubled to-day, and a guard will be put on the tunnel in Hamilton.

PRINCE LOUIS OF BATTENBERG AND NAVAL DEFENCE

In view of the announcement of the resignation of Prince Louis of Battenberg, the following from the London Daily Mail of Oct. is interesting:

"A curious effect of the war is that many very highly placed officials who in normal times are prominent figures in the social life of London have almost completely disappeared from the public eye. Their identities seem to have been swallowed up by their official positions.

"An example may be taken in the case of Vice-Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg, First Sea Lord of the Admiralty. His duties so monopolize his time and energy that London has seen practically nothing of him since the navy has been mobilized. But he is at the Admiralty for the greater part of the 24 hours of every day, remaining there often until the small hours of the morning.

"It is only when he takes his daily walks in St. James' Park or on occasions when he leaves the Admiralty for government consultations that the general public catches sight of him.

"Yesterday morning, for example, he was to be seen taking exercise in the Mall, but as the members of the Admiralty Board do not wear naval uniform except on ceremonial occasions, few people recognized or noticed him.

"On Wednesday, however, when he attended a meeting of the Council of Imperial Defence, he was seen walking across Whitehall in all the resplendence of full admiral's uniform.

"On Tuesday he lunched with Sir Edward Grey, and on the same day visited Mr. Asquith, and on several occasions has in his official capacity been in attendance at cabinet meetings. But the brief appearances break, so far as public knowledge is concerned, the silence and invisibility of his official work.

"Princess Louise of Battenberg is taking an active part in the administration of the clothing fund for the winter comforts of the men of the trawler fleets who are engaged in the perilous work of mine-sweeping in the North Sea."

1911—Horace King, Havelock.
1912—Ezra King, Havelock.
1913—R. J. Escrett, Brantford.
1914—James Gairdner, Toronto.

(From the Toronto Daily Star.)

Belmont Lake, Belmont Township, the county of Peterborough, Ontario, is evidently the original homestead of the grandfather black bass. Belmont Lake has earned the title Queen of Ontario waters. Four times since 1900 has Belmont Lake produced the largest small-mouthed black bass for the year. Once more the black bass trophy donated by the Toronto Star to whosoever shall catch the largest genuine small-mouthed black bass of the season, goes for a fish caught in Belmont Lake. It is our old friend, Mr. James Gairdner, night foreman of the Mail and Empire, that the prize rod must go this time, together with the reel and line and a copy of Professor Louden's book on the Black Bass.

Mr. Gairdner, fishing with rod and line and a minnow bait on July 26, caught a bass weighing 6 pounds, 8 ounces, measuring 22 inches in length and 17 inches in girth. The Star after careful investigation finds that it was well and truly caught, carefully weighed, and honestly witnessed, entered in due time and form and substantiated by all evidence. The Fishing Editor interviewed all the parties concerned, visited the spot on Belmont Lake where it was captured, inspected the scales on which it was weighed, and talked with the gentleman whose family was called together to eat the fish. He feels confident that the award is a just one. Mr. Gairdner's fish was much the largest entered this summer, and there is no question about its having first claim. Mr. Gairdner wins the prize rod of The Toronto Daily Star in open competition with the world, for under the rules of the contest, visitors to the province are eligible to enter their catches on equal terms with residents. Several citizens of the United States competed, but Mr. Gairdner's fish was a pound to the good over the best of them all.

Belmont Lake was the scene of the struggle: Belmont Lake, where 18 years ago John King—eldest son of the old woodsman, Noah King, who cleared the farm on the south-east end of the Lake—caught the prize fish in 1901, where the third brother, Horace, (Continued on Page 6.)

Turkey Formally Annexes Egypt

Ignores British Ultimatum and Menaces Egypt—Ambassador's Withdraw From Constantinople and the War Spirit Spreads.

PROBLEM FOR BRITAIN

Special to Examiner, 10 a.m.:

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—The Turkish ambassador here in a statement issued to-day, declared that Turkey will declare holy war at once. He says that the Sultan already has sent a circular to the Powers in which he takes the position that the British army in Egypt has prevented his exercising his sovereignty. Therefore the annexation of Egypt was a step of absolute necessity.

Advices received here indicate that the Arabs in Tripoli are attacking the Italian troops there.

AMBASSADOR LEAVES LONDON.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 2. — The Turkish ambassador this morning visited the foreign office to say good-bye to Foreign Minister Sir Edward Grey. His passports will be delivered to him this afternoon and he will depart for home to-morrow.

It is officially announced in London that the Turkish Government summarily shut off communications with the British Embassy at Constantinople on Friday last, and that the British Government must take whatever action is required to protect interests and territory and Egypt from attacks made or threatened.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Turkey has definitely thrown in her lot with Austria and Germany, and if Portugal is counted, there now are eleven powers at war, with prospects of three more—Greece, Bulgaria and Roumania—being drawn in.

The note which Great Britain presented to Turkey on Friday last demanding an explanation of the actions of the Turkish fleet in the Black Sea, and the dismantling of the former German cruisers, Goeben and Breslau, was really an ultimatum to which Turkey was required to make a reply by Saturday morning.

So far as is known here, telegraphic communication with Turkey being interupted, no answer was made, and the Ambassadors at the Ottoman capital of the Triple Entente, it is understood, demanded and received their passports.

Turkey Annexes Egypt.

Turkey has formally annexed Egypt, according to a German official statement, which has been received from Berlin by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company.

The Amsterdam correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company says that, according to a message from Berlin, the Sultan of Turkey has notified all the powers that British attitude toward Egypt prevented the execution of his sovereign rights and through the Khedive, will demand of Great Britain an explanation of her actions.

Turkish troops, which have been on the Egyptian border for some time already are reported to have crossed the frontier, while the Turkish fleet continues to menace Russian towns and shipping in the Black Sea.

Neither Russia nor Great Britain was unprepared for this move on the part of Turkey, which, Government officials say, was known to have been made under the influence of Germany and the allied powers have troops on hand, ready to oppose a Turkish invasion.

When the regular forces were withdrawn from Egypt to take part in the war in Europe, they were immediately replaced by troops from home, much greater in numbers at least, and only last week they paraded through the streets of Cairo, making a splendid impression.

Moslems Will Fight Turkey.

The problem both for Britain and Russia, however, is the attitude of their Moslem subjects, who, under ordinary circumstances, would prefer not to fight against Turkey. In this war, however, they have rallied, to their flag, as have all other races under British or Russian rule, and care is being taken to explain to them that in this case Turkey, under the direction of Germany, has been the aggressor.

A HALLOWE'EN PRANK FATAL

Boys Annoyed Bachelor Farmer Who Fired Old Rifle Killing One of Them

MEAFORD, Ont., Nov. 1.—Hallowe'en pranks at Grierseville, five miles south of here, resulted last night in the death of Joseph Ferry, of the 3rd line, who was shot by an enraged farmer. Quite a party of boys had assembled from the 3rd and 4th lines, and, according to reports, considerably annoyed E. H. Knoll, who is a bachelor farmer living in the district. Knoll declares he grew quite alarmed when he heard a revolver shot from the party, and getting out an old rifle he shot a couple of times in the air and then on the ground, until Joseph Ferry dropped with a bullet between the eyes. Another man was wounded though not seriously. Medical aid was summoned but Ferry died at 6.30 this morning. He was 18 years of age. Chief Clarke of Meaford went out to-day and arrested Knoll, who is now in Meaford lock-up. Knoll is 40 years of age. An inquest will be opened this morning at Grierseville.

TOBACCO FREE TO THE TROOPS

The following information was supplied by the Toronto General Post Office yesterday:

"The General Post Office, London, England, advises the Toronto P.O. that parcels for members of the British expeditionary forces serving on the Continent, if addressed Expeditionary Force, c/o of G.P.O., London, and sent in mail for London, will be forwarded to their destination.

"These parcels should be prepaid at the rates which were applicable to ordinary parcels for France forwarded via England (see Postal Guide, page 110).

"The British office adds that tobacco and cigarettes for the troops are admitted to France duty free, which allows of these articles being included in parcels forwarded as above. Inasmuch as since the beginning of the war, parcel post service with France has been temporarily discontinued, no parcels for France other than those addressed to members of the expeditionary force are to be accepted for transmission."

The new regulation applies to the Canadian forces as well, according to the postal authorities.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Gen. Allen English

The third trip was made in safety, and others after it, and steadily the colony took shape and growth.

More and more the caves came to be occupied. Stern set the Merucaans to work excavating the limestone, piercing tunnels and chimneys, making passageways and preparing for the ever-increasing number of settlers.

Their native arts and crafts began to flourish. In the gloomy recesses fires glowed hot. Ores began to be smelted, with primitive bellows and technique as in the Underworld, and through the night-stillness sounded the ring and clangour of anvils mightily smitten.

Palm-fibres yielded cordage for more nets or finer thread for the looms that now began to clack—for at last some few women had arrived, and even a couple of the strong, pale children, who had travelled stowed in crates like the water-fowl.

By night the pool and river gleamed more and more brightly. Boats navigated even the rapids, for these were hardy water-people, whose whole life had been semi-aquatic.

The strange fowl nested in the cliff below the settlement, hiding by day, flying abroad by night, swimming and diving in the river, even rearing their broods of squawking, naked little monsters in rough nests of twigs and mud.

Some of the hardier of the first-arrived colonists sad already—far sooner than Allan had hoped—begun to tolerate a little daylight.

Following his original idea, he prepared some sets of brown mica eye-shields, and by the aid of these a number of the Merucaans were able to endure an hour or two of early dawn and late evening in the open air.

The children, he found, were far less sensitive to light than the adults—a natural sequence of the atavistic principle well know to all biologists.

He hoped that in a year or so many of the Folk might even bear the noonday sun. Once he could get them to working with him by daylight his progress would leap forward mightily in many lines of activity that he had planned.

An occasional short raid with the Pauillac had stocked the colony with firearms, chemicals, and necessary drugs, cutlery, ammunition, and some glassware, from the dismantled cities of Nashville, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, and other places unidentified.

Allan foresaw almost infinite possibilities in these raids. Civilisation he felt, would surge onward with amazing rapidity fostered by this detritus of the distant past.

He also unearthed and brought back to Settlement Cliffs the phonographs and records, sealed in their oiled canvas and hidden in the rock-cleft near the patriarch's grave.

Thereafter of an evening the voices of other days sang in the cave. Around the entrance, now protected by stout and ample timber doors, gathered an eager, wondering, fascinated group, understanding the universal appeal of harmony, softened and humanised by the music of the world that was. And thus, too, was the education of the Folk making giant strides.

Progress, tremendous progress, toward the goal!

Autumn came down the world, and the sun paled a little as it sank to southward in the heavens. Warmth and luxuriant fertility, fecundity without parallel, still pervaded the earth, but a certain change had even so become well marked. Slowly the year was dying, that another might be born.

It was a glorious purple evening late in October that Allan made the great discovery.

He had come in from working with two or three of the hardier Folk on the temporary hangar he was building for the Pauillac on Newport Heights, to which a broad and well-graded roadway now extended through the jungle.

Entering the home-cave suddenly—and it was home now, indeed, with its broad stone fireplace, its comfortable furnishings, its furs, its mats of clean sweet-smelling rushes — he stopped, toil-worn and weary, to view the well-loved place.

"Well, little wife! Busy, as usual? Always busy, sweetheart?"

At his greeting Beatrice looked up as though startled. She was sitting in a low easy-chair he had made for her of split bamboos cleverly lashed and softly cushioned.

At her left hand, on the palm-wood table, stood a heaay bronze lamp from some forgotten millionaire's palace in Atlanta. Its soft radiance illumined her face in profile, making a wondrous aureole of her clustered hair, as in old paintings of the Madonna at the Annunciation.

A presage gripped the man's heart, drawing powerfully at its strings with pain, yet with delicious hope and joy as she turned toward him.

For something in her face, some new, beatified, maternal loveliness, not to be analysed or understood, betrayd her wondrous secret.

With a little gasp, she dropped into her lap the bit of needlework and sought to hide it with her hands—a gesture wholly girlish yet—to hide and guard it with those hands, so useful and beautiful, so precious and so dearly loved.

But Allan, breathing hard and deep, strode to her, his face aflame with hope and adoration. He caught them up together in the gentle strength of his rough hands and pressed them to his heart.

Beside her he knelt silently; he encircled her with his right arm. Then he took up the tiny garment, smiling.

For a long minute their eyes met. His brimmed with sudden tears. Hers fell, and her head drooped down upon his breast, and—as once before, at the cathedral—an eloquent tide of crimson mounted from breast to throat, from cheek to tendrilled hair.

About his neck her arms slid, trembled, tightened.

No word was uttered there under the golden lamp-glow; but the strong kiss he pressed, reverently, proudly, upon her brow, renewed with ten-time depth their eternal sacrament of love.

CHAPTER XIX.
THE MASTER OF HIS RACE.

Days, busy days, lengthened into weeks, and these to months happy and full of labour; and in the ever-growing colony progress and change came steadily forward.

All along the cliff-face and the terraces the cave-dwellings now extended, and smoke from a score of chimneys fashioned among the clefts rose on the temperate air of that subtropic winter.

At the doors, nets hung drying. On the pool, boats were anchored at several well-built stone wharves. The terraces had been walled with palisades on their outer edge and smooth roadways fashioned, leading to all the dwellings as well as to the river below.

On top of the cliff and about three hundred yards back from the edge another palisade had been built of stout timbers set firmly in the earth, interlaced with cordage and propped with strong braces.

The enclosed space, bounded to east and west by the barrier which swung toward and touched the canyon, had all been cleared, save for a few palms and fern-trees left for shade.

Besides drying frames for fish and game and a well-smoothed plaza for public assemblies and the giving of the Law, it now contained Stern's permanent hangar. The Pauillac had ben brought along the road from Newport Heights and housed there.

This road passed through strong gates of hewn planks hinged with well-wrought ironwork forged by some of the Folk under the direction of H'yemba, the smith. For H'yemba, be it known, had been brought up by Stern early in December.

The man was essential to progress, for none knew so well as he the arts of smelting and of metal-work. Stern still felt suspicious of him, but by no word or act did the smith now betray any rebellious spirit, any animosity, or aught but faithful service.

Allan, however, could not trust him yet. No telling what fires might still be smouldering under the peaceful and industrious exterior. And the master's eye often rested keenly on the powerful figure of the blacksmith.

Across the canyon, from a point about fifty yards to eastward of Cliff Villa—as Beta and Allan had christened their home—a light bridge had been flung, connecting the northern with the southern bank and saving laborious toil in crossing via the river-bed.

This bridge, of simple construction, was merely temporary. Allan counted on eventually putting up a first-class cantilever; but for now he was content with two stout fibre cables anchored to palm-trunks, floored with rough boards lashed in place with cordage, and railed with strong rope.

This bridge opened up a whole new tract of country to northward and vastly widened the fruit and game supply. Plenty reigned at Settlement Cliffs; and a prosperity such as the Folk had never known in the Abyss, a well-being, a luxurious variety of foodstuffs—fruits, meats, wild vegetables—as well as a profusion of furs for clothing, banished discontent.

Barring a little temporary depression and lassitude due to the great alteration of environment, the Folk experienced but slight ill effects from the change.

And, once they grew acclimated, their health and vigor rapidly improved. Strangest of all, a phenomenon most marked in the children, Allan noticed that after a few weeks under the altered conditions of food and exposure to the actinic rays of the sun as reflected by the moonlight, pigmentation began to develop. A certain clouding of the iris began to show, premonitory of colour-deposit. The skin lost something of its chalky hue, while at the roots of the hair, as it grew, a distinct infiltration of pigment-cells was visible. And at this sight Allan rejoiced exceedingly.

Beatrice did not now go much abroad with him, on account of her condition. She hardly ventured farther than the top of the cliff, and many days she sat in her low chair on the terrace, resting, watching the river and the forest, thinking, dreaming, sewing for the little new colonist soon to arrive. Some of their most happy hours were spent thus, as Allan sat beside her in the sun, talking of their future. The bond between them had grown closer and more intimate. They two, linked by another still unseen, were one.

"Will you be very angry with me, dear, if it's a girl?" she asked one day, smiling a little wistfully.

HAD DYSPEPSIA
So Bad Could Not Take a Drink of Water Without Suffering.

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure. You eat too much. Drink too much. Use too much tobacco. You make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of a short time before dyspepsia follows.

That old, forty year old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we have received from time to time.

Miss Sarah McRae, Newfield, Ont., writes: "I write to say that I have used your Burdock Blood Bitters, and have found it the best remedy I have ever used for dyspepsia. Two years ago, I had stomach trouble so bad that I could not even take a drink of water without suffering. I took six bottles of B.B.B., and have been entirely cured, and can now eat anything without any bad after effects."

Burdock Blood Bitters is an old and well tried remedy but on account of the many substitutes we would ask you to make sure that our name appears on both the label and wrapper as this preparation is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Relief at Once
Cure Certain
Conclusive Evidence That Dr. Chase's Ointment Cures Itching Piles.

Mr. John G. McDonald, Pictou, N.S., writes:—"I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for itching piles, and found that the first application gave relief. After using a few boxes of the ointment I was completely cured, and can recommend it highly to all sufferers from this disease. You have my permission to use this letter for the benefit of others."

Mr. James M. Douglas, Superior Junction, Ont., writes:—"For about six years I suffered from piles, and often could not work for two or three days at a time, so great was the suffering from pain and itching. Doctors treated me in vain, and I tried many treatments before I came across Dr. Chase's Ointment. Two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me, and for several months I have had no return of this annoying ailment."

There can be no doubt that Dr. Chase's Ointment is the most effective treatment obtainable for every form of piles. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

REGENERATION OF CHURCH AND WORLD

Life Everlasting Obtainable Only in Christ.

WHERE FATHER ADAM FAILED

Why Regeneration Is Necessary—Why It Began at the First Advent and Not Sooner—Why the Limitations of the Present Age—The Low and Narrow Gate—The Narrow and Rough Pathway—Why Different Kind of Regeneration During the Millennium—Why the World Will Have an Easier Pathway Up to Life Everlasting Than Is Now Granted the Church—What and Why the Differences Between the Two Regenerations.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have engaged for its insertion.]

New York City, Nov. 1.—Pastor Russell of New York City Temple, took for his subject "The Regeneration of the Church and the Regeneration of the World. What are They? Why Different?" His text was, "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again." (John 3:7.) He said in part:

In the past many of us have studied the Bible in a very careless manner, neglecting to give to its inspired words the consideration and respect they deserve. In many cases, the original thought has been utterly lost because of some fanciful interpretation. Consequently very few Christian people have any concrete idea of the meaning of our text, and of other Bible statements respecting the future regeneration of the world.

Regeneration, or a second birth, is absolutely necessary if we would attain everlasting life. The fault lies not with our Creator, that He made us incompetent for, as the Bible declares, "all His work is perfect." The fault is chargeable to sin. "By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world, and death as the result of sin; so death passed upon all men, because all are sinners."

This sentence of death upon Father Adam hindered him from giving to his children the perfection of life in which he was created. His entire race has been born into the world for six thousand years under a death sentence or curse. God cannot alter that sentence. The forfeited life cannot be prolonged; the sentence of death cannot be set aside; the Supreme Judge of the Universe cannot for any reason declare that He erred in His condemnation of our race. He cannot set aside His own decision. But God could provide for the regenerating of Adam and his race. To generate, as all know, signifies to bring into life. Adam failed to generate a race to life; he merely generated a great race of thousands of millions possessed of only a spark of life—a dying race.

The Divine Provision is that our Lord Jesus left the glory of the Heavenly condition and became a man for the purpose of ransoming, or redeeming, Adam and his race, which shared his condemnation. The record is that this sacrificed life laid down by Jesus is sufficient as a cancelation of all Adamic sin. On the basis of that sacrifice, and in the carrying out of the Heavenly Father's Program, Jesus was raised from the dead "a quickening Spirit," a life-giving Personage, with a glory far higher than that which He had when He came into the world. "Him hath God highly exalted, and given Him a name which is above every name."—Philippians 2:9.

The glorified Jesus is Scripturally termed the Second Adam, the Life-Giver or Regenerator, and also the Everlasting Father—that is, the Father who gives everlasting life. The world is now "far off" from Him, and can not receive life from Him directly, but only through the Church, which is His Body, and which will be associated with Him in the Kingdom, to bless the world with the knowledge of the glory of God, and to assist mankind back up the highway of holiness to the Father.

The Church is now being selected from the world by this great Second Adam, whom God hath appointed, is to be the thousand years of His Messianic Reign. Throughout the Millennium, it will be the work of Christ Jesus, as the glorified Second Adam, to regenerate the first Adam and all his race. The regenerating influences will begin with their awakening from the sleep of death, in harmony with the Master's declaration, "The hour is coming in which all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man, and come forth."—John 5:28, 29.

The coming forth from the tomb will be the beginning of the regeneration work, but not by any means its completion. It will be simply a preparatory work. The awakened sleepers will be in the same condition of mind that they were in when they fell asleep—in a very similar condition to those who will be living on the earth at that time. Before any of them can be regenerated, they must be brought to a knowledge of the Truth. Their eyes and their ears of understanding must be opened. The Scriptures assure us that this will be accomplished. "Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped." (Isaiah 35:5.) "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."—Habakkuk 2:14; Isaiah 11:9.

The news of God's Love and of the possibilities of return to His favor through the atoning work of Jesus being clearly demonstrated to all, each will have the opportunity of deciding for himself whether or not he desires to return to human perfection and the blessed possibilities of everlasting life. To do so, he must be begotten again by the Life-Giver; and the Life-Giver will beget again only those who desire the new life. Willful rejectors of the privilege, we are assured, will die the Second Death; while those who accept the Saviour's proposals will come under helpful and disciplinary experiences which will gradually lift them up, mentally, morally and physically, to perfection—to all that was lost for them in Father Adam's disobedience and its penalty, and all that was regained for them by the obedience of Jesus and the Divine arrangement of His Messianic Kingdom for the regeneration of the world.

The words beget, born and regenerated or born again, associate themselves in our minds with our natural birth; but we are not to expect, as Nicodemus queried, that any would again be born as an infant from a mother. The begetting to a new birth will be in the mind—a covenant relationship with the Life-Giver.

Nevertheless, there is a beautiful analogy, complete in every feature; for while Father Adam was designed to be the life-giver, or father, or generator of the race, Mother Eve was designed to be its nourisher, care-taker and instructor, to bring the race up to complete development. So while Jesus is the Life-Giver in the sense that He gave His own life as a Ransom-price for Adam, it is also a part of the Divine Program that there should be not only a Second Adam, but also a Second Eve.

The world will need not only the start of the new life during the Millennium, but also the care and nourishment necessary for their development and uplift—for restitution to perfection. God's provision is that the Church, called especially for the purpose and especially qualified for it during this Gospel Age, shall be the Antitypical Eve—the Mother of the world—the care-takers, nourishers, supervisors, in respect to all regenerated or rebegotten, by the Life-Giver Jesus. What a beautiful prospect of collaboration with the Saviour in His great work of rescuing Adam and his race from the effects of Adamic sin and the death sentence!

The Divine picture is very complete. While Adam was alone he did not become a father. God caused him to fall into a deep sleep, and from his side took Mother Eve to be his bride, his co-laborer, his joint-heir in his inheritance, and his assistant in the work of generating the human family. So our Lord Jesus has not yet become a father. But He has gone into the deep sleep of death, His side has been wounded, and the first result is the gradual development during the past eighteen centuries, of a Bride-class. As Jesus passed from the human condition to the spiritual before He could be ready to be the Second Adam, so the Church class, as the New Creation, must pass from the human condition to the spirit condition, and must share in the First Resurrection, before she can fulfil her part in God's great Plan as the Second Eve.

In view of this work that God has outlined for His Son and for the Church, is it any wonder that He would consider it necessary to give us lessons and tests in faith, loyalty and obedience? Is it any wonder, in view of the work which He has for us to do for mankind, that He declares that as the Redeemer Himself was given deep experiences in suffering, in order to be a merciful and faithful High Priest in the things of God in relation to humanity, so the Church, His Bride, members of His Body, must share these experiences? When we come to understand the High Calling of God to the Church and the great work that is yet to be accomplished for and in the world of mankind, we are amazed.

It was not Jehovah's program for His Son that He should change to human nature permanently. On the contrary, we are distinctly told that the Logos took the form of a servant for the suffering of death, and not for any other purpose. This purpose having been accomplished, the Father raised Him up by His own Power to spirit nature and glory—"where He was before," but to a still higher station on the spirit plane—"far above angels, principalities and powers, and every name that is named." This meant a resurrection, or second birth, for Jesus; for "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom."—1 Corinthians 15:50.

Our Saviour redeemed His spirit condition, or nature, for the human, but He could not exchange the human nature for the spiritual; else there would have been an object served in His humiliation. His human life was to be given up sacrificially as the Redemption-price for Adam's life and, therefore, as the Redemption-price of the whole world, since all lost life through Adam's disobedience. The application of the Master's sacrificed life would have left Him without any life-rights as a man, but God provided for His regeneration; that is to say, for His re-birth.

The sacrifice of Himself as a human being was made when Jesus was thirty years of age, and was symbolized by His immersion; and immediately the Father begat Him again, not to be a human being, but a spirit being. He was begotten of the Holy Spirit, which descended upon Him in a form like a dove. For three and a half years Jesus, as a New Creature, spirit-begotten, used His flesh body, consecrated to death, having no other. Is it, "He was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin"; and having demonstrated His loyalty to God, even unto death at Calvary, the Father raised Him from the dead on the third day—not a man, but a New Creature.

In other words, Jesus experienced the same transformation that the Apostle mentioned, saying, "It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power; it is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory; it is sown an animal body; it is raised a spiritual body." After His resurrection, Jesus illustrated the lesson given to Nicodemus, of which our text is a part. He could, and did, come and go like the wind. Some seven times during the forty days, He appeared for brief intervals for the instruction of His disciples, just as angels have done. Later, He ascended up on High. "Now the Lord is that Spirit"—"the Second Adam."—2 Corinthians 3:17; 1 Corinthians 15:45, 47.

The Bible tells us that God from the very beginning had foreknown that Jesus would accomplish this work and become the Father of Adam and his race by regeneration; and the Apostle assures us that God foreknew also the Church as the Bride of Christ and His Joint-heir in His Kingdom. And Jesus said to some of the earliest members of the Church class, "In the regeneration (in the Millennium) * * * ye shall sit upon thrones." (Matthew 19:28.) Elsewhere He declared, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne."—Revelation 3:21.

The Father purposed that the Bride class should be selected from amongst the members of the fallen race, and should be prepared for their work of future glory before the world's would commence. He purposed also that this Bride class should have a change of nature similar to that which Jesus experienced—it would begin with them as with Him, at the time of consecration and spirit-begetting, and culminate with them as with Him, in the resurrection change. Thus the Church has the promise that she shall be like her Lord, see Him as He is, and share His glory. (1 John 3:2; Romans 8:17.) St. Peter, speaking of the call of the Church, declared that God gave unto this class "exceeding great and precious promises"—that by these promises working in their consecrated hearts to will and to do God's good pleasure, this class might become "partakers of the Divine Nature."—2 Peter 1:4.

It is manifest that this begetting of the Church to a change of nature is very different from the begetting provided for the world—regeneration, or rebegetting, to the human nature which Adam lost, but which Christ redeemed for the world. So also we have noted that the Church has a different Father. Jesus is not the Father, or Life-Giver, of this Divine life. He did not redeem it or secure it for anybody. He redeemed human nature and secured the right to regenerate the world to human nature.

The Church's begetting, or regeneration, is by the Heavenly Father Himself; as the Scriptures distinctly say, "The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ hath begotten us." (1 Peter 1:3.) He alone can give this Divine Nature. This does not signify that the Church is not indebted to her Redeemer; for the Scriptures distinctly state that without Him we could do nothing; that "by His stripes we are healed"; and that before the Heavenly Father would deal with us at all—before He would accept our consecration, or sacrifice—it was necessary that Jesus should appear on our behalf as our Advocate, our Mediator, and thus open up to us a New Way of Life.

Thus, as St. Paul declares, "Christ brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel"—life everlasting for the world and immortality, or the Divine Nature, for the Church.

Prior to our Lord's First Advent, the way of life was not manifested; no provision has been made for it except in the Divine Purpose. God had promised His friend Abraham that somehow, sometime, all the world would be blessed; and that meant that all the world would be released from the curse of death and experience the Divine blessing, which signifies life everlasting—not that the world will be given this blessing unconditionally, but the opportunity for this blessing will be extended to every member of Adam's race, and to himself, for acceptance or rejection at their will. Then came the second part of the statement to Abraham; namely, that this blessing should come through his Seed, his posterity. This implies that some special member of Adam's race, of a faithful line, would be greatly exalted to honorable positions, whom they would be capable of blessing the remainder of the world, their brethren.

St. Paul points us to the fact that God offered this great privilege to the Natural Seed of Abraham, knowing all the while that they were sinners and would be unable to comply with the conditions, but making of them a typical people, and thereby incidentally blessing them, though with a lesser blessing. The true Seed of Abraham, through whom this promised blessing shall come, St. Paul most positively declares, is first of all the Lord Jesus Christ—the great Life-Giver, the Father who gives everlasting life—the Second Adam.

Then, with equal clearness, the Apostle points out that the Church, the Bride of Christ, selected during this Gospel Age from all nations and all denominations, is to be also a participant in the blessing work, and to be counted in as a part of Abraham's Seed. His words are, "Which Seed is Christ. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the Promise."—Galatians 3:16, 29.

COULD NOT GO TEN STEPS

FOR THE PAIN IN HIS KIDNEYS.

When you get a pain in the back you may rest assured that it comes from derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back should be strong and well.

Doan's Kidney Pills regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist. What more needs to be said? While Doan's Kidney Pills are not a "balm for every ill that flesh is heir to," they are a positive, never-failing remedy for every disease that has its inception in the improper action in those delicate little filters of the blood, the kidneys.

Mr. Adolard Cleroux, Sturgeville, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with my kidneys for four years. They were so bad at times, I could not go from stage for the pain they caused me. My doctor could not do me any good. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I bought five boxes, and now I have been cured for over three years. I will recommend them to whoever may be suffering from kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box; 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Good Sleep Good Health

Exhausted Nerves Were Fully Restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

When the nerve force expended in the day's work and in the act of living is not replenished by restful sleep at night you have cause to be alarmed, as physical bankruptcy stares you in the face. This letter directs you to the most satisfactory cure for sleeplessness.

Mr. Dennis Mackin, Maxton, Sask., writes:—"I have just finished using the sixth box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I must say that when I commenced using it my nerves were so bad that I could scarcely get any sleep. I would lie in bed nearly all night without sleep, and anyone who has this trouble knows the misery of sleepless nights. The Nerve Food helped me from the start, and has built up my nervous system wonderfully. I now enjoy good, sound sleep, and instead of feeling tired in the morning I am strong and healthy, and well fitted for my daily work."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THE SIKH.

Did you ever see a Sikh in uniform? No? Whatever of fierceness your childhood fancy painted upon the face of a soldier, the Sikh has it. Other soldiers may be as brave, or may fight more tenaciously, or die more willingly, but for simple fierceness of personal appearance all medals go to the Sikh.

He is so fierce to look at that I wonder his British officer can calmly face him without fear. You have read how trainloads of these East Indian troops are hurrying across to Europe to show their fierce faces to the Germans.

Does not Caesar relate that the Roman soldiers were frightened by the terrible looks of the early German tribes? Now the boot goes upon the other foot.

A Sikh—and I have seen many regiments of them on their native heath—is a tall man with black hair and a long black beard. The beard is what makes him look so fierce, because he plaits it into two thick braids and draws these back of his ears, where they are tied.

If you think that doesn't make a soldier look fierce, you make a sad error, which one glance at him would correct.

The Sikhs are Hindus, and so strict are their religious beliefs that all the food they eat must be especially prepared according to their own rites.

HOW "TOMMY ATKINS" OF ENGLISH ARMY GOT HIS NAME

Original "Tommy" Was a Big, Brave Fellow, Who Died on Field of Bois-Le-Duc.—His Name Applied as Typical One by Wellington, Becomes Generic Term.

No matter how many Britishers are killed in this killing European war, one colossal figure there is that will never be killed. Those of him who have been and may be killed will be numbered by the legion when the war is ended, and as a mass they will not die unlamented or unwept, though they may die unsung.

All the world knows "Tommy Atkins," which is supposed by most of the world to be a mere nickname for the British private soldier. During the days of peace one of the "sights" in the Strand and other popular streets of London was the members of the Royal Guard, handsome and stalwart, in brilliant coats and dinkey little caps, the personification of "Tommy Atkins" in his best estate. They gravitated between the barracks at Whitehall and Windsor, and were creatures attractive and a joy forever.

But why "Tommy Atkins?" Many stories have been told of the origin of the appellation. The briefs in some of the dictionaries of proper names say that it is "supposed" to be a name used to fill in military blanks as John Doe and Richard Roe are employed in certain processes of law. Yet all explanation has left the origin as mysterious as the beginning and life of the primeval man.

Now, when "Tommy Atkins" is once more on the fighting and dying line comes a word from far Australia, appearing in nearly a column of the Sydney Herald, from Lieutenant Colonel Newham-Davis, which tells a new tale of the undying name.

According to him, one lovely day when the Duke of Wellington, aged commander-in-chief for life of the British army, was strolling on the ramparts of Walmer Castle a young staff officer of the adjutant general's office came to him with papers to sign. One was a model sheet of soldiers' accounts and a typical name for the British private was wanted to show where the men should sign.

While the young man waited the Iron Duke fell into a reverie, such as must occur to an old general when he no longer answers to war's alarms. He saw in fancy a myriad of scenes in his campaigns, and alone and feeble he fought his battles over again, reviewing deeds of valour. Finally he recalled an incident of the battle of Bois-le-Duc, in the Netherlands, where, May 12, 1793, Serjeant Colonel Arthur Wellesley, commanded the Thirty-third regiment of British veterans fighting with allies who are not allies in this day, played a brilliant part in snatching victory from defeat when the French seemed certainly victorious.

The battle won, Colonel Wellsley rode back among the mounds of the dead and wounded. The men of the stretchers were engaged in their ghastly work. To his grief he saw lying, wounded to death, Thomas Atkins, six foot three in his stockings, the best man-at-arms in the regiment always distinguished for bravery who had served the king for twenty years, but could neither read nor write.

He had been slashed on the head with a sabre and a bayonet had been thrust through his lungs. He begged the bearers to let him die where he lay and when he recognised his young commander bending over him, the tears in his eyes, he whisperingly gasped:

"It's all right, sir; it's all in the days' work."

All this came back to the aged veteran, who had been made marquis and duke, as he looked over the sea from his castle. Then he remembered the presence of the young staff officer and remembered that a model blank was wanting to be filled with the name typical, he curtly said:

"Tommy Atkins!"

The officer saluted and withdrew. The Iron Duke, aged commander-in-chief, turned and again looked out to the sea. The sad coat of the British ranks was ever after "Tommy Atkins," and always will be.

FRENCH BLUFF LURED GERMANS TO DEATH TRAP

PARIS, Oct. 28.—This is how a portion of the German lines north-east of Ypres was taken on Monday, according to officers who have arrived in Paris from the battle line:

A series of light four-gun 3-inch field batteries, each invisible from the front, were disposed behind natural cover of undulations in the field, bits of wood, ruined farmhouses, or dry ravines. The guns, working to their full capacity of four shells to the minute, sprayed bursting projectiles over the German trenches in a wide belt before, over, and just behind the carefully dug and roofed field works, that is the usual thing with the adversaries. The German infantry, as long as they kept inside the covered trenches, were secure except from the chance of shells falling directly through the narrow space left for rifle and machine gun fire.

Trished the Enemy.

The French infantry, from the rear of their own line of trenches, got up as if for the usual run for the German lines. The French guns, at a moment agreed upon, ceased their fire, and the Germans, supposing the usual charging rush was coming, ordered up their reserve infantry, who were held outside the shell zone, to support the slender lines in their trenches.

The French infantry, although firing heavily, did not charge. The French artillery changed their range, and at a signal by telephone from the French trenches, caught the German reserves coming on the run one thousand yards behind their works with a shattering shell fire, which broke formations and seemed to bring down a third of the men in the line.

Took the Trench.

They simply could not advance through the section of bursting shells. The French infantry then charged and won their way through the fire from the German trenches, which they took with the bayonet.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GREY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its colour and lustre, or when it fades, turns grey, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug-store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the glossy and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

WHY NOT A LEGION OF HONOR FOR DOGS

By M. Rayon.

HONOR to whom honor is due.

Why should not man's best friend, the dog, wear a button, a medal or a cross to witness before the world that he has risked his life to save others?

Why should there not be a Canine Legion of Honor? Thousands of persons could suggest the names of dogs worthy to be enrolled. The institution of such an order would be a fitting recognition of man's debt to his faithful and loving companion.

This suggestion has been made by Elfa, who has attracted much attention by her psychic qualities. A great mastiff named Juno attached herself to Elfa when she was a young girl and became her constant companion and protector. When her mistress would enter the state of psychic coma Juno would become uneasy and the deeper the sleep the more suspicious and alert did she become. When Elfa was investigated by persons curious to learn about her powers Juno would place herself between her and any person whom she disliked, and no one could control the dog except Elfa herself.

Elfa tried her powers of mind reading on the dog, and after a little practice she had but to form a mental picture of some object desired and Juno would find it and bring it to her. She extended her tests to other dogs, and while she found none quite so "sensitive" as Juno she found many with qualities capable of being cultivated.

In view of her discoveries she asks:—"In an act of heroism performed by a dog less worthy of distinction and reward than one performed by a man?"

Man frequently poses and becomes a hero for the sake of reward: the dog never does. A man who is a strong swimmer, for example, may take advantage of an advantitious opportunity, involving no serious risk, to make a spectacular rescue, to gain notoriety or a material reward. A dog can never be suspected of such unworthy motives. His act springs from his instinctive love and sense of protection. Even a mongrel playmate of little children soon assumes the position of protector and guardian and will face any danger rather than see his charges suffer.

The more intimately a dog is associated with human beings the more does he understand their needs and the readier is he with his sympathy, understanding and help. Men and women who have been fortunate enough to have dogs as their companions know this, and many who love dogs but are prevented by circumstances from enjoying their companionship feel how true it is. Both classes would be interested in an order that would express their affection and appreciation.

To a degree this has already been attempted. In isolated cases medals have been bestowed upon dogs for heroic acts, and stories and poems have been written in praise of them. The nearest approach to a systematic effort to bestow orders of merit is that undertaken by Mrs. James Speyer, president of the New York Women's League for Animals, who has given bronze medals to several heroic dogs that saved lives under difficult circumstances. The last dog to be thus decorated was "Jim," Dr. H. T. Galpin's Great Dane, who, when fire broke out in his master's apartment, ran to him barking an alarm. When he failed to arouse him, the intelligent creature jumped up and began to pull at him, finally getting him to a place of safety. Jim later appeared at a meeting of the league in Mrs. Speyer's home and received his medal. At a meeting of the Canadian Club in the Astor Hotel a few evenings afterward he was the guest of honor and received a second decoration. He is probably the only dog that has been thus doubly honored.

Another dog wearing the bronze medal of the league is "Teddy," the property of the Swedish janitor of a New York apartment house, who is very fond of playing with the children of his neighborhood. One day he saw some of his young friends were playing by the river when two of the children fell in the water. "Teddy" gave one sharp bark, but no one was at hand to do anything, so into the water he jumped and rescued both children. After carrying them to a place of safety he rushed for the necessary last aid to the injured. As soon as the news of his achievement reached the league it was decided that he should receive the medal due a hero.

"BUM," POLICE DOG, WON MEDAL FOR SAVING TWO FROM FIRE

"Bum," who was famous as a valued member of the New York Police Department attached to the Twelfth Precinct Station, was the first one to wear the decoration of the league, he having won it by saving two children from burning to death. The men of his precinct believed him worthy of any honor that could be bestowed, this having been only one of many acts of intelligence and daring on his part.

Among recent demonstrations of extraordinary sagacity, fidelity and valor, or heroism one is reported from Ottawa, Montana.

A farmer named W. C. Parks lay stunned by a fall in a field containing a hundred ravenous, ferocious hogs. His faithful collie dog fought off the brutes, killing one and disabling several others. The dog's frantic barking finally brought help, just in time to save the man from being killed and devoured, the dog being completely exhausted by the heroic defence of his master.

The instances of heroism both in saving life and property are so many that every one can tell of one or more that he can personally vouch for. Now that war has laid its tax upon the abilities and endurance of mankind, his faithful friend the dog shares his vigils, his privations and his endeavors in behalf of the living and his ministrations to the injured. The French army has a famous canine ambulance division which went to the front early in the war and is doing splendid work on the field. Each dog wears a red cross on his white blanket to give notice of the kind of service in which he is engaged. These dogs can make long marches without fatigue and have been trained to search for the fallen and to obtain help. Sometimes they carry a flask and simple remedies for those who are able to help themselves. Another military service in which dogs are distinguishing themselves is hauling the mitrailleuses. Their speed and efficiency in hauling the guns are remarkable. Dogs also were of inestimable value in helping the Belgian refugees. In the little processions from Louvain and other cities were carts loaded with household goods and drawn by the faithful dogs.

The army dogs receive similar training to that of the famous police dogs that have proved themselves such wonderful aids in chasing and arresting criminals. Many Americans who have bought these dogs abroad have found them invaluable as guardians and protectors. This year when an American lady tried to buy one in Europe she was informed that none could be spared. Most of the dogs had gone to the front. Others were being trained for that service, and the remainder were needed at home to take the place of the men who had gone to war and left them as protectors of their homes and families. The bravery [illegible] equal to their sagacity, through their efforts while this terrible conflict goes on. Surely these dogs who succor instead of harming deserve official recognition as much as the men who perform feats of gallantry in the field.

When persons left Paris by the thousand a few weeks ago many a loved mongrel had to be left behind, for so crowded were the military trains that there was no place for dogs larger than toys. Those who could afford it sometimes travelled by automobile at a high cost simply that they might take their dogs with them.

Hard would fare the dogs, especially the delicate ones, if they were left in the city and it was long besieged. One man who feared that fate walked to Los Andelys in order to put his dog in a place of safety and then returned on foot to shut himself up in Paris.

Most dogs are terrified by the noise of guns and cannon. A King Charles spaniel was so affected that he fell ill at every royal visit to Paris, and when the Danish royal couple were there he died from the effects of the noisy salutes.

DOGS PLAY A PATIENT PART IN TRAGEDY OF CITY'S SIEGE

During the early days of mobilization stray dogs were seen lying on the street worn out with hunger, fatigue and sadness. They had wandered long days and nights in search of their departed masters. Many of these deserted dogs have now been adopted. Others are fed at the gates of the barracks and some have been adopted by the "territaux" and, with them, guard the bridges and patrol the railway lines in the suburbs.

A woman who had vowed to follow her husband, a bootmaker, wherever he went during the war, refused to go when he was sent to make footgear for the soldiers because he would not let her dog go with her—a fine illustration of "Love me, love my dog."

Effective as the police dogs are in tracking down criminals—and they act in this capacity with a clearness and efficiency which should insure recognition and reward—they are far from being ferocious. They seem to understand that their business of criminal prosecution is quite apart from their vocation as peaceful citizens. They are the staunchest of good companions, and even when they capture a [illegible] they do not hurt [illegible] man officials.

The dog asks for nothing more than a word of commendation from his master. With him more than his human brother virtue is its own reward. Man who preaches from that text is ever ready to wear the ribbon of valor or other ostensible token of his well doing. Why should he withhold from his modest four footed friend the emblem of his bravery?

In this connection we are likely to think of the dog as a luxury, or, at the best, a plaything or companion that can be easily dispensed with, but in many lands he is a valuable beast of burden, a highly prized asset of the poor man. Travellers in Europe have both admired and pitied the sturdy, patient dogs that draw the carts and put in their days in a routine of drudgery. The poor creatures have none of the playfulness that characterise our pets. They are the poor man's substitute for the horse, and they do their duty faithfully, not only their first cost being comparatively small, but their maintenance being far less than that required for a horse or a mule.

In the Far North dogs have proved themselves of inestimable value. Far and swiftly they carry man over the frozen earth in quest of fortune. When the superior animal, man, is lost, the inferior, dog, by his superacute senses and instinct, frequently becomes his savior. The man returns, the possessor of fame and fortune; the dog, that enabled him to win both, is forgotten.

Shackleton is depending largely upon the dogs he will take with him for success in his Antarctic expedition.

In the Alpine and other mountains the strong and sagacious dogs have saved many lives. On dreary moors and in isolated country districts herders and drovers have found their intelligent dogs more useful than human beings in caring for their flocks and herds and saving them when in danger.

This class of work and duty belongs to the traditional performances of the dog, but he is such an adaptable creature that there is hardly any condition in life in which he may not be useful. From the sportsman, hunting with his pack, to the blind beggar led by his faithful mongrel, the dog fits in with the pleasures and exigencies of life. A cripple has a chair which is pushed by a dog from behind while he guides it from the front. Another rides in a little wagon drawn by a dog which needs no other guidance than an occasional word from his master.

DEVOTION OF DOG TO MASTER IS SHOWN IN SCORES OF WAYS

As actors dogs have shown that they possess not only aptness but real histrionic ability. As clowns in the circus they are always popular, and in melodrama they have often rivalled the "stars" of the company.

But, after all, it will always be as man's companion that the dog will occupy the largest place. It is the quality of sympathy and understanding, of indestructible fidelity when all else fails, that brings man and dog together in intimate relationship and makes one agree with those somewhat bitter words, "The more I see of men the more I think of dogs."

For all of his devotion, what has the dog received from man? What mark is set upon him to show that he is constant in friendship, a stanch comforter in adversity and often a hero in times of disaster?

If there were a worldwide, definitely recognized canine Legion of Honor, man's debt to the dog would not be paid, but he might do something to diminish his burden of ingratitude.

Medals of bronze and silver might not mean much to the dog, but they would signify a great deal in the relations of human society to the dogs. For exceptional deeds of merit and acts of heroism "honor collars" might be conferred. A man is proud to-day to say that he owns a blue ribbon dog. His satisfaction would be greater if he had a dog that wore the medal, or the collar, of the Legion of Honor.

THE purpose of a Canine Legion of Honor is to distinguish individuals who have done worthy deeds by conferring on them decorations.

The clever could strive for the coveted medals of bronze and silver.

Every youngster running a dog would make an effort to obtain such a medal.

For deeds of greater merit "Honor Collars" have been suggested.

These decorations would be more highly appreciated by owners of dogs than blue ribbons and prizes won at the bench shows.

What do you owners think of the project?

What's in a Name?

APROPOS of names, the all-British musicians who are now to make their fortunes might now and then be more euphoniously or splendidly entitled. To the cognomen Butt we have become happily accustomed, and Clara Butt is a household word. In the same way perhaps we shall some day be equally familiar with Carrie Tubb—which seems to suggest the sincerest flattery—but that [illegible]ght have begun with [illegible] Nor is Marie Yelland—another Queen's Hall soloist—too fortunate a name.—The Sphere.

Disciple of Sir Isaac

THE day before the Russo-Japanese War began, General Nogi, the Japanese commander-in-chief, went fishing for trout. He had, he said, thought of everything; his work of preparation for the war was done, and he wanted to start the next chapter with a clear head and a new set of ideas. History has since convinced us that that day's fishing was a good job for Japan. At such a time as this the public needs its theatres and its music halls just as a sick child needs an amusing toy to bring it back more quickly to health and strength. We have all got our little bit to do just for the public weal, and not the least of our duties is that of keeping up the public spirits. There is no sense in sitting down and sighing or fretting over the march of events that we cannot stay, and there is less sense still in smothering leisure hours with the dismal contemplation of disaster that may never come. It is related of a fine old English gentleman that he had carved over his dining room mantelpiece this record of his experience of life:—"I have had many troubles, but the worst of them never happened." The moral of which is:—Don't worry, but get your work done and go to the theatre its simple. The worst never comes; but even if it should come let us at least go down with bands playing and colors flying in the proper British way.—By-standers.

Tolstoi on Obsolete Patriotism

WHOEVER you may be—Frenchman, Russian, Pole, Englishman, Irishman or Bohemian—understand that all your real interests, whatever they may be—agricultural, industrial, commercial, artistic, scientific—as well as your pleasures and joys, in no way run counter to the interests of other peoples or states, and that you are united by mutual co-operation, by interchange of services, by the joy of wide brotherly intercourse and by the interchange, not merely of goods, but also of thoughts and feelings, with the folk of other lands.

Understand that the question of who manages to seize Wei-Hai-Wei, Port Arthur or Cuba—your government or another—does not affect you. Understand that your life can in no way be bettered by Alsace becoming German or French and Ireland or Poland from being free or enslaved—whoever holds them, you are free to live where you will, if even you be an Alsatian, an Irishman or a Pole.

Understand, too, that by stirring up prejudices you will only make the ones worse, for the subjection in which some people are kept has resulted simply from the struggle between patriotisms, and every manifestation of patriotism in one nation provokes a corresponding reaction in another.

Understand that salvation from your woes is only possible when you free yourself from the obsolete idea of patriotism and from obedience to government that is based upon it, and when you boldly enter into the region of that higher idea, the brotherly union of the peoples, which has long since come to life and from all sides is calling you to itself.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Militant Mother

(By Arville Belle Davis)

THE kitchen clock struck four, and with a regretful sigh Mother laid down the April number of "The Housewife's Friend," wherein she had been reading a graphic and interesting article concerning the grievances of "John Bull's Militant Daughters."

"I don't believe in women's rights," she soliloquized, as she enveloped her angular, middle-aged figure in the voluminous folds of a huge gingham apron, in anticipation of her task of preparing the evening meal, "but if them Englishmen are bound they won't give their womenfolk whatever it is they want, I don't know as I blame the women so very much for trying to make 'em peny up, though it does seem as if they might find some way of getting what they want without smashing windows and burning down houses and starving themselves to death in jail."

"Now, if I wanted anything," she continued, gazing into the depths of a huge wooden box, "and I wanted it as bad as them English women want to vote, I bet a cent I could find a better way than that of overcoming any objections that might seem to stand in the way of me getting it. But I wouldn't fight. No sir! I believe a woman can get whatever she needs or wants without a row. If she can't, seems to me she ain't any too smart."

Having settled the "suffrage question" at least to her own satisfaction, Mother explored the cavernous depths of the wood box only to find it as empty as was "Mother Hubbard's" famous cupboard.

Out in the yard the puff-puff of a gasoline engine and the zing-whizz of a saw mingled with the cheerful voices of Father and "the boys," as they were busy sawing wood with the new engine, Mother considerately refrained from mentioning the condition of the wood box. Instead, basket in hand, she went out to gather chips among the debris of the wood pile.

Fourteen-year-old Bob hailed her appearance with a joyous shout. "Come and see the new engine, Mother; she's a peach! Just see her chew up that wood pile! Father says she's the best helper he ever had in his life. She'll turn the grindstone, too. Father hitched her on to it this afternoon and ground the scythes and sharpened the corn knives, and after supper he's going to hitch her on to the barn pump and fill the tank chock full. Hurrah! no more sawing wood and pumping water by hand on this farm!" And Bob stood on his head and waved his long legs in the air as a fitting expression of his unqualified approval.

Somehow, for once, the joyous chorus found no echo in Mother's heart. It may have been the gorgeous paint and aggressive puff-puff of the little red engine that annoyed her, it may have been mere feminine jealousy at hearing another "she" so enthusiastically praised and admired. Whatever the contributory causes may have been, certain it is that in that day and hour the seeds of militancy took root in Mother's patient heart.

Nobody had ever called Mother "a peach" for doing her duty faithfully and well. Nobody had ever told her she was "the best helper in the world," even though for more than twenty years she had, daily and almost hourly, performed tasks that did not rightfully devolve upon her to do—many of them things that should have been done by the stronger hands of Father and the boys.

"I never did believe in women's rights," she soliloquized again, as she poured some kerosene over the chips and reached for a match, "but—I don't know but there may be something in it after all. Here I've been toting all these years for a pump in the kitchen and—" gazing reflectively at the bottom of an empty water pail—"so far I've got about as much attention paid to me as the Home Secretary paid to them English women. I wonder—"

But what Mother wondered about was lost when she disappeared with a water pail in each hand. Returning she set the pails of water in their accustomed place, filled the tea kettle, made the biscuits, fetched jam and cheese from the cellar, and hung a clean towel on the "roller" with mechanical precision.

Father and the boys came in to supper and still the new engine was the all-engrossing topic.

"She'll save her cost in less than six months," boasted Jim.

"And I won't have to turn the grindstone," exulted Bob.

"I hope she won't forget what she's told to do," said Frank, with a significant look at his younger brother, who in his excitement had forgotten to grease the waggon in preparation for to-morrow's trip to market.

"She hasn't a fault that I can see," added Father, and so the talk went on.

An observant spectator might have noticed the unusual spark that glowed and scintillated behind Mother's spectacles; but Father and the boys were accustomed to leaving her entirely out of the reckoning, and they did not see. The "praise service" was still in full swing when they took their hats and went out to connect the new engine with the barn pump.

After Mother had washed the dishes and strained the milk, and fed the cat, and shut up the hens, and set the bread to rise, she stood on the steps gazing long and reflectively at the weather-beaten pump in the back yard, and listening to the aggressive puff-puff that resounded from the barn. Gradually the angry glow behind her spectacles melted into an amused smile, and the corners of her patient mouth widened into a comprehensive and somewhat diabolical grin. But Father and the boys saw nothing unusual in the quiet little woman who lighted the sitting-room lamp when they came, and sat in her special chair mending stockings all the evening.

A neighbor dropped in for a chat and they talked of the weather, the crops, the prospects of the war, and of many other things, but most of all they talked about the new engine—of the help it would be to them, the time and labor and money it would save for them, etc., etc.

And all the while that peculiar, comprehensive, diabolical little smile played hide-and-go-seek with the wrinkles on Mother's face—and they did not see!

Next morning Father and the boys were early astir. It was market day, and there was much to do. The waggon must be loaded and its canvas cover adjusted to protect the load during the long, dusty ride to the city. The horses must be carefully groomed and many other tasks must be accomplished.

Breakfast was always an hour early on market day, and they trooped in with ravenous appetites. Mother's guileless face smiled on them from the head of the table, but instead of the usual dish of carefully cooked, tempting oatmeal, she set before them a sticky, underdone mess, fit only for the hens. They grouped it under various comment, considering it an accident.

"Didn't you fry any bacon, Mother?" inquired Father, looking around for his favorite breakfast dish.

"Why, no, I didn't, Thomas," purred Mother. "You see, when your new engine sharpened the corn knives yesterday, it clean forgot to sharpen my butcher knife and the pesky thing won't cut bacon or anything else, it's so dull. But I fried the eggs," she added hopefully, handing around a platter containing a generous supply of eggs, barely warmed through.

"These eggs don't seem to be cooked enough, Mother," grumbled Jim. "Don't you suppose you could cook 'em a little more?"

"Well, now, Jim," chirped Mother, "I'm awfully sorry, but you see, when the engine sawed up the wood yesterday, it clean forgot to split any and fill the wood box up, and the fire went out before I got things cooked."

Jim looked at Frank, Frank looked at Bob, and Bob glanced apprehensively at his father, who was intently regarding Mother, while an appreciative grin struggled with a parental frown on his face. But Mother's placid countenance evinced no evidence of anything out of the ordinary, and after an awkward pause he chuckled: "Well, Mother, if you'll give us some coffee and biscuits, I guess we can make out, and possibly the engine will cultivate a better memory to-day."

"Now, I'm awfully sorry, Thomas," purred Mother again, "really, it's too bad—but when that engine pumped the water up at the barn last night, it clean forgot to pump any into the water pail, so there ain't any coffee. But here's some milk; won't that do"

Breakfast ended in a cyclone of laughter. Father gathered up an assortment of kitchen knives and disappeared with them. Jim followed with a water pail in each hand. Frank hunted up an axe and split wood industriously, while Bob trudged patiently back and forth between the wood pile and the kitchen. Soon a row of sharp knives glistened from their niche above the kitchen table, a huge water barrel filled full to overflowing reposed in stately grandeur just outside the door, and a cheerful fire roared and crackled in the cook stove.

With a comfortable sense of duty well performed, Father gathered up his reins and started for the city, the boys departed on their way to the corn lot, and the "Dove of Peace" folded her beautiful white wings and nestled close to Mother's exultant heart. But, alas for Father! When he pulled the canvas cover from his load in preparation for a busy forenoon, the first thing that came into sight was a stubby corn broom, worn nearly to the handle, reposing plainly on the very tip-top of his load, and pointing reproachfully into his very face.

"I wonder what she means by that?" he muttered in puzzled wonder. As if in answer, a row of vacuum cleaners smiled at him from a nearby window. He resisted their charm a long, long while, but before he started homeward he walked briskly across the street and disappeared beneath a sign that read 'Household Furnishings.'

But even a vacuum cleaner proved insufficient to appease Militant Mother, for the very next market day she calmly informed him that "that pesky engine forgot to churn for her, and in consequence there wasn't any butter for his customers"—and this in spite of the fact that only the day before she had told him with every appearance of sincere regret that his trousers were not mended because "that pesky engine forgot to clean out the henhouse and she had to do it herself, and didn't have time to do any mending in consequence."

The day before that she had placidly informed him that "he and the boys would have to eat a cold bite out of the cupboard for their dinner, because that miserable engine would not pump any water through a hose for her to wash the outside of the windows, and it took her a long time to wash them by hand."

Mother had never seen a washing machine outside of the pictures in the advertisements, and for 20 years she had washed once (sometimes twice) a week with no other assistance than a plentiful supply of "elbow grease" and a zinc washboard. But she never batted an eye when she told Father and the boys there wasn't a clean shirt in the house for them to wear to the city, because "that pesky engine forgot to turn the washing machine for her," adding, merely as a clincher, that "'twas kind of uncertain just when she would wash."

One evening, barely two weeks after the little red engine arrived at the farm, Father smoked a sociable pipe with a neighbor who had dropped in for a chat. In the course of the conversation he declared, "A gasoline engine, Cyrus, is liable to cost you more money than you figure on when you buy it. But, if you get one, you will probably find out, same as I did, that it can do a good deal more of the hard work than you figured on, too."

It was then that Mother deliberately laid down the April number of "The Housewife's Friend," wherein she had been re-reading a graphic and interesting article concerning the grievances of "John Bull's Militant Daughters." Over the rim of her spectacles she peered straight into the faces of Father and the boys, and winked derisively.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightful to common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by nourishing the nerves of liver and kidneys by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This puts the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

$1,400,000,000

That is the value of Canada's manufactures for one year—in money. But what of their value measured in the comfort, the happiness and the well-being of the whole country?

To produce them gives employment to over six hundred thousand workpeople, whose total wages amount to $288,000,000 each year.

These workers, with their families and those who benefit by their purchasing power, number nearly one-third the population of Canada—supported by Canadian manufactures.

How readily it is apparent that the prosperity and happiness of every Canadian—of yourself—depend on the continuous employment of these people—on the consumption of goods "Made in Canada."

Canadian factories support one-third of our population. Are you helping to support Canadian factories?

HOUSEBOAT A MARINE VILLA

Whitney's Craft will have 400 Horse-Power in Motors.

Plans were given out recently for a houseboat which Harry Payne Whitney has ordered from the New Jersey Dock Company of Elizabeth, N. J. It will be fitted with all modern conveniences, and although its draught will be only four feet, fully loaded, the builders have contracted to make it safe for ocean navigation.

The construction will be of steel, with an over-all length of 189 feet 6 inches and 21-foot beam. The boat will have a deck house 68 feet long, 13 feet 6 inches mean width, with mahogany panels. The design calls for a main saloon or social hall forward clear 19 feet 6 inches long, from which a stairway leads to staterooms below. Next will come the lobby and chart room, 10 feet 6 inches by 13 feet, with stairways below and to an upper deck. This will contain closets and cabinet racks for guns, fishing tackle, ammunition and sporting supplies.

Next aft is the dining room, 19 feet 6 inches by 13 feet 6 inches, with a pantry of 120 square feet floor space, fitted with dressers, sink, dish racks, china closets, refrigerator, dumb waiter and stairway to the galley below.

Quarters for owner and guests are forward. 50 feet 6 inches long, the width of the boat. Each stateroom will have a brass bed, bureau and wardrobe, and porcelain tubs, nickel mountings, tiled floors and walls and open plumbing will be in each bathroom. Officers and crew will have a floor space of 400 square feet aft.

The motive power will be two 200 horse power six cylinder Winton gasoline motors for a speed of 14 statute miles an hour. The tanks will have a capacity of 6,000 gallons of gasoline and water for a cruise of 3,000 miles. The boat will have electric light, a search light, electric pumps and compressors and steam heat.

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT"

Are You Bilious?

WHEN subject to biliousness, the liver is employed in getting rid of excessive quantities of certain ingredients, and when unable to do so, sick headache is produced by the retention of bile in the blood. Eno's "Fruit Salt" exercises a simple but definite action on the liver, by which the excretion of bile is regulated. It rids the body of the excess bile and carries off all the impurities, cleansing and purifying the system. Eno's may be safely taken at any time by young or old.

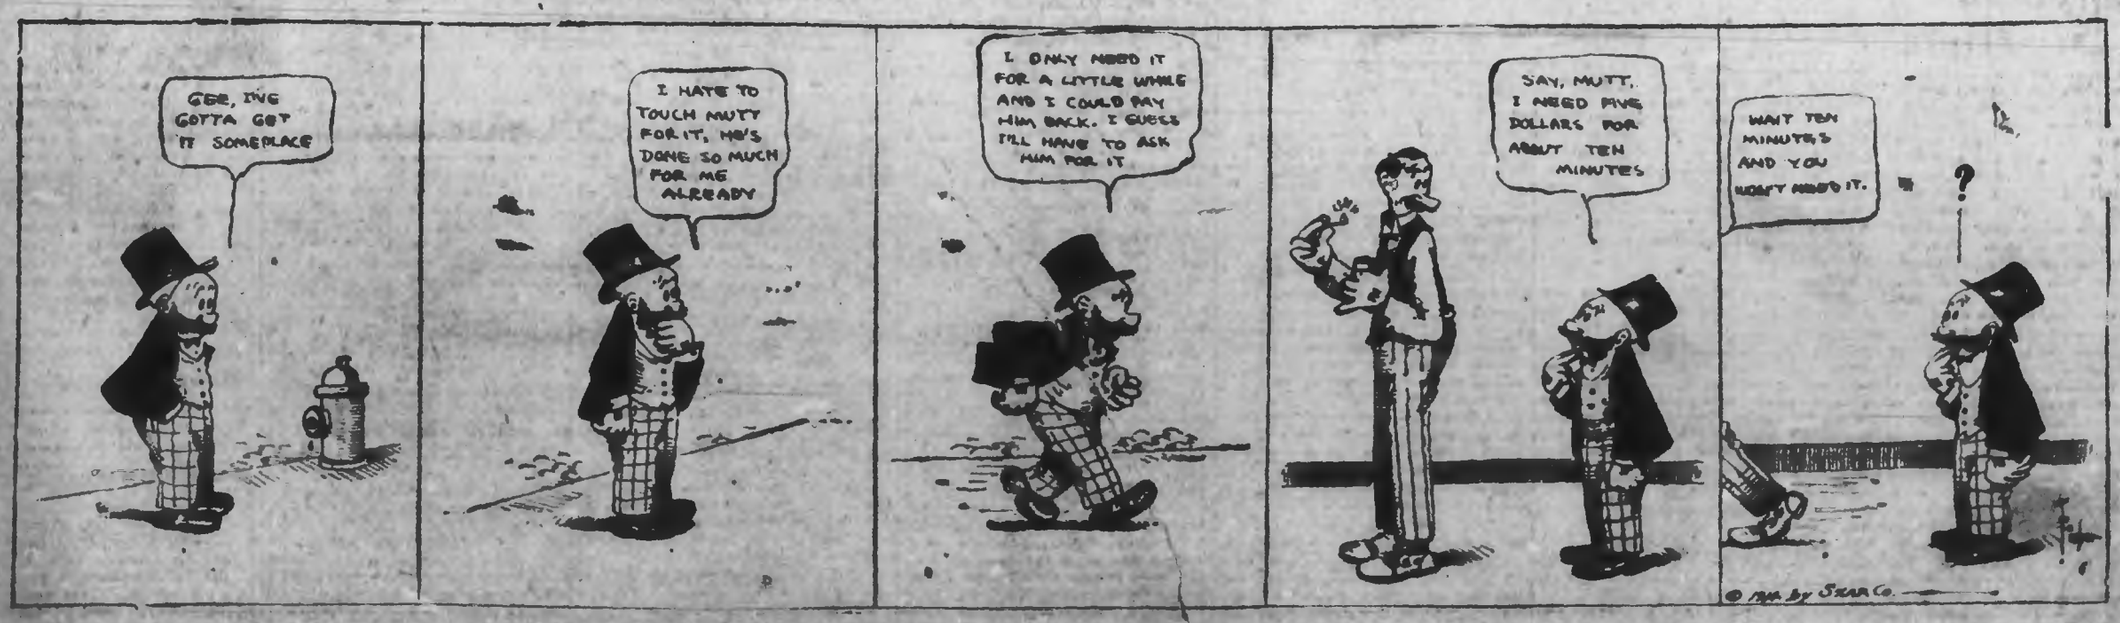
Mutt Has the Right Idea On High Finance

By "Bud" Fisher



NEUTRAL?

To the Humanity of America.
When men are told in years ahead
How Fury forced the Belgian Door,
And ravished maids, struck children dead,
And fired the houses of the poor,
Will none, if still that nation lives
Our sires with blood and sweat beat,
Ask with the pride your greatness gives—
"What said America to that?"

Your children—taught how Belgium stood
In flames that once were called Louvain,
And dashing from her eyes the blood
Struck at her foe and struck again—
Shall feel their hearts within them burn
To know the righteous word you said;
God! when the silent truth they learn,
Surely your sons will hang the head.

We ask not that of all your hosts
One man, one sword, be sacrificed;
Your cousins guard these ancient coasts.
Your kinsmen charge this Anti-christ;
But we expect your mighty voice
With judgment through the world to run,
O Land of Freedom, make your choice,
Are you for Belgium or the Hun?

We ask not that your shells should shriek
Above the flaming hill we climb,
But speak, O Sons of Lincoln, speak!
Silence in such an hour is crime.
Your children judge you if you stand
In hearing of the Belgian cry,
Not only with the folded hand,
But with the cold averted eye!

The soul has got its piercing steel,
The heart its fierce consuming fire
Oh, make your voice like thunder peal,
All nations of the earth inspire!
We know your heart for Belgium bleeds,
But speak your soul, declare your mind.
Speak till the sin-red Tyrant recedes
The Voice of God and all Mankind.
—HAROLD BEGBIE.

SUPPORTING ARTILLERY IS MOST PERILOUS

French Soldier Writes of the Long Waits in Trenches While Big Guns Fight Duel

BECOME FATALISTS

Vivid is the description of life on the battlefield as given in a letter from a French soldier printed in the Figaro. Shrapnel searching in deadly gusts over infantry which can do nothing but wait, card games in the trenches, heroic cook details who every day march from their shelters back to the kitchens, under fire all the time—these are incidents related by the "piou-piou." He writes:

"Spades are trumps—the king of hearts—I cut.

"Do not think that I am writing this on the marble topped table of a cafe while a quiet game of cards is going on. No; the Germans are two kilometres away from us, and my comrades, their loaded pieces beside them, are playing a few hands of manille (a popular French card game) in the trenches while waiting.

"They have been waiting for six days.

Courage Is Not Enough.

"It is not sufficient for soldiers to be courageous. They must also have patience—lots of patience. For war to-day is far different from what little boys who manoeuvre their lead soldiers on the floor imagine it.

"Since the commencement of the campaign our regiment has taken part in nine engagements, of which three were big battles, and has been mentioned in the orders of the day. And, with all that, there are whole companies the men of which have not fired a shot—not a single shot. And these companies did not have the easiest work, either. To them fell the most thankless, most perilous, most gruelling mission of all—that of supporting artillery. This is how we carried it out:

"The soldiers are there, behind a crest. Beside them, fifty yards away, are the bellowing guns. The enemy is far away, but his cavalry is mobile. At present the German guns are reattempt to carry off the guns. It is necessary to have infantry supports. At present the German guns are replying. They do not know where our battery is, but they are searching for it. Their shells come nearer and nearer. Our soldiers do not see the enemy. They lay there, with their useless rifles beside them. They look at—what? The shells, which are bursting very near now. A terrific crash—a wave of each covers a whole section. The men get up; count themselves. No. This time, nothing. But the next? Who knows!

No Foe Near, But Must Stay.

"Are we going away? Who will protect the battery? No, we must stay.

"The aviators have signalled that there are no parties of the enemy in the vicinity, but nevertheless, one never knows. It is necessary to stay.

"And now the German shells are bursting over us as we crouch, offering as small a surface as possible.

"A shell bursts on the right. The sergeant's canteen is smashed by a flying bit. He has escaped. Shell to the left—two wounded! Right in the centre, this time—no one hurt, by a miracle. Five are wounded now, and we patch them up with first aid bandages. The rest of us look at each other. Whose turn next? Another man down! Will they move us now? No, the battery is still there. At last it limbers up to move to a safer spot and we fall in and march off to shelter, without haste, the last ones lingering to help the wounded.

"In the trenches we are less exposed. You cannot imagine how many trenches we have dug since we have been on the firing line. Trenches of all sorts, from little mole-hills to deep ditches that cover us entirely. Talk about the German trenches—our's are as good, I think. And we have furnished them with every convenience possible.

Soldiers Become Fatalists.

"Over our heads a furious artillery duel is raging. Often, too often, we foot the bill. Yesterday two captains were wounded, to-day the colonel and a general.

"Oh, well we don't think about it any more. When we hear the whistle of an approaching shell it does not affect us. We have become fatalists. We have seen without own eyes so many useless precautions and so many miraculous escapes. There—a shell has exploded ten yards away from us. My comrades do not even look up from their card game.

"Some of the men are asleep. A corporal is reading a volume of Maupassant, which he found in a school. We have all enrolled ourselves to read it in turn. Other men are sewing up rents in uniforms—putting on buttons. In a corner a fat peasant is snoring.

"Our trenches are deep. We have placed straw in the back and rigged up benches to sit on. Our bayonets, struck in the bank, serve as racks for clothing and equipment.

Heroes Are Sent for Food.

"But cooking in the trenches is prohibited. We must go to the village, four kilometres back. Morning and evening two men per squad go back there as cook details. They are heroes in their way, for the Germans are on the watch for them. They know the hours and open fire on them as they hurry to the village. The guns follow them up, extending their range fifty yards at each salvo, tearing up the road. Not a day passes that one or more of the cooking detail is not wounded, either during the journey or in the village, on which the Germans are firing all the time.

"But the next day those who have escaped march our jauntily again their cooking pans in their hands, to try their luck once more.

"The great event of the day is the mail. The strongest are moved to tears on reading the letters of their dear ones. But they take so long to get to us! And, what is worse, many of our letters are lost. Fourteen of mine have disappeared. All the colonel's letters have been lost. The Mayor of ———, at the request of the colonel's wife, wrote to the chief of corps inquiring. And the colonel himself opened the letter! You can get a good idea of his anger when I tell you he comes from the Midi!"

caught the winning fish in 1911, and where Estes King, the second eldest, won the prize in 1912. The King family might well be called the King-fishers of Ontario so far as black bass are concerned.

Captor's Own Story.

"We tried out locations pointed out to us for three days industriously, with results that were somewhat amusing, but far from satisfactory," says Mr. Gairdner in his official story of the capture. "In desperation we tried to have the King boys accompany us as guides on the third day, but owing to duties around the farm they could not go. Nothing was left for us to do but to try our luck once more alone. We started out bright and early on Tuesday, July 28. The weather was rather sultry and heavy threatening clouds were overhead. As we progressed down the lake we stopped here and there to try our luck, and succeeded in landing several fish which would certainly not have a 'look-in' on the Star prize. This did not satisfy us, so we decided to proceed. After covering about five miles in all, just opposite the picnic grounds, we noticed a weed patch and again decided to cast our lines. We baited with live shiners of fairly good size.

"After waiting patiently for five minutes there was a tremendous pull on one of our lines, and the reel spun as if it had to. After playing the line out and in for a time the fish was seen coming to the surface, and it certainly appeared to be a monster! Again it darted away, darting about in a frenzy.

Fought For 20 Minutes.

"After a fight of about 20 minutes, during which this play was repeated, he was successfully brought alongside the boat and safely landed. He was a great fish, and we gazed at him with considerable admiration."

Diary Of A Dead German

Letter Found in a Trench, Dead From Starvation—His Journal Tells of the Defeat at the Marne

"IT'S A DOG'S LIFE"

PARIS, Oct. 16 (by mail.)—Here is the story of a German private who was found dead in a trench—not dead from wounds, but from starvation—and this story, in the form of a daily journal, kept apparently up to the last day, was found on him.

It begins with the advance of the Crown Prince's army upon the Marne after the battle of Charleroi and the fall of Longwy. It covers the battle of the Marne and the greater part of the campaign on the Aisne.

"Yesterday was a day of rejoicing. Our first army has pushed back the French and is before the gates of Paris. In Russia our troops have taken 150,000 prisoners. The joy would have been greater if we had had something to eat. Our division leaves for Marson St. Amand and Bossud, where we are to bivouac before crossing the Marne tomorrow. We hope to get rations there.

Turning of the Tide.

"We finally stopped long enough to take a bite. It did not take long because what they gave us was just enough to put a sharper edge on our appetite. Then we went toward the Marne, pushing back detachments of the French. They let us come to the very edge of the stream; our advance guard was even partly across the bridge, when their artillery opened fire; it seemed to us that it opened the gates of hell at the same time.

"We could not advance and we had no orders to retire. We could only stand and watch the carnage around the bridge, where our losses were terrible. We succeeded in saving the flag and our commander and then were ordered to retire. It was not exactly a defeat, the officers say—only a retirement. The battle resumed a little later and lasted nearly all night. We went forward again, but were obliged to dig ourselves in to escape the terrible artillery fire. Our own guns seemed to be weak.

"This morning (Sept. 9) the French flying machines are circling above us incessantly, obliging us to keep to our trenches. Our artillery seems unable to dislodge the French guns, and we fear an infantry attack from the left. It is artillery day and our troops occupying the canal bridge have suffered terribly. Out of 60 men, 25 only remained when the combat was suspended without decisive results. We got out of the trenches toward 9 o'clock and were lucky enough to dig up some raw potatoes, which comforted us a little.

"A great battle was announced for to-day (Sept. 9.) We have been in the trenches four days now, and the rest after long marches would be agreeable if there were no dead bodies of men and horses, and if the flies did not pester us terribly.

"The great battle did not come off, but to-day (Sept. 10) we could see half a mile off, the French artillery, strongly entrenched. They say strong forces of the enemy are in front of us but that we need fear nothing. A heavy battle is going on on our right win. It seems that the French army is in a bad position; to get out it must retire on Paris or break through our lines.

Defeat Instead of Victory.

"At 2 o'clock to-day (Sept. 11) we were ordered to leave the trenches. We thought it would be to attack the enemy, but it seems we are to go back. Two French army corps have pierced our lines. Away we went without taking time to eat, through destroyed villages where there is nothing to pick up. We had nothing to eat until 10 o'clock, just a morsel and then went on until three in the morning.

Polite Name For Retreat.

"To-day (September 12) we had a little bread with coffee. We are suffering terribly from privation and exhaustion. They tell us we are executing a turning movement, not a retreat. To us it looks like flight. Finally we arrived at Sousin, where we hoped to eat, but instead of rations they gave us shovels with which to dig trenches in the pouring rain. While we were at it the French shrapnel drove us back with trenches uncompleted.

"To-day (September 1) we have dug ourselves in again and remain, stuck man against man all day in our trenches. We have eaten nothing all day; we suffer atrociously from hunger and thirst; the rain comes down in torrents, but we can't leave the trenches because of the shower of shrapnel from the enemy's guns. Finally this afternoon we had our first repast for several days, consisting of rice with a little meat and bread and a morsel of bacon. It was like a drop of water on a hot iron.

"The French have occupied the trenches we left at Sousin three miles back. Behind us is Sommepy, in ruins, reoccupied by our troops. To-day the French artillery gave us a little respite, but towards half-past six it re-opened the hellish fire, which continued very late in the night at the rate of a shot every 10 minutes, just sufficient to leave us no repose.

It is a dog's life we are leading and we shall soon be sick— every man.

"To-day (September 31) we were ordered into the first line of trenches, having before us a battalion of the 161st, which has suffered great losses.

"Toward 11, the artillery opened a violent fire and the shells simply rained upon our lines. We were obliged to keep closely to our trenches, unable to leave them for anything. We are all nearly famished.

"To-day (September 30) the devilish French guns have swept off half of our company; their fire is so constant that we haven't time to fire ourselves.

"We are still confined to the trenches and it is two days since we were served meagre rations of rice and coffee made with rain water. The cold north winds have followed the rain and added to our suffering.

"Many of the men are so cramped with rheumatism that we are obliged to lift them out of the trenches.

"To-day (October 4) we have eaten again and the rations were more generous, but it seems impossible for us to satisfy our hunger.

"This morning (October 5) happily it does not rain, but the tempest blows from the north and makes us feel our hunger all the more. They say there are plenty of provisions in the rear, the question is to get them to us in face of the French artillery which sweeps the ground constantly, and makes life impossible except under cover of the trenches. Hunger is terrible. I suffer horribly from the cold also. I am no longer able to keep up. I don't think I can last much longer."

DEDICATION FESTIVAL

At St. John's Church Was Largely Attended—"The Parochial Birthday"

"I charge you as your Bishop to be more determined in your efforts to extend the word of God. I only hope that you will multiply tenfold, at least, your prayers and supplications, your contributions and desire to bring about the common salvation." These were the closing words of His Lordship Bishop Sweeney of Toronto who addressed a large congregation at the dedication festival of St John's Church, on Sunday evening. Nearly one-half of Peterborough's contribution to the second Canadian contingent were present. Many of them wore the familiar and conspicuous uniform of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers. Rev. Canon Davidson, Chaplain of the Regiment, referred to the men as "comrades in arms." He welcomed them on behalf of the congregation of St. John's Church and, in conclusion, assured them that the prayers of their fellow citizens would follow them throughout the hazardous expedition which they were about to undertake.

"Parochial Birthday"

"The common salvation." These words formed the basis of His Lordship's remarks. "A festival of this character said Bishop Sweeney, presents an opportunity to improve for those of us who feel that the setback to the Kingdom of the Prince of Peace, which war has brought about necessities, greater zeal and energy if the Kingdom is to be won for God. It is the business of the Church, Ministry and laity to spread abroad in heathen lands afar, knowledge of the one true God, or, in other words, to extend the common salvation. Three things must be done before the Church of God can be extended as it should be. There must be more adequate and commensurate circulation of the Gospel, more missionaries in the mission fields of the world and adequate financial aid. Since the British and Foreign Bible Society was founded in 1804, it has issued five hundred million pieces of Scripture in four hundred and fifty languages and dialects of human speech. Five hundred million more copies would be required before we could say that all of us had heard the Word of God. We must have a larger [illegible] tion of missionaries in the [illegible] to-day we have only thirteen thousand or less than the number that would be mowed down in a single battle of this awful war. If the Laymen's Missionary movement have accomplished nothing else they have gone into the matter of systematic organization. They have told us that we ought to have two or three times as many missionaries as we now have, and that our present yearly contribution of eleven million dollars ought to be quadrupled if the Word of God is to be extended to all parts of the world. This is your "parochial birthday". Will you not resolve afresh, said His Lordship, to maintain a deeper spiritual life God is working His purpose out and the time is drawing near when the glory of God will cover the earth.

THE ALLIES DRIVE THE ENEMY BEFORE THEM

ENVELOPING MOVEMENT CONTINUES

GERMANS FAIL TO CHECK ALLIED COLUMNS

Counter Attacks of Most Violent Character Have Been Unsuccessful--German Movement on Arras Have Failed and Allies Are Making Progress at Several Points in That Vicinity.

Examiner Special:

PARIS, November 2.—Despite all the efforts on the part of the Germans, who are making most determined resistance, especially between Dixmunde and Lys, the allies are continuing their enveloping movement and are driving the Germans before them. The official communique this afternoon emphasized this fact. It stated that the Germans in the north were continuing attacks of a most violent character, but that they had failed to check the allied columns.

The German attack on Arras is reported to have also failed, and the French are making progress at several points in that vicinity.

The German artillery bombardment continues in the region of Rheims, Argonne, and the heights of the Meuse, but it is characterized as being generally ineffective.

NEW YORK, November 2.—The German cruiser, Kronprinz has added still another British prize to her list, having captured the British steamer Van Dycke, of Hamport and Holt line; the Van Dycke's commander, Captain Cadogan, reports that his ship had been captured, but that his passengers and the members of the crew were unharmed.

LONDON, November 2.—Because of the belief that Andrew Carnegie, the American iron master, is friendly to Germany, he is being bitterly criticized in Scotland. A despatch from Dunfermline, Scotland, says that a crowd has pelted his statue with mud.

LONDON, November 2.—A despatch to the Times from Petrograd, dated Sunday, says: "A British vessel, the Frederick, was ignited and scuttled during the bombardment of Novorossyk. The Turks also wantonly bombarded Anapa, a seaport of the Black Sea, at the western extremity of the Caucasus range."

The correspondent of the Amsterdam Handelsblad telegraphs that the Turkish cruiser Sultan Selim which bombarded Sebastopol is the cruiser known as the Goeben, when the vessel was under the German flag. She has now bombarded five Russian ports.

MONTREAL, November 2.—That Canadians should not take lightly the stories of German Societies in the United States secretely arming and preparing to invade Canada, is advised in a letter received here to-day from a prominent railway man in the United States, who declares that he overheard a conversation between leading Germans in the United States tending to shew that a half million of that nationality and sympathisers were pledged to attempt anything to beat the British and involve the United States and Canada in the conflict.

T. C. Elliott Handed Ladies $100 Cheque From Saturday

The Women's War Fund Committee received a cheque for $100 this morning from T. C. Elliot, as the result of Saturday's sale. Mrs. Travers received the following letter with the cheque:

Mrs. Travers, Peterborough.

Dear Madam,—Please find enclosed cheque for one hundred dollars which we have very much pleasure in handing to you to aid the victims of the war:

Would you please kindly convey to the ladies our appreciation of their kindly, genial courtesy and their whole-hearted help for the cause we all have so much at heart.

If we can in any way be of assistance to you in your noble work in the future we will esteem it as a favour to be called upon. We are

Yours very respectfully,
T. C. Elliot.

Mrs. Travers stated that the money will likely be devoted to aiding the Belgians.

During the sale on Saturday Asa Huyche's Orchestra played during the afternon and evening, the music being greatly enjoyed. The Reception Committee for the occasion was composed of Mrs. Travers, Mrs. (Dr.) Scott, Mrs. John Allan and others.

TAKE STEPS TO GUARD WELLAND CANAL AND HAMILTON TUNNEL

TORONTO, Nov. 2.—The Dominion police and local authorities admit there is much more than mere rumour in the story that German sympathisers have plotted to blow up the Welland Canal and destroy the Hamilton Tunnel of the C. P. R. The Welland Canal, of course, is the great grain route which must be kept open. The C. P. R. Hamilton Tunnel is on the direct line of communication between Toronto, where troops are mobilizing, and the Niagara Frontier, which would likely be the scene of raids of German sympathisers from the United States.

The chiefs of the C. P. R. detective service marshalled their men here to-day and proceeded to Hamilton and on to Welland, with the Dominion police. Military guards on all vulnerable points in the district have been doubled, several hundred more men being called out for the purpose. Incidentally there is a story in Toronto to-day that there is an organized plan for the armed Germans in the United States to invade Canada at various points before Christmas.

CONTINGENT LEAVES CITY TO-MORROW NOON

Arrangements Have Been Made to Give Recruits an Enthusiastic Send Off At Armouries.

WILL HAVE LUNCHEON

Peterborough's second contingent for overseas service will leave for the concentration camp at Kingston to-morrow morning. Arrangements have been made to give the boys an enthusiastic and adequate send-off.

At 10:15 o'clock the contingent will parade at the armouries, and a demonstration will be held. The 57th Regimental Band will be in attendance and short addresses will be given by Mayor Buller, J. H. Burnham, M.P.; Geo. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.; His Honour Judge Hayden and Rev. Jas. Hoffins, president of the Ministerial Association.

At 11 o'clock the members of the contingent will be guests at a luncheon in the lecture room provided by the Women's War Fund Committee. Following this the chaplain of the Regiment, Major (Rev. Canon) Davidson, will conduct a short religious service, and at 11:45 o'clock the contingent, headed by the band will leave the Armouries to march to the C.P.R. station where they will entrain at 12:15 o'clock for Kingston.

The public is invited to take part in the demonstration at the Armouries, and there is no doubt that the second contingent will get a send-off that they will remember.

The men will wear civilian clothes, receiving service outfits on their arrival at Kingston.

The quota is not yet completed, 80 men out of the required 78 have passed the doctors, but there is a possibility that some of these may be struck off the list through the parents refusing to give the necessary consent. The medical officer will be at the Armouries to-night for the purpose of examining recruits, and there is still a chance for a dozen young men to go with the first draft to Kingston to-morrow.

OFFICERS MUST RETAIN RANK

None Will Be Allowed to Go With First Contingent as Private.

OTTAWA, Nov. 2.— Canadian officers who enlist for service in the second contingent will not, it is learned, to be allowed to waive their rank and serve in the ranks of privates. A large number of officers did this in the case of the first contingent. so eager were they to see service at the front. Besides this, many more officers were taken over with the first contingent than commands could be found for. There is, of course, a possibility that their services may be available for the second division, but at all events qualified officers are now none too plentiful in the Dominion. On this account it is understood that officers will not be allowed to go as privates with the second contingent, but that, if places cannot be immediately found for them, they will probably be retained here for further drafts.

DRY CANTEEN IN KINGSTON

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 2—Orders have been sent by officer commanding division, in which he states that all saloons and bars in Kingston and its environs are placed "out of bounds" for all ranks in division battallion which assembles in Kingston, until 6 o'clock daily. Officers and non-commissioned will be held responsible that this order is adhered to.

SEBASTAPOL BOMBARDMENT IS AT END

Russians Shore Batteries by Accurate Fire Compel Withdrawal of Goeben

DAMAGED WARSHIP

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, Nov. 2.—A Despatch from Sebastopal says that the former German cruiser Goeben's bombardment of that Black Sea port was put on end to by the Constantinowaks batteries, which forced the warship to withdraw. The station subsequently intercepted a wireless message from the Goeben which said: "Damaged. Will return to Constantinople for repairs."

Committee Orders An Investigation

The Finance committee of the City Council have been presented with an account from the local hospitals which calls for the payment of three illegitimate maternity cases. It is claimed that the parties concerned are unable to pay and therefore come under the classification of "indigent patients." The committee not only refused to pay the account, but ordered a rigid investigation into the matter with a view of rounding up the responsible parties. The authorities who have the matter in hand, promise an early solution to the case. It is their intention to make the offenders pay the account and any other reparation that may be necessary.

Refused to Pay.

Only the limitations of the English language prevented the members of the committee from giving adequate expression to their feelings, when confronted with the accounts. Ald. Green made a few incendiary remarks about the Council being imposed upon. Even Ald. Johnston, chairman of the committee, failed to supply the necessary adjectives. To make matters worse, Relief Officer Miller made a verbal report of a case where a man refused to pay the hospital expenses of his child. The man in question was making thirteen dollars a week. He not only refused point blank to pay, but sought to have another of his children admitted as an indigent patient. The account has been placed in the hands of the City Solicitor for collection.

PENSION SCHEME BEING EVOLVED

For Dependents of Canadian Soldiers Who May Be Killed in Present War

OTTAWA, Nov. 2.—The scheme of pensions to be paid to the widows, families and dependents of Canadian soldiers who may be killed in the war now being waged will be drawn up shortly by the Militia Department and will be submitted to the Cabinet. It will be made effective, in all probability, by a Pension Bill next session. As yet there is no statement as to what amount will constitute the pension to be paid in the case of the ordinary private, but it is understood that it will considerably in excess of that received by the British soldier, a shilling a day, and will be about on the same scale as the United States pension, about sixtenths of the regular day's pay. This would amount to 60 cents per diem in the case of a Canadian sodier, who receives a dollar per day while on active service.

Of course it may be decided to grant an even larger pension than that, but at all events there is little prospect for the sum given being any lower. As it is, the Canadian soldier is much better treated in the matter of service pay than his English comrade, who receives less than half that he does.

WILL HOLD A MEETING TO HELP THE RECRUITING

Public Gathering to Arouse Patriotic Spirit of Local Young Men in the Armouries To-morrow Night.

WILL GIVE ADDRESSES

The following open letter has been addressed to His Worship Mayor Buller. The latter has given instructions to call a meeting for Tuesday evening. It will be held in the Armouries, which have been loaned by the Government for the occasion. A few short addresses will be delivered and a large and enthusiastic attendance will do much to help the cause.

The Letter.

The communication, which is from Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., reads as follows:

Peterborough, Nov. 2nd, 1914.

To His Worship, The Mayor:

Your Worship,—In view of the more serious turn of events due to the declaration of a war of pan-Islam against the Allies, it is our duty in Canada to do immediately all that we can to answer the Empire's call for troops. I would suggest with your permission that a public meeting be called at the Armouries to be addressed by those you may select, for the encouragement of enlistment by our young men. We have, I understand, not filled out the second quota allotted to us, and this clearly should not be the case. We can all do something for the cause and we should do that something whatever it be as if our hearts were in it. We have all the material needed for doing our share in the Empire's defence to the full, but possibly it would not be unwise to rouse it to a more stirring sense of what this world-wide conflict is calling upon us to do. Can Canada, can Peterborough lag behind?

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

ANNIVERSARY OF SPRINGVILLE PRESBYTERIANS

The Presbyterian Church of Springville celebrated its anniversary yesterday in a very satisfactory manner. Rev. T. D. McCullough of Port Hope, preached excellently appropriate sermons to large congregations, both morning and evenin. In regard to the thanksofferings, the congregation with a splendid obstinancy disregarded the request that a sum of $150 be donated during the day, the contributions, totalling $160, exceeding the amount requested by $10. The congregation is to be congratulated both upon their liberality and upon the general success of their anniversary services.

EGYPT IS QUITE READY TO REPEL THE TURKS

It Is Stated That Australian and New Zealand Units Are There.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Britain is in readiness to prevent any invasion of Egypt by the Turks if she is drawn into still another field of hostilities. There has been much mystery over the whereabouts of the Australian and New Zealand units, who have been at various times reported in the firing line. It is now understood that they are in Egypt, and have been guarding the entire length of the Suez Canal for several weeks. In addition, certain first-line troops have been quietly sent to Egypt to reinforce the garrisons already there, and so far as England is concerned, it is stated that every precaution has been taken to meet any emergency that might result from any action of Turkey.

OUTLOOK IN THE WEST IS CONSTANTLY IMPROVING

The Allies Are Making Progress at Almost Every Point, Except at Messines Which Village Has Been Taken by the Germans--Enemy Left Thousands Dead in Neighbourhood of Arras.

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, November 2.—At only one point along the entire northern front has the German right wing been able to check the slow but steady advance of the allies. This is at the village ofMessines, which has been taken by the Germans in a series of desperate bayonet charges heavily supported by the artillery. The Germans, heavily reinforced, made a supreme effort against the suburbs of Arras, and against Lihons and Lequesnoi-en-Santerre. The fighting was bloody and long drawn long drawn out, but the Germans were finally driven back, leaving thousands of dead behind them.

The allies are making headway in the region of the Aisne, having moved forward towards Tracy, Laval, and to the north of the forest of L'Aigle. Between this forest and Soissons, before Vailly, an attack was directed against the troops holding the south bank of the river, but the war office declares that it was repulsed. In this connection direct issue is taken with the Germans who claim material advances at this point. The Germans have indulged in a series of night attacks here but at no point have they been able to pierce the allied lines.

In general, according to the latest official information from Bordeaux, the outlook is constantly improving from the standpoint of the allies.

It is declared that although the enemy is bringing up his heaviest artillery to the right centre and right wing, he has been unable to extend his battle front, while the French right wing is moving forward and gaining ground in the Vosges.

"THERE IS ONLY ONE MOTTO --ABSOLUTE CONFIDENCE"

PARIS, Nov. 2.— M. Armand Fallieres, once President of France, in an interview published by the newspaper France de Bordeaux, says he believes the war is only now beginning.

"Months and months," Mr. Fallieres says, "will be required to overcome the military power of the enemy, but this does not produce discouragement in France. Our country has acquired the new virtue of constancy in effort.

"We shall certainly be victorious, for without reckoning our ardent patriotism and our inexhaustible moral and material resources we have on our side Russia and Great Britain, with her strength, her tenacity, and Belgium, as well as Servia, and, finally, we possess the moral support of entire humanity, which loves the ideal of liberty.

"We are fighting for our land,, our homes, our wives and our children, but the admirable Belgians are struggling for their honour and for the respect of their plighted word in front of a savage Germany and an Emperor intoxicated with pride?

"The right will not fail, and France will not perish. Should we sacrifice our last man, and should we be compelled to call out our last reserves, I am ready to go. There is only one motto—absolute confidence."

MASSES FOR THOSE WHO DIED IN WAR

The second of November is set apart in the Catholic church calendar as All Soul's Day. The ehtire month is dedicated to the departed and many prayers and works are offered for the repose of their souls. By a decree of Bishop O'Brien's, read yesterday, a high mass was celebrated this morning in the Catholic churches and chapels for the soldiers and non-combatants who have died during the present war. Large congregations attended both churches this morning.

CORP. FIELD IS INJURED

The many friends of Corporal A. F. Field of the Bank of Montreal staff, who went to England with the 57th Regiment in the first Canadian contingent, will regret to learn that he is in the hospital at England, suffering from a broken instep, which will confine him to the hospital for at least six weeks. Corp. Field was in charge of a party which was unloading transport waggons from a liner at Plymouth. In some manner a waggon ran over his foot, breaking the instep.

WILL BE KNOWN AS ST. ALBAN'S MISSION

Bishop Sweeny Speaks at Brownton Yesterday Afternoon.

Yesterday afternoon the Bishop of the Diocese, Rt. Rev. J. F. Sweeny, M.A., D.D., paid his first visit to Brownton Church of England Mission Addressing a large number of the people of this district, he expressed himself as highly delighted with the successful establishment of another Church Mission in Peterborough. All the people present, with the exception of four, reside in the immediate district and are Church of England members. As there are only forty-eight chairs in the Mission, many had to stand. Donations of chairs will be gratefully received.

At the suggestion of the Bishop the new mission will be known as St. Alban's Mission, Brownton.

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, NOV. 2, 1914

BRITAIN'S NAVY.

The power and influence of the British navy is illustrated by the trend of trans-oceanic trade of the United States. While the navy kept the seaports open to ordinary commerce, it pretty thorough cornered commerce with Germany. The September exports of the United States to Germany fell from 35 million dollars in 1913, to $2,000 in 1914, a falling off of some 16,000 per cent. During the same period United States' exports to Great Britain declined only 27 per cent.

A GOOD DAY'S BUSINESS.

Mr. T. C. Elliot, merchant, did a big stroke of business on Saturday, in more ways than one, and showed a spirit of patriotism and interest in the Patriotic Fund, whose results do not stop with the day's receipts, of which ten per cent. or $100 was added to the Ladies' War Fund. His generous offer of turning over to this fund a percentage of one day's business receipts, will be an incentive, it is hoped to Peterborough to pull itself together, to bring the Patriotic Fund, whose need is gaining force every day, up to something more like a level with other and much smaller places. The occasion will have brought the ladies, who had charge of the several departments of Elliot's in closer intimacy in the good work of helping repair the ravages made by the war. It will also have another effect perhaps; and will permit these ladies to gain a new view of the relations between sales-ladies and the "shopping" public—to see for themselves how some of the little pin pricks that sales girls receive from finicky customers, are administered. Mr. Elliott, may not pose as a ladies' man, but he will be one henceforth, in spite of himself; and he will not suffer in the esteem of the people as a public-spirited and patriotic, citizen and business man.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY.

While naturally the European war disturbs the usual course of manufacturing activity, there are compensations. Orders for goods for the allied nations will bulk, and are already bulking, largely. For example Mr. Frederick Stobart, the purchasing agent of the Imperial Government, who has established himself in Montreal for at least six months, is giving an order for 400,000 shirts at $18 per dozen. That amounts to close upon a million dollars—$900,000. It is expected that an order for 400,000 additional shirts will shortly be given, to cost about $600,000. The total of orders in this class thus mount to a million and a half. This will give a brisk stimulus to Canadian manufactures of this kind. The saddlery business of Canada has recently received orders of an estimated value of two million dollars for cavalry and artillery supplies. The French Government has decided to send to Canada a special agent to arrange for the purchase and supply of several articles, whose present production in Europe has ceased. France in this regard has need of steel rails, steel beams and barbed wire, repairing parts of locomotives, railway ties, and many forms of wood for construction purposes. Thus we have in prospect active days and even nights for many of our manufacturers, if they will only rise to the occasion. To do this they will need financial assistance, and it is to be hoped the tthe banks will not be too conservative in their policy of extending credits. On the whole, money advanced to promote manufactures will return in larger volume, through the employment of labour, the purchase of raw materials, and the general bracing of the commercial situation. Though the orders cited and others in prospect, may directly affect only some of our industries, the general effect will be of national benefit, for industry and commerce are so closely inter-related that the activity and benefit of one is sure to extend to the other.

We need not be discouraged. Even with the war in full swing for a prolonged period, better times in all branches of business are sure to come. We have only to meet the temporary interruption with courage, and as our activities may need to take new directions and be exercised under new conditions, adapt our skill and enterprise to adequately meet the national call to duty—to keep doing business "as usual" as they are doing in Great Britain.

RED-TAPE AND RECRUITING.

Enlisting for overseas service shews no lack of the fighting spirit among our citizens. In some quarters there is a disposition to appeal to Canadians to enlist. This seems to be superfluous. Offers of service are not wanting. But the trouble, if there be any, and the apparently slow rate in getting the second contingent together, does not consist in scant offerings of recruits, but in the martinet character of the medical examinations. It is not to be said that strictness of standard is not necessary. Our soldiers are not going to anything as arcadian and idyllic as a Sunday school picnic. They will need to be not only physically sound but as hard as nails to get through what they will have to face. They need to be sound in wind and limb, but they will need above all to have the main thing—ability to shoot, and in addition a good knowledge of drill and, if possible, an experience in waging war. There seem to be occasions, when the medical examiners, might wink at a trifling shortcoming in regard to the physical standard required. For instance, rejecting a stalwart seasoned man of a dozen years' experience in the regular army—a soldier ready-made, a man who answered the physical test in every other way—because he had an overlapping toe seems to be disregarding infinitely more important essentials, for the sake of using to the fine point the red-tape line. The British Government didn't reject Kitchener because he is a quarter of a century over the age limit. Lord Fisher, who has been given the post of main lookout of the British navy is considered good enough for the most responsible post on earth to-day, though he is 73 years of age, but young in the vigor of his experience knowledge of the service and administrative ability. He could not, neither could Kitchener, meet the age condition of enlistment in the army and navy; but both these great men, as Sir John French and Sir Jorn Jollicoe, had compensating qualities that commended their employment.

Though medical examiners of recruits think they have to adhere to a regid physical standard, there seems to be times when this standard could be more liberally interpreted.. Rejecting a man fit and qualified in every way for a minor physical defect, that might not count, seems to be depriving the contingent and the army of which it is to form a part, of a first-rate fighter. Rejecting a hardened, seasoned soldier, worth any two raw recruits, and accepting a military "greenhorn," simply because he can meet the test of perfect physical condition, like a healthy calf, may meet conditions of theoretical martinet exaction, but it does not seem to be good practice. The military authorities doubtless know what they are about in prescribing strict physical standards, but there might well be exceptions. Too stringent, unreasonably stringent, medical examinations deter many men from enlisting. They do not wish to be branded as physical weaklings when they are strong in the spirit of courage and willingness to get into the fighting line, and many who would otherwise offer do not offer.

HOW TO MEET HARD TIMES.

We can bear our share in this war without taking the King's shilling and donning kakhi, and that is by bravely meeting the test of resource—adversity. It takes adversity to test the mettle of a brave people. The British nation never gets fully roused till it knows there is some national calamity just across the way. In this business of keeping industrial and commercial calamity out of Canada, every Canadian is getting his war blood to boiling point. If we can't shoulder rifles at the front, we can make every dollar we spend for goods made in Canada a national bullet for keeping out the calamity of hard times. This kind of fighting needs no drill. It entails no sacrifice. It means just—enthusiastic common sense in the greatest home cause ever faced by the Canadian people.

HOW WELL WORK IS DONE.

Those who think that reports about the war are concocted in newspaper offices would be cured of their delusion by visting a newspaper office. Watch a newspaper staff working at high pressure handling the stream of matter that comes in over the wires, consulting maps, trying to bring order out of what looks like chaos. You will not discover any member of the staff chewing his pencil and making up war news 'out of his head." Suppose that some helpless novice really was doing that, not having quite rid himself of the outsider's delusion that war news is concocted in the newspaper offices. Imagine, if you can, the roar of derision and exasperation with which his efforts would be received by the hard-working staff, who are obliged to throw away better stuff than the novice could concoct, truth stranger than fiction.

There was once a notion that when you could not get central or some number it was because the telephone girls were lolling about in easy chairs chewing candy, reading novels, discussing shows at the theatre and the faults and merits of young men. That delusion was easily cured by a visit to central, or even a picture of it. Then you began to wonder how any girl could stand the frightful nervous strain of keeping track of all those numbers, and why more mistakes were not made. That is the real miracle; how well work is done, in the big store and in the trenches in France and Belgium.—Toronto Star.

"DOWN TO BRASS TACKS."

Never before since we claimed a right to be considered a free, self-governing country, had Canadians such a sense of partnership in Canadian prosperity as we have to-day. Not long ago we had wide-open flood-gates of immigration, packed steamships, railways vibrating with colonist cars, tourist cars and box cars clanking to the tune of people coming in and goods going out. We all rejoiced at a great uplifting dynamo of prosperity that none of us stopped to trace up. How long it would last none of us knew. We hoped—forever. But we knew better. The turn came. Tight money caused by wars that upset credit, upheavals of one kind or another in various countries, real estate boomers by the hundred thousand whose only aim in life was to inflate foot-frontage values—suddenly unable to pay their tent, thank God! Then the great war that got all the financial centres centres and manufacturing nations more or less by the throat, got this country in its grip as never we knew it before. Suddenly as a people we were "down to brass tacks," not only in sending men to the front, but in keeping the people at home as prosperous as possible. Did we shirk either of these great tasks? Not much! We have tackled both in the spirit of a free, independent people. Our men have landed in England. Our farmers are sending out the wheat at high prices. Our manufacturers are keeping the factories open. Our workmen are kept on the payrolls that sustain prosperity. The movement has been started. Now in this time of national conservation and reconstruction it is absolutely up to us as citizens of Canada to keep every dollar circulating for goods made by our own people.—Brantford Expositor.

CRIME OF THE AGES.

"To Americans the Kaiser's ruthless onslaught upon the little nation whose neutrality he was pledged to respect is the crime of the ages. If anything were needed to emphasize the enormity of this crime it is furnished by the threat of absorption based on conquest. If American sentiment could determine the result there would be no peace until the Belgians are once more in possession of their own country, with every safeguard thrown around it to insure to them the full enjoyment of the liberty for which they have so gallantly fought.

"Americans have contributed, are contributing and will contribute liberally for the relief of suffering Belgians. They are giving to the people of King Albert—not to the subjects of any 'Wilhelm Von Belgium.'"—New York Herald.

SPIES THAT FAILED.

From Germany comes a story to the effect that the Kaiser has imprisoned, or executed, a number of famous German spies whose false reports largely led him into the present conflict. And it must be confessed he has some reason to be "peeved." It is quite evident that much of the Kaiser's over-confidence in plunging into war was due to the lying of his high-priced spies. That he was deceived as to conditions in other lands is not to be doubted, particularly as to Great Britain. He did not believe that England would declare war. Spies in the English Government service, in the labour organizations, in every walk of life, social, commercial and industrial, assured him that a declaration of war on the part of England would bring on internal strife. He was told that John Bull might bluff and bluster, but that he dare not go to war. He was told that great strikes and political dissensions would paralyze the British Government, so that if it was mad enough to take upt he Teuton challenge it would be quickly so weakened from within as to prove an easy victim. The spy simply laid before the Kaiser the stuff the Kaiser most relished. It was "easy money," and it appears to have been worked to the limit.

For a decade, France, Russia and Great Britain have been overrun by German spies at enormous expense, and when informed by these experts that the moment is ripe to start something, he deliberately brings on war only to find that he has been deceived—well, it is not a situation calculated to improve the Hohenzollern temper. He must feel a good deal like the burglar who, told by a confederate from the inside the right moment to crack a safe, finds himself looking down the barrel of a six-shooter.—London Advertiser.

How Apologists For Germany Throw Logic To The Winds

The New York Post is a high-class newspaper which has from the first taken a clear-headed view of the issues at stake in the European war. It is particularly impatient with those leaders of German thought who are seeking to square the militarism of Germany with American ideas of fair-play. Says The Post:

It really seems as if some of the professors who have rushed into print to defend Germany's cause are doing it quite as much harm as the enemy. Take, for instance, the appeal, "To the Civilized World," published by 93 German savants, which has just reached us. Some of the most distinguished names in Germany are signed to it—every one notable in his field. Yet the appeal itself is discreditable to their intelligence, and certain to react against their cause. We waive the fact that the English in which it is couched is grotesque, with merely one citation: "The iron mouth of events proved the untruth of the fictitious German defeats, consequently misrepresentation and calumny are all the more eagerly at work." But their statement is marked by total absence of logic. Thus they state that "it is not true that we trespassed in neutral Belgium. It has been proved that France and England had resolved on such a trespass, and it has likewise been proved that Belgium had agreed to their doing so. It would have been suicide on our part not to have been beforehanded."

Thus in the first sentence they deny what they admit in the last. As for their assertions in regard to France and England, no proof whatever is offered, or has been offered, from any source. The worst that we have discovered is the fact that England and France had planned how they would act if Germany did precisely what she has done. To say that it was a violation of neutrality for England and France to plan in advance how, if necessary, they would perform the duties put upon them by the treaty establishing Belgian neutrality is to insult the intelligence. But granting, for the sake of argument, that the contention is true, what does it boil down to? That Germany violated a law because someone else was going to. If anybody was going to murder Belgian neutrality, she was going to be the first at the job. What a shocking position for moralists, for teachers of ethics and religion to assume They had much better fall back openly upon the highwayman's argument used by the German chancellor that he preferred the law of necessity to that laid down in a "mere scrop of poper."

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Gen. Otter will be in charge of the internment of the prisoners of war throughout Canada. He will have full power as regards the location of the internment camps.

Official warning of a German mine field off the north coast of Ireland was issued Saturday by the British Admiralty, which warned all ships not to pass within sixty miles of Terj Island.

A son has been born to Capt. Hamar Greenwood, M.P. for Sunderland, well known in Canada, who is now engaged in connection with home recruiting and ammunition supply in Britain.

Maj.-Gen. Sam Hughes sailed from England on Saturday by the St. Paul of the American Line. He is expected to arrive at New York next Saturday and to be in Ottawa the day following.

The French army casualty list issued yesterday contains the name of Col. H. Detrie, the son of a popular hero and the youngest superior officer in the French army, killed on the fighting line.

Kingston's war veterans have been provided with four machine guns for home defence by citizens. This action has been taken owing to the possibility of an attack this winter by Germans from the United States.

P. J. Stone, aged 58, died yesterday at the Collingwood General Hospital as the result of an accident from a fall at Oshawa at the races in September. He was widely known throughout the province for his interest in horses.

MENNONITES IN TURKEY.

Berlin, Ont., Friends of Religious Workers Fear For Their Safety.

BERLIN, Ont., Nov. 2.—Fear for the safety of a number of Mennonite missionaries in Turkey is entertained here. The headquarters of these missionaries are at Everett and Hadgin, and although they have $3,000 in the banks in those places they cannot withdraw their accounts owing to seizure by the Turkish authorities.

The British consuls, in these places are endeavoring to see them safe to the border. Their houses have been taken for military purposes by the Turkish Government.

Those from Ontario in that section of Turkey are Mrs. Barker and two children, the family of Rev. Mr. Barker who is now home on deputation work; Mr. and Mrs. D. Eby, Mr. and Mrs. Storms, while Misses Bredemus, Lambert, Tomey and Misses Bowman are from Indiana.

TO PREVENT TROUBLE.

Prominent Indian Muslims Start Pro-British Campaign.

SIMLA, British India, Nov. 2.—(Via London.) — The announcement of the unfriendly attitude of Turkey toward the allies was made throughout India yesterday in an official communication, wherein the Viceroy of India deplores "the endeavor of a Chauvinistic element to drive Turkey into a war with Great Britain for the benefit of Germany and Austria."

The reception which the announcement received in the outlying districts will not be known for some days, but responsible leaders of the Mohammedan community already are holding meetings in support of Great Britain, while the mosques are offering prayers for the success of the British arms. The Mullahs are preaching homilies urging Turkey to maintain a neutrality or side with the allies.

REBELS CAPTURED.

Insurrection In Transvaal Gets Another Hard Blow.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A despatch to Reuters Telegram Co. from Cape Town says:

"Col. Alberts has defeated the rebels in the Lichtenburg district of the Transvaal, killing thirteen, wounding 30, and capturing 250. Among the captured is Commandant Claassens.

"Commandant De Villiers was out reconnaitering when he met a strong rebel commando with white flags attached to their rifles. De Villiers approached the band, whereupon the rebels attacked him and captured 110 of his men. The rebels then advanced against Col. Alberts force from two directions, but Alberts defeated them and chased them twenty miles across the border. In their flight the rebels discarded their carts and bicycles."

King Albert Meets Poincare.

HAVRE, Nov. 2.—Having left the firing line in Belgium to receive President Poincare, who paid them a visit of ceremony, King Albert and the Queen are here "on furlough." The royal couple soon will return to the war zone. King Albert, whose democracy is patent in his sayings to the soldiers, "My skin is worth no more than yours," visits all parts of the trenches encouraging his troops, and Queen Elizabeth takes an active part in the field hospital work and does notably efficient work because of her medical training.

Used Lances on Foot.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—A semi-official announcement was made in Paris Saturday afternoon, as follows:

"In one of our attacks delivered the day before yesterday a village, strongly held by the enemy's infantry, supported by artillery, was taken by a detachment of French unmounted cavalry belonging to two dragoon regiments. The men charged with their lances in their hands. The enemy left in the village more than 200 dead, and abandoned 200 of their wounded."

Lansdowne's Son Was Killed.

LONDON, Nov. 2. — Lord Nairne, the second son of the Marquis of Lansdowne, Conservative leader in the House of Lords, has been killed in action. He was a major in the 1st Dragoons and served in the South African war.

Lord Nairne was born in 1874. In 1894 he married Lady Violet Mary Elliott, daughter of the fourth Earl of Minto, who was a former Governor-General of Canada. Since 1910 Lord Nairne had been an equerry-in-waiting to King George.

Hon. P. S. G. MacKenzie Dead.

QUEBEC, Nov. 2. — The sudden death of Hon. Peter S. G. MacKenzie at his home in Melbourne, Que., at an early hour yesterday came as a severe shock to his many friends in this city. Mr. MacKenzie's death is attributed to apoplexy or heart failure.

Hon. Mr. MacKenzie was born in Cumberland House, Hudson Bay Territory, on Dec. 19, 1852. He was married two years ago to Miss Penfold of the Eastern Townships.

Will Arrest Reservists.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The British official information bureau issued the following yesterday:

"In view of the action taken by the German forces in Belgium and France of removing as prisoners of war all persons who are liable for military service, his Majesty's Government has given instructions that all enemy reservists on board neutral vessels should be made prisoners of war."

Swiss Soldiers In Avalanche.

BERNE, Switzerland, Nov. 2.—(Via Paris.)—A huge avalanche yesterday overwhelmed a detachment of Swiss soldiers in the mountains near St. Maurice. Four of the men were instantly killed and two gravely injured. Eleven others were dug out alive.

Confesses To Murder of Five.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 2. — Scott Stone Saturday made a written confession that he murdered his wife and four children at Toledo, Ill., Sept. 28, by dynamiting his home while they were asleep. Stone afterwards enlisted in the United States army here under an assumed name.

Gibson Was Not Equal To The Task of Throwing Alf. Hardy

Toronto Y. M. C. A. Instructor Beaten in Handicap Match by Yorkshire Lad at Brock St. Rink Saturday Night.

WAS BEST BOUT YET

Alf. Hardy, the English wrestler, whose two matches with Jack Forbes aroused so much interest, still remains unconquered. On Saturday night Andy Gibson, the former amateur welterweight of Canada and at present the wrestling instructor at the Central Y.M.C.A., Toronto, tried the big task of throwing Hardy twice in an hour. After sixty minutes' spectacular wrestling in which Gibson tried every bit of science and used every atom of strength at his disposal, Hardy left the mat without a fall being registered against him. The Toronto Scotchman was on the aggressive nearly all the way through, but the Yorkshire lad was too slippery for him.

The fans were unanimous in the opinion that the bout was the best exhibition of wrestling ever seen here. Gibson, wonderfully developed, especially around the shoulders and back, is very strong and skilful, as well; while Hardy, although still a comparative youngster, is a veteran of the mat game, fast as lightning, cool as a cold storage plant, and knows the game from every angle. The meeting of the two was a contest that kept the crowd on its feet all the way. Gibson, with two falls to get in sixty minutes, went to work from the handshake and used his whole repertoire of holds on the slippery Yorkshire lad. Time after time he had Hardy in difficulties, and on two or three occasions there seemed no chance for the English boy to escape, but he always squirmed or twisted or head-spun out of the tight corner, slipping out of danger with the cool smile on his face that has won the hearts of the wrestling fans. Once Gibson had him with an arm scissors, and a half Nelson that appeared unbreakable, but Hardy managed to free his arm and break the hold. Several times the Scotchman nearly had him with a hammerlock, but somehow he got out of the predicament. It was wonderful wrestling, and had the crowd cheering wildly. Once in a while Hardy carried the battle to his opponent, and when he clapped a toe-hold on the Toronto man, the latter had nearly all he could stand, before he managed to get loose. At the end of the hour Gibson made the proposition to wrestle to a finish, but Hardy declined the offer. The Toronto man had made the proposition to throw Hardy twice in an hour, he had not succeeded in doing so, and that was all there was to it was far as the Yorkshire grappler was concerned.

The difference in weight between the two men was the subject of heated discussion among the fans. Gibson informed The Examiner on Saturday that he weighed 150 pounds. Hardy has not stated his exact weight, but claims that he is below the lightweight limit, 133 pounds. Some spectators held that there was not five pounds difference between them. And there you are.

It was clean fast wrestling—neither man employed any dirty tactics, although the going was strenuous from start to finish.

In the preliminary bout Jack Forbes met "Gid" Carter, of Toronto. Forbes winning in two straight falls in seven and nine minutes. Carter, a strong, well-developed boy, tried hard, but lacked Forbes' condition and skill, and the latter had not much trouble in winning. Carter yielding the first fall when Forbes clapped a body scissors on him.

Two Examiner employees, Harold McLean and Jim Cartlidge, met in the first preliminary, and retired with honours even, McLean taking the first fall in four minutes and Cartlidge the second in fourteen. McLean was on top most of the time, and had a decision been given would have won on his aggressiveness.

Bob Long refereed the preliminary bouts, and Joe Dwyer was the third man in the main contest.

CONNIE MACK ASKS WAIVERS ON THREE OF HIS FAMOUS PITCHERS

Bender, Plank and Coombs Slated to Go--One of Them Had Been Bickering With the Feds--Each Has Starred in World's Series Games.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—A sensation was sprung in baseball circles today when Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, announced that he had asked for waivers on Pitchers Bender, Plank and Coombs. These three men were the mainstays of the Philadelphia machine when it was at the height of its power.

Mack's announcement was in confirmation of a statement made by Hughey Jennings, manager of the Detroit team, at Atlantic City. The Philadelphia manager said he had no intention of retaining any one of the three pitchers for the season of 1915. Asked if he did not feel that Bender and Plank were good enough to pitch for the Athletics next year, Mack said he wanted it understood that he did not think their usefulness as pitchers was over.

One of the three pitchers, Mack said, had approached him with the statement that he was doing business with the Federal League and that he received an offer so large that he did not think the Philadelphia management would meet it. Mack said he suggested to this pitcher whose name he would not give, that possibly there was an American League club that would meet the Federal's figures.

"I am for the American League in victory or defeat," Mack said, "and I am going to keep those players for our league if possible. I would not have asked for waivers at this time but for the fact that one of them told me he had been dickering with the Federal League."

The three pitchers, who will no longer wear the uniform of the Athletics, did wonderful work in their careers as pitchers. Each has figured as a hero in worlds series games.

Bender was knocked out of the box in the first game of the recent world's series with Boston. He was a big factor in winning three world's championships for the Athletics and when he was forced to leave the box when facing the Braves it was the first time in his career he had been so humiliated in a world's series game.

Eddie Plank will go down in baseball history as one of the greatest. He is past forty years old, and for years back reports that Plank was "through" have only been followed by the veteran making a remarkable showing. Even this year he was Mack's most effective pitcher in the world's series. He lost his game to Bill James, however, the latter holding the Athletics to two hits. Plank has been with the Athletics since 1901. He has aided his team in winning three world's championships. Plank was kept out of the series with the Cubs in 1910 by illness.

Jack Coombs first attracted attention as a pitcher for Colby College, and joined the Athletics in 1906. Two years ago Combs was stricken with typhoid fever. His back was affected and he lay for weeks with heavy iron weights swung from his neck and feet. He was able to travel and practice with the team this year, but did little pitching. Coombs is 32 years old.

Bender is probably the best known of the trio of pitchers. He is only 31 years old, but has pitched for the Athletics for twelve years. He has taken part in four world's series and has won six and lost three of these games. His greatest year was in 1910 when he won 23 games and lost but five. He has at all times been among the best pitchers of the league and only during two seasons out of the dozen he served in the major did he lose more games than he won.

Connie Mack's Reason.

Connie Mack scored Hughey Jennings manager of the Detroit American League club, for having given out the news at Atlantic City. Mack said he regarded the matter an American League secret until he himself desired to inform the public.

"I have no intention of retaining any of the three players named for 1915," said the Athletics manager. "I would not have asked waivers on them at this time, but for the fact that one of the three told me he had been talking business with the Federal League."

Fell into Mine Shaft.

KINGSTON, Nov. 2.—Jas. Abrams, aged 55, was killed; Thomas Stevens had his leg broken, and another man whose name is not known, had a narrow escape. The men were doing some work around a dismantled shaft of a mica mine at Sydenham Village, when some of the timbers gave way and the men fell into the shaft, a distance of 40 feet.

Abrams met almost instant death. He was married. Dr. D. E. Mundell, coroner, of this city, has been notified and will hold an inquest to-day. Stevens, the injured man, was brought to the Kingston General Hospital.

Martin Harvey Lectures on Way

Famous Actor is Stumping Recruiting in England

It may interest Examiner readers to learn that Mrs Martin Harvey has placed her cottage at Bonchurch, I. W., at the disposal of the Red Cross Society as a Convalescent Home for soldiers or sailors. Mr. and Mrs. Martin Harvey have also jointly contributed 100 pounds as a subscription to the same society.

Mr. Martin Harvey is, with the cordial approval of the Prime Minister, delivering a series of lectures through out the country on every Sunday evening at the various theatres at which he is playing, on "The War" and the needs of the country, more particularly with regard to the recruiting problem. The first lecture was given under the auspices of the Mayor and Aldermen at Middlesbrough, Yorks, last Sunday and drew a gigantic audience, packing the Theatre from the floor to the ceiling.

Martin Harvey and his talented wife delighted Peterborough playgoers last season in "The Only Way" and "The Breed of the Treshams." They are returning to this Continent in a short time.

The Quietest Hallowe'en

Saturday night was the quietest Hialowe'en Peterborough has known for years. The Police arrested, it is true, several alleged offenders, but they were let out of the cells before the night had passed. There were a few scattered Hallowe'en pranks which were reported to the Police, but nothing very serious was done. The usual crowd of young fellows and girls in costume thronged the streets during the early part of the evening, but the spirit of depredation was lacking and there were not many residents who suffered financially through damage to their property. A few gates were removed, ladders taken, and tin pots uprooted, but the Police Station was not beset as usual with a chorus of complaints regarding the conduct of the young men.

ITALY IS ON VERGE

Resignation of Cabinet Creates Excitement Throughout Country.

ROME, Nov. 2.—The members of the Cabinet presented their resignations to the King Saturday night. The King reserved decision and invited the Presidents of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies and leading statesmen to confer with him on the situation. It is generally believed that Premier Salandra will be asked to form a new Cabinet within a few days.

Following the resignation of the Cabinet all Italy is aflame with the war fever. Public sentiment is overwhelmingly in favor of the allies, the people demanding to be led against the Bulgars and Turks. Demonstrations took place in many cities yesterday, and in some instances troops had to be called to prevent rioting.

The army is mobilized and one million men are ready to go on the fighting line. If Albania should be seized by either Turkey or Austria, Italy's control of the Adriatic would be seriously imperilled.

It is reported that Gen. Zuppelli and Vice-Admiral Viale will retain respectively the portfolios of marine and war.

All the Cabinet Ministers who resigned Saturday met yesterday in the presence of King Victor Emmanuel, with whom they discussed the situation for about two hours.

Owing to the European crisis, Signor Rubini continued, the revenues instead of increasing had diminished by about $20,000,000, the new taxation bringing in $6,000,000 instead of $16,000,000. He added that he recognized that necessary for urgent military expenses, but wished to counterbalance them with new taxation.

A majority of the Ministers preferred to postpone the taxation until after the war.

Losses Are Very Great

150,000 Germans Killed, Wounded or Captured in Flanders

LONDON, Nov. 2. — A correspondent of The Observer, writing from France, says: "The German losses have been enormous. A German officer captured yesterday estimated that there have been 150,000 killed or wounded since the occupation of Ostend, in Northwest Flanders alone. Whole batteries and battalions have been annihilated by the shell fire from the warships. Thousands have been drowned as the result of the opening of the dykes. In hand-to-hand fighting the German losses have far exceeded those of the allies. Thousands of bodies of Germans floating on the inland sea bear bayonet wounds.

"Only the main roads and railroad tracks remain exposed above the flooded area. The shattered German regiments are being given no time to re-form and amalgamate. They are abandoning their wounded, guns and transports. Unless their fleet comes out to create a diversion they will be driven from the Belgian coast within a week."

ADVANCE IS IRRESISTIBLE

Russians Victorious Everywhere on Eastern Front

PETROGRAD, Nov. 2.—The Russian General Staff makes the following communication:

"On the East Prussian front our troops are progressing in the direction of Wladislow, government of Suwalki and the forest of Romentin.

"The German attacks in the direction of Bakalarsevo, on Oct. 31, have ceased, following terrible losses suffered by the enemy.

"Beyond the Vistula we have advanced victoriously along the whole front. We have occupied Petrikau, Opotezno and Ojorow. Battles took place on the roads leading to Opatow, where we routed the rear guard of the enemy. We took 40 prisoners and captured six rapid fire guns, convoys and provisions.

"Upon the San river, near Leopchove, a Russian regiment which had entrenched itself step by step, reached the enemy's position and, profiting by the panic among the Austrians, took by assault a temporary fort. Five officers and 500 soldiers were taken prisoners and five rapid-fire guns were captured.

"A column of the enemy which descended from the Carpathians and fortified itself near Nadvarna, was attacked and put to flight.

Crown Prince Was Leading.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The Daily Mail publishes a despatch on the Russian campaign, saying that the German Crown Prince especially requested that he be allowed to command the assault on the Vistula river lines.

"For this plan," says the despatch, "very large forces were assembled. The best Prussian troops were allotted to the Crown Prince in the centre with heavy siege guns and Austrian cavalry.

"The unexpected vigor of the Russian counter-attack carried all before it. The Crown Prince's army gave way, abandoning much material and 36 heavy guns which were bogged in the mud. The attempt to rally at Radom proved an utter failure and the pursuit continues."

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 31.—Liverpool cables were 1¼d to 2d higher, and Paris 1¼d higher, causing an extremely strong opening on the local market today to the extent of ¾c to 1¼c. The advance, however, did not last long. A set in buying to heavy profit taking, and the gain of the morning was lost, prices becoming steadier around yesterday's close.

A fairly heavy export trade is being effected on daily. One firm early in the day had worked 60,000 to 70,000 bushels of wheat, and fair sales are also being made of oats and barley. During the week the amount of sales for export has been heavy, and there appears to be enough wheat offered to fill requirements.

Winnipeg wheat option closed ¼c lower following a strong opening. Oats closed ¼c to ⅝c lower. Flax closed 1½c to 2c lower.

This Way To the Tyrant.

Johnny was beginning to read. He ran to his father with a story book in his hand.

"Daddy," he asked, not knowing of a recent connubial argument, "what is an 'unreasonable tyrant?'"

"Boy," said his father severely, "you'll go to bed for the day if you say another word against your mother."

CONNIE MACK SIGNS SNOWBALL PITCHER FOR HIS DAUGHTER

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 2. — Connie Mack has signed a snow ball pitchter for his son-in-law. The new snow twirler hails from Chicago, whither he is going to return to live after the wedding to-day with Miss Margaret V. McGillicuddy—yes, that's Connie Mack's real name—and be happy ever after. Robert F. McCambridge is the young man's name, and he is a cashier for a bond broker in Lasalle street. He has the flat all fixed up at 1498 Winona avenue, Chicago.

McCambridge made his hit with Miss McGillicuddy when he pitched a wild snow ball five years ago and struck her in the neck. He rushed right up, apologized, was forgiven and asked to call. This was while he was living in Philadelphia.

In his contract to be signed to-day, McCambridge will agree not to throw any more snow balls.

THE GERMAN ADVANCE HAS BEEN CHECKED

Latest Attempt of Kaiser to Advance Between Nieuport and Arras Has Failed Utterly--No Nearer Objective Than a Week Ago.

LONDON, Nov. 2. — While in the centre of the battle line in France, the Kaiser's forces have made gains of great importance, for instance, in the locality near Vailly, where the French troops were beaten back to the south bank of the River Aisne, the Germans were checked yesterday in their latest attempt to advance on the line of battle between Nieuport, Belgium and Arras, France.

The Germans, as though beginning to obey with a will the Kaiser's reputed order: "Take Calais or die," with renewed fury and desperate vigor hurled themselves against the [illegible] in the Ypres district. It is the Kaiser's great desire, apparently, to gain possession of the canal routes to the sea coast, and probably assemble on the coast in time to check the rush of Italian troops into the northwestern theatre of war. The British this time checked the Germans in the vicinity of La Bassee.

In the meantime French troops are marching from important defensive positions west of Roulers.

The German army headquarters issued the following yesterday morning: "The operations in Belgium have been rendered difficult owing to inundations of the Yser and the Ypres canals by the destruction of the sluices at Nieuport. Our troops have advanced near Ypres. At least 600 prisoners were captured, also some British guns.

"Forces fighting to the westward of Lille also have progressed. A number of prisoners were taken near Vailly—about 1,500.

"In the region of Verdun there has been only insignificant fighting.

"In the northeast the battle against the Russians is still indecisive."

The fighting in Flanders and in France has been but a repetition of that which has been going on for days past. The Germans have continued to push their attack, which was aimed at placing them in possession of the French coast ports, but, as before, it has been a ding-dong affair, first one side making progress only to lose the ground gained on the next day or night.

From the point of view of the allies, their position is satisfactory, as the Germans are no nearer to their goal than they were a week ago. There have been tremendous losses, which for once cannot be exaggerated, while the capture of a few prisoners and guns from one side or the other is a matter of daily occurrence. fighting has become more severe along the River Aisne, in the Argonne forest, and along the River Meuse, between Verdun and Toul, but so far without making any appreciable change in the fronts of the two armies.

A despatch from Rotterdam to The Evening News, dated Saturday, says: "Termonde, a Belgian town on the Dutch border, directly north of Antwerp, has been occupied by German soldiers and marines, who are preparing winter quarters there.

"The Germans are strengthening and mining the roads around Brussels, Grammont, Antwerp, Lokeren and Ghent.

"Six submarines which arrived at Antwerp by rail are now being fitted and tried in dock."

"The way to Bruges is now open to the allies owing to their recapture of Roulers, and the Germans are digging new trenches behind Ghent with feverish energy. To do this is to announce their retreat." This statement is made in The Observer in a despatch dated "near the Franco-Belgian frontier."

The Paris War Office announces that in spite of the statements from German sources that Verdun was destroyed, the town never was struck by German shells. One fort, called Bouamont, was bombarded at long range by the enemy, but no damage was done, notwithstanding the cannonading of 24 hours' duration.

The French troops continue to bar the road to Verdun.

Reports of German victories in the Argonne region are asserted to be without foundation.

It is officially reported, says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Paris, that when the French captured Quesney-Sur-Deule, six miles northwest of Lille, Saturday they took 200 prisoners, two guns and a large number of quick-firers.

WARSHIP IS SUNK

British Light Cruiser Hermes is a Victim of a Submarine in the Straits of Dover

LOSS OF LIFE SMALL

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The Secretary to the Admiralty Saturday night made the following announcement:

"The old cruiser Hermes, Capt. Lambert, was sunk to-day (Saturday) by a German submarine in the Straits of Dover, as she was returning from Dunkirk. Nearly all the officers and crew were saved, but the exact loss cannot be ascertained until the men are mustered. The loss of the vessel is of small military significance."

The Hermes was a comparatively old vessel, and from a naval standpoint was of no value, but the fact that she was attacked so near home indicates that the German submarines must have a base somewhere on that part of the Belgian coast, which is occupied by German troops, from which they can menace ships of the allies passing between England and France. Only a few days ago one of them sank the French steamer Admiral Ganteaume, which was carrying refugees from Calais.

The cruiser Hermes is the seventh British cruiser to meet such a fate at the hands of the German submarine or to be destroyed by mines. Others in the list are the light cruiser Amphion, the scout cruiser Pathfinder, the armored cruisers Cressy, Hogue and Aboukir and the cruiser Hawke, sunk by a submarine Oct. 15.

It has been announced that the Hermes remained afloat for 40 minutes. Of her crew, which numbered 200, two hundred were landed at Dover by torpedo boats.

The loss of life in the sinking of the Hermes was much smaller than in the destruction of other warships by German submarines. Only two men were known to have been killed, although 40 are missing, and only 9 were injured.

Dr. Moffatt, surgeon of the British cruiser Hermes, which was sunk by a German submarine, speaking last night to a recruiting meeting on the marine parade ground at Dover, gave a brief story concerning the sinking of his vessel.

"We were all sitting at breakfast," said Dr. Moffatt, "and the first intimation we received that anything was wrong was when the plates on the table flew about the ward-room and our breakfasts fell into our laps. There was no panic. Every man flew to his station in good order. I went to the "sick bay" and saw to the removal of the invalids and then went on deck again and reported that all the sick men had been put into boats."

Dr. Moffatt urged an immediate response to the call for men to support the King and the country.

To Help Belgians

John D. Rockefeller to Use Some of His Millions for That Purpose

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The Rockefeller foundation has determined to employ its immense resources for the relief of non-combatants in the countries affected by the war, and stands ready to give "millions of dollars" if necessary for the purpose. This was announced Saturday night by John D. Rockefeller, jr., president of the foundation.

In pursuance of this philanthropy, the foundation will send a commission to Europe in a few days to report first hand as to how, when and where aid can be rendered most effectively. At a cost of $275,000 it already has charted a ship and loaded it with 4,000 tons of provisions for the relief of the starving Belgians.

Mr. Rockefeller has been in communication with Ambassador Page at London, and makes public a cablegram in which the Ambassador says that "it will require a million dollars a month for seven or eight months to prevent starvation."

Must Fight Against Turks

Strong Hint by Russian Paper to Balkan States

ROME, Nov. 2. — A great impression has been produced in Rome by an article appearing in the Russian newspaper Novoe Vremya, which is considered in Italian political circles to be an ultimatum for the Balkan States and also a warning for the neutral countries.

"The Balkans," the newspaper says, "cannot forget their past slavery, and that they became free chiefly through Russian intervention. Now, the moment has come, not for words, but for deeds. Whoever is not with us is against us.

"Bulgaria, freed by Russia, cannot remain a spectator in the war. Her least attempt at accord with an enemy of Russia will be considered treason. Bulgaria must choose between Turkey and Russia.

"At the end of the war only the participators in the gigantic conflict," the newspaper concludes, "will be invited to the banquet. Whoever thinks he will snatch a mouthful without having made the necessary sacrifices, will be much mistaken."

C.P.R. INSPECTOR VISITS SCENE OF ACCIDENT

Six hundred dollars was the official valuation that was placed on the three horses that were killed on the C.P.R., near Springville. The horses were owned by Mr. J. J. Herron. Inspector Thornton of the C. P. R. visited the scene a few hours after the accident. It is assumed by all parties who investigated the circumstances surrounding the accident, that it was the Ottawa express which ploughed into Mr. Herron's horses, killing three of them. Two of the animals were prize Clydesdales, having been exhibited at the agricultural fairs. The third was a Hackney driving mare.

There were six horses in the pasture field. On Saturday morning, when Mr. Herron went out to bring them in, three of them were found dead on the C. P. R. right-of-way. They were badly mutilated. It was evident that after leaving the pasture field the animals had wandered down the road and crossed the cattle guards which Mr. Herron claims were not in proper condition. It is not known who left the pasture field gate open.

Dead Cow.

Mr. George Gaudern had the misfortune to lose a valuable cow last week. She lay down near a deep furrow, and getting on her back was unable to get up.

One Hundred Men Hear Splendid Address By Bishop Sweeny

Many Members of Second Contingent Present at Fellowship Tea at St. John's Church Yesterday Evening.

SOME TIMELY REMARKS

The anniversary of the dedication of St. John's Church was celebrated yesterday by special services. The Bishop of the Diocese, Rt. Rev. J. F. Sweeney, M.A., D.D., was present, addressing a large gathering at the Men's Fellowship Tea in the afternoon, and preaching to a large congregation at Evensong. Seventy-nine years ago St. John's Church was opened. Thirty-two years ago the Church was re-built and opened on All Saints' Day. The Bishop celebrated Holy Communion at 8 o'clock, at which there was a large number of communicants, as there was at the close of the 11 o'clock service.

The Rector, Rev. Canon Davidson, delivered an eloquent sermon, appropriate to All Saints' Day, at the morning service. He spoke on the sanity of the saintly life and of the power and beauty of a life demanded by God and which power was given by Him to lead.

Men's Fellowship Tea.

At 5 o'clock one hundred men sat down to a fellowship tea. These fellowship teas have been a feature in St. John's Church for some years, and have been a strong factor in promoting cordiality and good feeling among the men of the congregation. The school-room was tastefully decorated in patriotic colours, the work being done by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons. The tables were tastefully arranged and a very sumptuous repast was served by Coleman Bros. Before the blessing was pronounced the gathering sang the National Anthem.

About thirty of Peterborough's second contingent for overseas service were in attendance, and their presence was the signal for spontaneous cheers. His Lordship the Bishop was present, his appearance being greeted with hearty applause. After tea, a conversational discussion took place in which references were made to the presence of the Bishop and the second contingent. Appeals were made for greater enthusiasm in the carrying on the work of the Parish and certain needs and opportunities were pointed out. A general determination was evinced to carry forward the cause of the Church with increased zeal.

Bishop Sweeney, in addressing the men referred to the momentous time in which everyone was now living. In these awesome and strenuous days the best in mankind was called forth and the burden and responsibility should not be borne by any few, but should be borne by all. The Bishop's remarks were punctuated by loud applause. To the members of the contingent His Lordship gave a farewell charge. He gave expression to the appreciation of the Church and country of their self-sacrifice. He urged them to conduct themselves as became British subjects. Christians, and gentlemen. He impressed upon them the need of a personal religion which would be their strength and stay in perilous experiences. The prayers and sympathy of those at home accompanied them. Similar sentiments were re-echoed by members of the congregation who paid fitting tribute to the volunteers.

The hymn "Jesus Calls Us" was then sung, after which they dispersed. The men attended Evensong in a body.

The Committee who had charge of the tea consisted of Messrs. W. E. Conway, F. J. Linton, A. W. Turner, A. Kingdon and John Edgar.

BATTALIONS WIPED OUT

Germans Lost Heavily in Their Coast Dash

PARIS, Nov. 2.—The following official communication was issued in Paris last night:

"In Belgium there is nothing new to report.

"During the day we have repulsed violent attacks of the enemy in the vicinity of Lihons, Lequesnoy-en-Santerre, Vailly on the Aisne, and in the Bois de la Grurie, in the Argonne forest.

"To the north of Souain we have continued to make slight progress.

"In the Vosges, through our offensive movements, we have taken possession of the heights of Verrines de Sainte Marie."

The French official statement issued at three o'clock yesterday afternoon says: "There is nothing new to report on the Nieuport and Dixmude front.

"The Germans have continued their fierce attacks throughout the region to the northeast and south of Ypres. All these attacks have been repulsed, and we have made slight progress to the north of Ypres and progressed perceptibly to the eastward of this locality.

"At daybreak hostile forces debouching from the Lys succeeded in seizing Hallebecke and Messines, but these two villages were retaken towards evening by vigorous counter attacks on the part of the allied forces.

"Upon the rest of the battlefront yesterday (Saturday) was marked by violent cannonading and several counter-attacks of the enemy, which were intended to recover the ground conquered by us during the last few days.

"The struggle is still very violent in the Argonne region, where the Germans, however, have made no progress.

"According to statistics furnished by our service in the rear, 7,693 German prisoners were interned during the week of Oct. 14-20 alone. These figured do not include the convalescent wounded in our field hospitals, nor the detachments which are ready to be sent from the front in the rear."

TWO COUSINS KILLED AT MONS

L. W. Cottrell is Going to the Front with the Second Contingent

One of the most noticeable features with regard to the enlistment for the Canadian Overseas Contingents has been the number who have entered the ranks from the different Canadian banks. In the first contingent no less than four hundred and twenty went from the different branches of the Bank of Montreal alone, two of these going from the Peterborough branch. Among those going from Peterborough in the second contingent is another from the Bank of Montreal, Mr. L. Y. "Wallace" Cottrell, the savings teller. Mr. Cottrell was born in Auckland, New Zealand, twenty-three years ago, went to London when a boy and was educated there at Christ College. Before coming to Canada three years ago he was a bookkeeper for a short time with the Anglo-Foreign Banking Co. Since coming here with the Bank of Montreal his promotion has been rapid, and he entered the Peterborough branch last November as savings teller. In religion Mr. Cottrell is an Anglican, but he has attended Murray St. Baptist Church regularly since coming to Peterborough. Being a reservist of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, he volunteered to the Department of Naval Service at Ottawa at the outbreak of hostilities, but was unable to secure an opportunity to go to the front in that capacity. Since the war began two cousins were killed at the battle of Mons, and this settled his determination to enlist in any way possible. Mr. Cottrell carries with him the best wishes of a host of friends in Peterborough.

DISCUSSED THE END OF THE WORLD

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, last evening, a goodly crowd assembled in the Woodmen Hall to hear Elder Johnston on the subject entitled 'The end of the world from the standpoint of reason." Taking for his text Luke 17 26-30, where it speaks of the awful calamity that befell Sodom; how that because that wicked city was given over to the worse forms of vice and corruption notwithstanding the many warnings of faithful Lot, the Lord, in His wisdom saw fit to destroy that wicked city of the plains.

Reasoning from the past we infer so the Elder declared, that when a similar condition would exist in modern times, the Lord, in order to be just to the city of Sodom, would have to destroy some of the cities of the present time. And is it really true. Mr. Johnston inquired, that God, even to-day, is visiting his judgments? We answer in the affirmative and, as proof of this fact, we need but refer to the calamities of Martinique, San Francisco, Messina, and other places. Thus, previous to the volcanic eruption of Mount Pelee the place was given over to the most appalling wickedness and [illegible] degredation, and upon the Good Friday immediately preceding the disaster, in order to show contempt and ridicule toward the sacrifice of Christ they even went so far as to crucify a masqueraded pig, and the special correspondent of the London Times, in writing on the subject, says:

"There seems to have been good ground for describing Martinique as the wickedest spot in the West Indies." Again we are informed concerning San Francisco, "that Californian Sodom"—just previous to the earthquake which laid the City in ruins, that the entire City was given over to the most unbridled lust. Messina, just previous to the earthquake, which destroyed it and the surrounding districts, in an abominable parody written in the Christmas Number of one of the leading journals actually dared the Almighty to make Himself known by an earthquake, and in three days the earthquake came. Several other experiences were referred to by the Elder, in which he proved clearly how the judgment of God are to-day being visited because of people's iniquity.

Now, the Elder reasons thus, that if the Almighty has visited His judgments upon specific localities in the past, when iniquity of all kinds had become so imbedded in the constitution of human nature so that it was past all redemption, we want to ask the question what must the result be, when the entire world arrives at a similar condition. There is only one answer, so Mr. Johnston said, in order to be just to Sodom, to Martinique and Messina, the Lord would have to destroy the world. He then proceeded to show how that the entire world was never worse than at present, that licensed prostitution, white slavery, and all kinds of corruption were becoming very common, and that in the very nature of things reasoning from the past the world was inevitably approaching its destruction.

There will, however, be some who will remain pure and loyal and, as in the time of Lot, the angels were sent to his rescue before the City was destroyed; so in this generation, the Lord will send His angels to gather His elect and then the whole world will be refined by fire. The Elder closed with an exhortation to be ready for that time.

BILL GIBSON'S CHARGER

Private A. E. Mills of Peterborough who is with the Canadian Contingent at Salisbury Plains, writing to a local friend, gives some interesting particulars in regard to the landing of the forces. He says:

"We left the boat at 9.30, last Sunday night, and marched through Devonport and Plymouth to the London and Southwestern Railway Station, where we entrained for Amesbury, arriving there early Monday morning. After detraining, we marched seven miles to Bustard Camp on Salisbury Plain. The roads are fine and you can march a long way on them without being fatigued. Nos. 1 and 2 sections of A Company were detailed for "horse duty"; that is, we had to lead the horses belonging to the Strathcona Horse; my horse was called "Spare Ribs" and he was some charger. "Bill" Gibson sure does look fine, mounted. His horse stopped on him and he fell over its head, but the horse never bothered looking up. It just went on eating the grass.

On our march to the station, Sunday night, we were given a great time. The girls would come right up take you by the arm and march beside you. The "kids" would bother you to death, asking for Canadian coins, buttons, or anything at all as long as it was Canadian."

"Your country needs you," Private Mills advises his friend; "join the second contingent and meet me in Berlin."

ASSAULT ON TSINGTAU.

Shells Have Caused Widespread Conflagration in Town.

TOKIO, Nov. 2. — Official advices show that a desperate fight is being made at Tsingtau. For miles from shore the sea reflects the flames from the burning ship yards, gas reservoirs and houses that had been set afire by shells from the Japanese and British warships and land artillery which cover the rushes of the infantry.

The Germans are strongly entrenched, having at least thirty-five fortified positions, with 100 guns, while elaborate systems of barbed wire entanglements and subterranean mines have impeded the advance of the allies. Since Oct. 23 there have been casualties daily. The losses Saturday were slight.

A SUGGESTION FROM OTONABEE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I notice that the Township of Otonabee is considering the question of some relief to the much afflicted Belgians. There is a bountiful supply of poultry in this Township and I would suggest that the residents meet together and decide on sending a carload of poultry which I think would be one of the most acceptable gifts that could be made.

Yours truly,

Otonabee Resident.

TIPPERARY SON CAPTURES HOT SPRINGS

Several Hundred Society People Sang it For Hours at Hallowe'en Dance.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Nov. 1.—It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary," sang several hundred society people in the Homestead Hotel last night, not once but many times, until the song all warring Europe is singing was given the greatest ovation ever accorded a piece of popular music here. The crowd, as it whirled through the maddest dance of the season in the grill celebrating Hallowe'en, howled it twenty seven minutes straight by the watch, and literally sang it for four hours, with slight intermissions. It seemed to stir the people tremendously. During the longest rally the dancers shouted it when stood in their chairs along what might be termed the sidelines, waving their hands, to the rhythm, while others taking seat with the negro jubilee singers, raised the roof with sound.

Among the most delighted of those present were the Canadian Premier, Sir Robert, and Lady Borden.

"The Lies Good People Tell" Dr. Gordon's Subject To-night

He Will Have Something to Say Concerning the White Lies of Modern Society.

MEETINGS YESTERDAY

Dr. Gordon speaks this evening in the George Street Methodist church, on the subject of "The Lies Good People Tell." He will have something to say concerning "The White Lies of Modern Society."

Mr. Albert E. Greentew will sing selections which have been called for again and again by special requests, namely, "The Recessional," "Steal Away to Jesus," and "I Want to be a Christian." The meeting will begin at seven forty five o'clock and Dr. Gordon will answer a number of questions.

Two special meetings were held in connection with the Citizenship Campaign yesterday. Both of these meetings were held in the Grand Opera House and filled the building to its utmost capacity. In fact, before the time announced for the meetings to begin, namely, four o'clock in the afternoon and half past eight in the evening, the doors had to be closed against those who desired to secure admission.

Two thousand men listened to Dr. Gordon's second confidential address yesterday afternoon. Mr. E. O. Weber, of Berlin, presided and made a very careful, business-like statement, with reference to the financial affairs of the campaign, and then introduced Dr. Gordon.

The following is a brief outline of Dr. Gordon's address, "Success in its Relationship to Personal Character and the Purity of the Home Life."

I believe it was Dr. J. M. Buckley, the editor of the New York Christian Advocate, who once said that the very best lecture which he had heard on the subject of "Success," was delivered by a certain individual who was an absolute failure in everything which he had ever undertaken—except the lesson of "Success." He failed in the ministry. He failed to keep out of debt. He failed to bring up his children in the right way. There was not anything which this famous lecturer had tried to do, which was worth doing, which he did not fail in his attempt to do, except his lecture on "Success." Once it was delivered in city, church or town hall the community always yearned for the hour when the famous orator would return, and, in eloquent periods, expatiate on the all-important subject of "How to Succeed in Life."

If success is the main thing in life, it might be well for us to stop long enough to find out what this wonderful thing is. How many kinds of success are there? What is the highest interpretation of success? Which is the lowest? Does not the possession of money constitute success? Is the man who flings his conscience overboard a success? What is it to achieve a genuine success? In this discussion I present for your consideration four interpretations of success:

First.—There is the dictionary definition of success. Every young man should own a dictionary. There is a wealth of knowledge in the meaning of words. No man can speak clearly who does not think clearly; and no man can thing clearly who does not know the weight of a word. A word before it is spoken stands for a mental image. So we go to the dictionary to ascertain the meaning of the word "success," and we find that success is succession, one thing following another like "successive ages." The word also has another meaning—it is success for that which is underneath to take a position on top. And, if it is success for that which is underneath to take a positionon top, then it is success for the under crust to become the upper crust, then there is more real, genuine success to be achieved in the dawning of the twentieth century, on the continent of North America, than at any time or place since Adam first entered the Garden of Eden.

Second.—There is that which I am prone to call the individual interpretation of success. Every man has his own aim and ambition. It can be compressed and expressed in one word. That word shall be weighed and freighted with the motive and meaning of a whole life. One type of man congests the master thought of his soul in one word—Cash. A nobler type of mind writes down in syllables of eternal value—Character! One man exclaims: "Possessions, boundless and ever increasing, for me!" Whilst another, in a more practical and matter of fact way, mutters with a grim determination: "Political preferment, if I can only secure it." My neighbour, to the south, would walk amid the mountain ranges of all knowledge, science and literature. My neighbour to the north would rise above and beyond all the beacon lights of human history—up—up—Up—into the clear, serene, unclouded atmosphere of communion with God. And so his favourite song is "Nearer My God to Three."

Third.—There is that which may be spoken of as the popular interpretation of "success," and we find it in common parlance, success in the language of the street, success in its most vulgar definition. Success in lowest interpretation is simply and only and always, the ability to "get there." It doesn't make any difference how you "get there" same some, if you only get there. A man may take his Christ, his Bible, his church, his religion, his conscience, and fling the whole blessed circle of divine things overboard, but what difference does it make—if he only "gets there." To some people this is success and to such people nothing succeeds like success. Some success is scum success. Success is the survival of the fittest and not the survival of the slickest. I inquire of my neighbour, "Who is that masculine mortal who walk down the main aisle of the sanctuary every Sunday while all the folks on both sides of the aisle crane their necks and twist their bronchial tubes to gaze upon his imperial proportions?" And my neighbour replies, with a peculiar twinkle in his eye, "Don't you know him? Why that fellow is worth a million dollars." Then I venture to inquire, "Where did the fellow get his million dollars?" And my neighbour adding a wink to his twinkle, remarks, with a drawl: "It doesnt make much difference where he got it, the main fact is that, to-day possession is ninety-nine points of the social code." To get there. This is success. And nothing succeeds like such success.

But I demur. Nothing succeeds like character. Is a man a success when if every other man were the same sort of success, there would be no such thing as success? If you desire to ascertain whether or not a man is a success take him and multiply him by seven million and ask yourself the question, what kind of a Dominion would we have if every man in the Dominion of Canada were a duplicate of your original?—that man must be a dubious character whom it is not safe to duplicate.

If you are willing to accept a successful man's achievement without any regard for the moral quality, which must enter into every man's work, then every epoch produces its successful man who has no regard for conscience or for God. Leave out the moral quality and Julius Caesar was a success. Ignore the moral element and, up to a certain point, Napoleon was a supreme success. If you are disposed to the moral quality which ought to enter into every achievement, then there are, in every community, successful men whose acquaintance would be no compliment and whose companionship would be a disgrace to any man who has any regard for conscience or for character. Let us be explicit. Te man who throws his conscience overboard is a failure. No amount of money will make a bad man a success. The more colossal the collateral the more complete the collapse. The poorest man in the world is the man who has wealth and nothing else.

Fourth.—The highest interpretation of success is this, that a man should, with a due regard for the most of himself and his circumstances. This is success according to Sripture, Science and common sense. What can a man do more than to make the most of himself and his circumstances? If I can look within and bring forth all that God hath implanted of mind, will, purpose and genius. If I can reach out and around and gather up all that belongs to my condition, environment and surroundings? If I can wed these at the altar of destiny, then I shall have made the most of myself and of my circumstances. This is success. An angel could do no more. The highest compliment ever conferred on any individual in the world's history, was bestowed on a woman. "She hath done what she could."

Dr. Gordon conducted a question drawer in the Grand Opera House last evening, and in spite of the rainy weather, the building was crowded to the doors. He spoke for forty-five minutes, and during that time answered the following questions:

(1.) Ho do you account for the spread of Socialism?

(2.) Can you suggest a remedy to bridge the chasm between labour and capital?

(3.) Do you believe in evolution?

(4.) Is it necessary for a young man to be a "good fellow," in order to achieve a marked degree of success?

(5.) What do you think of the tipping system?

(6.) What is the remedy for the solution of the domestic service problem?

(7.) Are commercial travellers as a class, a credit to our Canadian citizenship?

Dr. Gordon closes his campaign on Thursday evening, and states that up to the present time, this series of meetings for depth of feeling, for the interest which has been manifested in the question drawer, for the large attendance of young men, business men and for the presence of the preachers of the local churches at the various meetings, has been the most enthusiastic and most encouraging campaign which has ever been his privilege to conduct. He has had the assistance of a splendid committee of successful business men, and everything has been done by all those interested in the project to make the campaign an actual success. The meetings of this week will doubtless grow in strength and in power.

Mrs. Gordon arrived from Winnipeg on Saturday morning, and is stopping with Dr. Gordon at the Oriental Hotel, and will accompany her husband from Peterborough to Ottawa, where the next Citizenship Campaign is to be conducted, under the auspices of the Presbyterian churches of the Capital, and in the edifice known as the Chalmers Presbyterian church.

Change the Sign.

No woman ever sees the sign on the street car—"Have Exact Fare Ready." It should be changed to something like this: "Twenty-five Cakes of Soap for Fifteen Cents."

NOTED ACTOR WAS BORN IN CITY OF PETERBOROUGH

Mr. Lawrence D'Orsay's Birthplace Was in Sister City on the Other Side of the Atlantic.

Mr. Lawrence D'Orsay, the noted English actor, who plays here to-night in "The Earl of Pawtnckett," has a peculior attachment to this City, in that he was born in Peterborough, England. He drew the attention of an Examiner reporter this afternoon to the fact that his birthpace and this City, in which he has appeared on previous occasions, form a curious paralel, as both are situated in the heart of splendid agricultural and dairying districts.

"Peterborough, (Eng.)," said Mr. D'Orsay, "is one of those beautiful old English towns, with the distinction of having within its boundaries the fine old cathedral and attendant clergy."

Mr. D'Orsay come from an old family of lawyers, his correct name being Lawrence. His grandfather built Tetton Towers, near Peterborough, and familiar to all residents of that town. His stage name he adapted from a nickname which he received at school. His fellow scholars nicknamed him little Count D'Orsay and when he came to follow the theatrical profession he took the name Lawrence D'Orsay.

"I have played in Peterborough before," remarked Mr. D'Orsay, "and I have always been well received."

According to his observations the war has thinned Canadian audiences considerably on account of hard times scare. In his peculiar manner, which is as distinguished off the stage as it is interesting upon it, he gave reasons why the war should not threaten Canada's prosperity, but rather enhance it. Then he spoke of the volunteers which he had learned were leaving Peterborough on Tuesday.

"All I can say for them is 'God bless them.'" He said: "I have just come from Ottawa and Kingston and military activity is noticeable everywhere. I know that Canada's soldiers will acquit themselves honourbaly in the war, but I hope that all of them may come back to their homes and friends again after the fighting is over."

ENJOYABLE RECITAL AT CONSERVATORY

The piano pupils of Miss Gwendolyn Smith of the Conservatory staff, gave a most enjoyable recital in the Conservatory of Music Hall on Saturday afternoon. They were assisted by Kenneth Laing, a violin pupil of Miss Palmer's.

Following was the programme:

Piano solo, "Au Clair de Lune," "Over the Mountains" —Hilda Pemberton.

Piano solo, "Christmas Dance" (C. Krutmann)— Margery Lawrence.

Violin solo, "Columbine"— Gerald Patterson.

Violin solo, "The Little Drummer"—Kenneth Laing. (pupil of Miss Edwina Palmer.)

Piano solo, "Pittypat and Tippytoe" (H. S. Cramm)—Doris Pemberton.

Piano solo, "La Grace" (Bohn) —Harold Snelgrove.

Piano solo, "Apple Blossoms" (Leona Lacoste)—Donald Carmichael.

Pupils of Miss Gwendolyn Smith.

The recital next Saturday will be given by the pupils of Miss Palmer and Miss Logan.

MR. M. WOOD WRITES HOME

Local Boy Who Enlisted With Brantford Contingent and Who is Now in England Tells of Canadian Force

Mrs. Wood, 777 Water Street, has received an interesting letter from her son, Mr. Maitland Wood, formerly of the Royal Bank here, who went to England with the first Canadian contingent. Mr. Wood is well known here, although he enlisted and went with the Brantford contingent. His many local friends, as well as all interested in the Canadian soldiers, will find the perusal of his letter interesting.

It reads in part as follows:

Salisbury Plains, England.

Dear Mother,— Received your letters. I haven't kept a diary as yet, but I intend to get one as soon as possible.

I didn't have to walk from Valcartier to Quebec. We went by train. We sailed on S. S. Tyrolia, and we were one of the first to leave Quebec, and one of the last to disembark in England. We waited in Dalhouse Bay for all the transports to get together, and were escorted by a number of battleships and cruisers. Some of them were so far away we could not see them, but we knew they were there.

We anchored the night after we left Quebec right near the spot where the Empress of Ireland sank.

I wasn't sea sick. We had drills when it wasn't rough. It was quite clam till we were in sight of England, calm till we were in sight of England. Sound for over a week. We were five weeks on board ship. We landed last night at Devenport and marched about three miles to Plymouth.

The harbour at Devonport is full of men of war being repaired after naval battles. They work day and night.

There are very few men in civilian clothes. Every man who is able and out of work is a sailor or soldier. The women clerk in the stores and do all kinds of work like that.

The people of Plymouth, mostly girls and older women, crowded right up to our lines and gave us their blessing, and some gave chocolates, tobacco and cigarettes and asked for our buttons or badges and Canadian coins for souvenirs. They were very nice to us. Everyone seems cheerful and they are sure of victory. We took the train from Plymouth to a little station; I forget its name. At every station that we stopped, the people gave us apples and chocolates, etc., and cheered us. We arrived at our station about 2 a. m. and marched to our camp, and we got here just as the soldiers encamped were getting up, 6 a.m.

That was a pretty stiff march for fellows who had been crammed aboard a ship for five weeks.

It is awfully damp here, so we have straw mattresses and wooden floors in our tents. They are building wooden barracks for us and we expect to move in them in a couple of weeks.

Maitland M. Wood.

CECIL ARNOTT IS CAPTAIN WITH THE STRATHCONAS

Captain Cecil Arnott, a Peterborough boy, graduate of the Collegiate and R. M. C., Kingston, now one of the officers of the Strathcona Horse, has written to his father, Mr. Robert Arnott, Rubidge Street, as follows:

On Board Steamer Bermudian,
16th Oct., 1914.

Dear Parents,—We are at Plymouth, England, lying at present in the harbour, and arrived here amidst the scenes of wildest enthusiasm after 16 days on the water. Why it nearly took that long to cross away back in 1801. We left Quebec on the 30th September, but spent a day and a half in the Bay of Gaspe. From there we crossed the Atlantic in three rows of 11 ships each, with a British cruiser heading each row. It was a magnificent sight, one which I think will be impossible to see again. At night we travelled with all lights blanketed.

During the voyage we worked hard during the day and had smoking concerts at night, a programme of one I enclose herewith. We had no casualities and very little sickness. The ocean was quite nice, the only rough weather being in the English channel, but it only lasted for a couple of days.

At present we are now allowed ashore and I am trusting for the appearance of one of the jolly tars to take this letter for me. Our horses went in a separate boat, the Monmouth, and my major was in command, so had the old A squadron to handle on board ship. Without a lot of boasting I can honestly say that Strathconas have one of the finest bodies of men that I have ever seen. We are all keen to get a crack at the detestable Germans, for our men are even now absolutely incensed against them, for one of the members of the regiment received a letter from his people stating that his sister, who is a nurse on the firing line, had been caught by the Germans and had both her hands cut off.

I am in the best of health and enjoyed my trip immensely. There is a tug alongside now, so I will write as soon as I can, giving more and clearer news.

ENGLISH NAVVY PLACES THE BLAME.

Dr. Turnbull's Address In The Public Library

Speaking to the local Women's Council on Friday night, one the subject "Associated Charities," Dr. Turnbull, of Toronto, deplored the manner in which some charity is carried on, and said that the most vital circumstance in administering charity was to regard all who were helped as individual, peculiar souls, and not to make them the dependents of a heartless machine or organization.

There were a large number of people who needed help, but there were also a large number of people willing to assist, and through associated charities the former could be looked after and the latter could be assured that they were not being victimized, but that their funds were being used for the relief of worthy persons. Owing to the fact that these two ends were satisfied by charitable organizations he spoke very strongly against individual and indiscriminate giving. This tended not only to neutralize the effectiveness of the charitable societies, but in many cases lead to pauperization and laziness.

At the meeting Mrs. (Rev.) Davidson presided, and at the conclusion of the address a vote of thanks was tendered the speaker on the motion of Messrs. H. Rush and Gardiner. Messrs. F. W. Miller and Langley were present at the meeting, and before the address spoke of how the ends of charity were being served in Peterborough.

ALWAYS HAVE PLENTY OF TIME

In Jerusalem, town-time and train-time are different, forty minutes different and both are variable. Train officials say the train leaves for Jaffa at 6.40 in the morning; but 6.40 by train-time is 7.20 by town time. One morning when we were starting for Egypt, states a writer in The Atlantic Monthly, we ordered our carriage for seven o'clock. Arriving at the station at 7.15 we found the train gone and the station empty. At last we roused out an official).

"Where's the train?" we demanded.

"Gone, Messieurs!"

"Gone! Youve changed the hour of the train, then?"

"Non, non, Messieurs! The train leaves at the same hour always, but the time has changed. Yesterday 6.40 train-time was 7.20 town-time. To-day 6.40 train-time is 7 town-time. No, no," and he smiled patronisingly, "the trains always leave at the same hour, our trains never change—it is the time that alters itself, not the train, Messieurs!"

We sought the telegraph office.

"To the Hapag agent in Jaffa," we dictated. "Missed train. Cancel passage on boat for Egypt. Wire date of next sailing to Port Said." This was turned into flowery Turkish and sent. A reply came soon.

"Plenty of time. Your boat will wait till to-morrow afternoon for the water is so rough she cannot land her passengers and cargo to-day. Plenty of time, if you take the train to-morrow."

MEETING OF THE W.C.T.U.

The W.C.T.U. met last Friday afternoon in the Y.W.C.A. with a good attendance of members. The president, Mrs. Whalley, was in the chair. We were pleased to welcome three new members. After some discussion it was decided to send a contribution to the Dominion Alliance from our Union.

Twenty-five Canadian Hymnals were purchased for the use of the society. Also 50 calendars for the W.C.T.U. year.

Interesting reports of the Provincial Convention held recently in Toronto were given by Mrs. Thornton and Miss Dodds. They spoke of the account given by Mr. Copeland of the Y.M.C.A. of the excellent work done by that organization at the Valcartier Camp. The W.C.T.U. has assumed the cost of one of the six men the Y.M.C.A. have sent with the first contingent.

OFFICERS SEND PAPERS FROM OLD COUNTRY

The Examiner is indebted to Major Jos. Mills, of the 57th Regiment, who is Quartermaster of the 2nd Battalion of the 1st Infantry Brigade of the Canadian Overseas Forces, and to Lieut. Gordon Campbell, of Peterborough, who is with the 48th Highlanders at Salisbury, for copies of the Plymouth papers containing glowing accounts of the landing of the Canadian troops. Our soldier boys are most favourably commented upon.

OBITUARY

FLORENCE ELIZABETH BECROFT.

Florence Elizabeth Becroft, the month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Becroft, 121 Lansdowne Street, passed away yesterday at the home of her parents. In the loss of their little daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Becroft will have the sincere sympathy of their many friends. The funeral was held this afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery.

LENA BATES.

Lena Bates, thirteen years old, a ward of the Margaret Cox Home, passed away in the Nicholls Hospital last night. The young girl had been ill about three weeks before her death. The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon at half past two o'clock from the Margaret Cox Home to the Little Lake Cemetery. Service will be conducted at the Home at two o'clock by the Rev. R. G. Peever.

MRS. RICHARD FOSTER.

The death occurred early this morning of Mrs. Agnes Foster, widow of the late Richard Foster, at her home, 218 Wolfe street, city. The late Mrs. Foster, whose maiden name was Agnes Telford, was born in Scotland, but for years has resided in Peterborough, where a very large number of friends will regret to learn of her death.

She is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Lowes, Mount Pleasant; Mrs. Wm. Ford, Toronto, and Mrs. J. Record, East City, and one brother, Thomas Telford, of Gates, N.Y. One son, Mr. John Foster, and her mother, who is 94 years of age, also survive her.

The funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery. Service at the house will be conducted by the Rev. R. G. Grobb at two o'clock.

MRS. JOHN RINGER

The funeral of the late Mrs. John Ringer, who died on Friday night, took place on Monday morning from her home on Eighth street, to the Catholic church, the service being conducted by the Rev. J. C. Mackenzie. The pallbearers were C. Holten, J. G. Barber, H. McSorley, H. McKinnon, A. Hobson and A. Grant. Many attended the funeral and beautiful flowers covered the coffin, among the wreaths being those from the officers of the headquarters staff of the 109 regiment at Kamloops, the officers of the Revelstoke company, the Loyal Order of Moose and the Woodmen of the World.

Mrs. Ringer who leaves a husband and five children, had been a resident of Revelstoke for 18 years. She was married in 1896, and her eldest daughter who is 17 years of age, was born in Revelstoke. Her husband, Sergeant Major Ringer, is in command of the supply department on the lines of communication.—Revelstoke Mail-Herald.

FRANK BROWN.

The death occurred yesterday of Mr. Frank Brown, a well-known resident of Brownton, and after whom that village was given its name. The late Mr. Brown has been for years caretaker of the St. Peter's cemetery, and is known not only to practically every Roman Catholic resident of this community, but to many others.

Deceased was 60 years of age, and was born in this city where he spent his whole life. His father was a pioneer of this section and was as well known to the past generation as the late Frank Brown was to this. The latter owned all the land upon which the houses and stores of Byersville have been erected, and a few years ago the Government enactd that the village should be known as Brownton. As the city grew Mr. Brown's holdings became more valuable, and at the time of his death he was credited with having accumlated a moderate fortune.

Deceased is survived by two brothers, John at home, and Peter in Massachusetts, as well as one sister, Mrs. James Bryson, of this city. The funeral will be held to-morrow morning at nine o'clock to the Sacred Heart Church and St. Peter's cemetery.

EMBARGO HAS CHARGED THE SUGAR MARKET

Canadian Grocer, dealing with the market situation in this week's issue, says:

Office of Publication, Toronto, October 29.—The sugar embargo put on by the British Government is the important event of the week in the eyes of the trade. Coming as it did at a time when the United Kingdom was expected to be a big factor in the market for Cubans puts an entirely new complexion on the situation, for German sugar may be expected to put the price down in the States. The figure for refined has now eased to $6.60 and $6.70 at New York. Canadian refiners continue at the same figure and are now about 1½c above American level—but ½c of this is made up by the war tax. Future is uncertain but refiners claim to be working on deliveries of high-priced raws and that prices will hold until this stock is exhausted about the end of the year; it would require a spread of almost 3c to make it profitable to bring in American sugar and pay duties.

The announced reason for the embargo, that it would drive down the price of the German product, is only accepted generally as a baff explanation. It is known that the British Government bought heavily at about 4c on the high market and also bought heavily of futures at prices which would encourage under-selling at present. The embargo protects the market and prevents what would undoubtedly have been considered losses.

Indian and Ceylon teas are still dearer and may go even higher until new arrivals come about two weeks hence. Shipments were cut off for some five weeks by the activities of German cruisers and at the same time Europe has been calling for big orders. Canadian dealers prefer to buy spots at comparatively high figures than to take afloats with the prospect of a war tax being imposed between time of purchase and landing.

Market for imported fruits is in a chaotic state to some extent, owing to arrival of new goods at prices somewhat higher than a year ago, but lower than old stocks have been held at. Houses with tag ends are making prices to suit their own position. Demand generally for fruits is heavy and lower prices are looked for on futures as well as on nuts of which there will be new arrivals from Europe in the course of a week. Dried apples, peaches, apricots and peels are all lower.

There is a strong export demand for beans in Ontario, twenty-one cars having already been bought. The price is up 20c to 25c. Farmers are getting $2.00, and in some cases better. Peas are also dearer by about 15c.

During the week 20,000 cases of eggs have gone from Ontario for the English market. This has taken the price up and cleared the egg situation when it looked very heavy. Butter and cheese are easy. Hogs are down another 50c, making about 2c since the opening of the war. Provisions have not changed this week.

Millers will evidently have to either cut off grindings in the near future or get in line for export business with lower prices. At present the situation favours Minneapolis, but the change in price in any event is not likely to affect domestic trade so long as wheat keeps as high as at present. That the big people are prepared to go slower is indicated by the fact that they have held mill feeds at the top figure when there were sales going at $2.00 to $2.00 under.

Cereals are generally dearer and there is an advance of 20c on rolled oats to the wholesaler. Deliveries have been slow, owing to the fact that some mills have been working on American oats, although things have improved in this respect during the present week.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. Charles Adam received a letter frm her son, who is at Salisbury Camp, England. He says that when the boys landed in England men, women and children climbed them, shouting buns, etc., after them.

Miss Gertrude Sanderson, for the past three months, has been visiting at the home of her uncle, Mr. W. A. Graham, East City, left to-day for her home in McLeod, Alberta. Miss Graham will accompany her as far as Toronto.

Miss Grace Gumpricht entertained a few of her musical friends on Hallowe'en. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. R. Mulligan and daughter. The costumes and decorations were appropriate to the occasion and everyone had an enjoyable evening.

Batch of Letters From the Trenches

GUNFIRE "INFERNAL MUSIC."

LIVERPOOL—Like "infernal music mixed with fire and smoke" is the way John Siatcinski, who just reached here from Russia, describes the sound of gunfire that he was forced to listen to for eighteen hours while lying in a hollow place in a field on which Russians and Germans were meeting.

Siatcinski, who lived in America, went to Russia at the outbreak of the war in an effort to find his father and get him out of the country. He could not find him and he was returning toward the German lines when he ran foul of a battle. He was in the midst of bursting shells before he knew it. He found a sort of dug-out, which the Russians had made to support a field piece and he lay down in it. He said he lay there for eighteen hours while the battle raged about him.

"The noise was terrific," he said, "but all the shells passed over me and I was uninjured."

Siatcinski, when the noise of the guns ceased crawled out of the hole and made his way to the German lines. He was arrested several times but finally managed to make his way through.

WHAT ABOUT THIS LIE?

PARIS.—A French priest who to save four British soldiers who got lost from their troop is hailed as a hero in a little village in Eastern France. The four Tommies reached the village late in the afternoon. The priest, realizing what it would mean if the Germans found him harbouring them, took the soldiers in and fed them and provided them with a place to sleep. Not long after a band of Uhlans rode into the town. Assembling the townspeople the officer in charge demanded that they tell where the British soldiers were, as they had seen them enter the town. The townspeople all knew where the four soldiers were but they looked towards their priest.

In a loud voice, so that all the townspeople would be certain to hear him, the priest declaimed any knowledge of the British soldiers.

"They must have gone towards Paris," he said, and the Uhlans rode away.

WAR NOT GOING AS GERMANS EXPECTED.

AMSTERDAM.—A letter received her by a resident from a friend near the border tells some interesting facts of the way the Germans regard the progress of the war. The letter follows:

"I have seen a letter from a very high German official who has been at the front since the beginning of the invasion of Belgium and is now invalided home, in which he says "the war is not going as we expected. The resistance of the allied forces is extraordinary and we are beginning to feel very nervous as to the result. Our (German) losses are terrible, so terrible that the Kaiserin has forbidden their disclosure. Our generals have been wantonly wasteful with our men, who have been mown down in thousands. Whilst it is impossible to say exactly what our losses are, I should estimate them between 350,000 and 400,000 altogether. If it continues at this rate much longer we shall be quite unable to meet Russia with any hope of success."

COULD NOT HELP GOING TO WAR

PETROGRAD.—A captured German soldier gives a very interesting account of the feeling of some of his countrymen with regard to the war. In reply to a question of why he had gone to war, he said:

"Well, we could not help it. We were told to go and had to obey. Our Emperor did not want war. All this trouble was brought about by our officers and the Austrians. But both are now hiding behind our backs. They care very little what happens to us."

HELIGOLAND DIFFERENT.

LONDON.—The Heligoland of today is a vastly different sort of a place to what it was prior to beginning of the war, according to a traveller who has reached here. From the lively, popular seaside resort a few months ago it has been turned into a grim looking fortification, fairly bristling with guns. No signs of gaiety are seen. All the visitors have had to withdraw and also all the inhabitants of the island who are not detained on military duty have been ordered to depart.

The reason for this is that it is planning to prevent the killing of any non-combatants in case of a battle.

Two hospital nurses are the only women on the island.

THE BAUER OF AUSTRIA

The most interesting of Austrian types and the backbone of the dual monarchy is the bauer. In social life he occupies somewhat the same position as the old English yeoman, farming his own land, and in many cases enjoying a far more substantial fortune than the nobility. The bauer has a strict social code of his own, mixing neither with the labourers on one hand nor the aristocracy on the other, is apparently quite content with his lot and takes a pride in his ability to provide almost all the necessaries of life from the productions of his own land, even in many cases, growing the flax from which his women folk weave all of the household clothing.

BIERBAUER GOES TO WEST LEAGUE.

Lonie Bierbauer, first baseman for the London team in the Canadian League ast year, has been obtained by Lincoln, in the Western League, and will report to that club for spring training. Louie was drafted by the Lincoln Club, London securing $500 for his release. London pagnates are much peeved over the price received for Louie, claiming that they should have secured $900. The Canadian League paid fees for a class B rating but the magnates were informed by Secretary Farrell that the best rating possible was Class C.

Teddy Baldwin, the awkward youth who cavorted around third base for Hamilton during the past summer, has been drafted by Memphis of the Southern Association.

FARMERS HOLDING WHEAT

North Dakotans Think that Continuance of War will Enable them to get Better Prices.

Grand Forks, N.D., Nov. 2.—A condition without parallel in railroading in this section for many years now prevails, the railways having already commenced reducing their grain crews because of failure of the farmers to market their grain.

The farmers have elected to hold their grain for higher prices which they are confident will come as a result of the European war situation. Being in a position to keep their grain they look upon the delay as a good investment.

Shipments of grain through Grand Forks from the north half of North Dakota, are far below normal for this period of the year.

Not only has the prospect of better prices influenced the farmers to hold their prices, but the fact that excellent weather has prevailed has made it possible for them to continue autumn ploughing longer than usual. The indications are that autumn ploughed acreage will be even greater than last year.

But the railroads should have a very heavy all winter business. The grain doubtless will begin pouring in when the frost comes, and then the roads will get the business that they are missing now.

The Allies Have Gained New Ground
Turkey's Apology Does Not Satisfy

Allies Gaining Ground Steadily

Have Had Better of Past Few Days' Fighting—Enemy Foiled in Fierce Line Between Dixmude and Ypres.

PROGRESS IN EAST

PARIS, Nov. 2.—From the North Sea to Alsace the armies of Belgium, France and Britain had distinctly the better of the hard fighting of to-day and yesterday. The official reports show that the allies made progress all along the line, and that the German effort weakened in the past 24 hours.

On Sunday the German armies attacked desperately in Flanders, in Northern France, along the hills of Champagne and along the Meuse, but failed to break the allied line at any point, and lost ground in determined counter-attacks by General Joffre's troops. As formerly, the increased violence of their offensive was useless. To-day the Germans were less active between the North Sea and the Oise, and the allies moved forward slightly in Belgium, near Dixmude.

The hardest fighting has been between Dixmude and Ypres and southward in the regions of Lille and Arras. The Germans appear to have abandoned their plan of attacking west of Dixmude, and to have concentrated strength west and south of Ypres, but the net result of two days' operations is a strong position by the allies defending the line in Belgium.

Taken Four Times.

The stubbornness of the fighting along this line may be gathered from the fact that the town of Messines, which the Germans now occupy, has been taken and retaken no less than four times since last Saturday, each time with enormous losses in killed or wounded.

The fighting in Northern France had a similar result, the allies withstanding terrific attacks near Arras and to the southeast.

The fighting near the hinge of the battle line is again becoming of great importance. Along the Aisne in the region between Soissons and Laon the Germans appear to have reinforced their troops in an attempt to gain success denied them in Belgium. The official reports state that the attack has been fruitless and that the allies have moved forward toward Laon, a key to the German fortified position held for more than seven weeks. Similar operations a little to the east on the heights of the Aisne ended in a repulse of the Germans.

Progress in East.

Further progress is reported by the French at the east of the line. The Germans have been driven from the heights at Ban de Sapt, from which they shelled the town of St. Dic. The Government's communiques indicate that the Germans are as unable to gain ground in this quarter as they are in the west, and that the Verdun-Toul line is still well protected by the French. The Germans have bombarded the French lines with heavy guns, but the bombardment had little effect. Their heavy guns were used near Rheims and in the Argonne but without serious damage to the allies.

There are unofficial reports that the allies have cut communications with Ghent and Ostend; that Lille has been taken from the Germans, and that the left bank of the Yser has been evacuated by the invaders.

DELUGED THE ENEMY

Belgians Tricked Germans and Then Opened the Sluices of the Yser, Wiping Out the Wurtemburg Brigade

DREADFUL CARNAGE

PARIS, Nov. 2.—First-hand information of the stupendous carnage which followed the opening of the sluices on the Yser has just reached me. After eight days of the most sanguinary fighting in military history, the river became choked with bodies, trees, sunken barges and dead horses. The entire Wurtemberg brigade was able to cross the river using the corpses of men and horses as their sole bridge.

Only Suspended Hats.

When the infantry were on the western bank of the river the German artillery shelled the first line of trenches, and when no reply came therefrom, the Wurtembergers, shouting their war cry, charged the trenches. It was only when they arrived at the breastworks that they discovered the Belgians had left, leaving behind their hats propped on sticks.

Before the Germans were able to regain the river banks, the Belgians opened the sluices, and hundreds of tons of water rushed upon the entrapped enemy, carrying with it roots of houses, uprooted trees and thousands of dead bodies.

French Guns Add Terror.

Shrieking with terror, the Wurtembergers attempted to flee, but when they were wading breast-high in the water, French 3-inch guns, posted on a nearby slope, opened fire, and with the exception of a mere handful who struggled to the Belgian lines, the entire brigade was wiped out by fire and water.

The valley is now a tranquil sheet of water. The only visible objects thereon are a few telegraph poles and a number of corpses floating on the surface.

RUSSIAN AND TURKISH TROOPS ENGAGED TO-DAY

Special Cable:

ROME, NOV. 3.—IT IS REPORTED HERE THAT THE RUSSIAN AND TURKISH TROOPS ARE ALREADY ENGAGED ON THE FRONTIER NEAR TREBIZOND. THIS CLASH IS DECLARED TO HAVE FOLLOWED INSTRUCTIONS ISSUED BY THE CZAR TO HIS CAUCAUSIAN ARMY, IMMEDIATELY TO ATTACK THE TURKS.

INFORMATION REACHING HERE SAYS THAT RUSSIA, IN EXPECTATION THAT TURKEY WOULD REFUSE TO REMAIN NEUTRAL, HAD ALREADY MASSED A LARGE ARMY ON THE BORDER PREPARED FOR ANY EVENTUALITY.

CAN'T CARRY GUNS IN SMITH

By-law to That Effect in Neighbouring Township is to Be Enforced by the Authorities

There is a by-law in force in the Township of Smith forbidding the carrying of guns. Notwithstanding that residents of this City and others are making a practice of wandering out into that Township with firearms very much in evidence. To date no exception has been taken by the authorities to this, but henceforth the law will be enforced to the limit and all who carry guns in Smith Township are warned that they will be prosecuted indiscriminately. The Township authorities have determined to stop the carrying of guns in the Township. They are prepared to adopt the most drastic measures within their power to enforce the law, and this is to be regarded as an ultimatum to all concerned.

MANY SERIOUS DEFEATS FOR BOER REBELS

Since the Newest Uprising Broke Out—Commandant De Villiers Has Done Good Work

LONDON, Nov. 2.— Since October 27, when the Government of South Africa was confronted with an uprising on the part of Generals De Wet and Beyers, following the uprising of Boer leaders of lesser note, the rebels have met with three serious repulses. On that day, October 27, General Botha met and crushed Beyers' commando in the west part of the ranavaal. On October 30 Col. Bris announced that the artiz uprising in Cape Colony had been broken and many rebels had surrendered.

Now comes the third defeat administered in the Transvaal.

Colonel Alberts has defeated the drebels in the Lichtenberg district of the Transvaal, killing 18, wounding 30 and capturing 240. Among the captured is Commandant Claussens.

Commandant De Villiers was out reconnoitering when he met a strong rebel commando with white flags attached to their rifles. De Villiers approached the band, whereupon the rebels attacked him and captured 110 of his men. The rebels then advanced against Col. Alberts' force from two directions, but Alberts' defeated them and chased them twenty miles across the border. In their flight the rebels discarded their carts and bicycles.

SUSPEND ENTIRE SENIOR CLASS

PETOSKEY, Mich., Nov. 2.—Suspension of nearly every member of the senior class of Petoskey high school including 18 girls and some members of other classes, was ordered last Friday by the high school faculty. The action followed the appearance in the assembly room of the boys wearing "middy" blouses and the girls in shirts, vests, collars and ties.

Turkey's Apology Does Not Satisfy

ITALY WILL BE INVOLVED

If Turks Declare War Italians Will Stand With Britain in Defence of African Colonies

WAR FEVER SPREADS

ROME, Nov. 2.—I am informed authoritatively that Italy and Great Britain have agreed to stand together for the common defence of their colonies in Africa if Turkey goes to war. The understanding may become operativ at any moment.

Developments in the Turkish situation are anxiously awaited. It is now openly admitted that Turkey's intervention is bound to alter Italy's attitude. Italian interests in North Africa, along the Red Sea and in the Aegean are as gravely menaced as are England's.

In Government circles there is no longer an attempt to deny that in Lybia, Italy is as much threatened by Turkey as England is in Egypt, while Somaliland and Erithrea are surrounded by British possessions. Hence it is obviously indispensable for Italy and England, close friends and neighbours, to unite for mutual defence.

Premier Salandra has not yet been instructed by the King to form a new Cabinet, but the King and the Premier are conferring with the leading statesmen and influential men of all parties. Even the Socialist, Bissolati, a rabid anti-neutral, has been summoned, as well as Giolitti, who arrives from Turin to-morrow.

A great coalition Cabinet formed of strong men from all parties will probably result from the conferences now going on. It is not unlikely that in the new Salandra Cabinet Sonnino will receive the Treasury portfolio, and Imperialy be named as Foreign Minister.

The war fever has increased enormously since Turkey attacked Russia in the Black Sea, and since it became known that Turkish troops are moving toward Egypt. The whole aspect of Italian policy has changed. The Government now has a positive, definite reason for bowing to the will of the people and entering the war on the side of the Triple Entente.

Presentation To Buglers To-day

Before the Local Contingent Left on the Noon Train for Kingston

The Bugle Band of the 57th Regiment presented military brushes and the following address to Buglers Spenceley and Stewart this morning at the Armouries before their departure for the concentration camp at Kingston. The presentation took place in the Bugle Band quarters. Afterwards the two members of the band joined the local contingent for the participation in the departure. They left on the 12.13 noon C.P.R. express, a big crowd giving Peterborough's volunteers a grand send-off. The address was as follows:

Buglers Spenceley and Stewart:

Dear Comrades,—A few weeks ago you were with us when we said goodbye to one of our members who was leaving with the First Canadian Contingent. Now you are following him with the Second Canadian Over-Seas Force, and it is to you that our farewell must be said. It is with mingled pride and regret that we bid you goodbye; pride in having our organization represented at the front, and regret that we are losing in you useful and popular members of the Band. We know that in you we have representatives that the others will have to look up to.

We trust that you will be spared to come back to us after you have entertained the Berlin populace with a few bugle calls on the allies' march down Unter Den Linden, and as a souvenir of our regard for you, we ask you to accept these military brushes. —Wishing you a safe return, your comrades of

THE 57TH REGIMENT BUGLE BAND.

Powers Demand That German Officers Be Dismissed and Army Be Demobilized—Ambassadors Leave Constantinople But Negotiations Continue.

TURKISH CABINET SPLIT

The Ambassadors of Britain, France and Russia left Constantinople last night in conformity with instructions from their Governments and the Servian Minister is also leaving. The Turkish Ambassador to Britain was handed his passports.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Grand Vizier of Turkey has apologized on behalf of his Government for the warlike operations of the Turkish fleet under German commanders in the Black Sea, but it was stated authoritatively this evening that the Porte will have to go very much farther than this before the powers of the Triple Entente will agree to resume friendly relations with the Ottoman Government. The Turkish Ambassador to Great Britain, Tewfik Pasha, was handed his passports to-day.

It was disclosed in a statement issued by the French Government this evening that Turkey, in reply to a note presented by Great Britain, Russia and France, on Friday last agreed to recall her fleet from the Black Sea, but refused to dismiss the German officers from her ships, and that, as it was believed she could not maintain a passive attitude without doing this, the Ambassadors of the Entente powers demanded their passports and left Turkey. The Servian Minister will leave to-night or to-morrow, which seems to indicate that the prospects of an amicable settlement are not very hopeful.

Demands of the Powers.

There is every reason to believe that, despite the apology of the Grand Vizier, which it is understood comes from the peace party in the Turkish Cabinet, and may not be adhered to by Enver Pasha, the Minister of War and his Young Turk followers, France, Great Britain and Russia not only will demand reparation for the warlike operations of the Turkish fleet in the Black Sea, but will insist that Turkey's entire fleet, or, at any rate, the cruisers Goeben, Breslau and Hamilieh, be put out of commission until after the war, Turkey's security being guaranteed in the meantime. It is suggested also that demobilization of the Turkish army would be demanded, which would mean that those troops which have crossed the Egyptian frontier must be withdrawn.

However, as the terms of Turkey's apology, which apparently was made in London, have not been published and must be considered by the Entente powers, there seems to be a long way to go before diplomatic relations between the Ottoman Government and the allies can be resumed.

An added difficulty to the situation is that the Ambassadors of the powers have left Constantinople, which will make it troublesome to ascertain whether the whole Turkish Cabinet concurs in any agreement reached.

Three Ministers for Peace.

The efforts of the three Ministers in the Turkish Cabinet to prevent a war are in line with previous indications that the Ottoman Government was seriously split on the issue of war or neutrality. The Ministers of Finance, Interior and Agriculture have been opposed to war, but the Ministers of War and Navy are said to have been strongly in favour of striking for Germany.

Hope Not Abandoned.

It had been intimated during the day that Great Britain was delaying hostilities waiting for an eleventh-hour amend from the Porte. That this would be forthcoming was seriously doubted. Nevertheless, in the absence of a formal declaration of war, all hope had not been abandoned, even though the British press treated the situation as beyond repair.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

"Angry? Have I ever been angry with you, darling? Could I ever be?"

She shook her head.

"No; but you might if I disappointed you now."

"Impossible! Of course, the world's work demands a chief, a head, a leader, to come after me and take up the reins when they fall from my hands, but—"

"Even if it's a girl—only a girl—you'll love me just the same?"

His answer was a pressure of her hand, which he brought to his lips and held there a long minute. She smiled again, and in the following silence their souls spoke together though their lips were mute.

But Beta had her work to do those days as well as Allan.

While he planned the public works of the colony and directed their construction at night, or made his routine weekly trip into the Abyss for more and ever more of the Folk — a greatly shortened trip, now that he knew the way so well and seeded stop below ground only long enough to rest a bit and take on oil and fuel — she was busy with her teaching of the people.

They had carefully discussed this matter, and had decided to impose English bodily and arbitrarily upon the colonists. Every evening Beatrice gathered a class of the younger men and women, always including the children, and for an hour or two drilled them in simple words and sentences.

She used their familiar occupations, and taught them to speak of fishing, metal-working, weaving, dyeing, and the preparation of food.

And always after they had learned a certain thing, in speaking to them she used English for that thing. The Folk, keen-witted and retentive of memory as barbarians often are, made astonishing strides in this new language.

They realized fully now that it was the speech of their remote and superior ancestors, and that it far surpassed their own crude and limited tongue.

Thus they learned with enthusiasm; and before long, among them in their own daily lives and labours, you could hear words, phrases and bits of song in English. And at sound of this both Allan and the girl thrilled with pride and joy.

Allan felt confident of ultimate success along this line.

"We must teach the children, above all," he said to her one day. "English must come to be a secondary tongue to them, familiar as Meru-caan. The next generation will speak English from birth and gradually the other language will decay and perish—save as we record it for the sake of history.

"It can't otherwise, Beatrice. The superior tongue is always bound to replace the inferior. All the science and technical work I teach these people must be explained in English.

"They have no words for all these things. Bridges, flying-machines, engines, water-pipes for the new aqueduct we're putting in to supply the colony from the big spring up back there, tools, processes, everything of importance, will enforce English. The very trend of their whole evolution will drive them to it, even if they were unwilling, which they aren't."

"Yes, of course," she answered. "Yet, after all, we're only two—"

"We'll be three soon."

She blushed.

"Three, then, if you say so. So few among so many—it will be a hard fight, after all."

"I know, but we shall win. Old man Adams and one or two others, at the time of the mutiny of the 'Bounty' taught English to all their one or two score wives and numerous children on Pitcairn.

"The Tahitan was soon forgotten, and the brown half-breeds all spoke good English right up to the time of the catastrophe, when, of course, they were all wiped out. So you see, history proves the thing can be done—and will be."

Came an evening toward the beginning of spring again—an evening of surpassing loveliness, soft, warm, perfumed with the first crimson blossoms of the season — when Bremilu ran swiftly up the path to the cliff-top and sought Allan in the palisaded enclosure, working with his men on the new aqueduct.

"Come, master, for they seek you now!" he panted.

"Who?"

"The mistress and old Gesafam, the aged woman, skilled in all maladies! Come swiftly, O Kromno!"

Allan started, dropped his lantern, and turned very white.

"You mean—"

"Yea, master! Come!"

He found Beatrice in bed, the bronze lamp shining on her face, pale as his own.

"Come, boy!" she whispered. "Let me kiss you just once before — before—"

He knelt, and on her brow his lips seemed to burn. She kissed him, then with a smile of happiness in all her pain said:

"Go, dearest! You must go now!"

And, as he lingered, old Gesafam, chattering shrilly, seized him by the arm and pushed him toward the doorway.

Dazed and in silence he submitted. But when the door had closed behind him, and he stood alone there in the moonlight above the rushing river, a sudden exaltation thrilled him.

He knelt again by the rough sill and kissed the doorway of the house of pain, the house of life; and his soul flamed into prayer to whatsoever Principle or Power wrought the mysteries of the ever-changing universe.

And for hours, keeping all far away, he held his vigil; and the stars watched above him, too, mysterious and far.

But with the coming of the dawn, hark! a cry within! The cry — the thrilling, never-to-be-forgotten, heart-wringing cry of the first-born!

"Oh, God!" breathed Allan, while down his cheeks hot tears gushed unrestrained.

The door opened. Gesafam beckoned.

Trembling, weak as a child, the man faltered in. Still burned the lamp upon the table. He saw the heavy masses of Beta's hair upon the pillow of deerskin, and something in his heart yearned toward her as never until now.

"Allan!"

Choking, unable to formulate a word, shaking, he sank beside the bed, buried his face upon it, and with his hand sought hers.

"Allan, behold your son!"

Into his quivering arms she laid a tiny bundle wrapped in the finest cloth the Folk could weave of soft palm-fibres.

His son!

Against his face he held the child, sobbing. One hand sheltered it; the other pressed the weak and trembling hand of Beatrice.

And as the knowledge and the joy and pain of realisation, of full achievement, of fatherhood, surged through him, the strong man's tears baptised the future master of the race!

CHAPTER XX DISASTER!

That, evening, the evening of the same day, Allan presented the man-child to his assembled Folk.

Eager, silent, awed, the white barbarians gathered on the terrace, all up and down the slope of it, before the door of their Kromn's house, waiting to behold the son of him they all obeyed, of him who was their law.

Allan took the child and bore it to the doorway; and in the presence of all he held it up, and in the yellow moonlight dedicated it to their service and the service of the world.

"Listen, O folk of the Meru-caans!" he cried. "I show you and I give you, now, into your keeping and protection forever, this first-born child of ours!

"This is the first American, the first of the ancient race that once was, the same race whence you, too, have descended, to be born in the upper world! His name shall be my name — Allan. To him shall be taught all good and useful things of body and of mind. He shall be your master, but more than master: he shall be your friend, your teacher, your strength, your guide in the days yet to come! To you his life is given. Not for himself shall he live, not for power or oppression, but for service in the good of all!

"To you and your children is he given, to those who shall come after, to the new and better time. When we, his parents, and what you, too, shall all be gone from here, this man-child shall carry on the work with your descendants. His race shall be your race, his love and care all for your welfare, his every thought and labour for the common good!

"Thus do I consecrate and give him to you, O my Folk! And from this hour of his naming I give you, too, a name. No longer shall you be Meru-caans, but now Americans again. The ancient name shall live once more. He, an American, salutes you. Americans! You are his elder brothers, and between you the bond shall never loosen till the end.

"I have spoken unto you. This is the Law!"

In silence they received it, in silence made obeisance: and, as Allan once more carried the child back to its mother, silently they all departed to their homes and labours.

From that moment Allan believed his rule established now by stronger bonds of love than any force could be. And through all the intoxication of success and consummated power he felt a love for Beatrice, who had rendered all this possible, such as no human words could ever say.

Allan, Junior, grew lustily, waxed strong, and filled the colony with joy. A new spirit pervaded Settlement Cliffs. The vital fact of new life born there, an augury of strength and increase and world-dominance once more, cemented all the social bonds.

An esprit de corps, an admirable and powerful cooperative sense developed, and the work of reconstruction, of learning, of progress went on more rapidly than ever.

Beatrice, seated at the door of Cliff Villa with the child upon her knee, made a veritable heart and centre for all thought and labour. She and Allan, Junior, became objects almost of worship for the simple Folk.

It was heart-touching to see the eager interest, the love and veneration of the people, the hesitant yet fascinated way in which they contemplated this strange boy, blue-eyed and with yellow hair beginning to grow already; this, the first child they had ever seen to show them what the children of their one-time ancestors had been.

The hunters, now growing very expert in the use of firearms, fairly overloaded the larder of the villa with rare game-birds and venison. The fishers outdid themselves to catch choice fish for their master's family. And every morning fruits and flowers were piled at the doorway for their rulers' pleasure.

Even then, when so much still remained to do, it seemed as though the Golden Age of Allan's dreams already was beginning to take form. These were by far the happiest days Beta and he had ever lived. Love, work, hopes and plans filled their waking hours.

Put far away were all discouragements and fears. All dangers seemed forever to have vanished. Even the portent of the signal-fires, from time to time seen on the northern or eastern horizons, were ignored. And for a while all was peace and joy.

How little they foresaw the future; how little realised the terrible, the inevitable events now already closing down about them!

Allan made no further trips into the Abyss for about two months and a half. Before bringing any more of the people to the surface, he preferred to put all things in readiness for their reception.

He now had a working force of fifty-four men and twelve women. Including his own son, there were some seven children at Settlement Cliffs. The labour of civilisation waxed apace.

With large plans in view, he dammed the rapids and set up a small mill and power-plant, the precursor of a far larger one in the future. Various short flights to the ruins of neighbouring towns put him in possession, bit by bit, of achinery which he could adapt into needful forms.

In a year or two he knew he would have to clear land and make preparations for agriculture. A gist-mill would soon be essential. He could not always depend upon the woods and streams for food for the colony.

There must be cultivation of fruits and grains; the taming of wild fowl, cattle, horses, sheep and goats — but no swine: and a regular evolution up through the stages again by which the society of the past had reached its climax.

And to his ears the whirring of his turbine as the waters of New Hope River swirled through the penstocks, the spinning of the wheels, the slapping of the deerskin belting made music only second to the voices of Beatrice and his son.

Allan brought piecemeal and fitted up a small dynamo from some extensive ruins to south-eastward. He brought wiring and several still intact incandescent lights. Before long Cliff Villa shone resplendent, to the awe and marvel of the Folk.

But Allan made no mystery of it. He explained it all to Zangamon, Bremilu and H'yemba, the smith; and when they seemed to understand, bade them tell the rest.

Thus every day some new improvement was installed, or some fresh knowledge spread among the colonists.

June had drawn on again, and the hot weather had become oppressive, before Allan thought once more of still further trips into the Abyss. Beatrice tried to dissuade him. Her heart shrank from further separation, risk and fear.

"Listen, dearest," she entreated as they sat by young Allan's bedside, one sultry, breathless night. "I think you've risked enough; really I do. You've got a boy now to keep you here, even if I can't! Please don't go! Follow out the plan you spoke to me about yesterday, but don't go yourself!"

"The plan?"

BAD OPERATION AVOIDED
By Timely Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Sowers' Own Statement.

Hodgdon, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Hodgdon, Maine.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

A NEGLECTED COLD WILL VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be only a slight cold. Perhaps you start to cough, a little irritation in the throat ensues, then it gets lower down, settles on the lungs and bronchitis sets in, and you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color, and you cough persistently.

If you let the simple cold run it will surely develop into something very serious, and perhaps consumption.

On the first sign of a cold or cough go to your dealer and procure a bottle of

DR. WOOD'S
NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

A few doses will convince you that it is just the remedy you require.

Mrs. J. W. Pearsons, Amherst, N.S., writes: "Some time ago my daughter had a very bad cough which settled on her chest. She had no rest day or night. I gave her everything I could think of, but without doing her the least bit of good. At last I thought of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle for her. She had not taken half of it before she got relief, and with the remainder she was completely cured. Now when any of the family have a cough we always know what to get for it."

Dr. Wood's is 25c and 50.

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG FILLED MANY POSTS

Had a Brilliant Career at Military College and Made Cavalry Tactics a Special Study

Cameron Brig in the Kingdom of Fife has been well acquainted with the Haigs for many generations, and it was there that Sir Douglas, Commander of the First Army Corps in the British Expeditionary Force, was born in 1861. In due time he went to Clifton and from there to Brasenose College, Oxford, but the army was his love. He entered the Royal Military College, and very early in his career gave promise of what was to come, for he passed first out of Sandhurst, gaining the highly-prized Anson Memorial Sword.

In 1885 Haig was gazetted to the 7th Hussars, and four years later was lucky enough to get on the Soudan Expedition, where he was present at Atbara and Khartoum. In that campaign he was mentioned in despatches, as well as getting the Egyptian Medal.

Sir Douglas is believed to be a very scientific soldier, and has written a book called, "Cavalry Tactics." His authorship gained for him the name of "Wan Haig." He duly passed the qualifying examination for entrance to the Staff College and then had to go before a medical board for fitness. The board announced he was color blind and although he got specialists both in England and France to prove that he was not color blind, the board was obdurate. It seemed certain that he would never be able to write "P.S.C." after his name, when the late Duke of Cambridge, hearing of the matter, gave him the Commander-in-Chief's nomination, which exempted the recipient from all examinations. The situation was saved. Haig went to the College and passed out brilliantly.

On the outbreak of the South African War, Captain Haig was appointed staff officer to Sir John French, and was at Elandslaagte, Colesburg, the relief of Kimberley, Paardeberg, and after the cavalry division was broken up, had command of all the different columns in Cape Colony. The work was tremendous; but apparently it agreed with him, for the harder he worked and the less he slept the fitter he seemed to keep.

After the war he went to India as inspector-general of cavalry. There was much grumbling over the appointment. The India cavalry thought he was much too young, and that he knew too little about India. They shortly acknowledged they were wrong. Though he succeeded that brilliant cavalry soldier, Sir Edward Locke-Elliott, Haig was a great success, and only returned home in order to become the director of military training at the army headquarters.

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG

Five years ago he became chief of the staff in India, and on General Smith-Dorrien going to the southern command General Haig succeeded him at Aldershot. Smith-Dorrien had done much for Aldershot. Haig did more, and it is certain that the troops there were never so efficient as under this young and brilliant soldier. But he made sad the hearts of many by publishing a very strong order on the subject of cigarette smoking.

BRITAIN OWES MUCH TO BELGIAN PEOPLE

It would hardly be too much to say that Britain owes some of her most important manufactures to the people of Belgium.

In early days Britain was not exactly a manufacturing nation, but owed its prosperity to its flocks and herds. It was famous for its sheep, the wool of which was exported to Flanders for the manufacture of cloth.

Large colonies of Flemings entered England at one time or another, either brought over for a set purpose or coming as refugees. Henry I. colonized parts of South Wales, from which he had expelled the Welsh, with Flemings, who were of no little use in keeping that one-time turbulent country in order.

Flemish mercenaries were employed by Stephen in his civil war, and it was during the time of Henry I. that a number of Flemings, rendered homeless by the irruption of the sea, crossed over to Norfolk and founded the worsted industry.

The Bell Horse

A necessary part of every army mule train is the bell horse. He carries no burden save a great responsibility, and a clear-sounding bell, and all mules destined to serve his Majesty are trained to follow him. A white animal is nearly always selected, as for some reason or other mules follow this color most faithfully.

Pack mules become much attached to the bell horse of their train, and refuse to move either forwards or backwards if he is not leading. For this reason the death of the bell horse is a great calamity.

Cured of Piles and Eczema

By Using Three Boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Abram Buhr, Herbert, Sask., writes.—"I want to say that I was troubled with eczema and piles and suffered greatly from the itching, burning sensations caused by these annoying ailments. I sent for a free sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this did me so much good that I bought three boxes more, and after using same was cured of both eczema and piles."

This is the kind of letters we receive daily from people who have been cured of these distressing skin diseases by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. No matter how skeptical you might be, you could not read these letters for many days without concluding that Dr. Chase's Ointment is undoubtedly the most prompt relief and certain cure for these ailments.

If you have doubts send for a free sample box and be convinced. It was by use of a free sample that Mr. Buhr was convinced of the merits of this treatment. For sale at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

WOMEN WANT TO HELP

Hundreds Volunteer For Work at Home or Abroad

Remarkable testimony to the eagerness with which women want to fill the places of men who have been called away from Britain to fight for their country is given by the Women's Emergency correspondent, who under the leadership of the Duchess of Marlborough, has compiled a register of upwards of 15,000 names of women who desire to be of service. "However diverse the jobs they seek," says Mrs. Flora Annie Steel, in writing of the work of the Women's Emergency Corps, "may be guessed by the entries of over 100 interpreters—none of whom speak less than four languages—and some of them eleven—of more than 200 expert horsewomen ready at a few hours notice to serve and who are quite capable of managing or working in remount camps."

"Many of these, having shot and camped all over the world, are eminently suited for rough work. Then there are 150 expert motorcyclists eager for patrol or despatch work, and endless stalwart young women for such jobs as omnibus conducting, milk deliveries, gardening and the farm work that is generally done by lads of 19 and 20.

FLYING BY NIGHT

Military Airman's Calling Certainly a Most Perilous One

The aeroplane that flies by night is no longer secure from detection, because of the use of vertical searchlights. Still, the chance of its being hit is not sufficiently great to deter brave men from undertaking night scouting and reconnoitring.

Generally speaking, the military aeroplane stands an even chance of escaping destruction in an ordinary war; though in a war where a reckelessness of death is shown, like the present one, the pilot in charge of a fighting aeroplane may have orders that, if he misses hitting an enemy's airship or aeroplane with his light quick-firing gun, he must be prepared to ram it or charge headlong into it in which case death is almost certain.

Hatred For His Traitor Son

There is recorded an instance of stern patriotism from Alsace. An old French peasant welcomed the French army, gave the soldiers refreshment, and then urged them "to go out now to battle and kill my son, who serves with the German army."

LOOK!

If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial? Especially if you could try it for fifty cents!

Pepo is the discovery!

Pepo are little tablets, neatly wrapped in air and germ-proof silver foil. They contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed with the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they search out the hidden and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the capillaries and tiny air cells in the lungs.

In a word, while the liquid or tablet you get in the usual way passes through your stomach, Pepo vapour goes there direct, and in some mysterious way works a healing.

Pepo are entirely distinct from the old fashioned liquid cough cures, which you merely swallowed into the stomach, and never reach the lungs. Pepo treatment of coughs and colds is direct treatment.

If you have not yet tried Pepo, cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it with 5c. stamps to any return postage) to Pepo Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Pepo at 50c. box.

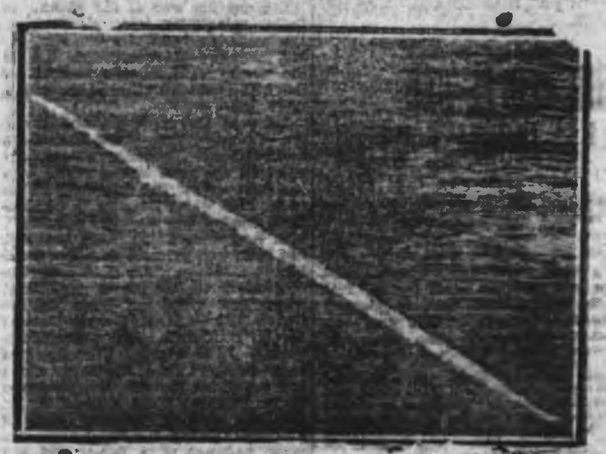
Berlin a City of Sorrow

It is said that practically every body in Berlin is related to someone killed in the war, and that the vast amount of mourning exhibited has a depressing effect on the people.

A WEAK HEART

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefit.



Track Left by Deadly Torpedo—The sinking of the British cruisers which have been sunk by torpedoes during the war once again brings into prominence Admiral Sir Percy Scott's famous and much-criticised dictum in which he said that the underwater craft and the aircraft would play a greater part in the next war than the heavily armed battleship.

HOW KITCHENER LOVES WAR CORRESPONDENTS

(By Herbert Corey.)

LONDON, Oct. 28.—There is no doubt that Lord Kitchener has been maligned. People have said that he has no sense of humour. They charge that he is as cold as an iron wedge on a frosty morning. The truth is, of course, that he fairly bubbles over with humour. He will have his little joke. If you don't believe it, ask any war correspondent.

"It's all right now," said all the war correspondents several weeks ago. "The War Office has consented to let us go to the front. Of course, at the beginning there was some difficulty—"

"There had been a great deal of difficulty. Kitchener didn't want any war correspondents with his army, and he said so. In the days of the Boer War General Kitchener had some slight difficulty with one Winston Churchill, who wrote pieces for the paper. What Mr. Churchill wrote about General Kitchener ultimately landed Mr. Churchill in jail. More ultimately still, it landed him in the Cabinet office he now fills. Neither General Kitchener nor any other British general has ever forgiven Mr. Churchill or any other war correspondent.

War Office Inflexible.

"But," the war correspondents urged, "this is the greatest war of centuries. You surely cannot hope to stifle the press? You would not attempt to deprive the British reading world of the true and authentic story of this war—fresh and fresh?"

They didn't urge that to "K.", of course. No one gets near enough Kitchener to urge anything. But they put their point of view eloquently before everyone else in authority. The London papers carried many editorials about it. The War Office was inflexible.

"Then we'll go with the French army," said the war correspondents.

Everyone in France welcomed them. But just as the war correspondents had proved their ability to read and write French and ride a horse, and repeat "Peter Piper picked a peck" without slipping, word came from Kitchener that this thing must not be. He had once called Bennet Burleigh, the greatest correspondent of them all, a "camp follower" in an official report—and that in reporting an incident in which Burleigh had saved the life of a valuable officer. He hasn't changed his opinion of the breed.

"Oh, very well," said the correspondents. "We'll go with the Belgian army."

Driven from Belgium.

So they swarmed all over Belgium. As soon as Kitchener began to read stories in the papers he sent word to Belgium that the war correspondents must be eliminated at once. The correspondents say that he threatened to withdraw all British aid if this were not done. This is probably an ill-natured fling. They say that of him every time he comes to cross purposes with any general of the allied armies.

Anyhow, they all came back to London and began to hammer at Kitchener harder than ever. At first the War Office said that the French leaders objected to the presence of correspondents with the armies. This was denied by persons in authority. At last Kitchener yielded.

"Ten may go," said he. "Ten only. They must all be British born and represent British papers only."

So the Americans set up a howl. For a time Kitchener was inflexible. Finally he made a concession. One American only, and one Canadian only, might go. They must represent impartially all American and Canadian press associations.

More time passed. The Americans could not agree on the man. The War Office said the man must be selected by the State Department at Washington. The State Department said that it would not make any selection. So the American press associations got together and selected a man. The State Department forwarded the name of that man as of its selection.

"Very soon, now," said the War Office, "the ten correspondents may go."

Waiting in London.

The Ten had all been selected. They sat around London waiting for permission to go. Meanwhile free-lance correspondents skipped around through France and Belgium getting what they could and printing the same. Every now and then some of them would be arrested. Whenever one was arrested then usefulness in this war ceased. He either had to promise not to print any more about the war or else learn tatting. A fine way to pass away time in a prison cell is to tat. The Selected Ten began to get impatient.

"We are having your passes prepared," said the War Office.

After a very long time the passes were prepared. They bore the photograph of the correspondents, and in all their vital statistics, and were countersigned by various chiefs of staff. The Ten put in several nights collecting these signatures. The chiefs of staff were hard to come at. They they were rounded up and made to sign a pledge.

Signed a Pledge.

"You must promise not to reveal the whereabouts of troops, or to forecast their future movements, or use the names of commanding officers, or make any comments whatever on the strategy, personnel, or material of the British army," were a few of the prohibitions on this pledge. The Ten sat around rather dejected. That pledge didn't leave them anything at all to write about the war. But they signed it. They wanted very much indeed to go to the front.

"In a few days, now," said the War Office.

The Selected Ten dusted off their saddlebags and bought new typewriters. Then the War Office asked:

"Have you horses?"

Of course they hadn't any horses. No one had even said horse to them. The War Office said they must hurry out and buy horses. They might start any day now. So the Ten bought horses. As horses are dear nowadays, they paid an average of $600 each for them. The War Office said they must have a pass for each horse.

Passes for the Horses.

By-and-by they got their horse passes. Each horse was named and numbered and described. It was understood that no horse could pass a sentry if it had forgotten its pass. There was more wait. Then the War Office said laughingly:

"Absurd, what? But you won't need horses. We've decided to take you in automobiles."

More time passed on. The officer in charge of the press arrangements secured automobiles. An extra car was to be taken for the squad lest one break down. Each man was to be allowed one servant, and one only. The Selected Ten held meetings and arranged for the mess. One man was elected chairman. They spent one entire afternoon debating what cigars should be taken. Another afternoon was given over to the important topic of wines.

"Maybe General French will object," was the disquieting rumour at the War Office one day.

So an emissary was sent to France. But it appeared that General French would not object. He would rather welcome the correspondents, in fact. In time he hoped to permit some of them to get near enough the front to actually see a little of the smoke.

Still They Waited.

"Very soon now," said the War Office.

So the Selected Ten sat about and waited—and waited. By-and-by they got impatient. They had played fair with the War Office, they said, and the free lances had been getting all the stuff from the front. It was true that the free lances were also getting arrested—orders are to pick up every reporter at sight, and every soldier is gladly obeying the order—but the Ten thought they'd rather be arrested than rust out in inaction. So this point of view was put up to the War Office.

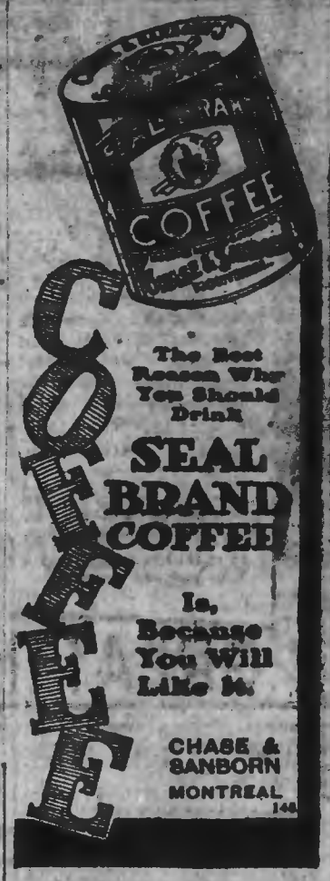
Sir Reginald Brade, head of the College of Censors, personally bearded Lord Kitchener in his den, and placed the case of the correspondents before the First War Lord.

"They say that many weeks have passed since they were first told they could go," said he, "and they are getting impatient. Will you permit me to tell them definitely just when they may go?"

"Yes," said Lord Kitchener, Sir Reginald Brade paused a moment. Then he asked:

"When?"

"NEVER!" said Lord Kitchener.



NOT BY FAITH ALONE

It is right to exercise economy, but mistaken economy is out of place. The nation is made up of individuals. National business is made up of individual business and the national welfare of individual welfare. If five thousand people lack faith in the economic strength of Canada, that individual who makes the problem of living more difficult for another, makes the problem still more difficult for a group. They in turn make it harder for the whole community. Sentiment plays a goodly part in business. If sentiment is poor, business will suffer. Waving a flag with one hand and closing the factory gate with the other does not help. Cutting the wages of the workman is just as disastrous to him as the withdrawal of a business man's bank credit at a critical moment.

Every employer should do his best to keep the labor situation as nearly nbrmal as possible. An army of unemployed is a dangerous wound in the economic body. Unemployment creates extensive dissatisfaction and suffering. Further, it eats into the savings now placed in the post office, government and chartered banks in hundreds of millions of dollars. That money, where it is, helps to carry on business. If the individual does his part and makes even the so-called sacrifice, the entire community is doing its part automatically.—Monetary Times.

THIN PEOPLE CAN INCREASE WEIGHT

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It is a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten, into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat-producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive.

Druggists sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

THRILLING DEEDS WHICH HAVE WON V.C.

Most Coveted Honor Which British Soldier or Sailor Can Gain—Indian Mutiny Heroes

About sixty years ago the Russian fortress of Bomarsund in the Baltic Sea was being bombarded by an Anglo-French force. Suddenly a shell fired from the fortress fell on the deck of H.M.S. Hecla. In an instant a brave young mate seized it, and, with the fuse fizzing between his hands, he flung it with a jerk overboard. That young mate—he ultimately became Rear-Admiral Charles Davis Lucas, who died a few days ago—was immediately promoted lieutenant and awarded the V.C., being the first to win that much-coveted decoration. Although, during the three other officers being of senior rank, he was the fourth actually to receive it from Queen Victoria.

Many a gallant deed on land and sea has, since that day, been rewarded by the bestowal of the little Maltese cross of bronze which bears the simple inscription, "For Valor."

The Victoria Cross had its origin in the Crimean War, and was primarily intended to be conferred upon junior commissioned officers and the rank and file. Neither rank, length of service, nor wounds, or any circumstance whatsoever can qualify for this noble badge, save a personal act of signal bravery performed in the presence of the enemy. The decoration was instituted by Queen Victoria in 1854, the Prince Consort being, it is said, its originator and the designer of the insignia of it.

Where Crosses Were Won

It would require a volume to describe the many acts of personal bravery which have won the V.C.; but perhaps the most heroic deeds were those performed during the Indian Mutiny, which provided the most V.C.'s. Altogether during that campaign 182 heroes won the decoration. The Crimean War accounted for 111, the war in South Africa for seventy-eight, the Zulu War for twenty-three, the Afghan War (1878-80) for sixteen, the New Zealand campaign for twelve, and the operations on the North-west Frontier of India (1897-8) for ten. These wars accounted for 452 crosses, the remainder, between ninety and one hundred, being distributed among the many other campaigns in Africa, India, and elsewhere that have been fought during the past half-century.

Each V.C. is made from bronze which once formed part of some Russian guns captured during the Crimean War, and, although the medal itself is intrinsically worth only about 9 cents, a number of them have been sold at sales for $500 and over. The winning of the V.C. carries an annuity of $50, which may be increased to $250, to all except officers, but including those who have risen from the ranks.

Boys' Gallant Deeds

Several boys have secured the medal for valor. There was Bugler Hawthorne, of the 52nd Light Infantry, who gallantly tried to save Lieutenant Seikeld at the blowing in of the Cashmere Gate at Delhi on the morning of September 14th, 1857, and it was at Delhi that young Bugler William Sutton, of the first battalion 60th Rifles, on the eve of the assault of Delhi, voluntarily went close up to the walls to ascertain the state of the breach. He succeeded, and by the whole regiment was elected for the V.C. Like Hawthorne, he was a mere lad.

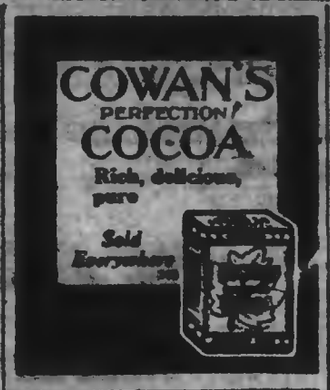
Later at Cawnpore we find Drummer Thomas Flinn, of the 64th South Staffordshire Regiment, actually charging the guns of the rebels with the short sword, the only arms of his rank, with which he slew in hand-to-hand combat two stalwart gunners.

In a few rare instances the V.C. has been won by more than one member of a family. The most conspicuous case is that of the Gough family, which can boast of three V.C.'s—General Sir C. J. S. Gough, General Sir H. H. Gough, and Lieutenant-Colonel J. E. Gough. The first two were brothers, and the last named is a son of the second. Major-General E. H. Sartorius and Colonel R. W. Sartorius provide another case of brothers winning the decoration. Another instance of a father and son winning the cross is seen in Lord Roberts and his gallant son, Lieutenant the Hon. F. H. S. Roberts, who lost his life in gaining the V.C. at the battle of Colenso. Lieutenant Roberts, as all will remember, won the cross in an heroic attempt to save the guns at Colenso in the Boer War, his cross by order of the late Queen, being awarded to Lieutenant Roberts' parents after his death.

Sailor in a Tree

The navy has always been proud of the manner in which Sir Nowell Salmon won the cross at Lucknow by climbing a tree, and from this dangerous and exposed position silencing the firing of a rifleman who was inflicting serious injury on the British troops. No man distinguished himself more, however, during the Mutiny than Sir Dighton Probyn. At the battle of Agra, when his squadron charged the rebel infantry, he was separated from his men and surrounded by five or six sepoys. He defended himself from various cuts made at him, and before his own men had joined him he had cut down two of his assailants.

At another time, in single combat with a sepoy, he was wounded in the wrist by a bayonet, and his horse was also wounded, but though the Sepoy fought desperately he cut him down. The same day he singled out a standard bearer, and in the presence of a number of the enemy killed him and captured the standard. These are only a few of the gallant deeds of this officer.



Home-made Battle Trophies

At the time of the Crimean War an enormous quantity of Russian trophies poured into the British markets—via France. Russian bayonets were selling at ten shillings each in London, though half of them were made in Lyons. It is computed that prior to the fall of Sebastopol 10,000 Russian muskets had been placed on the British market.

Now, as it happened, all muskets found on the battlefield, other than those saved as trophies by officers and men, were destroyed, and had it been otherwise the cost of freight from the scene of hostilities to the sea coast, and thence to England in the middle of a campaign, would have prohibited the muskets being sold at the price for which they were offered to the gullible collector.

Large numbers of Russian uniforms were made in Yorkshire for the same purpose, and water bottles stamped with the private mark of the Russian Government were made in Great Britain faster than they could be sold

THE FLAG INDUSTRY

British Navy Requires Cloth of Very Superior Quality.

The flag industry is one of the industries which, during war time, do not fall into decay. But, even in normal times, flags do a flourishing trade, and it has been estimated that eight million yards of bunting, or enough of the material to make between ten million and twelve million flags of one kind and another, are sold every year throughout the United Kingdom.

Bunting in use for flag making is of two kinds, the woollen bunting, which is the finest variety, and the cotton stuff, which is cheaper, less durable, and less ornamental. The fabric comes in rolls, usually of forty yards, and is worth from $1.00 to $3.00 per yard, according to quality.

The most expensive bunting, such as is used for naval flags, is absolutely free from imperfections, and weighs just 5½ pounds per piece of forty yards of ten inches width. The yard is evenly spun, and the warp and filling contain not fewer than thirty-four threads to the inch. The colors must be as "fast" as possible, and not liable to be seriously affected by being soaked continuously for twenty-four hours in fresh water, and then thoroughly washed in water with which is combined a good grade of laundry soap.

A One-man Garrison

A story worthy of "The Three Musketeers" is told by Paul Brion, correspondent of the Paris "Journal."

In a skirmish a French dragoon had his horse killed and was left behind. Some hours later a French patrol coming over the ground to reconnoitre found him on foot at the entrance to a village.

"What are you doing here?" he was asked. "Oh, I am occupying the village," was the answer. "I was waiting for you to come. The Germans are in the wood, but they dare not enter the village while I am here, because they won't believe I am alone."

Cost of Germany's War

A Berlin paper published a very interesting estimate of the weekly cost to Germany of keeping her armies in the field.

The food consumed by the armies in a week was given as 27,200 tons of bread, 7,280 tons of meat, 54,600 tons of potatoes, 912 tons of coffee, and 630 tons of sugar. The total cost of these is worked out at $20,000,000, and the cost of transport of food at $5,000,000. Provision for wounded and prisoners of war would run into at least another $3,000,000. Cost of war material and the upkeep and replacement of horses is put down at $40,000,000.

Thus a week's fighting, including smaller items not already mentioned, must cost Germany $70,000,000.

For use in many kinds of portable electric devices there has been patented a switch which may be concealed in their handles and operated by buttons.

A remarkable series of subterranean caves in German East Africa has been discovered and partly explored by a missionary and a government official.

To extinguish a candle at a desired time there has been invented a hinge cap so arranged that as the candle burns below it it will fall over the wick.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IS YOUR LAXATIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels.

Get a 10-cent box.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your "insides" pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Severe Colds, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

SALTS FINE FOR ?? ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat Too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys, Then the Back Hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who say they owe overcoming kidney trouble wonderfully to it is only trouble.

A GREAT FIFTEEN-INCH NAVAL GUN—No heavy metal has yet spoken in vital combat in the North Sea. At the present moment the British naval gun of 13.5-in. bore outclasses the German 12-in. Soon — possibly in a few days—two new Dreadnoughts will be carrying the great new 15-in. gun.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES

Squash Pie.

One even cup squash, 1 heaping teaspoon flour, 1 egg. Stir these together, then add 2-3 cup sugar, 1 pint milk, ½ teaspoon extract of lemon, ¼ teaspoon of cinnamon. Bake in a deep plate. Salt to taste. Bake slowly.

Apple Whip.

Put the whites of two eggs into a basin, add one cupful of sugar and two grated tart apples. Beat for 20 minutes, then serve in dainty glasses with a preserved cherry on the top.

Eggless Cake.

Beat 2 rounding teaspoons of butter and 1 cup of sugar to a cream; add 1 teaspoon flavouring. Sift 2 level teaspoons of baking powder and 2 cups flour together, then add it alternately with 1 cup milk. Beat 5 minutes. Bake in a shallow pan in a moderate quick oven 30 minutes. Orange or chocolate icing are best with this cake

Chicken Croquettes.

Put 1 cup of milk or cream into a double boiler. When hot add a piece of butter the size of an egg, blended with 1 tablespoon of flour. When thick let cool, then add 1 teaspoon of salt, 1-2 teaspoon of pepper, some minced onion or parsley, 1 cup of bread crumbs, 1 pint of finely chopped chicken, then add 2 eggs, make into cones, dip into egg, roll in cracker crumbs and fry in deep fat.

HIS DUTIES

John Bancroft awoke with a start, and also with a heavy sense that his wife was calling him and that a bell somewhere was keeping up a continual jangling.

"John, John," cried his wife in exasperation, "Don't you hear the door-bell?"

"Wha-at, dear," mumbled Mr. Bancroft. Then jumping on to the floor with alacrity, "Let 'em ring." "Where the deuce are my slippers?"

Before his wife could offer the needed information, John was in the lower hall tearing open the envelope of a night message. Dismissing the messenger he came bounding up the stairs two at a time.

"It is that beastly business in Canada again, Sylvia, dear. The message says to leave on the 12:30 train to-night for Toronto."

Now Mrs. Bancroft was only a bride of the preceding month, and after the sudden announcement of the call to Toronto, there ensued many tears, and not a few protestations against the "horrid old business."

"And, Sylvia, dearest," declared her husband, after the tears had been dried, "I'll bring you some furs from Canada, when I come home."

"Oh! John, you dear old duck," cried his wife. "Furs! now don't you dare disappoint me, dear, or I will never forgive you."

With the prospect of the beautiful present she would soon have, Mrs. Bancroft's spirits rose exceedingly. By the time her husband was ready to start there were smiles instead of tears, and a "Godspeed" for his tiresome journey.

We will omit the details of Mr. Bancroft's tedious journey, and the hours that claimed his attention for business. We will follow him on a cretain bright morning into a little fur shop. He looked at the many beautiful skins for some time, inquiring the price of this one or wondering if Sylvia would prefer that one.

At length he saw but one set which he knew was exactly what he wanted; —but the price tag, although very small, was more than John could pay. The figures were $200. And yet he could not go home to Sylvia without the promised gift.

There was but one way out of the difficulty. The furs he could pay for, but not the heavy duty on them.

"It is my duty to buy them now for Sylvia," said John to himself, "and the duty on the furs, well, I will take care of that also."

One half hour later Mr. Bancroft walked into the station minus $200, but the proud possessor of the beautiful set of furs. His train was due in fifteen minutes.

Without hesitation John walked directly to a well dressed woman of about thirty, and without any preliminary said, in a low tone of voice:

"Madam, I am going to ask a little favour of you, if you happen to be going on the 3.30 train. Are you bound in that direction?" The woman said that she was.

"I have with me some furs which I bought in Canada,' began John, "and I do not feel able to pay the duty on them. I want to know if you would be willing to wear these furs until we reach the States. Of course you will have nothing to pay because you will be wearing hem."

"Why, yes, I should be very glad to do it for you, Mr. ——?"

"Mr. Bancroft," supplied John, and he thanked her.

The relief on Mr. Bancroft's face showed plainly as he took his seat in the car just behind his unknown benefactress. The unsuspecting custom officer finished his work in their car and went on to the next one.

John drew a long breath of satisfaction and settled back in his chair, thinking how pleased Sylvia would be and—well, he need not tell her about the trivial instance about the duty.

At length the train drew slowly into Mr. Bancroft's home city. It was quite late in the evening. He hurried out of the train that he might keep the possessor of his furs in his sight. After pushing his way among the crowd he was finally at her side, and touching her lightly on the arm, he said to her as she turned about:

"Madam, I can never thank you enough for the favour you have done me to-day, and now please,' holding out his hands, "I will relieve you of the furs."

The woman looked at him haughtily, took a firmer grasp on the muff, and said:

"Sir! I do not know what you are talking about! These are my furs. I do not know you."

She was just turning to go, when she adedd with meaning:

"If you attempt to follow me, it will be you on whom all the blame will fall. Possession is nine points of the law."

With this parting shot she was gone.

John was stunned. Was the woman mad? Were not the furs his?

His first wild impulse was to run after her. But, no, that would not do. Everything dawned on John then. She knew his name. It would mean a heavy fine to claim then then. It would mean dishonour.

And then—then to cap the climax. What would Sylvia say? How could he explain?

He plunged wildly into the crowd, and walked unconscious of time or place, for two hours.

When at last he raised his head he found that habit had led his footsteps out to his own pretty suburban home. As he stood outside of the cheerily lighted house he resolved then to go in and make a clean breast of it to Sylvia.

When the young wife heard his latchkey she came running to meet him. Without the usual greeting John drew her gently to a seat beside him on the divan. With bewilderment and fear in her face she waited for him to speak.

Then John told the whole story, ending, "And now, Sylvia, I do not blame you if you can never respect me again after what I have done, and I am ready to take whatever the consequences may be."

There was one long minute of terrible silence.

John was about to look at her once, and steal away, when she felt soft arms around his neck, and a faint whisper in his ear, "O, John, dear, to think that you did it all for me. I am so sorry, so sorry. Let us forget, dear, that there were ever such horrid things as furs and duties."

Was Troubled With Eczema.

Would Nearly Yell With Pain.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS CURED HIM.

Mr. R. J. Swales, Harriston, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer with eczema. I tried all kinds of salves, but they did me no good. Sometimes I would nearly yell with the pain, and would pass little white worms. I was told to get at the blood, so I used four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it has made a complete cure."

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, boils, pimples, eruptions, ulcers, etc., are all caused by the blood becoming impoverished, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into more serious blood trouble, and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters will cleanse the blood of all its impurities and by this means cure all skin and blood troubles.

This valuable preparation has been on the market for the last forty years, so you do not make any experiment when you give it a trial.

FOR ALL INJURIES AND SKIN DISEASES
ZAM-BUK

This illustrates but one of the many uses to which Zam-Buk, the great herbal balm, is daily put. Accidents will happen,—especially where there are children. Mothers should never be without Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is the best "First Aid." Its strong antiseptic properties kill all germs, preventing blood-poisoning and inflammation. Its rich, herbal essences quickly ease pain and build up new, healthy tissue. Zam-Buk is a sure cure for all skin injuries and diseases, eczema, piles, etc. It is purely herbal and contains no poisonous coloring matter. Take no substitute. See the name on every box before paying.

Healed Severe Cut

Mrs. J. E. Biermirth, of Carnduff, Sask., writes: "My little son cut the end off his finger at the first joint. As it was such a severe cut I was going to take him to a doctor, but in the meantime, to ease the pain, I applied some Zam-Buk on a piece of lint. This stopped the bleeding and gave him such relief that he ceased crying and seemed quite at ease. I therefore decided to see if Zam-Buk would heal the wound. Next day I replaced the dressing, and continued to do so each day, using nothing but Zam-Buk.

"From the very first the cut began to heal and did so without any further trouble. There was no inflammation, no festering; and each day, when dressed, the wound seemed perfectly healthy. Healing was very rapid, and the little fellow seemed to have no pain whatever. Zam-Buk is a marvellous healing balm, and I cannot too strongly recommend mothers to always keep it at hand."

Mrs. Dennis Goodine, of Springhill, York Co., N.B., writes: "Zam-Buk has cured a bad case of eczema on my ankle, which a doctor's treatment failed to cure."

Zam-Buk is obtainable from all Druggists and stores, or post-paid from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for 50c. box, 3 boxes $1.25.

Household Economy

How to Have the Best Cough Remedy and Save $2 by Making It at Home

Cough medicines as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. Two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with sugar syrup. You thus get a cost of only [illegible] better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50—a clear saving of nearly $2. Full directions with Pinex. It keeps perfectly and tastes good.

It takes hold of the usual cough or chest cold at once and conquers it in 24 hours. Splendid for whooping cough, bronchitis and winter coughs.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes the inflamed membranes in the case of a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol, and has been used for generations to heal inflamed membranes of the throat and chest.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

GIRLS! STOP WASHING THE HAIR WITH SOAP

Soap dries your scalp, causing dandruff, then hair falls out.

After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still, use soap as sparingly as possible, and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil. In a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant, and possess an incomparable softness and lustre.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; stimulates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

Men! Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it.

Fog Signals.

All the up to date light stations possess fog signals for warning the mariner of the presence of rocks and other dangers in foggy weather. The larger ones are so powerful that their blasts can be heard twenty-five to thirty miles out at sea. Most of them are worked by compressed air, a gas engine of perhaps twenty or twenty-five horsepower being brought into requisition for this purpose. The siren is blown periodically every seventy-eighty or ninety seconds or so, the actual blast lasting perhaps about two or three seconds. It means that while the siren is running, in the case of the larger apparatus, something like 500 horsepower is being expended in the production of sound.—Scientific American.

NOTED CELT DEAD

It is with feelings of the deepest sorrow that the many friends of the late Mr. James Grant, for many years a member of the Celtic board of directors heard of his death at Toome Bridge, County Antrim. The late Mr. Grant never obtruded himself in the various organizations with which he was connected. Unassuming at all times, but with a keen business instinct, his advice was frequently sought and willingly given. To his business acumen the Grant stand at Celtic Park stands to-day as a testimony. By those who were favoured with his friendship the late Mr. Grant was dearly loved. He made no show, but there was sincerity in his every

GUARDS MIXED FOE INTO A SEE SAW PUZZLE

Using Bayonets Freely They Repelled a Fierce Attack, Piling the German Infantry and Cavalry into a Confused Heap—Guns Were Captured.

LONDON, Oct. 31—A wounded guardsman, now in the London hospital, gave this graphic account of the fighting at Compeigne:

"In that part of the field where we were posted, the Germans dropped on us all of a sudden, as though from the sky.

"We first learned of their presence when a battery of guns on the right sang out, dropping shells into a mob of us who were waiting for our turn at the wash tub, i.e., the river. There was no panic so far as I saw, only some of our fellows who hadn't had a wash for days cursed and swore a lot at the Germans for spoiling their chance.

"We all ran to our posts in response to the call of the bugles which rang out all along the line, and by the time we stood to arms the German cavalry came into view in great strength all along the left front. As soon as they came within range we poured a deadly volley into them, emptying saddles right and left, and they scattered in all directions.

"Meanwhile their artillery kept working up closer on the front and the right, and a cloud of infantry showed up against the sky line on our front, advancing in a formation rather loose for the Germans. We opened on them, and they made a fine target for our rifle fire, which was very well supported by our artillery. The fire from our guns was effective, the range being found with ease, and we could see the shells dropping right into the enemy's ranks. Here and there their lines began to waver and give way, and finally they disappeared. Half an hour later more infantry appeared on our right front, but we could not say whether it was the same or another body. This time they were well supported by artillery, machine guns and strong forces of cavalry on both flanks.

"All came on at a smart pace with the apparent plan of seizing a hill on our right. At the same moment our cavalry came into view, and then the whole guards brigade advanced. It was really a race between the two parties who should reach the hill first, but the Germans won easily owing to their being nearer by half a mile. As soon as their guns and infantry had taken up a position the cavalry came along in a huge mass with the intention of riding down the Irish Guards, who were nearest to them.

"When the shock came it seemed terrific to us in the distance, for the Irishmen didn't recoil in the least, but flung themselves right across the path of the German horsemen. We could hear the crack of rifles and see the German horses impaled on the bayonets of the front ranks of the guardsmen, and then the whole force of infantry and cavalry were mixed up in one confused heap, like so many pieces from a jigsaw puzzle.

"Shells from the British and German batteries kept dropping close to the tangled mass of fighting men and then we saw the German horsemen get clear and get to flight as fast as their horses would carry them. Some had no horses and they were bayoneted where they stood. While this was going on there was a confused movement among the German infantry as though they were going to the assistance of the cavalry, but evidently they didn't like the looks of things, for they stayed where they were.

"After this little interruption the whole of the guards continued their advance. The Coldstreamers leading this time, with the Scots in reserve, and the Irish in support. Taking advantage of the fight between the cavalry and infantry, the German artillery had advanced to a new position, from which they kept up a deadly fire from twelve guns. Our infantry and cavalry advanced simultaneously against this new position, which they carried together in the face of a galling fire.

"In the excitement the enemy managed to get away two of their guns, but the remainder fell into our hands. The infantry and cavalry supporting the guns didn't wait for the onslaught of our men, but ran like mad, pursued by our cavalry and galled by a heavy fire from our infantry and artillery, which quickly found the range.

"We heard later the Germans were in great force, and had attacked in the hope of driving us back and so uncovering the French left, but they got more than they bargained for. Their losses were terrible in what little of the fight we saw, and when our men captured the guns there was hardly a German left alive or unwounded. Altogether the fight lasted about seven hours and when it was over our cavalry scouts reported the enemy was in retreat."

The following is an extract from another soldier's letter:

"You needn't worry about us. We are more concerned about you at home and only hope you are being well looked after in our absence. If we find that our loved ones are not being cared for we will never forgive those responsible. That's my little grouse' done with now, and I can tell of the happy times we're having here. We're a jolly sight better fed than the Germans. If nothing else, we always have as much bully beef as we can eat, and potatoes and vegetables and jam nearly always.

"In the firing line the Germans seem to have more ammunition served to them than is good for them and they kept throwing away at least ten rounds to every one of ours without doing half the damage.

Mr. and Mrs. Seabrook, of Smith, Who Are Moving to City, Are Honoured by Presentation

A very pleasant evening was spent at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Seabrooke on the second line of Smith, on Wednesday evening, October 28th, when a number of their old friends and neighbours of Smith township waited on them with an address and presentation. Mr. and Mrs. Seabrooke are moving into Peterborough and will reside on Wolsley Street. Mr. Bert Middleton read the following address:

October 28th, 1914.

Mr. and Mrs. Seabrook and Family:

Dear Friends,—We, a few of your friends and neighbours, feel we cannot part with you from our midst, without showing you, in some way, our appreciation of your good and noble citizenship. We have always found Mrs. Seabrook and you, willing to help, in any way you could for the benefit of any social function. As neighbours we have known you to be kind and generous, willing to do your part; and now, that you are about to remove from us, we desire to show you in some tangible way, our kind regards for you, and yours. We would ask you to accept this silverware, trusting that you and your family may long be spared to enjoy them, and that you may have a happy and useful life. As you look back over the years you spent in our midst, and the kind acts and deeds rendered your neighbours, and the good fellowship existing between us, may these memories be

GERMAN SPIES AT WORK

(By Jasper Kemmis.)

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Very grave considerations attach to the question of German espionage in this country. All countries spy. It is only a matter of whether it is done well or ill. The German spy is the widest spread form of the evil existing in Europe. All have been aware of the disease in our midst, but none seem to have found the remedy.

Since the outbreak of the war the severest restrictions have been taken to obviate the leakage of news. Censors closely investigate every dispatch from whatever source, telephone conversations in foreign languages are instantly cut off and every possible precaution is taken. Yet German spies in England—whose name is legion—laugh at British primitive methods, and manage to get all that transpires at the front through to Berlin and elsewhere, as well as a good deal more that is cleverly "collected" of a far more intimate character.

How is this done? Much criticism is levelled at military and civil authorities for the leniency displayed in the civil courts, and elsewhere, towards spies who are caught more or less "in the act." The German methods of instantly shooting spies or hanging them are quoted, and Britain is voted the easiest going and least suspicious country in the world.

Urgent demands are made that all Germans—naturalized or otherwise—be "chased" from British shores, or enclosed in a compound from which any attempt to escape would at once be followed by a sentry's bullet.

This is no easy matter and cannot be accomplished in a moment, be the authorities ever so eager in the prosecution. That it should be done there is little room to doubt. The fault really lies in the system which has permitted such shoals of Germans and other "undesirables" to land upon our shores without, until recently, any organized system of registration or means of tracing new arrivals, after they have been some little time in the country.

When the Aliens Act was passed in 1905, a certain restriction was imposed upon the scum of Europe being "dumped" upon England's shores, aimed chiefly at persons from Southern Europe landing here in a state of penury or diverse without relatives or definite means of subsistence later on. This Act had taken for its model the American Act passed a few years previously but was not nearly so drastic or comprehensive in its scope. It made no provision whatever for that more dangerous and higher class of intruder, from which the higher class of German spy has been taken.

Now, we have this terrible scourge in our midst, planted firmly in our social system. England has proved to the German spy the happiest of hunting grounds. He has been almost free from suspicion, the punishment if caught has been almost a negligible quantity. Thus the fungus has taken root, its tentacles have been spread in all directions, and to eradicate the evil with one sweep of the social scythe is almost a physical impossibility. As ye sow, so shall ye reap, and England will have to pay the price of her negligence, as others have done before her.

Take the case of that master spy, Armgaard Karl Graves, whose machinations it will be remembered, the New York American made some considerable efforts to unmask some months ago without avail, owing to the absolute refusal of the British Government to give any information about him. Graves is as well known in America as he is here. His skill and ingenuity at his trade is well set forth in a book he has just published, entitled, "The Secrets of the German War Office." Whether it be exaggerated, sensational or a distorted records of facts, it proves beyond doubt the thoroughness of German spying system, the utter unscrupulousness of those even in high places and the splendid efficiency with which the work allotted to them is carried out by the German professional spy. Here we get the real answer to our question as to how it is done. No German spy is sent out on his difficult mission without a complete training in the art of discovering the secrets of the country whose "intelligence" department he has to probe. A stern code of "do's" and "don'ts" is thoroughly instilled into him. He must learn—just like a trained burglar—how to assume disguises and act parts at a moment's notice.

Absolute silence in all company as to his missions must be adhered to. Too much association with petticoats, who may be decoy ducks, is discountenanced. He becomes a member not a unit, from the day he enters the service, seriously. He must avoid the telephone, the telegraph and the cable as much as possible. A pre-arranged cypher may only be used in urgent cases. He must be an expert in mathematics, trigonometry, surveying, draughtsmanship, and all the arts necessary to take quick and accurate estimates of vessels, forts, harbours in the land to which he is assigned.

Thus Earl Graves was trained under the direct tutelage of the Imperial service and learned all about torpedoes, guns, etc., from scientific and highly qualified military and naval officers. He has proved a past-master in the art of many disguises. At one time we find him a millionaire from South Africa, studying and getting in tow with special "mugs" through the medium of the green cloth; at another he is attached to the German Hospital in Turkey specializing on Asiatic diseases as a result of his medical training, but really spying; in the Straits settlements he proceeded to get plans, data and photographs of the British new naval base while there posing as a tourist interested in tropical botany. He had some interesting experiences among the managers of Lipton's tea plantations in Ceylon. When arrested at Rosyth on the Firth of Forth particulars of every vessel in the British navy, every naval base, fortification and strategic point in Great Britain was found upon him.

And for this the highest salary he earned in his prime was $2,500 per annum with an unlimited margin for expenses, the latter being never questioned, while bonuses are given for big coups.

FRENCH AIRMEN DROP BOMBS ON GERMAN HEADQUARTERS

PARIS, Nov. 2.—Appended to the official communique to-night was the following note: "We learned through information of the presence of important German headquarters, probably that of the Duke of Wurtemburg's army, at a chateau at Thiet. Yesterday a group of French aeroplanes, carrying special and powerful destructive agents, sought and found the chateau and bombarded it. They put into a panic a large group of Germans who were seated in automobiles which were parked around the chateau. They also created a panic among numerous escort bodies going to and from the chateau.

"A German aeroplane passed over Verbiere to-day en route to Paris. The Paris protective aeroplane squadron pursued the machine behind the German lines."

Dripped with Rheumatism

And Skeptical After Trying Many Medicines — Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Cured Him.

When the kidneys fail to purify the blood the poisons left in the system cause pain and suffering, such as backache, lumbago and rheumatism. Read how this skeptic was cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. F. W. Brown, Kingsbury, Que., writes:—"I have been completely cured of backache and lame back by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I also recommended the pills to a man who was a cripple from rheumatism. He was skeptical, as he said that he had tried nearly everything on earth. Finally he consented to try them, and to his surprise was greatly benefited in the first week, and the pains left his legs until he was so supple he could walk without pain or difficulty. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have worked wonders in this place, and we think there is no medicine like them."

IMPORTANT SEIZURE

Amongst important captures recently made on the seaboard of the North Sea several are of first importance in so far as they affect the operations of the enemy's submarines, says a correspondent to the Edinburgh "Scotsman."

There seems no doubt that during the past few weeks the submarines of the German navy have been active at such a distance from any possible harbour base that, in view of the ascertained limit of the range of action of those vessels, as well known to the Admiralty, the problem came to be: Where and of what character are the German submarine supply ships? There is reason to believe that the problem was solved in striking fashion a short time ago, and that the clever work which marked the solution of it—when it can be described—will be well worthy of record.

A Further Capture

Further explanation of the extensive range of action of the submarines of the enemy has been afforded within the past few days. At a port on the East of Scotland there arrived a vessel of a neutral Power, as innocent trader with an innocent cargo in her hold, her papers in order, and her general character apparently irreproachable. There are periods when "the trustful Briton," however, takes nothing for granted, and, especially in view of the capture made some days previously, the Customs searchers subjected the vessel to the most careful scrutiny. They found her to be a well-found vessel. As a matter of fact, so far as gear was concerned, her equipment appeared not only generous but lavish. This was specially remarkable in her stock of spare hawsers. In all sorts of corners, on deck and elsewhere, they lay in their bulky coils, snugly housed in light canvas wrappings and still redolent of the ropework. At another season than the present the extraordinary supply of fresh coils might well have passed notice.

Oil Fuel for Submarines.

The Customs men, however, knew that the port whence the vessel had come did not by any means specialise in gear of that description, and certainly had no reputation for sending ships on a three weeks round trip with new hawsers sufficient to last a destructive coaster, running "'twixt tide and tide," for something like three years.

Accordingly, the huge hawser coils were attacked, the wrappings were stripped, and an important discovery made. The great coils were little more than basket rope, and in each basket, nicely protected and well stowed, reposed a steel drum of oil fuel for submarines.

(The above was submitted to the Press Bureau, and passed, with the remark that they had no information of the seizure.)

For stabilizing aeroplanes there has been invented apparatus that automatically opens doors in a wing that rises and loosens its supporting surface.

GERMANS DRIVEN ACROSS THE YSER

Great Send Off To Peterborough's Second Contingent

GERMANS ABANDON THE POSITION ON THE LEFT BANK OF THE YSER

Official Communique From Paris Says That Enemy Have Been Driven Out and Their Trenches in Neighbourhood of Dixmunde Are Now Held by the Allied Troops.

ASSAULTS ON ARRAS ARE REPULSED

Examiner Special:

PARIS, November 3.—That the Germans have definitely abandoned their positions along the left bank of the Yser, was the most noteworthy information contained in this afternoon's official communique. It was stated that they have retired from all the entrenched positions that they held as a result of the territory being inundated through the cutting of the dykes, and that these positions, especially below Dixmunde, are now held by the allies.

The German assaults on Arras, which were renewed yesterday, have all been repulsed, it is stated.

PARIS, November 3.—The Germans are being hard pressed at a score of points in the long battle line, and the military experts at the headquarters here declare that their offensive has materially lost force.

At every point the allies are pushing their advance. Slow progress is being made because of the determined resistance of the enemy, now made up more than in half of second line troops, but it is insisted here that there is no longer any doubt of the final result.

The German attempt to advance to the sea is characterized as the most costly defeat of the war. The German losses have been enormous and to-day's official report emphasizes the fact that the flooding of the territory near the Yser was the last straw. The Germans had crossed the river and moved three miles beyond before the Belgians, who are experts at this sort of work, cut the dykes.

The allies are pushing forward toward Menin, and if they can take that important railway centre they will again be in a position to seriously threaten the German lines of communication.

LONDON, November 3. — (Special Cable.) — British optimism continues to grow as the Germans are forced back from the Yser River. It is believed now certain that the Kaiser has played his last trick so far as reinforcements are concerned, and that the flower of his army as well as the highest class of reserves have essayed to take Dunkirk and Calais, and have failed beyond reparation.

It is announced this morning that Lord Kitchener, the British Minister of War, held a conference in Dunkirk, France, on Sunday, with King Albert of Belgium, Premier Poincare of France, and other statesmen and military authorities. It is presumed that plans were laid for maintaining the allies' offensive, and the pressing of the Germans back trench by trench to their own frontier and beyond.

Several of the military experts here, who have been predicting a three years' war, now admit there is a possibility of it being over, so far as the fighting in Europe is concerned, in six months or so. Belgium, they say, should be clear of the Germans by the early spring, and once the fighting is on German soil they expect an internal revolution in Germany to hasten the end of the war.

LONDON, Eng., November 3.—Although shorn of many of its usual glories on account of the war, the Lord Mayor's parade on Monday next will contain a representative delegation of three hundred troops from the first Canadian contingent at Salisbury Plains, and several hundred more or less wounded men from the battle fields of France and Belgium.

Concert For The Belgians

Orpheus Society Will Give a Concert Next Month and Proceeds Will Go to the Belgian Fund

At the usual Monday night practice last night the members of the Orpheus Society unanimously agreed that the proceeds of their first concert, to be given some time next month, will be handed over to the Belgian Fund. J. Edward Fisher, their genial and energetic conductor, expressed much pleasure in the splendid work done by the members in the taking up of "The Charge of the Light Brigade" (Somerville) and "The Feast of Adonis" (Jensen); also a few part songs.

Mr. Eddy Hanrahan was appointed secretary in place of Mr. Jas. Lock, acting pro tem.

ADDRESS AT MURRAY ST. CHURCH TO-NIGHT

Miss Muriel Martin, who was for years a school girl in Peterborough, but has for recent years been working with the Fred Victor Mission, in Toronto, is to visit our City to-night. Miss Martin has just returned from Italy, where she has been studying Italian and the Foreigner, and to-night she will address the audience at the Annual Thankoffering Service of Murray Street Church Ladies' Mission Circle. There will be no charge for admission and doubtless a large number of Miss Martin's friends will be glad of an opportunity to meet her again.

COMPLETE DIVISION

Canada's Second Contingent Will Comprise an Army Division of Regular Strength.

LEAVE IN JANUARY

OTTAWA, Nov. 2.—Canada's second contingent will comprise an army division of regular strength, or about 22,000 men. It will be composed of over 15,000 infantry, artillery, engineers and other complementary units to be sent from Canada, and one brigade of Canadian infantry already in England, comprising the surplus over divisional strength of the first contingent, which will be remembered amounted to almost 34,000 men. The second contingent will probably leave between January 1 and 15.

These details were announced in an official statement issued from the Militia Department to-night as follows:

"There has been received from the British Government a despatch to the effect, that the Army Council wish the second overseas contingent to be so organized that in conjunction with one of the four brigades of Canadian infantry already in England it will form a division complete in itself as far as possible, with, in addition, a due proportion of army service corps units for duty on lines of communication."

"The contingent will accordingly consist of two brigades of infantry (eight battalions), a complement of artillery, engineer, cyclist, signal and administrative units (Army Service Corps companies and field ambulances), and the following units for lines of communication purposes, divisional ammunition park, divisional supply column, reserve park, field bakery, field butchery, railway supply detachment and two depot units of supply.

"The numerical strength of the contingent will be over 15,000 men and the total Canadian expeditionary force (first and second contingents) will exceed 45,000, not counting the reinforcements which will be required to maintain its numbers and efficiency from the time it takes part in active operations.

"Reinforcements are calculated at a yearly rate of 20 per cent. of the total force engaged."

Sixteen Year Youth Drunk

Cross-questioned as to Where He Got His Liquor He Told Story Not Credited by Authorities

A local youth came before Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged with being drunk in a public place. He was only sixteen years of age, but pleaded guilty to the charge against him. As he is a minor, whoever supplied him with the liquor committed a breach of the liquor law, so the young fellow was put in the witness box and cross questioned as to where he got the liquor.

He replied that he found it in a stall in the yard of the Palace Hotel. Both the Chief and the Magistrate were inclined to doubt the story, but the youth adhered to it in spite of their exhortations to tell the truth. As he would not admit that the story was false or tell anything more about it he was remanded for a week.

112 SALOONS QUIT IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—A big chunk of the nation's capital went "dry" to-day. The prohibition wave engulfed 112 saloons. It also put 30 wholesale liquor dealers out of business.

Under the new excise law recently passed by Congress the number of saloons was reduced from 400 to 287, effective at midnight to-night. The excise board to-day announced the list of saloons which must close their doors for ever. "Rum Row" on Pennsylvania avenue, was hard hit. 40 per cent. of the saloons in a single block being closed. Several prominent hotels lost their licenses. Fashionable and other clubs retained theirs.

SEVENTY-NINE MORE PETERBOROUGH BOYS OFF TO FIGHT FOR THE EMPIRE

ALLIES HAVE BEEN ON OFFENSIVE IN FRANCE SINCE OCTOBER 20th

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—In an official statement issued by the press bureau to-day, it is stated that the allies in France have been on the offensive against the Germans since October 20th. The Germans on the immediate British battle front, are suffering greatly from lack of food. The declaration was included in another story by an eye witness which covered the events up to October 31. It is stated that although the German troops are not fully trained yet, all are comparatively fresh, and they fight with the utmost determination, although the prisoners captured make it plain that all are heartily sick of the war.

"Success it is now certain will go over the side possessing the most endurance and capable of flinging fresh forces into the fray from time to time as they are badly needed," the report says. It is stated that armoured motor cars equipped with light rapid firing guns have proved most useful to the allies in their operations. The transfer of British troops from the Paris front to the sea coast positions is declared to have been accomplished without loss, and practically without a hitch. The work was carried on at night and extremely noiselessly, in asmuch as it is pointed out that at some points, trenches only 100 yards from the enemy were evacuated without the Germans knowing it.

The losses are declared to have been enormous. On Oct. 21, the Germans attacked the entire battle line with the utmost vigour, but were repulsed. The slaughter was the greatest in the vicinity of Armentieres, where 8,000 dead were left on the field. One battalion of the German 164th regiment lost practically its entire strength here, while in the fighting of Lys the balance of the regiment was practically annihilated, 400 dead being picked up and buried, while many others were taken prisoners.

The report pays a tribute to the humanity of the Saxon troops of the German army. To offset this is the story of one party of German Prussians who advanced crying, "Don't shoot, we're Coldstream Guards." To this appeal the British responded with a hail of fire from their machine guns, killing 700. The German officers are severely criticised. The advance, it is stated, shows lack of training and faults of leadership, "which the almost superhuman bravery of the soldiers cannot counterbalance."

CAIRO, Egypt, November 3.—Many Turks are being arrested here. The natives are everywhere quiet.

LONDON, November 3.—The British cruiser Minerva has destroyed the fortifications and the government buildings of the Turkish town of Akaba, in Arabia, on the east side of the Gulf of Akabia, according to an official statement made at the Admiralty to-day. The Minerva found the town to be guarded by a party of Turkish troops, commanded by German officers. She shelled the port and the troops were forced to evacuate.

PETROGRAD, November 3. — An Imperial Manifesto, dealing with the aggressions of the Turks, and welcoming war with the Porte, was issued to-day after having been signed by the Czar.

"Russia will receive this fresh aggression on the part of the ancient persecutor of Christian people with tranquility,' says the Manifesto. "The Slav people will meet the issue with every confidence, realising that with the help of God their valiant armies will again triumph over the Turkish hordes and punish the insolent foes of the fatherland."

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The White Star liner Olympic, which the Admiralty declares escaped destruction by a floating mine simply through "sheer luck," to-day landed her passengers and mails at Belfast. She was held at Lough Swilly, County Donegal. Only one passenger, Charles M. Schaw, was allowed to land there. Reports have been freely circulated that the Olympic did actually foul a mine but that it failed to explode.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 3.—In an official statement issued to-day dealing with the operations in Galacia, it is stated that the reduction of the strong fortress of Przemysl is proceeding. During recent attempted sorties more than 4,000 prisoners were taken.

Second Contingent of 57th Regiment Leaves the Concentration Camp at Kingston Amid Enthusiastic Cheering.

A FITTING FAREWELL

Peterborough's contribution to Canada's second expeditionary force, in the shape of seventy-nine men, representing the 57th Regiment, left for the concentration camp of the 3rd Military Division at Kingston, at noon, to-day, amid scenes of great enthusiasm. The quota was four over the number allotted to Peterborough to enlist; in fact at one time was nine over strength, five youngsters, whom parents refused the necessary consent, being struck off at the last moment. The men have passed the strictest possible examination and in physique and bearing are worthy representatives of Peterborough, about whose conduct their need be no anxiety. Averaging younger probably than the first contingent from Peterborough they are, nevertheless, well set up and developed, and a fine body of men who will doubtless make as good a showing at Kingston as the first quota did at Valcartier.

The contingent paraded 78 strong at 10 o'clock, at the Armouries, and were marched outside, where they were photographed. Meanwhile the crowd was gathering inside the building, ready for the addresses.

Returning to the Armouries, the men of the contingent were drawn up in front of an improvised platform, where Major Walker, who presided, called on several prominent men to address the volunteers.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., in speaking to the men, assured them of the honour he felt had been done him in asking him to join in wishing God speed to those who were going forth in the defence of the Empire. There was nothing greater than to fight for one's country. It was in peaceful Peterborough that it seemed remarkable to hear of war, but with the reports of the death of thousands and the anguish of the desolate, the fact of this terrible warfare could not be ignored. Now, with the fanatical East allied with Prussian militarism, in an attempt to overthrow the world, the situation was serious.

"Your conduct from day to day," remarked Mr. Burnham, "will be followed with interest. It is unnecessary to tell you to uphold your good name. There is nothing can compare with a good name. Stand fast for the Empire. Time will never efface our gratitude to you, nor the record of your valour."

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M. P.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, in wishing the boys God-speed, stated that the people of Peterborough had no fear but that they would do their duty, and render signal service to the Empire, on behalf of Canada. Realizing the seriousness of this war, and the fact that the civilization of the world was being assailed, Canada had readily responded to the call of the Empire. The men of Peterborough had evidenced their loyalty to each call, and it was needless to say that all would do their duty. The manoeuvres of the City's volunteers, both in training and at the front, would be followed with keen interest.

Mayor Butler, on behalf of the citizens, extended the best wishes to the departing soldiers. They had nobly responded to the call of arms in the support of the Empire in her dark days. Their brave and courageous response would ever be remembered by the people of Peterborough, who would eagerly watch their movements until their return. He concluded by asking for three cheers for the volunteers.

Judge Hayzlie.

His Honour Judge Hayzlie delivered an eloquent address to the men of the second contingent, speaking in eulogistic terms of the grand thing they were doing in going to the front, and leaving with them words thoughts that would help and encourage them in many trying circumstances.

"Long, long ago a great writer had written 'it was a sweet and beautiful thing to die for one's country' The truth of that statement," Judge Hayzlie remarked, "has one denied; but it was also a grand thing to live for one's country To live and die for Great Britain, they, as soldiers, were willing to do, but he hoped the

THE LAST STRAW.

It looks very much as if Turkey has been drawn or driven into the war by Germany, which seems to desire to add Moslem fanaticism and cruelty to "German kultur" as an element in advancing civilization. It is also probable that Turkey or Germany through Turkey, will incite a holy war, that is, a war on Christianity. This action of Germany is quite in keeping with the past actions of Germany, or the ruling classes of Germany, who in the provocation of the war and its prosecution have outraged every principle of the spirit of Christianity. If this has not served to enlist every Christian nation in sympathy, the last alliance with the powers of moral darkness should decide their course, and suggest not only sympathy with the fighters against the great evil, but even active cooperation. If Germany succeeds in stirring up a holy war one does not see how Italy, the centre of Christianity, can remain neutral. Apart from her national interests involved, which would naturally call for her intervention when she sees Christianity so menaced, she may not be expected to hold the sword in the sheath. And it does not seem possible that other now neutral nations, whose civilization is based upon Christianity, can afford to remain neutral when the foundation of all that makes national life worth while, is attacked by one of the most powerful military nations of the world leagued with a nation whose history is crimson with its cruel onslaughts upon Christianity. The Kaiser's new alliance with Turkey is the last straw. It will tend to solidify Christianity against him, more than his organized barbarity has so far done.

WORK OR CHARITY.

Brantford, which had proposed work on a park drive scheme, to help provide employment, has wisely abandoned the idea at present, because most of the money to be spent would be absorbed by expropriation of property and material and teams, leaving little employment for individual labour. Peterborough has been more fortunate in giving employment because a large part of the special expenditure made this autumn has gone into the pockets of labourers. Giving employment is a manly substitute for charitable relief; for this relief, no matter how delicately extended carries, with it an element of humiliation, if not degradation and loss of self-respect, or what is worse, pauperization. The weather has been on our side; but we must not trust too much to the weather—we can't expect to have summer all winter. Work on the outfall sewer should have been under way before this; and it is unfortunate that it is not known when employment will then be given, because the city is not ready. The great thing is to give as much employment as possible, and so far the city has done well. In default of work on the sewer or other, men might be employed, when it is possible, in cleaning the streets. This would give employment for several days and would yield results worth while. The fallen leaves are choking the gutters, and are tramped in among the resulting mud, and if they are not removed and the gutters opened, many of the streets next spring will be in a terrible condition. By cleaning up the streets now a double advantage will ensue, the giving of employment whose wages will mean so much less necessity for expenditure upon relief; and the benefit to street traffic will in itself be worth all the expenditure made. We can well afford to push work that will give employment, for we shall not only have value for the money thus expended, but will save expenditure in the relief of our relief fund proportionate to the amount expended to give employment. Prompt action is called for. Corporate bodies and governments, don't show Napoleonic energy in rapid decision. The highway between Hamilton and Toronto that was to be built to give employment is not yet under way. A month or two has been wasted in negotiation and not a foot of earth has been moved or a tool lifted. Anything in the way of outside employment to be effective this year, whether in Peterborough or elsewhere, will have to be decided upon speedily.

TWO KINDS OF HARVEST.

It seems that the farmers of Ontario do not need the inspiration of the rather slow-going agricultural authorities to make them look out for number one. An estimate of the Ontario Department of Agriculture is to the effect that, at least, a million acres more than last year have been sowed to wheat this autumn. The farmers generally must have seen for themselves that under the war conditions there would be increased demand for for wheat, for there was not time to get the seed planted after the outbreak of war if they had waited for the injunctions of the agricultural authorities. They must have played off their own bat. In 1912 the acreage of fall wheat was only 646,533, and this year's spring wheat area covered only 514,583 acre. If the acreage of spring wheat next year shows an equal advance, the wheat crop for 1915 with the extra million acres under seed will, amount to between 15 million and 20 million bushels. This will be by far the largest wheat crop ever grown in Ontario, and shows that the farmers are not only alive to their own interests, but alive also to the necessities of the occasion. Supposing that the Western wheat fields show a corresponding expansion of wheat acreage, Canada next year with favourable crop conditions, will have the biggest wheat yield in her history. If this is accomplished, more will have been done to keep things healthily moving than by all the industrial expansion possible. With wheat production practically destroyed in the wheat-growing countries of Europe now engaged in war, the demand for wheat will be brisk, and the prices good. With 250 or 300 million bushels of Canadian wheat available to meet the demands of a brisk market, the circulation of money induced will greatly strengthen the financial situation and give an impulse to all industrial and commercial operations.

While we are preparing to grow more wheat, we should also provide that Canadian labour should at the same time reap its little harvest, by providing that as much as possible should be converted into flour in this country. We are not doing our best by our natural products by shipping them abroad in the unmanufactured state. In practice we might with advantage, apply to our grain products, our pulp wood policy, and our policy of converting hog-products into the manufactured article. Pulp wood exported raw would only net $5 or $6 per cord; manufactured into paper it would net between $40 and $50 per cord; the diffrence, representing that much distributed throughout the country in wages and for supplies, would mean an immense gain. We don't send abroad live hogs at 6 or 8 cents per pound but convert them into bacon at from 20 to 25 cents per pound. If this war teaches Canadians anything, it teaches that we should not only brace ourselves for taking full advantage of the war conditions, but that we should also, make the most—give the most employment of labour and industrial operations—so that the country will get the fullest advantage for the commercial exploitation of its resources. We can in effect reap two kinds of harvest in increasing our grain-growing and other products; the harvest of grain and the harvest of home labour.

TOBACCO FOR THE TROOPS.

The use of tobacco by soldiers suffering from the strain of the firing line is now approved by such eminent authorities as the British Medical Journal and the Lancet, and the War Office is encouraging such gifts to the troops.

There was a time when the sender of tobacco would not have received the thanks of the authorities. Such charity would never have done for the Duke of Wellington. In 1845, for instance, he issued the order: "The Commander-in-Chief has been informed that the practice of smoking has become prevalent among the officers of the army, which is not only in itself a species of intoxication occasioned by the fumes of tobacco, but undoubtedly occasions drinking and tippling by those who acquire the habit, and he entreats the officers commanding regiments to prevent smoking in the messrooms and to discourage the practice among the officers of junior rank in the regiments."—Daily Courier.

California Wants Belgians.

(From the Philadelphia Inquirer.)

California wants the expatriated Belgians. A committee, made up of planters, viniculturists, financiers and statesmen, is raising money and hopes to induce many of them to settle on California soil. The proposition is to allot a large amount of land in small sections, but several times as large as the Belgians have cultivated at home, to supply them with seed, food and homes so that they may begin early next spring to raise crops.

The County Council Is In Session

Convened This Afternoon—Contributes to the Patriotic Fund

THE PERSONNEL

The fall sittings of the Peterborough County Council opened this afternoon in the Court House. The session is being held nearly one month earlier this year so as to enable the Council to take some action respecting the patriotic fund, also to deal with other contingencies arising out of the present European conflict. The opening meeting, which was called for at two o'clock, was a little late in getting under way. All members were present with one or two exceptions. Robert Shaw, Warden of the County, was in the chair.

The following comprise the County Council:

Messrs. R. Shaw, Warden, M. Brown, A. A. Wilde N. Lean, D. Campbell, C. J. Darling, M. Walsh, S. Killen, C. Coben, W. G. Howden, W. A. Anderson, E. Deyell, J. H. Garbutt, F. McKee, B. Squire, Dr. Kindred, H. G. Fitzgerald.

LARGE ATTENDANCE LOOKED FOR AT TO-NIGHT'S MEETING

Splendid Address Expected and Mr. A. E. Greenlaw Will Sing

Patriotism will be the keynote of the meeting in the Armouries tonight to stimulate recruiting in this city. Mayor Buller, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.; J. H. Burnham, M.P.; the Rev. Jas. Rollins, His Honour Judge Huycke, and others, will speak in connection with the effort that is being made to arouse an even more intense spirit of loyalty among local men who could serve the Empire on the battlefield. The meting will commence at eight o'clock, and splendid addresses are looked forward to. Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the noted coloured singer, who is here with Dr. Gordon, will sing, and it is expected that the loyalty of Peterborough citizens will be shown by a very large attendance.

"GERMAN HOME LIFE"

Interesting Address by Mr. Mowat to Knox Church Y. P. G.

The meeting of Knox Church Young People's Guild was of a rather interesting nature—a short lecture on the manners and customs of the German people.

The lecturer was Mr A. Mowat, Inspector of Schools, having as a sort of guide the book "Germany and the Germans, from an American Point of View," by Price Collier.

The various characteristics of this warring nation were clearly and descriptively outlined by both lecturer and author—comparisons of British and Germans, the younger folks being taught a sort of hateful education which makes them, in later life, despise the British people. The other points treated were education, music, newspapers, city officials, morality, manners and customs of the people, the military discipline, all of which seem to be ruled by officias chosen by the Kaiser. The scturer also made reference to Bismarck and Wilhelm II., showing difference of opinions of these two rulers. Many amusing interludes were recited and altogether the time spent listening to Mr. Mowat was very pleasant, which was shown by the vote of thanks awarded.

Mr. Cecil Williamson, (President), had charge of the devotions.

GAVE MINOR LIQUOR WAS FINED $10.00

In Police Court this morning a local youth, 16 years of age, refused to tell where he got the liquor, the consumption of which had resulted in his arrest for being drunk and disorderly. He said he got it in a stall in the Palace Hotel yards, but his story was not credited, and he was remanded for a week. In the cells he thought better of his action and admitted that a fellow prisoner, William Hargrove, of Lindsay, supplied the liquor. Hargrove admitted the offence and was fined $10 for supplying liquor to a minor. Hargrove himself was in Court this morning charged with being drunk and disorderly. He paid both fines.

"Lucille Love In Moving Pictures And Literature

Commencing on Friday The Examiner will print the famous, fascinating story of love, mystery and adventure "Lucille Love." Every Friday and Saturday for nine weeks an instalment of the story will be run and following that an instalment will be given every Saturday until the story is finished. Commencing next Monday the pictures of the story will be given at the Royal Theatre. Every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday moving picture instalments of the story will be flashed on the screen at the Royal so that readers of The Examiner will have the opportunity of reading the story and then seeing it in moving pictures at the Royal. The story is one of the most interesting of recent publication, and is bound to find much favour with the reading public of this city and district.

Tells of The Reception At Plymouth

Bugler Allan Kingscote, Formerly of Peterborough, Sends Interesting Letter

Here is som interesting news from a letter received from Bugler A. Kingscote, fomerly of Peterborough, and now with the 48th Highlanders of Toronto, at Salisbury Plains, England:

I arrived in the Old Country O.K., after three weeks on the ocean without seeing land. I can tell you we were glad to set foot on land again, although we had a good time going over. On the ship we had physical drill twice a day, and at nights they held concerts in the saloons, proceeds to go to the Orphanage Home Fund. They raised over $400. We came into Plymouth Harbour Thursday afternoon, and both sides of the river were lined with people, cheering us. Friday night about six o'clock we disembarked and marched two miles to the station. The girls kissed us and offered us cigarettes and matches, and walked along beside us to the station. I don't think the Canadian girls would do what the girls here did for us Canadian boys. We were on the train about four hours, then got off and marched about 12 miles to the camp. We got into camp about 7 o'clock the next morning feeling rather tired. I haven't seen any Peterborough boys here yet, but I expect they will train here for the front. As most of the troops are here now, I suppose we will be at the front for our Xmas dinner, but we will be there doing our duty, and serving our country. They say we get a week's leave of absence to go where we like. I hope it is true for I have a lot of relatives over here I would like to see. We have had no passes issued since we left Long Branch, Toronto.

Remember me to all my friends. I remain,

BUGLER A. KINGSCOTE.

"A SOFT SOAP JOB"

Chairman of the Board of Works is in Great Demand

Sidewalks, street lights and a few other sundries are in great demand these days; the closing days of the 1914 civic administration. Ald. Weir would like to have a light placed on Charles Street, and a sidewalk on Euclid Avenue. Ald. Duffus would like to see a temporary sidewalk constructed on the north side of Murray Street, between Bethune and Stewart Streets. After bombarding Ald. Duncan, chairman of the Board of Works, for nearly an hour on Monday evening, the aldermen endeavoured to justify their claims by eulogising the chairman. Some of them proclaimed him to be the best chairman that this department has had in years.

"This is changing from a finding fault meeting to a soft soap job," was Mayor Buller's comment on the turn of affairs.

However, some of the things requested will be granted, and others will be investigated by the Board of Works.

Rates For Street Lights

Are in the Hands of the Public Utilities Commission

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario have completed their calculations in regard to the rates for street lights, which the Public Utilities Commission may charge the Municipality .The rates are as follows:

For 150 D.C. open arc lamps, $50 lamp per year.

For 202 thirty-two candle-power carbon incandescent amps, $9 per lamp per year: the same rate to apply for 100 watt lamps in case these should be installed in the present fixtures.

The rate to be charged for the magnetite arc lamps os $50.50 per lamp per year.

The communication from the Commission concludes as follows:

"Our recommendations are that until the present old open arc system is replaced by a new street lighting system, that the rate per lamp should not be altered, as the cost of maintenance is very high and the operating charges rather uncertain".

A Presentation

Yesterday the members of the 57th Regiment contingent to the second Canadian overseas forces, showed their appreciation of the efforts of Sergt. Instructor Dunkerley by presenting him with a well stocked purse. Sergt. Dunkerley has been in charge of the contingent for the past week and they have made great progress under his direction. He is deservedly popular with the men, as evidenced by yesterday's presentation, which was made by Sergt. Alan Harper on behalf of the men. The squad gave three cheers for the Sergt. Instructor with a will that shook the roof.

CHARGED WITH GAMBLING IN A PUBLIC PLACE

Case Hinges on Whether or Not a Restaurant is a Public Place—Local Young Men Involved.

Six local young men appeared in the Police Court this morning charged with gambling in a public place. They were defended by Mr. G. N. Gordon.

It seems that the party of six young men were in the Dominion Chinese Cafe last night and were gambling for money with dice. The restaurant was raided by members of the Police Force, lead by Sergeant Brown, and the six cases this morning resulted. The charge was that of gambling in a public place, and the case hinges on the point whether or not a restaurant is a public place. The young men (except one) admitted they were gambling, but Mr. Gordon drew the attention of Magistrate Dumble to a recent decision ruling that even an hotel corridor was not a public place. The restaurant was, of course, a licensed premises, but if this fact alone constituted a public place, then all the laundries, butcher shops and other licensed premises in the City must be public places, which would be absurd The case was adjourned for a week, at the end of which time Magistrate Dumble will give his decision whether or not a restaurant is a public place under the meaning of the Act, and the case will be proceeded with

ROMAN MEAL DEMONSTRATION TO-MORROW

Speaking of the high cost of living. Do you know that both food value and flavour reside in the darker parts of all grains. Think of this when you look upon the rich, nut brown of Dr. Jackson's ROMAN MEAL. Dr. Jackson will personally demonstrate this food at P. Connal & Son's store on Wednesday. Makes delicious porridge, pancakes, gems and bakes everything. It positively relieves constipation or "money back." Call and sample. You will not be urged to buy.

Italy Ready And Waiting For Chance

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Italy is certain that it must participate in the war. This opinion prevails in all classes of society there according to Miss Virginia Butler, professor of history in a Rome college, who arrived here Saturday, direct from the eternal city. Miss Butler, who is a graduate of Wellesley College, has made a careful study of conditions in Italy, and she believes that the monarchy cannot hope to remain much longer away from participation in actual hostilities. And when the time comes she will enter the war on the side of the allies, in the opinion of Miss Butler.

"As a reward for her neutrality," said Miss Butler, "Italy has been promised by the allies Trieste, Trieno and Vallona. All parties concerned are merely waiting for the psychological moment for the formal announcement. This may come only when the success of the triple entente has left no doubt as to the ultimate outcome of the war. It may not come until the moment arrives when the occupation by Italy of Austria's Italian provinces would put the final staggering blow to Austria. When ever it comes it will come in the form of an announcement that the entente considers that Italy, being as indispensable factor in the maintenance of the equilibrium of the Mediterranean, it is necessary that she have complete domination of the Adriatic. Then Italy must step in and maintain her right to them by force of arms. Italy, realizing this, has been preparing. Her army is mobilized. She has imported millions of dollars worth of supplies; including complete hospital equipment and the like from the United States.

Troops Are Mobilized.

"Italian troops are mobilized in force with one army stationed at Brindisi for the occupation of Valona and the remainder stationed at strategical points along the Austrian frontier. One million pairs of shoes, imported from the United States for the army, are now being fitted with cleats on the bottom for the mountain fighting in the northeast along the frontier. A volunteer corps is being organized to replace the regular troops in Lybia so that Italy will have her best troops at her disposal. Many elderly officers of high rank have been retired and their places taken by younger men.

Foreign Quarters, Dead.

The entire foreign quarter of every Italian city is dead. Many shopkeepers in Rome, who knew me, have appealed to me with tears in their eyes for comfort and a promise that Americans would continue to go to Italy for the winter. But I was forced to tell them that this was out of the question and far more so now that Italy is certain to enter the war. I am afraid that many will suffer very greatly before the war ends."

Many Reservists.

"One of Italy's problems is taking care of the thousands of reservists who have come here to join the colours. They had only enough money to carry them to Italy. Many brought their families and this will prove an added burden. In order that there may be as little actual suffering as possible the Italian Government has appropriated $20,000,000 for public works. These will be constructed at once and those reservists who are not yet needed and the thousands of officers who have left their employment through the stagnation of business will also be furnished employment.

SNAPS FROM THE WIRES.

The death was announced yesterday in London of Alfred Booth, head of the Booth Line of steamships.

The Petrograd newspaper Rystch reports that the Bedouins have occupied the Persian port of Bushehr and made the officials prisoners.

Hon. J. D. Hazen, acting Minister of Militia, was in conference yesterday with the Duke of Connaught in regard to the War Office's advice re the second contingent.

Ten thousand sacks which brought Canada's gift of flour have been purchased in London at five shillings apiece. The proceeds will go to the Prince of Wales' fund.

The Government of Trinidad has closed all German business houses, the affairs of the latter being liquidated by a committee. The assets will be held at the discretion of the British governor.

The German steamer Asuncion has landed at Para, Brazil, the passengers and crews of the British steamers Vandyck, Hurstdale, and Glanto, which were captured by the German cruiser Karlsruhe.

Cadets MacAulay, Cassels and Cook of the R. M. C., have been attached as lieutenants in the R. C. H. A., and will go to the front. Cadet Duff-Stewart is attached to the Royal Canadian Dragoons to await a vacancy in the R. C. H. A.

CANADIANS FOR EGYPT?

New Phase of War May Draw Some of Second Contingent There.

OTTAWA, Nov. 2.—Full instructions concerning the composition of the second Canadian contingent, have been received from the War Office. There may be some further negotiations. It is understood that the instructions are given on the supposition that the second force will comprise a full division of at least 22,000 men, of which the 16,000 men now being enlisted will form the infantry branch, but it is not considered that the same amount of artillery will be provided.

It is considered probable, in view of the situation which has developed in the Near East, that some Canadians may see service in Egypt. The recent massing of Turkish troops in the vicinity of that country may be the cause of drawing certain units thither.

GERMANS DISSENTING.

Arrivals In Holland Say It Is No Longer Battle, But Butchery.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The correspondent of The Amsterdam Handelsblad at Sluis telegraphs as follows: "All German attempts to break through the line of the allied forces between Nieuport and Dixmude have failed. In spite of the greatest sacrifices the Germans have not succeeded in gaining ground on the other bank of the canal.

"Communication with Ostend is almost completely interrupted. Permits to leave Bruges are no longer given, but tram cars are still running, and the German marine band gives daily concerts in the market place. German soldiers, tired of the war, continue to cross the frontier near Sluis in large numbers. They declare that it is no longer a question of battles but of butchering."

New German Army.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—Information has reached here showing that the recently raised new German army has a total strength of 450,000 men, and is made up principally by calling out the recruits of 1915. The remainder are volunteers of all ages. The army is divided into twelve corps, and will be used as follows: Six corps for service in Belgium and France; two to form a reserve force, and stationed around Strasburg, and the other four to be employed in a special effort to take Verdun.

Belgians Once Wealthy Now Penniless In a Foreign Land

London, October 19. — There are many tragedies of the war—tragedies of the battle field and of the domestic hearth. The world has been ringing with instances of each since the war began, and the last has by no means been heard of either.

In London just now there are many hundreds of Belgian families; poor, who were a few weeks ago more than passing rich; and others destitute who were fairly well off in this world's goods. Driven from their own violated country by the German hordes they have sought refuge here, and a tour of some of the hotels reveals many cases of extreme hardship.

Without the least suggestion of ostentation, and indeed only in reply to a question, a refugee from Antwerp said:—

"My family, until the war broke out, held a first class position. We had estates in Belgium and investments in good securities. Last week we were wealthy—I do not make a boast of it, I merely state a fact. Now, we have nothing except what will keep us in England perhaps for a couple of months. After that—" A shrug of the shoulders, eloquent of despair, finished his sentence.

Have Sacrificed Everything.

But there was no more to be said. And what other Belgians said over and over again, was: "We have sacrificed everything up to our last cent, and what more can we do? Our soldiers have fought and bled and died—as your have, what more can we do?"

But the iron has entered into the soul of the elders of these refugees. The children romp about as children will do, and only at odd moments do the more serious among them seem to realize the gravity of their position. Their parents watch them wistfully like "young lambs at play," and then they turn away with an intensity of passion there is no mistaking.

"We are gratified beyond the power of expression with our reception. The thought of the sympathy of the British people was our only strength when we fled from Antwerp and Belgium. It is our only hope now. We want to go back to Belgium, to our own dear country, but not to go back to work under Germany. Better to be hanged here than to work under Germany."

English are Also Grateful

The speaker was a member of a wealthy Belgian family, and he was only one of a hundred who was staying at the same hotel. He put the view of everyone of his countrymen now in England, and the other point was put very appositely by an Englishman who overheard it.

"And where would we be now without them?" he said. "In the cart."

It was a homely phrase but it was well and earnestly put.

There are many hundreds of refugees from Belgium who are unable to put up at the hotel even for a few weeks, and these have been accommodated at the Alexandra Palace. They left Brussels and other parts of Belgium in the early stages of the war, "with just a few francs in our pockets." Some of them had been well to do but had been unable to bring anything with them except the clothes they stood in and the money that they happened to have in their pockets. Their position has indeed been a pitiable one but they are grateful for the hospitality extended to them.

Paris Sees War Spectacle As Wounded Pass Through

Gripping is the pen picture of a trainload of wounded coming into a Paris railroad station as described by Regis Gignoux in the Figaro. One can almost imagine oneself standing on the platform watching the wounded soldiers hanging from the car windows, the bustle of nurses and stretcher bearers, and the quiet nuns hurrying from car to car with refreshments.

A trainload of wounded is going away, he writes; another backs down. Soldiers are brushing off the platform, nurses hasten to their stations beside their canvas shelters, the nuns are busy cutting bread, filling watering pots, preparing soup and chocolate on their movable furnaces. The surgeons advance, casting one last look on the reports and orders in their hands; stretcher bearers follow them. At the same time some fifty military nurses march forward from the other side of the station with provisions, each carrying a measure full of water besides.

The train comes to a stop. A thousand soldiers appear at the doors of the compartments, but do not come out, do not speak: they only look. Some have foreheads bandaged, others have their arms in slings: still more have their necks bandaged. One does not see those who are wounded in the legs, for the doors are not yet opened.

One sees nothing but faces: faces black or red or yellow, and hands that seem enormous. One realizes that these men need no words nor gestures to make themselves understood. They just look. They are watching a young auxiliary surgeon with flushed face and feverish eyes, with drooping shoulders, who hurries up to the head surgeons with a list and information.

The head surgeons at once give their instructions to the stretcher bearers. Twenty dressings to be made, twelve cases to be left at Paris.

WORK FOR NURSES AND NUNS.

Then they re-enter the ambulance station on the platform installed by the society for helping the wounded. The bearers, accompanied by the auxiliary surgeon, go to the head of the train. And in the cars the soldiers understand that they are going to pursue their trip because they are not seriously wounded. They throw open the doors. Some jump heavily on the platform, others remain seated on the steps. And the women nurses and the nuns hurry to them, washing faces and hands, distributing sandwiches, filling water bottles. Boys run about, carrying newspapers and postal cards.

The bearers go to a car with open door. In it sits a territorial hospital corps man, smoking his pipe. They question him. He calls out to a wounded man: "Hey, old man, your dressing."

Twelve stretchers in four groups of three are fastened, one in each corner of the van, and from the platform one can count the soldiers lying there by the number of heavy shoes with glistening heb-nails which stick out. The man whose wound is to be dressed hobbles to the booth, steadying himself on the shoulder of a bearer. He does not look around; he is resigned to it all.

Jews Not Persecuted.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 3.—A semi-official note denies the German allegations that Jews are being persecuted in Poland. The note points out that the war is being conducted by a united Russia, comprising all nationalities without exception.

"Unfortunately, in contravention of article 44 of The Hague convention," says the note, "the enemy's troops operating in Russian territory are detaching from the Jewish population information concerning our army and threats of violence, thus making the population liable to inevitable responsibilities."

Germans Will Win Says Kaiser.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—(Via London.)—In addressing the Brandenburg Regiment in France recently at a point behind the front, Emperor William closed his speech with these words:

"When the war is finished we shall not see each other again. Under all circumstances the enemy will be beaten."

This information is conveyed in a letter received in Berlin from the front.

Battle In the Straits.

LONDON, Nov. 2. — Heavy firing was heard off the foreland at Dover yesterday afternoon. Twelve big shells were fired in rapid succession. The concussion rattled windows at Deal. A British torpedo boat destroyer could be seen outside Goodwin Sands, and it was surmised that the British ship had assailed a German submarine, which was known to be in the Channel.

Peace Prize to All Belgians.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 3.—(Via London.)—The Handelsblad, of Amsterdam, has published a report from Christiania saying that the shareholders of the Nobel Dynamite have decided to give this year's peace prize, which amounts to about $40,000, to the Netherlands Government, to be applied toward the support of Belgian refugees in Holland.

Statue of Carnegie Pelted.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A despatch to a news agency from Dunfermline, Scotland, says that local resentment against Andrew Carnegie because of his alleged pro-German attitude is so strong that the statue of Mr. Carnegie, which was unveiled by the citizens of his native town last June, was pelted by a crowd.

SAFETY FIRST, SAYS FOSTER.

To Ensure That Will Be Government's Primary Aim.

OTTAWA, Nov. 2.—In his reply to delegates of municipalities, which waited on the Government yesterday afternoon, about unemployment, Sir George Foster said it was gratifying to the Government to have its work commenced. It had been no light undertaking to deal with alien enemies in Canada, in the light of the different social customs and the desire to protect people at home without inflaming others. The Government in any event would see that public safety was assured fully. It was now working out details of the registration system, and would announce them in a few days.

Speaking of the relief of allies Sir George admitted that depended largely upon the Dominion, but in respect to the general principle of unemployment he said the primary responsibility rested upon the localities of the provinces, but the Government would assist in every way it could.

ADVANCE IN VOSGES

French Take German Positions In Mountain Passes

COAST END IS STOPPED

LONDON, Nov. 3. — While war clouds hung heavy over the Balkans and the Mediterranean yesterday, fierce contests took place all along the allied front from the channel to Switzerland, with particularly notable victories to the French arms in the Vosges. With snow falling and bitter winds blowing, the armies of the republic are wresting inch position after another from the Germans grasp in this mountain region. Verdun de Saints Claude is the latest spoil of victory. A late despatch says that several passes where the Germans had mounted heavy batteries were taken yesterday. It is claimed that the French not only captured the guns of the invaders, but have brought up a number of 75 millimetre pieces and succeeded in shelling the Germans as they fell back.

It is authoritatively stated that the Kaiser's forces were decisively beaten in a series of violent assaults on the Franco-British front from Dixmude to the River Lys. The Germans delivered [illegible] attacks on the allied trenches, [illegible] losing thousands as the [illegible] of especially selected [illegible] were, the French and British [illegible] them back with the bayonet.

Despite all hammering the Germans continue to hold positions on the allied side of the Yser and are stubbornly contesting every effort to dislodge them. But the opening of the dykes by the Belgians has effectually stopped any effort of the enemy to advance further. All of the fields in the country bounded by Nieuport and Dixmude are under several feet of water and Belgian troops, supported by their own very effective artillery and numerous batteries from the French and British armies, are posted along the railroad and electric road embankments, on the highway and other high spot of ground. To advance the Germans must come up narrow causeways a few feet wide. Such attempts mean massacre, and after operations of this character could mean nothing less than utter annihilation for the foe.

West of Nieuport to the coast, the country is free of Germans and the allied fleet continues to frustrate every effort of the Kaiser's men to pierce this country. It is said on good authority that the allies are now within four miles of Ostend and can take that town at their leisure, as it is defended by only a handful of the foe.

A courier bearing despatches to the Duke of Wurtemburg, from the Kaiser, has been captured. Unless Ypres was taken by Nov. 2, said the German War Lord, the invaders must sell dear, die and the Kaiser cried every inch within his power to carry the town.

The outskirts of Arras were reached yesterday by an advancing column of the foe before a rench charge drove them back several miles. Bloody conflicts have taken place around Lille, which appears to have been vacated by the Germans. The situation is very confused in this region and little can be accurately told. Following a previous defeat at Amont-de-Vailly the French have won a success of considerable importance.

North of the Meuse, French forces have driven the Germans further back. To the east, around Ban de Sapt, a number of high points have been taken depriving the Germans of artillery posts that commanded several towns, including St. Die. This is regarded as a victory of much value.

The communique of the Belgian Government, issued from Havre, lays great stress on the fact that Pelkapelle has been surrounded. This gives the allies command of roads leading to Dixmude, Ypres, Roulers and Thourout. The Belgians also reoccupied the compulsory evacuation by the Germans of Ramscapelle, which they held in part. Many prisoners were taken, says the statement, and the Germans threw back of an important railway line.

It is reported, the despatch adds, that the allies Sunday occupied Leffinghe, on the Ostend-Nieuport Canal, which, if true, means that the Germans suffered a heavy defeat.

GIVE LIFE'S BLOOD TO SAVE SOLDIERS

Lyons, France, November 2.—An appeal for blood to save wounded soldiers appeared in a local paper.

No sooner had this notice appeared than volunteers presented themselves and Dr. Alexis Carrel, the famous Rockefeller's Institute, and now the head of one of the Lyons Hospitals, was able immediately to save several patients. Three days ago there already were 120 names at the Hotel Dieu, representing rich and poor and all classes of society. Needless to add, women were conspicuous in the list.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 2.—There was a good demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today at a further advance of 6d per quarter, and sales of 25 loads were made, but considerably more business could have been done if the spot grain were available. There was also a good demand from exporters for wheat on spot, and sales of 50 loads were made. The local trade in coarse grains was fair at firm prices, there being an improved demand for oats and corn. A first feeling of firmness in the flour market, but the volume of business doing for both local and export account is still small. Millfeed is steady under a better demand.

The butter market is quiet, finest creamery at the auction sale closed at 32½c.

Cheese is also quiet. Exports for the week were 21,943 boxes, as compared with 26,823 for the same week last year.

Eggs active, and firm.

"THE LIES WHICH GOOD PEOPLE TELL"

Interesting Subject Was Discussed by Dr. Gordon Last Night ---He Will Take Up the Question of Family Finances at To-night's Meeting.

Dr. Gordon will deliver a special address in the George Street Methodist church this evening, on "The Home Life," his subject being "Family Finances," or "How Much Does it Cost to Furnish a House For Two." As a prelude to the discourse, he will answer a certain number of questions which have been been sent in by enquiring individuals. During the evening, Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the coloured singer, will render three selections, the first, one of his own compositions, entitled "Childhood Days," "Would You Believe," and third, an old plantation melody, entitled, "Steal Away to Jesus."

The following questions will be answered:

1. Is it right to talk of labour questions in the church?
2. Do you believe that those in heaven see and know what we are doing on earth?
3. Should preachers of the Gospel receive such large salaries as they do?
4. If God is just, why does He tempt us? And if He is merciful, why does He not do us the justice of taking away from our backs the load He puts upon them?
5. Is it right to have a sale of goods in the church?
6. Is it right to rent pews in the church?
7. Do you believe that the size of a man's head has anything to do with the strength of his mind?
8. Do our up-to-date preachers believe in a real hell?
9. Would you place any faith in what astrologers tell you as to the future?
10. Do you slander a person when you simply tell the truth about them?
11. Can you suggest a remedy for cruelty to dumb animals?

Mr. Gordon's speech last evening was on "The Lies Which Some Good People Tell." Dr. Gordon said as follows:

The lowest character of history is spoken of as "The Father of Lies." The highest character referred to myself is, "The Way, the Truth and the Light." Hypocrisy is the incarnation of a lie, and the careless use of words is the first step towards insincerity. The world has a contempt for the crook in trade, the quack in medicine, the fake in society, and the hypocrite in religion. The crowning virtue is "Sincerity, the crowning vice is "Hypocrisy." You can love a weak man, a sinful man, a reckless man, a prodigal or a sensualist, but no man can love a hypocrite.

Wellington said concerning Napoleon, "He was bound to fail, because his messages were lies." That which is built on a lie ends in failure. A lying lock yields, a lying safe opens, a lying investment fails, a lying argument breaks down, a lying business succumbs, a lying track widens, a lying dynamo explodes, a lying wire electrocutes, a lying bridge gives way, a lying clock misleads, and a lying boiler explodes. The man who tells the truth, rides in a square car of solid steel. The design of this discourse this evening is that man may be sincere, honest, frank and transparent as the sunlight. In dealing with the subject, Dr. Gordon mentioned ten of the lies which good people are prone to tell.

First—The Commercial Lies.

"It is not, it is not saith the liar."
But when he has gone he boasteth."

Commercial lies are as old as the books of proverbs and much older. Goods are marked up and then marked down, and the moral discrepancies in the commercial realm to-day are so striking and outstanding, that when a young man brought up in our churches and Sunday schools enters the commercial realm, he finds himself battling for the ideals which he had enthroned in his soul.

Second—The Social Lie. The white lie of modern society is built when the mistress in the parlour asks the maid in the house to go to the front door and inform the visitor that she is "not at home." The private secretary of General Grant said to the servant in the White House, who announced the presence of a visitor, "Tell him the President is not in." General Grant rebuked his private secretary saying, "Tell him nothing of the sort, I do not lie myself, and I do not want anybody to lie for me." If you ask your maid to lie for you, bye and bye she will lie to you and lie about you.

Third—The Legal Lie. There is no realm of human achievement where men are more prone to play with words and mere technicalities, as in the legal realm, and when a man begins to play with words, he begins to play with his conscience and no man is so great a fool as the man who fools himself. A friend of mine stated to me, "It is true that I am engaged in the liquor business, but I am engaged in the wholesale liquor business. I do not stand behind the bar," but the dangerous man in the liquor business is not the man who stands behind the bar, but the brewer, distiller and the wholesale liquor merchants, who are filling our papers with advertisements and crowding our streets with electrical signs. These are the men who are sometimes admitted to church membership and also to official relationship in the church. Mark the words of Campbell Morgan, "The church must declare that there is no room within her borders for any man who in his business, is identified with the forces whichare tempting humanity."

Fourth—The Patriotic Lie.— A British subject stood in a great patriotic gathering and sang:

"God save our gracious King,
Long live our noble King,
God save our King.
Send him victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us,
God save our King."

As he passed out of the great tabernacle, his eyes filled with tears and he exclaimed, "I feel as though I could die for the flag, for the empire, for the king, God bless him, the king." Inside of three months, this very man was in gaol for defrauding the government.

Fifth—The Musical Lie.— When a

SEVENTY-NINE MORE PETERBORO' BOYS OFF TO FIGHT FOR THE EMPIRE

latter contingency would never come. As citizens of Peterborough, of Canada and of Great Britain, he urged them to live up to the great traditions of the Empire, the home of liberty, the protector of right and the defender of the faith. To be brave, true, honest, fair and kind was to fulfill these greatest traditions.

"The present crisis had not been equalled for one hundred years, and the speaker believed that every man was willing to give his services if it was necessary to do so They were going to fight for their King, their country and their faith, and he was sure they would do their duty as became true soldiers. The hopes and prayers of all citizens went with them.

Rev. Jas. Rollins.

"I consider it a signal honour to speak to you volunteers this morning," said Rev James Rollins, in his opening remarks. Duty was the highest thing in life. Every man and woman had many duties to perform, but the one the members of the second contingent had chosen, was of the most difficult type. The weak man chose the easy duty, but the strong man saw the big duty, and measured his strength accordingly. "You are conferring an honour on the City," Mr Rollins stated, "and I honour you for it." He hoped their action would be contagious and that many would follow their example.

The reverend speaker paid a glowing tribute to the mothers of the departing soldiers, to whom all honour was due. These men were going forward on behalf of the land that had nurtured them, that had educated them, and for the religion in which they had received their ideals, that would strengthen and sustain them in doing their duty on the firing line. He urged them to keep up a high standard of physical strength, to care for their bodies as became true men. Their training days would cultivate a sense of sufficiency that would mean much to them. Concluding, he said: God would honour them for the fulfillment of their duty.

Interspersing the addresses were selections by the Band and several outbursts of cheers.

Following the addresses the contingent was taken to the Lecture Room, where they found a most enjoyable luncheon awaiting them. This was arranged for by the Women's War Fund Committee, and served in splendid style by T. H. Hooper. The room was appropriately decorated with flags and bunting and the tables were most artistically arranged The soldier boys fell upon the array of good things with a vengeance and the hospitality of the ladies was greatly appreciated. While the repast was being served the men sang the old South African favourite, "Soldiers of The King," and the new marching song of the British Army, "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary." In the hall outside the 57th Band rendered patriotic airs.

Before the end of the luncheon the ladies of the War Fund Committee presented each member of the contingent with a parcel containing Balaclava sleeping helmets and knitted wristlets, gifts that will be found thoroughly useful by the men during their drill and afternoons.

On behalf of the contingent, Major (Rev. Canon) Davidson expressed the thanks of the soldier boys for the gifts, and three hearty cheers and a tiger were given for the ladies.

At the conclusion of the luncheon a short religious service was conducted by Major J. C. Davidson, Chaplain of the Regiment, who offered prayers for the soldiers.

At 12 o'clock, headed by the 57th Brass and Bugle Bands, the contingent left the Armouries and marched to the C. P. R. Station by way of Murray and George streets. In spite of the rain the streets were lined and the soldier boys were repeatedly cheered as they marched along. For part of the march the new Tommy Atkins sang the Tipperary song.

At the Station an enormous crowd had gathered and the cheers were redoubled as the procession arrived. Two cars for the local contingent were waiting on a siding, and the boys quickly entrained. There were many heart-rending scenes as the last farewells were said—men who had borne themselves gaily during the early proceedings, broke down when it came to say good-bye to relatives; mothers, who had bravely signed permission for their sons to go, were overcome at the last moment, and some of the good-byes were most affecting. Soon the 12.13 train arrived, bearing the 45th of Lindsay, and they had a fine reception, while the two contingents exchanged greetings The cars bearing the Peterborough quota were quickly coupled to the rear and, amid a last outburst of cheering, the train pulled out, leaving many tearful relatives on the platform.

Here is a complete list of the contingent which went down in charge of Capt. R. T. Hounsell. The information is as complete as could be procured:

PATRIOTIC MEETING!

TO-NIGHT at 8:15 in the ARMOURIES

A Call To The Citizens Of PETERBOROUGH

THE SERIOUS POSSIBILITIES of the Sultan's entry into the European War, are so apparent that they challenge each and every Briton.

We cannot, nor do we wish, to blind ourselves to the danger which threatens those links in Britain's globe-girdling chain adjacent to the Sultan's territories. The menace of the Hun and the Turk looms large before us. We know not what to-morrow will bring.

But we do know that our confidence is unshaken and that we are unafraid, and we are resolved that our response to the Empire's call in this crisis will be to the last man and the last dollar.

But we must be ready; we must all be ready and eager. And to explain the righteousness of our cause, and to cast our sentiments in a common mould, to-night's meeting has been called by Mayor Buller.

Everyone should be there.

This is a summons to young men first; the men about town, the workingman, clerks and office men. There is no immediate call to arms, but decades of peace have naturally dulled the edge of our interests and the direct sense of our responsibilities.

We want not a few, but every young man in Peterborough, to feel in his pulse beats the throb of that unselfishness, that self-sacrifice, that patriotism, that glowed in his grandsires, who founded and developed this offspring of the Motherland

The older men should be present. Yesterday we were warned of threats against our own Dominion, and through this came to us the necessity of preparing for home defence. The husbands and fathers must set the example to our youth.

TO THE LADIES OF PETERBOROUGH THIS SUMMONS IS ALSO SOUNDED.

Their support, their zeal, their encouragement, will be an added incentive. Their interests are bound up with those of the men, and it is a unity of determination that will break any danger that may threaten our Empire.

The speakers to-night will be Mayor Buller, J. H. Burnham, M.P., G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Judge Huycke, and representatives of the clergy of the City.

Our patriotism may soon be put to the acid test. We must show our unity and glory in it.

"Send him victorious!
Happy and glorious!
Long to reign over us!
God Save the King!"

Let us show to-night that we are ready to bear our share in the burden of whatever crisis may beset the Empire.

The 57th Regimental Band will be present. Let us remember the sacrifices that are being made throughout the Empire, and show that we are prepared to accept our share.

GRAPHIC PICTURE OF THE CONDITIONS ON THE NIEUPORT-DIXMUNDE LINE

Correspondent Rides Bicycle Down the Road Amid a Rain of Shrapnel, Horses and Drivers Killed Only Fifty Yards Away---Red Cross Does Great Work.

CALAIS, Nov. 1, via London, Nov. 2 (by Jacques Obels).—Following the road from Nieuport to Dixmunde, I found that the shrapnel fire was very heavy. I saw a team of six horses and a driver killed fifty yards away. I slid off my bicycle repeatedly and lay down flat on the ground when a screaming shell came too near. On one occasion I rode the bicycle straight into a hidden trench, where the soldiers set up a frightful shout, doubtless thinking that a shell had come down upan them. When they found that it was only a newspaper man they were thoroughly indignant, and it required a liberal distribution of cigarettes to smooth their ruffled feelings.

Wishing to return along the same road, I found that the Belgian artillery was retreating five kilometres (three miles) towards Furnes, and I was assured that the Germans had crossed the Yser. Taking a by-road toward Furnes I found the advanced infantry striking camp.

Forage for Your Own Feed.

A commissariat seems impossible around here, as the troops are continually moving about. Everybody has to shift for himself. This, however, in this case did not deter the soldiers from preparing a dinner.

A squad was told off to rope an unwilling cow, which was slaughtered on the spot and a camp kettle was set boiling. Great pieces of meat and any green stuff found in the fields were thrown in and the whole was quickly converted into succulent soup. Unhappily, when it was nearly ready an alarm was sounded, all the kettles were overturned, and we had to resign ourselves to a dinner of uprooted turnips and bread.

On arriving in Furnes I went to the Belgian headquarters. I saw King Albert going out of the city hall. His handsome face wore a troubled look. Accompanied by a staff officer I ascended the spire of the town hall, from the top of which I had a fine view of the surrounding country. The advanced firing line could be plainly seen. On descending we found that a general conference was being held by the Belgian general staff, at which French, British, and Russian military attaches were present. The uniform of the Russian was strikingly similiar to that of a German staff officer.

German prisoners were being brought into town all day long to the accompaniment of jeering and howling by the inhabitants. The captives were a sorry-looking lot, with their close-cropped heads, soiled clothes, and terror-stricken faces. Their helmets had been taken off by Belgian soldiers, to be kept as souvenirs. When they reached the town hall they were immediately supplied with bread and butter, which, notwithstanding their terror, they began immediately to devour as if they had not eaten for days.

I was told by the officer who had searched them that the prisoners' pockets were filled with choice cigarettes, bearing the names of Ostend firms, suggesting that some looting had been done in that city.

The Trophies and the Wounded.

Amid great cheers a German machine gun was carried into town, with ammunition complete, and 300 rifles, which had been taken at the trenches near Fervyse, that afternoon.

The French kept pouring into Furnes and the stores were soon emptied of their contents. I saw more trainloads of wounded arriving and I was struck by the predominance of Belgians among them. In one train of eight cars seven were loaded with Belgian wounded and one with French Marine fusiliers. I also saw a number of Singalese tirailleurs, their black faces gleaming, but impassive under the white bandages. They seemed to derive much comfort from puffing at big black cigars.

I visited the hospital and found the Red Cross staff utterly unable to handle the immense amount of work before them. Every inch of the room was used and the least injured were put outside in sheds to wait, perhaps for days, to be attended to. The British nurses are above praise. They are doing all that is possible to alleviate the pain of the sufferers. The mortality is excessive. In one case six deaths occurred within five minutes. The dead were at once removed to make room for more wounded. Some of the injured were frightful. I saw one man who had been struck by a piece of shrapnel, which entered the side of his head, leaving a gaping hole. I asked him if I could carry a message to his relatives, but he gave an inarticulate gurgle and soon died. Arms or legs of others were shattered and the doctors were going around amputating with as little loss of time as possible.

The pluck of the British nurses is admirable. They are working day and night amid an overpowering smell of stale blood and disinfectants. The wounded at the front have their injuries dressed roughly, but the wounds are not disinfected, and are full of grit and dirt.

I was told by a wounded Belgian that the Germans take no notice of a white flag. A small detachment of Belgians was overtaken in a flat country, devoid of any shelter, by a superior force of Germans. After a desperate stand of some minutes they found that resistance was useless and made a white flag out of handkerchiefs which they tied to a rifle and raised above their heads, at the same time laying down their arms. No notice was taken by the enemy, who kept on firing. The Belgians resolved to make a reckless charge and free themselves or die in the attempt. So fierce and effective was their onset that they managed to rout the enemy and take some prisoners.

ALIENS MUST BE REGISTERED

Offices For That Purpose Will Be Opened In Many Centres

OTTAWA, Nov. 3.—That offices for registration of citizens of hostile countries will be opened at once in Montreal, Ottawa, Sydney, Fort William, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver is stated by the Department of Justice.

Other offices at various cities may be opened up later if it is found necessary. Special registration officers are to be selected for each district, and the whole work of guarding any concentration camps of Austrians Germans or Austrians will be placed in charge of Brigadier-General Otter of Toronto.

The department will first ascertain the approximate number of aliens of hostile countries in the various districts, and secure data as to their character and business. It is not proposed to proceed at once to intern all these aliens, but only such as are considered likely to be dangerous to leave without strict surveillance.

The work of registration will be begun at once, and every German or Austrian will be compelled to promptly report to the registration officers.

Noted Singer Visits Sick Woman That She Might Hear Her

LIMA, O., Nov. 3.—Mme. Schumann-Heink, who gave a concert here learned the other day that Mrs. Margaret Clarke, of this city, who had been an invalid for 15 years, unable to move from her home, had expressed a desire to hear the famous contralto.

Mme. Schumann-Heink went to Mrs. Clarke's home and sang several songs for her, afterward conversing with the aged woman and discussing the European war, music and other questions.

Mme. Schumann-Heink said afterward the short visit at Mrs. Clarke's home did her more good than pleasing 5,000 people in her concert last evening.

APPOINTMENT IS CONFIRMED

Miss Jessie Swinton will be Deputy Treasurer for Six Months.

The appointment of Miss Jessie Swinton to the position of Deputy-Treasurer was confirmed by by-law at Monday night's meeting of the City Council. The appointment was made for six months, so as to give City Treasurer Adams ample time to recover from the operation which he is contemplating.

Ald. Stratton raised a technical point when he rose to enquire what remuneration Miss Swinton would receive from the City. Ald. Johnston replied that she would be paid by Mr. Adams, as formerly.

Ald. Stratton pointed out that as a City official, Miss Swinton must be paid something by the City. Prior to her appointment, Miss Swinton was in the employ of Mr. Adams.

The by-law provides for no remuneration," observed City Solicitor Gordon.

"Portfolio without remuneration," suggested Ald. Green.

"We will let the thing run along as it is," said Mayor Buller. Mr. Adams has been a faithful servant, and it is unfortunate that he should be required to relinquish his duties in order to undergo an operation. It would be better to let him deal with the question of paying Miss Swinton as he has done in the past. When Mr. Adams returns to his duties some readjustment will have to be made.

CITY'S DEPOSIT WILL REMAIN IN COURT

Until a Satisfactory Agreement is Secured From the Peterboro' Light and Power Company

THE CITY COUNCIL

"Peterborough's electric lighting system formed the chief topic for a sixty minute discussion that was held on Monday evening under the auspices of the Peterborough City Council. Ald. Green started the ball rolling by asking for information about the "light business," whereupon Ald. Johnston, assuming that Ald. Green's reference was directed at the city's newly acquired lighting system, volunteered an explanation.

Number of Complaints.

"I don't know anything about the light question," said Ald. Johnston, extending himself. For the past two years we have refrained from installing additional street lights, in view of the negotiations that were being undertaken for the purpose of acquiring the distributing system of the Peterborough Light and Power Company. We have had a number of complaints from citizens respecting the dimness of the light supplied in some sections of the city. The Public Utilities Commission have the matter in hand and a better system of lighting is promised."

Ald. Green suggested that Mayor Buller call a special meeting to facilitate a more thorough discussion of the subject.

Ald. Johnston — "I am not criticising anybody. If more horse power is needed to generate sufficient light, then we must have the horse power."

That $160,000.

At this juncture Ald. Stratton moved that the one hundred thousand dollars which the city had paid into court pending settlement of the arbitration proceedings between the city and the Peterborough Light and Power Company, be retained in court until a satisfactory agreement was executed between the city and company. A few days ago a resolution was passed authorizing the solicitors acting for the city, to pay over the money as soon as the mortgage upon the company's property had been discharged.

Ald. Stratton moved to have this resolution rescinded and a new one substituted vesting in the City Council the responsibility of deciding when the money should be paid over. In this Ald. Stratton was supported by Aldermen Langford and McIntyre.

"As long as we have the one hundred thousand dollars in our hands we have something to use as a lever throughout the final stages of our negotiations with the company," said Ald. Langford.

Ald. McIntyre — "If the Board of Arbitration fix the value of the company's distributing system at eighty thousand dollars, then are we going to recover the remaining twenty thousand dollars if we paid the one hundred thousand dollars now?"

"We will be guided by our counsel," said His Worship Mayor Buller, in reply to Ald. McIntyre's conundrum.

Time Enough.

"It's time enough to pay the money over when the thing is settled," countered Ald. Stratton.

Ald. Johnston—"I am just as keen to look after the city's interest as you are, Ald. Stratton."

"Why don't you do it in a business way?" was the latter's reminder. "At the present time we should keep the money in court, until the proper time comes to pay it over to the company. Permission can then be obtained from this Council."

Mayor Buller—"We must not take steps that would jeopardize our position. When the proper time comes to pay over the money, we must be guided by expert legal opinion."

Ald. Stratton's motion, which was endorsed by the majority of the Council, will enable that body to have the final say in the disposition of the one hundred thousand dollars which will go towards the purchase of the city's newly acquired lighting system.

THE STOCK MARKET

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Nov. 2.—Union Stock Yards.—Receipts were very heavy in all classes. 243 cars, 3,955 cattle, 2,087 hogs, 2,233 sheep and lambs, 403 calves and 849 horses.

Cattle: There were a few good to choice loads of cattle on the market, but again the common, medium and inferior classes prevailed. Choice butchers' steers, $8.25 to $8.60, one load at latter price; good do., $8 to $8.25; medium do., $7.50 to $7.75; common do., $6 to $6.25; choice butcher's heifers, $7.25 to $7.50; common do., $7 to $7.25; choice cows, $6.50 to $6.75; good cows, $5.75 to $6.25; canners, $3.50 to $4.50; bulls, $5 to $6.75.

Feeders and Stockers: Market steady. Choice steers, $6.25 to $6.50, with a few at $6.75; medium steers, $5.75 to $6.25; stockers, $4.75 to $5.50; eastern stockers, $4 to $4.50.

Milkers and Springers: Not many on sale at $60 to $90 each, bulk sold at $70 to $80 each.

A Virginia inventor's sandpapering machine consists of an endless belt of sandpaper, driven by two drums that are rotated by a treadle.

CITY PROPERTY SAID TO ENCROACH

On the Property of the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Company

Mr. W. H. Denham wrote to the City Council saying that the sidewalk on the north side of Hunter street, east of the Hunter street bridge, adjoining the property of the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Company, encroached considerably on the Hydraulic property. The matter was referred to the Board of Works.

A Fish License.

A deputation consisting of two men waited upon the City Council with the object of securing a license to peddle fish, for a period of six months. As it is, licenses are issued for a period not less than twelve months. The fee being thirty dollars. The applicants were advised to take out a license for a full year in anticipation of obtaining a refund at the end of six months.

Placed on Committees.

Aldrman Weir has been placed on all committees of the City Council with the exception of the Finance Committee. Alderman Stratton was given a position on the latter.

Fence Viewers Appointed.

The appointment of ex-Aldermen Metheral, Brown, and City Engineer Parsons, as fence viewers, was confirmed at last night's meeting of the City Council. Aldermen Green and Dullus were of the opinion that the position could have been vested in men with just as much brains, but not quite so much money. Alderman Stratton assured the Council that the committee of which he was a representative, had given the matter careful consideration. "I hope this noble body will agree with our recommendation," said Alderman Stratton in conclusion.

THE LIES GOOD PEOPLE TELL

man contributes to the church on the open collection plate, and when on the approach of the collection plate, he invariably selects the smallest coin in his pocket, and when after the collection has been received, this beloved brother rises and sings lustily: "Were the whole realm of Nature mine,
That were an offering far too small,
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my heart, my life, my all."

That man is indulging in what I am pleased to call, a "musical lie."

Sixth — The Conventional Lie. — George Brandes, the Danish writer, and the author of forty volumes of history, exclaimed: "I was idolised in France, yet I knew that none of the people who said sweet things to me, had read my books." These folk were indulging in the "conventional lie."

Seventh—The Financial Lie. The financial lie is very often told by a man who affirms that he cannot afford to subscribe for religious and benevolent purposes. A Welsh millionaire wrote to Charles H. Spurgeon, saying, "Come and help us raise our large debt. It is simply crowding us. Come and spend your vacation with us and help us liquidate this debt. You can spend a week in my town house in Hampton, and another week in my seaside resortat Brighton, and still a third week at my country home at Sea View." Mr. Spurgeon answered: "Dear sir, sell one of your country homes and pay the church debt. Yours sincerely, C. H. Spurgeon."

Eight—The Devotional Lie. There are a great many people who fib and fabricate in the matter of religion. Fred Douglas affirmed, that away back in the days of slavery, when he asked a preacher of the Gospel for the use of his church in order to deliver an anti-slavery address, that preacher would say to him, "I do not know about this." "I must ask the Lord about this matter." "Let us pray about it." Douglas affirmed, "When they prayed with me, they never gave me the church." In other words, these preachers had been handing out to the coloured brethren a religious bluff, and a devotional life. Why in the name of God cannot we be honest with people and give an honest man a straight answer for a straight question.

Nine—The Lie of Mock Humility. There are people who affirm that they do not like praise. They do not care for compliments. They do not crave for encouragement, but I affirm that that man has yet to be born who does not appreciate an honest word of encouragement or a kind compliment. Oliver Wendell Holmes, after a great address before a Boston audience, was asked by a friend who said to him, "Do not you get tired of all this cheering and applauding?" His answer was characteristic. "I never get tired of the applauding of an audience. I like it. Something in my heart craves for it. It does me good. Why not be honest; why not be frank, why not be sincere, why indulge in a lie of mock humility?

Ten—The Theological Lie. When we repeat the Apostles' Creed together we say, "I believe in God, the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth." I wonder if we really believe in Him, and I wonder still more, how much we believe in Him. Robert G. Ingersoll said: "If I believed in the Heaven and the Hell which Christians profess to believe in, I could not rest day or night." A murderer said to a prison chaplain in England, who offered him the consolation of religion, as he was about to ascend the scaffold, "I have no use for your religious consolations. I do not believe that you are sincere in the religion which you profess. If I believed as you profess to believe, I would walk with bare feet on broken glass, all over England, in order to tell men the convictions of my soul."

Dr. Gordon closed his address with an earnest and pressing evangelistic appeal.

ALL WELL IN THE EAST

Russia Has a Complete Series of Successes to Report

PETROGRAD, Nov. 3.—The following report from the General Staff of the Russian commander-in-chief was made public here last night:

"On the front in Eastern Prussia our troops have repulsed German attacks directed against Vladislavoff, driven the enemy from the eastern edge of the Rominten Forest and advanced to the north of Lake Salgarved.

"Beyond the Vistula our troops continue the offensive without being opposed. Only in the region of Opatow the Austrians attempted to resist us with considerable forces. They were repulsed. Beyond the Opatow river the Austrians hold a fortified position.

"In Galicia, on the San river, our troops entered the Village of Nisko, where fierce fighting took place.

"On the rest of the front the situation is virtually unchanged."

The military correspondent of The Novoe Vremya, explaining the changing disposition of the enemy's forces, says:

"The Austrians are moving south and southwest toward the west Galician frontier and Cracow, while the Germans, retreating from Warsaw, are falling back west and southwest toward the Silesian frontier. As the Russian troops from Warsaw and Novoe Georgievsk follow the Germans, the Russian East Prussian corps is moving in force on the regions northwest of Warsaw, covering Warsaw from the direction of Mlawa and occupying both banks of the Vistula below Warsaw."

Music & Drama

THE EARL OF PAWTUCKET.

Lawrence D'Orsay, the well known English comedian in his favourite role of "Lord Cardington," in "The Earl of Pawtucket," paid a return visit to Peterborough last night, and as a result a large audience at the Grand Opera House forgot the war and hard times as they laughed at the complications in which he found himself. Mr. D'Orsay is funnier than ever. As the English nobleman, "not superficially alert," he kept the audience convulsed while he was on the stage and was given a fine reception at the end of each act. He acknowledged the applause in a neat speech, in which he called attention to the fact that he was born in Peterborough, England, in fact was a Peterborough cheese cake. Mr. D'Orsay was supported by an excellent company. Miss Dora Jane Kelton was admirable as Harriet Fordyce, and Miss Beulah Benton delightful as Ella Seaforth. Mr. Porter Warfield's presentation of Wilkins was a splendid piece of character acting.

HOW TO CURE STOMACH TROUBLES

Excessive acid in the stomach or hyperacidity, as it is called, is primarily responsible for nearly all cases of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis, and flatulence, and quite frequently leads to stomach ulcers. The successful treatment for prevention as well as cure of such cases depends entirely on neutralizing the excess acid, stopping the food fermentation, and healing the inflamed mucous membrane that lines the stomach. For this purpose specialists are now advising the use of pure bisurated magnesia, which has recently been found to be unexcelled in the treatment of even the severest cases. A teaspoonful in a little water immediately after eating stops all pain almost instantly, neutralizes the acid, and soothes the inflamed stomach and if regularly used will quickly remove the cause of the trouble and effect complete relief.

THE ARRIVAL OF THE CANUCKS

Lieut. Harold Matthews Sends an Interesting Letter

Mrs. T. F. Matthews has received a letter from her son, Lieut. Harold S. Matthews, 2nd Battery, 1st Artillery Brigade, Canadian contingent, and the Examiner is permitted to give it as below:

Salisbury Plains,
Wednesday, 21st, 1914.

Dear Mother,—It is a considerable time since I wrote you last, or rather it seems a long time, but I have been at it all the time since our disembarkation.

The latest and most probable rumour is that we stay here until March and then go to the theatre of war. Certainly circumstances point to that. Firstly they are building tin huts to house us in for the winter, which we are to occupy in about five weeks' time. Secondly, Kitchener's army is going over then and we are to form one division of it. There is only one hope for the keener spirits among us and that is this: That this is an artillery war to a very great extent, a duel between guns, and we may go to fill up the gaps made by the casualties, which have been particularly heavy in the artillery.

The only exciting part to our voyage was the last day. Then it was that we were suddenly surrounded with torpedo boat destroyers and taken to Plymouth. The order came suddenly because the very trains were at Southampton with steam up, to take us away, and every other facility was provided. However, it became known that some German submarines were on the lookout for us, and were taken to Plymouth. It is believed that these beasts sank the "Hawke."

Well, as luck would have it, we were taken to Plymouth and then to Devonport. Devonport is a sister city to Plymouth, just as Hull is to Ottawa, except that the population of Devonport is 95 p.c. naval, and the inhabitants are all employed on the government docks or naval works. As we sailed up the Tamar River to our moorings at Devonport it was a splendid sight. On the one side the houses and factories, first of Plymouth and then of Devonport, and on the other calm neat cottages surrounded by their gardens. If anything will smarten men up and make them neat in their personal appearance and habits it is trim, orderly surroundings, and England is therefore the ideal place to train troops.

But to continue. On our way from the breakwater at Plymouth to our berths, a distance of two miles or so, we were cheered from every place of prominence on the shore, with bands playing and lots of people, a splendid welcome, and the naval cadets on board the training ship "Impregnable" gave us a shrill cheer as we passed them. The Impregnable is an old ship of the "Victory" class of Nelson's day, built of teak wood, now moored in the river as a naval barracks. We passed numerous cruisers and battleships in for repairs or to get new guns mounted, notably the battleship, "Lion."

Thirty-one ships were soon moored off the naval docks, but there were only berths for six, and luckily we were in the first six, so we came along our dock about 1 o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

The docks were in no condition to receive us as gun mountings were scattered all over them, and we had to wait until the disembarkation officer transferred his headquarters from Southampton to Devonport. About 7 p.m. we got the order to start unloading, and with the help of naval ratings we began with our guns and baggage. We worked until 5 a.m., and by the time we had finished everything but our horses. At 6:30 we got up again, had breakfast, and started on the horses. We finished them at 9 o'clock, at night. The horses, in great coats had to be slung in big dogies from the hold to the wharf and came out all right, thin and clothed up. They were taken immediately to the naval cricket field, where picketing lines had been laid down and water troughs were improvised.

I will begin another chapter in my next letter.

Your affectionately,
HAROLD.

TO ENCOURAGE ENLISTMENT

"Canada is at War as Well as the Empire" Says Mayor Fuller

At last night's meeting of the City Council, His Worship Mayor Fuller, invited the aldermen to attend the public meeting which is to be held in the Armouries to-night for the purpose of encouraging enlistment. His Worship dwelt upon the necessity of raising sufficient forces to smash the Kaiser's war machine. "Canada is at war as well as the Empire," admonished the Mayor.

Letter From Mr. Harry King

Mrs. King Receives Missive From Her Son in England

Mrs John King, of this City, has received a letter from her son, Mr. Harry King, who is now in the Old Country with the Toronto contingent. He is with the artillery and, according to his letter, the reports of the excellence of the German guns have not instilled any fear in the hearts of the Canadian artillerymen.

The letter reads, in part, as follows:

Dear Mother,—We arrived here yesterday after a fine trip across. We are waiting our turn to unload. There are thirty-three transport ships so we'll be here a day or so yet. We take the train from here to Salisbury Plains, up near London, and go in training for a month or so more. The artillery is the hardest to get in condition. In the three brigades of artillery we have 7,200 horses. We all ride horses, so there is no walking, but rough riding at times. I like it fine and never felt better. The war news we get in Canada is different to what we are getting here. Three battleships were blown up in the North Sea, recently. On land, the British losses have been heavy, and in some parts of France the cholera has broke out. Germany has the finest artillery in the world and we are getting anxious to get a crack at them. Think we will make out good. We have good horses, guns and officers. Will close for the present. Will write later. Love to all.

"Harry".

MANY DESERTERS FROM THE ENEMY

The Germans are clamouring for reinforcements, but the commanders at Brussels, Antwerp, Liege and Namur cannot send men to them as their own garrisons are reduced to the minimum.

The old members of the landstrum are expected to arrive with a week.

The German commanders are terribly worried by the ever increasing number of deserters. After a fierce campaign of twelve weks with continuous fighting amid terrible hardships and with scanty food, most of the men have had enough. They steal civilian clothes from Belgian peasants and escape over the Dutch border.

In Brussels, while the population starves the German officers feast boisterously every night in hotels and private houses.

His Undoing.

"I wouldn't o' had no trouble wif de constable ner nobody," said Mr. Erastus Pinkley, "if it hadn't been for woman's love o' dress."

"What has dress got to do with it?" asked the jailer.

TWO BRITISH CRUISERS SUNK BY GERMAN FLEET OFF THE COAST OF CHILI

Third Cruiser Disabled in Fierce Encounter—Enemy Lined Up Five Ships to British Three—No Official Statement Yet.

ODDS WERE TOO HEAVY

VALPARAISO, Chile, Nov. 3.— A British fleet of two armoured cruisers and a light cruiser was attacked and defeated off Coronel, Chile, 300 miles south of here, to-day by a German fleet of two armoured cruisers and three light cruisers.

The British cruiser Monmouth was sunk, the Good Hope was badly damaged and the Glasgow was forced to take refuge in the harbour of Coronel, where she is interned, and is said to be badly damaged.

The German squadron, composed of the armoured cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the light cruisers Leipsic, Dresden and Nurnberg, apparently escaped serious injury. The Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Nurnberg arrived at noon to-day in Valparaiso harbour and anchored.

Officers of the squadron report that the Good Hope, the most powerful British ship in western seas, of 14,100 tons displacement, and a sister ship of the Drake, King Alfred and Leviathan, was burning when last observed, and is supposed to have been destroyed. The Monmouth was sent to the bottom, and the Glasgow escaped because of her great speed.

German Admiral's Report.

Admiral Graf von Spee, commander of the German fleet in Pacific waters, arrived here this morning and made the following report:

"On Sunday, Nov. 1, between six and seven o'clock in the evening, during a heavy rain and rough weather off Coronel, we sighted the British men-of-war Good Hope, Monmouth and Glasgow, and the armoured cruiser Otranto.

"An engagement ensued immediately. All the ships opened a brisk cannonade with all their artillery.

"The Monmouth was sunk and the Good Hope, after a great explosion on board, took fire. Her subsequent fate is unknown, owing to darkness having set in.

"The Glasgow and the Otranto also were damaged, but the darkness prevented our obtaining knowledge of the extent of it.

"Our ships, the Scharnhorst and Nurnberg, were not damaged. The Gneisenau had six men wounded. The rest of our ships also were undamaged."

All Hands Perished.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 3. — All hands are reported to have perished when the British cruiser Monmouth took her plunge beneath the sea after 30 minutes of fighting with the Germans off Coronel, according to advices received here.

The battle was a terrific one while it lasted, and as darkness gathered the Good Hope seemed to be on fire following a terrible burst of flame from her, which seemed to indicate that an explosion had occurred on board.

The Glasgow is reported to have arrived in a very bad condition in Coronel Bay. The Otranto escaped to Puerto Monte.

The German ships arrived in Valparaiso to-day to take on board coal and provisions.

King George To Review Canadian Contingent To-day

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 4.—(Noon Cable)—King George, Queen Mary and Princess Mary, left London this morning for Salisbury Plains, where they will review the Canadian contingent gathered there. Field Marshall Earl Roberts, Colonel in Chief of Overseas Forces, will accompany them. Their Majesties will make a complete inspection of the forces and visit their hospitals and camp kitchens, and are expected to return to London to-night. All permits for absence on leave, both for officers and men in the Canadian contingent, have been cancelled, and all regiments will present their best and largest front.

To-day's War Bulletins

FRENCH AEROPLANE WINGED

Berlin, Nov 3.—A telegram from Essen states that a French aeroplane, bearing a German flag and an iron cross, was shot down above the station at Duren, eighteen miles east of Aix-la-Chapelle, Sunday afternoon.

WHERE IS CROWN PRINCE?

To-day's reports include queries as to the whereabouts of the German Crown Prince Prince. It is rumoured that he is wounded, and letters from Germany mention his death.

NOTHING OFFICIAL.

Until noon to-day the British Admiralty has made no statement regarding the naval engagement reported off the Chilian coast.

BERLIN, Nov. 4.—(Noon Cable)—To-day's official report of operations on the French-Belgian front explains that the retirement from the Yser was necessary to prevent the attacking force binge drowned, and declares that at every other point on the battle line the Germans are advancing.

ABANDON CALAIS.

London, Nov 3—Official reports agree that the Germans have abandoned their attempt to reach Calais.

CZAR IS DETERMINED TO CRUSH GERMANY

Peace only Possible when the Heart of Enemy's Soil is Reached.

LONDON, November 3—A despatch from Moscow to Reuter's Telegraph Co., says that Emperor Nicholas, in telegraphing his greetings to the Merchants' Association, on the occasion of the opening of its session, said:

"Peace only is possible when Russia reaches the heart of German soil. This is the unanimous opinion of all Muscovites. Any apprehension of peace being concluded before the enemy is completely crushed is unfounded."

Germans On Offensive In Prussia

Have Re-organized Their Forces Behind Their Entrenchments and Prepare to Meet Russians

ADVANCE IN GALICIA

PETROGRAD, NOV. 4—THE GERMANS WHO HAVE REORGANIZED BEHIND THEIR EAST PRUSSIAN ENTRENCHMENTS, HAVE RESUMED THE OFFENSIVE, ACCORDING TO REPORTS FROM THE FRONT. AS A RESULT ANOTHER GENERAL BATTLE SEEMS BEGINNING AS THE SKIRMISHING IS ALREADY IN PROGRESS ALL ALONG THE FRONT. THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN HEAVILY REINFORCED AND HAVE BROUGHT UP ADDITIONAL CANNON FROM THEIR BARRIER FORTS.

THE RUSSIAN LEFT, WHICH HAS BEEN OPERATING AGAINST THE COMBINED AUSTRIA-GERMAN ARMY IN GALACIA, CONTINUES TO ADVANCE ALONG THE REACHES OF THE SAN RIVER. IT IS STATED THAT THE AUSTRIANS HAVE BEEN DEFEATED AT A NUMBER OF POINTS, AND AS A STRONG FORCE OF RUSSIANS HAS ALREADY CROSSED THE SAN, SOUTH OF PRZEMYSL, AND IS MOVING WESTWARD.

NEWS FROM THE CAUCASUS, WHERE THE RUSSIAN ARMY HAS ASSUMED THE OFFENSIVE AGAINST THE TURKS, IS LACKING.

GERMAN FLEET VENTURE OUT?

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Reports are current of a naval battle in the North Sea, but with what result is yet unknown.

The German fleet is said to have come out with the object of making an attack before the process of minelaying, which the British planned to have completed by Thursday, should have restricted the naval offensive.

A Dunkirk despatch says four German battleships and four cruisers have put to sea from Kiel.

Republicans Make Great Gains in New York State

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—As the election returns become complete to-day they emphasized the sweeping Republican victory in New York State on Tuesday. With the collapse of the Progressive movement, the members of that party flocked back to their "first love" and once again the Republicans dominate the State situation.

Charles S. Whitman, Republican, defeated Martin H. Glynn for Governor by a plurality of 151,435. Jas. W. Wadsworth, Republican, defeated James W. Gerard for Federal senator by 81,360. Republicans carry both branches of the Legislature overwhelmingly.

Mohammedans In Russia Are Loyal

PARIS, Nov. 3.—The Havas Agency has received a despatch from its correspondent at Baku on the Caspian Sea, saying that 10,000 Mohammedans assembled in the great mosque of Baku to give expression to their adherence to Russia. Among the great crowd were a number of the clergy and other notables. After prayers for the health of the Emperor and victory over all the enemies of the great Russian fatherland, the manifestants then drew up an address to the local governor, requesting him to convey to Emperor Nicholas their homage and assurances of their desire to sacrifice their property and even their lives in the defence of Russia against her old and new enemies. Particular reference was made to Turkey, "whose aggression in league with the German and Austrian barbarians," the address said, "had awakened in the hearts of all Russian Mohammedans a sentiment of deep indignation. We express our confidence that an undivided Russia supported by the efforts of all her children, will come out of this struggle victorious."

INFORMATION FOR HORSE OWNERS

Mr. Burnham has received the following letter from Major-General Macdonald that will be of interest to horse owners:

Ottawa, 31st Oct., 1914.

Dear Mr. Burnham,—In reply to yours of the 30th instant, I fear that there is some misunderstanding as no instructions or authority have been given to anyone to purchase horses for the Canadian Government; the circumstances you refer to must be in connection with the purchase of remounts for the British Government

As I have aready stated in my previous letter, this Department has not anything to do with these purchases, al arrangements being made through Major-General Sir Frederick Benson. It is regretted that you have been inconvenienced in any way, but I assure you that it is through no fault of this Department

I would suggest that you communicate on the subject with the abovenamed officer and I am sure that a satisfactory explanation will be forthcoming.

Yours faithfully,
D Macdonald.

Kaiser's Forces to Renew Offensive at a Point Nearest Paris—Thoroughly Defeated Along the Yser River and Forced to Retire.

RESERVES SUFFERED

PARIS, Nov. 3.—According to the official reports the Germans have been thoroughly defeated at the River Yser, in Belgium, and have retreated, abandoning ground long and bitterly contested, and admitting their inability to break the allied line between the North Sea and Dixmunde.

They have continued their efforts in the region of Ypres, but the fighting has been less violent, and the allies, slowly and steadily pushing forward, have taken positions lost in previous days. The French Government asserts that the allied armies have made distinct progress in driving a wedge between the German armies in Belgium and the German armies in France.

Particularly hard fighting in the region north of Soissons and along the Aisne indicates that the Germans are now concentrating their force at a point where they are nearest to Paris. Defeated in the north and along the west flank, they are attacking fiercely at the hinge of the old battle line. Ground gained by them yesterday was retaken by the allies to-day. Eastward, near Rheims and to the Argonne ridge, their artillery is very active.

Attempts by the Germans to reach Verdun from the forest of the Argonne, and to relieve their menaced position at St. Mihiel have been checked in the past two days. The official reports point to generally successful operations by the French, British and Belgians.

Reserves Suffered Terribly.

The following communication from the Belgian General Staff to the Belgium Minister of War in Havre was given out to-night:

"The German troops continued yesterday and to-day to evacuate the left bank of the Yser between Nieuport and Dixmude. From the bodies and arms abandoned on the ground evacuated by the enemy, and also from the statements made by prisoners, it may safely be concluded that the 12th and 13th reserve army corps have suffered much in the latest engagements on the Yser. The inactivity of these two corps during the last two days may be attributed to this fact."

SUBMARINE IS SUNK BY MINE

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The British submarine D-5 was sunk in the North Sea early this morning by a mine which was thrown out by a German cruiser which was retreating before British cruisers.

Two officers and two men of the submarine were saved.

This information is contained in an Admiralty report issued here tonight. The report says a German squadron fired on the British gunboat Halcyon, which was patrolling, and wounding one man.

"Various naval movements were made," the report continues, "as a result of which the Germans retreated rapidly and though shadowed by the light cruisers, they could not be brought into a sea action.

"The rearmost German cruiser in her retirement threw out a number of mines, and the submarine was struck by one of them."

5 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS
Mrs. Nettie Massey, Copemish, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can honestly praise this Ointment enough."

TURKEY CANNOT NOW DRAW BACK

LONDON, Nov. 3—A state of war between Turkey on the one side and Russia, Great Britain and Servia on the other, exists, yet the Ottoman Government appears as a house divided against itself, one portion seemingly being desirous of war, while the conservative section is trying to smooth over the situation arising from the attacks upon Russian ports, and ships by Turkish war vessels directed by German officers.

Russia apparently has welcomed the war and will not give the Turks a chance to draw back, while the British cruiser Minerva has smashed the Turkish base of operations against Egypt at the head of the Gulf of Akabah. The Turkish ambassador in London has, as yet, made no arrangements to leave and the embassy still maintains a conciliatory attitude

MOHAMMEDANS IN INDIA WORKING FOR GREAT BRITAIN

SIMLA, Nov. 3.—The announcement of the unfriendly attitude of Turkey toward the Allies was made throughout India on Sunday in an official communication wherein the Viceroy of India deplores "the endeavour of a chauvinistic element to drive Turkey into a war with Great Britain for the benefit of Germany and Austria."

The reception which the announcement received in the outlying districts will not be known for some days, but responsible leaders of the Mohammedan community already are holding meetings in support of Great Britain, while the mosques are organising prayers for the success of the British arms. The Mullahs are preaching homilies urging Turkey either to maintain a neutrality or side with the Allies.

GERMAN CROWN PRINCE SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

More Substantial Reports Emanate This Time from Strassburg.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—A wounded man was brought recently to the Imperial Palace at Strassburg, and medical experts from Berlin were summoned to attend him. The rumour soon got abroad that the patient was Frederick William, Crown Prince of Germany. These reports have not been verified, but travellers reaching Geneva from Strassburg declare them to be true. The patient in the Strassburg palace is said to be seriously, although not mortally hurt The German Crown Prince has not been heard of directly and authoritatively for some weks. He met his wife at Luxembourg October 10, and twenty days later he was reported as having been wounded before Verdun.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Gen. Allen England

"Yes, you know. Your idea of training three or four of the most intelligent men to fly, and perhaps building one or two more planes—that is, establishing a regular service to and from the Abyss. That would be so much wiser, Allan! Think how deadly imprudent it is for you, you person ally, to take this risk every time! Why, if anything should happen—"

"But it won't! It can't!"

"What would become of the colony? We haven't got anything like enough of a start to go ahead with, lacking you! I speak now without sentiment or foolish, womanly fears, but just on a common-sense, practical basis. Viewed at that angle, ought you to take the risk again?"

"There's no time now, darling, to build more planes! No time to teach flying! We've got to recruit the colony as fast as possible, in case of emergencies. Why, I haven't made a trip since — since God knows when! It's time I was off now!"

"Allan!"

"Well?"

"Suppose you never went again? With the population we now have, and the natural increase, wouldn't civilisation re-establish itself in time?"

"Undoubtedly. But think how long it would take! Every additional person imported puts us ahead tremendously. I may never be able to bring all the Folk, all the Lanakaarn, and those other mysterious yellow-haired people they talk about from beyond the Great Vorte. But I can do my share, anyhow. Our boy here may have to complete the process. It may take a lifetime to accomplish the rescue, but it must be done!"

"So you're determined to go again?"

"I am! I must!"

She seized his hand imploringly.

"And leave us? Leave your boy? Leave me?"

"Only to return soon, darling! Very soon!"

"But after this one trip, will you promise to train somebody else to go in your place?"

"I'll see, dearest!"

"No, no! Not that! Promise!"

She had drawn his head down, and now her face close to his, was trembling in her eagerness.

"Promise! Promise me, Allan! You must!"

Suddenly moved by her entreaty, he yielded.

"I promise, Beta!" he exclaimed. "Gad, I didn't know you were so deadly afraid of my little expeditions! If I'd understood, I might have been arranging otherwise already. But I certainly will change matters when I get back. Only let me go once more, darling — that'll be the last time, I swear it to you!"

She gave a great sigh of relief unspeakable and kept silence. But in her eyes he saw the shine of sudden tears.

Allan had been gone more than four days and a half before Beatrice allowed herself to realise or to acknowledge the sick terror that for some hours had been growing in her soul.

His usual time of return had hitherto been just a little over three days. Sometimes, with favourable winds to the brink of the Abyss, and unusually strong rising currents of vapors from the sunken sea—from the Vortex, perhaps?—he had been able to make the round trip in sixty hours.

But now over a hundred and eight hours had lagged by since Beatrice, carrying the boy, had accompanied him up the steep path to the hangar in the palisaded clearing.

How light-hearted, confident, strong he had been, filled with great dreams and hopes and visions! No thought of peril, accident, or possible failure had clouded his mind.

She recalled his farewell kiss given to the child and to herself, his careful inspection of the machine, his short and vigorous orders, and the supreme skill with which he had leaped aloft upon its back and gone whirring up the sky till distance far to the northwestward had swallowed him.

And since that hour no sign of return. No speck against the blue. No welcome chatter of the engine far aloft, no hum of huge blades beating the summer air! Nothing!

Nothing save ever-growing fear and anguish, vain hopes, fruitless peerings toward the dim horizon, agonising expectations always frustrated, a vast and swiftly growing terror.

Beatrice cringed from her own thoughts. She dared not face the truth.

For that way, she felt instinctively, lay madness.

CHAPTER XXI.
ALLAN RETURNS NOT.

Five days dragged past, then six, then seven, and still no sign of Allan came to lighten the terrible and growing anguish of the woman.

All day long now she would watch for him — save at such times as the care and nursing of her child mercifully distracted her attention a little while from the intolerable grief and woe consuming her.

She would stand for hours on the rock terrace, peering into the northwest; she would climb the steep path a dozen times a day, and in distraction pace the cliff-top inside the palisaded area, where now some few wild sheep and goats were penned in process of domestication.

Here she would walk, calling in vain his name to the uncaring winds of heaven. With the telescope she would untiringly sweep the far reaches of the horizon, hoping, ever hoping, that at each moment a vague and distant speck might spring to view, wing its swift way south-eastward, resolve itself into that one and only blessed sight her whole soul craved and burned for — the Pauillac and her husband!

And so, till night fell, and her strained eyes could no longer distinguish anything but swimming mists and vapors, she would watch, her every thought a prayer, her every hope a torment—for each hope was destined only to end in disappointment bitterer far than death.

And when the shrouding dark had robbed her of all possibility for further watching she would descend with slow and halting steps, grief-broken, dazed, half-maddened, to the home-cavern — empty now, in spite of her child's presence there — empty, and terrible, and drear!

Then would begin the long night vigil. Daylight gave some simulacrum of relief in action, some slight deadening of pain in the very searching of the sky, the strong, determined hope against what had now become an inner conviction of defeat and utter loss. But night—

Night! Nothing, then, but to sit and think, and think, and think, to madness! Sleep was impossible. At most, exhausted nature snatched only a few brief spells of semi-consciousness.

Even the sight of the boy, lying there snug in his deep and healthy slumber, only kindled fresh fires of woe. For he was Allan's child — he spoke to her by his mere presence of the absent, the lost, perhaps the dead man.

And at thought that now she might be already widowed and her boy fatherless, she would pace the rock-floor in terrible, writhen crises of agony, hands clenched till the nails pierced the delicate flesh, eyes staring, face wanton, only for the sake of the child suppressing the sobs and heart-torn cries that sought to burst from her overburdened soul.

"Oh, Allan! Allan!" she would entreat, as though he could know and hear. "Oh, come back to me! What has happened? Where are you? Come back, come back to your boy—to me!"

Then, betimes, she would catch up the child and strain it to her breast, even though it awakened. Its cries would mingle with her anguished weeping; and in the firelit gloom of the cave they two—she who knew, and he who knew not—would in some measure comfort one another.

On the eighth day she sustained a terrible shock, a sudden joy followed by a poignant a despair that for a moment it seemed to her human nature could endure no more and she must die.

For, eagerly watching the cloud-patched sky with the telescope, from the cliff-top—while on the terrace old Geasfam tended the child — she thought suddenly to behold a distant vision of the aeroplane!

A tiny spot in the heavens, truly, was moving across the field of vision!

With a cry, a sudden flushing of her face, now so wan and colourless, she seemed to throw all her senses into one sense, the power of sight. And though her hand began to shake so terribly that she could only with a great effort hold the glass, she steadied it against a fern-tree and thus managed to find again and hold the moving speck.

The Pauillac! Was it indeed the Pauillac and Allan?

"Merciful Heaven!" she stammered. "Bring him back—to me!"

Again she watched, her whole soul aflame with hope and eagerness and tremulous joy, ready to burst into a blaze of happiness—and then came disillusion and despair, blacker than ever and more terrible.

For suddenly the moving speck turned, wheeled and rose. One second she caught sight of wings. She knew now it was only some huge, tropic bird, afar on the horizon—some condor, vulture, or other creature of the air.

Then, as with a quick swoop, the vulture slid away and vanished behind a blue hill-shoulder, the woman dropped her glass, sank to earth, and — half-fainting — burst into a terrible, dry, sobbing plaint. Her tears, long since exhausted, would not flow. Grief could pass no further limits.

After a time she grew calmer, arose and thought of her child once more. Slowly she returned down the via dolorosa of the terrace-path, the walk where she and Allan had so often and so gaily trodden; the path now so barren, so hateful, so solitary.

To her little son she returned, and in her arms she cherished him—in her trembling arms—and the tears came at last, welcome and heart-stilling.

Old Geasfam, gazing compassionately with troubled eyes that blinked behind their mica shields, laid a comforting hand on the girl's shoulder.

"Do not weep, O Yulcia, mistress!" she exclaimed in her own tongue. "Weep not, for there is still hope. See, all things are going on, as before, in the colony!" She gestured toward the lower caves, whence the sounds of smithy-work and other toil drifted upward. "All is yet well with us. Only our Kromno is away. And he will yet come! He will come back to us—to the child, to you, to all who love and obey him!"

Beatrice seized the old woman's hand and kissed it in a burst of gratitude.

"Oh—if I could only believe you!" she sobbed.

"It will be so! What could happen to him, so strong, so brave? He must come back! He will!"

"What could happen? A hundred things, Geasfam! One tiny break in the flying boat and he might be hurled to earth or down the Abyss, to death! Or, among your Folk, he may have been defeated, for many of the Folk are still save and very cruel! Or, the Horde—"

"The Horde? But the Horde, of which you have so often spoken, is now afar."

"No, Geasfam. Even to-day I saw their signal-fires on the horizon."

The old woman drew an arm about the girl. All barbarian that she was, the eternal, universal spirit of the feminine, pervading her, made her akin with the sorrowing wife.

"Go rest," she whispered. "I understand. I, too, have wept and mourned, though that was very long ago in the Abyss. My man, my Nausaak, a very brave and strong catcher of fish, fought with the Lanakaarn—and he died. I understand, Yulcia! You must think no more of this now. The child needs your strength. You must rest. Go!"

Gently, yet with firmness that was not to be disputed, she forced Beatrice into the cave, made her lie down, and prepared a drink for her.

Though Beta knew it not, the wise old woman had steeped therein a few leaves of the ronyilu weed, brought from the Abyss, a powerful soporific. And presently a certain calm and peace began to win possession of her soul.

For a time, however, distressing visions still continued to float before her disordered mind. Now she seemed to behold the Pauillac, flaming and shattered, whirling down, over and over, meteor-swift, into the purple mists and vapours of the Abyss.

PIMPLES
APPEARED ON HIS FACE AND HANDS.

The primary cause of pimples arises from the blood not being in a good condition. When the blood becomes impure you will find that pimples will break out all over the body, but more particularly on the forehead, nose and chin, and although they are not a dangerous trouble, they make you appear unsightly both to your friends and yourself. What you need, when these pimples break out, is to get a real good blood purifying medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. One that will build up the system by cleansing the blood of all the impurities and poisons which cause the skin to break out in these eruptions.

Mr. F. A. McKenzie, Portage La Prairie, Man., writes: "Last summer I was all run down and unfit for work of any kind. All kinds of food seemed distasteful to me. Pimples appeared on my face and hands, and I seemed to grow worse every day. One day a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. Half-heartedly I did so, and the results obtained were marvellous. I regained my health, I took on flesh, and in a short time the pimples and skin eruptions disappeared entirely; thanks to the healing powers of B.B.B. I freely recommend it to all sufferers."

THIN FOLKS WHO WOULD BE FAT
Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

Rheumatism Muscle Colds

"It is easy to use and quick to respond. No work. Just apply. It penetrates without rubbing."

"Have used your Liniment very successfully in a case of rheumatism, and always have a bottle on hand in case of a cold or sore throat. I wish to say I think it one of the best of household remedies. I would not have used it only it was recommended to me by a friend of mine who, I wish to say, is one of the best boosters for your Liniment I ever saw."—J. W. Fuller, Denver, Col.

"Just a line in praise of Sloan's Liniment. I have been ill nearly fourteen weeks with rheumatism, have been treated by doctors who did their best. I had not slept for the terrible pain for several nights, when my wife got me a small bottle of the Liniment and three applications gave me relief so that I could sleep."—Joseph Tinsley, 616 Conover Street, McKeesport, Pa.

Be Clean! Inside and Outside

If you would be healthy, strong and happy, Bathe keep the skin clean and in good condition. But what about the inside of the body? You can no more afford to neglect it than the outside. It is just as important that the system be cleansed of the poisonous impurities caused by weakness of the digestive organs, (or by inactivity of the liver.

DR. PIERCE'S

INSINUATION AGAINST PRINCE LOUIS OF GERMAN ORIGIN

Herald Bureau, No. 130 Fleet St., London, Saturday.

On all sides sympathy is expressed for Prince Louis of Battenberg in the circumstances which led to his resignation as First Sea Lord. Lord Selborne says:

"I would as soon mistrust Lord Roberts as Prince Louis. That any one should have or insinuate suspicions against him is nothing less than a national humiliation."

Admiral Lord John Hay writes:

"The slander on Prince Louis arose some time ago — at the time of the Agadir affair—when he was in command of the fleet. It died of sheer inanition. The source of the insinuations is obviously German. It is time the British public put down its foot effectually to another these aspersions on the character and conduct of one of the ablest servants of the Crown."

MOTHER! THE CHILD IS COSTIVE, BILIOUS

Look, Mother! If Tongue is coated give "California Syrup of Figs."

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

The Invasion of Egypt.—The British War Office says Turkish troops have been sent south from Mosul to invade Egypt. Bedouins were collected at Gaza and Akaba for the same purpose, and some of them crossed the Sinai frontier. Serious fighting may take place along the Suez Canal, which, however, is reported to be well defended.

Holland Feels Pressure of War

ROOSENDAAL, VIA LONDON, Oct. 30.—Holland is feeling the pressure of the war almost as much as if she were engaged in it. The report that the Germans are massing large numbers of troops on the eastern border is causing great uneasiness throughout Holland. The alleged discovery of a tennis court with cement nine feet thick on the property of a German, in the vicinity of Arnheim and statements that German spies have been active near Arnheim and at other points close to the German border seem to intensify the anxiety of the Hollanders.

A Dutch army of more than 200,000 trained men is scattered at strategic points along the Belgian and German borders. Roosendaal is the principal troop centre, as it is the only railway gate to Belgium that is now open. Hundreds of military automobiles leave here daily with messages and supplies for the border troops.

The mouth of the River Scheldt and all of the canals are heavily guarded. A large garrison at Flushing is guarding the piers and railway stations in order to prevent any attempt to violate the neutrality of the Scheldt. The river is heavily mined and Dutch cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers are lying at its mouth to give any necessary co-operation to the land forces.

The Dutch army is in fine condition. Unfortunately it is just changing its uniforms from blue to grey, and consequently the troops make a poor appearing because all the men have not received their new equipment.

The horrors of war have been forced on virtually all the cities, towns and country districts by the Belgian refugees, who are estimated to aggregate 800,000. The Dutch government is paying to the cities thirty cents daily for food for each refugee. The cities bear other expenses connected with the influx. The strain of attending properly to the refugees is hard on Roosendaal, with its 13,000 population; Flushing, with 7,000, and other towns with lesser numbers. In these places there are more refugees than inhabitants.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns grey and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay grey! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural colour is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

MRS. DERBY, IN TEARS, GIVES REFUGEE CLOAK

Paris, October 31.—Mrs. Richard Derby, daughter of Theodore Roosevelt, brought good cheer to the refugees installed at the Northern Railway Station. Mrs. Derby noticed one young woman from Lille, who nursed a baby. Mrs. Derby removed her cloak and gave it to the young woman. The misery of the refugees brought tears to Mrs. Derby's eyes, and she distributed gold pieces among them.

VESUVIUS IS ACTIVE.

Great Alarm Occasioned by Eruption of Volcano.

NAPLES, Nov. 3. — Mount Vesuvius is again in eruption and the inhabitants in its vicinity have become greatly alarmed. On Sunday special prayers were made and processions of people went to favored shrines as a repetition of the disaster of 1906 is feared.

The activity of the volcano first manifested itself by deep detonations and rumblings. This was followed by gigantic columns of smoke and soon thereafter an abundant eruption of lava began.

The last serious eruption of Mount Vesuvius occurred in the spring of 1906. Several villages were destroyed and the property loss was estimated at $20,000,000. About 500 persons were killed and 50,000 made homeless.

SINGING CLUBS ARM?

They Are Preparing to Attack Canada Declares U. S. Railwayman.

MONTREAL, Nov. 3.—The stories that the Germans of the United States are contemplating a raid on Canada have been given emphasis by a letter received by William Galbraith, former mayor of Westmount. The letter, which came from the vice-president of one of the biggest railways in the Western States, said:

"I overheard a conversation last night on a steamboat going from Norfolk to Richmond. It was between Germans, and to the effect that all the German singing societies, which are 500,000 strong, are carrying on a propaganda of secret arming and other arrangements for the purpose of attacking Canada from this side."

No Sacrifice Too Great.

LONDON, Nov. 3. — A despatch to The Evening News from Copenhagen says:

"Headquarters at Berlin reports that at a special war council held on Sunday, over which the Kaiser presided, and at which the Kings of Saxony and Wurttemburg were present, the question of the advance on the north coast of France was considered.

"The unanimous agreement was made that no sacrifice whatever was too great to achieve the goal.

"After the council the kings visited Antwerp and Brussels."

Seven Hundred Men Strike.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 3. — A despatch to a local paper from Lepas says:

"Engineers, conductors, firemen, brakesmen, and watchmen on the Hudson Bay Railroad were notified that their wages per hour would be reduced from 45 to 35 cents, 42 to 30 cents, 28 to 23 cents, 20 to 17 cents, to take effect Nov. 1. The men refused to accept the lower rate and all went on strike. The strike will affect about 715 men and will hold up construction until a settlement is arrived at.

Two Trainmen Killed.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 3. — At 9.30 yesterday morning a double-headed freight train, eastbound, on the C. P. R., struck a rockslide which had been brought down by the heavy rains near a tunnel three-quarters of a mile east of Hope, a station 31 miles from Vancouver. Both engines were derailed and slid down the steep bank into the Fraser river. Two men were killed and a third is missing.

Coal For German Cruisers.

LONDON, Nov. 3. — German merchantmen regularly provide German cruisers in the Pacific with coal and provisions from Chilean ports and furnish the warships with wireless information, according to The Times' correspondent at San Diego, Chile.

The correspondent says that the merchantmen obtain "leave to depart from the ports by making false declarations regarding their destination to the Chilean authorities."

FORTY RIFLE CLUBS NOW FLOURISHING

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Nov. 2.—Over 40 citizens' rifle clubs have been formed thus far under the new law which authorizes the secretary of war to issue rifles and ammunition to citizens who agree to engage in consistent target practice.

The National Rifle Association is in charge of the organization of the clubs. It has adopted a slogan Lord Kitchener's laconic order, "Teach the men to shoot," and maintains that the war in Europe emphasizes the need of an efficient body of citizen-marksmen. The government issues to each member of the clubs one of the old army rifles known as the "Krag," and 120 rounds of ammunition with each rifle.

GIACOMO POLLACHE, 12-Year-Old Infantryman.

By Richard G. Conover.

"What do you expect, gentlemen? I am an old soldier, and so, of course, I planned for Garibaldi to attack me in front. And he came from behind instead."

—General Ozzetti's explanation.

THROUGH fourteen centuries of lineal descent from the all-conquering Roman legionary comes a valorous heirship to the Italian soldier. That he is the true battling scion of his "ancient" forebears can be neither scouted nor doubted. Fighting decadence is not proved by the failure of the battling man of the Adriatic peninsula to hold a world in subjection with his cannon and bayonet.

The soldier of Italy has never stopped fighting since the fall of the Roman Empire. In succession he has opposed—always fiercely and valiantly—Goth, Lombard, Frank, Saracen, Magyar, Northman, French, Spanish and Austrian. From A. D. 476, when he could no longer be considered a Roman, because Rome was not, he battled on and on, a national fragment of militancy. In 1870 he became a consolidated fighting entity again. But whether in fractions or whole numbers, he has been ever willing to face the foe on the firing line. Fate may force him to mingle his powder and steel with the other nations now at war. Should he do so, look for him to reveal his Roman legacy.

For there is an undeniable heredity in the battling impulse. Grecian valor was transmitted unadulterated for more than 800 years. Consider that twenty-five successive lives would suffice to bridge the gap between A. D. 476 and A. D. 1914, and the likelihood of the Italian soldier being the military legatee of the mediæval master of the pilum and short sword does not seem at all remote. On the day that Romulus Augustulus, the last Emperor of the Western Roman Empire, was toppled from his throne the sturdy legionary on duty in Latium, or Etruria, or Venetia, or any of the political divisions of Italia, was released from allegiance to a government that had been wiped off the world's map, and he was consequently out of his soldier's job.

Fought for Unity.

Thousands of such fighters, natives of the soil that cradled great Rome, returned to their provinces. Odoacer was hailed Patrician of Italy by the barbarian mercenaries who had overturned the Empire. The retired legionary fought the interloper, and fourteen years later, when Odoacer was slain by his successor, Theodoric, King of the Ostrogoths, the old Roman soldier continued to fight. He was battling against the rule of the stranger when he died, and he bequeathed the conflict for a new nationalization to his son. And so it continued from one son to another, carried along in twenty-five militant transfers until the unity of modern Italy was assured, fourteen centuries later.

And how comes it that so valiant a people, with so inspiring a heritage, failed to form into a new empire, instead of remaining vassal to the modern nations so long? Ask the reason for the crumbling of mighty Greece, whose invincible sons were of the fighting phalanx of the great Alexander, and the same answer will apply to the descendants of the Romans. The Italian soldier was divided against himself by those who successfully plotted his country's ruin. "Divide and conquer"—the old, old axiom—explains it. The fighting man of Italy was beaten in detail. Craft circumvented bravery and courage. Politics and politicians were the successful foils and blades. So the Italian soldier fought his countrymen for centuries, speaking a common language with him, but arrayed against him in separate petty principalities and dukedoms. And all the time he fought misguidedly hard. So did fallen Greece.

Scintillating proof that the ancient Roman fighting spirit has descended to the Italian soldier flashes from the inspiring page of history devoted to the name and deeds of Giuseppe Garibaldi. Never in the most glorious day of the Empire did the globe subjecting legionary perform in a more wonderful way. Across the gap of centuries of vassalage and subordination came the patriot's pulsations of the old-time unweakened battle heart. Garibaldi was the ideal of the Italian soldier and the epitome of his country's fighting renaissance. There were a few gleams of glory through the gloom of peninsular wrangling before his advent, but not until he drew the sword did the fighting man of Italy prove he had the ancient mettle and that the links of the battling chain stretching from the fifth to the nineteenth century had never been broken.

Garibaldi, beyond question, takes precedence over any other fighting human that has borne the caption of Italy, from king to commoner. What he had to encounter and overcome included mighty monarch and a powerful Pope, but he faced them unafraid. Here is a brief account of some of the remarkable battling of this ideal Italian soldier.

On May 5, 1860, in pursuance of secret schemes for the confederation of all the Italian States under one flag and government, Garibaldi eluded the vigilance of the Sardinian authorities and sailed from Genoa with a force of but 1,000 volunteers, armed with bad muskets and without ammunition. Mark the number of troops well for the keener appreciation of the glory of Garibaldi.

The expedition put into Orbicello. The leader boldly went to the armory there, demanded ammunition in the king's name, and got it from the deluded custodians, along with a few obsolete cannon. Landing was made at Marsala and the march on Palermo, the capital of Sicily, began, volunteers joining the movement everywhere. At the height of Calatafimi, on the top of which the Neapolitans were posted, they numbered twice the infantry and artillery of Garibaldi. The volunteers attacked the height once, twice, thrice before they overcame the vigorous repulses of the enemy, who fell back on Palermo.

Garibaldi then began the feint of his famous "march around them" movements which signalized a number of his victories—after the manner of Stonewall Jackson at Chancellorsville. He sent his artillery up a mountain road with a small detachment to face the enemy, meanwhile encircling the city to the south. At early dawn on May 27 he assaulted Palermo on the east while 4,000 of the Neapolitans were searching for him in the mountains. Rhumbers were 15,000 in garrison to confront him. With barely 2,000 men he cut his way through to the heart of the city. Barricading the streets, he was joined by the Palermitans, and the enemy, becoming demoralized, retreated to the castle, from which they bombarded the city. The Neapolitan fleet joined in this bombardment. May 30 the Neapolitan commander proposed an armistice, during which his 5,000 mountain searching troops returned. The remnant of Garibaldi's thousand, a few hundred banditti from the hills and a large number of the armed populace were all that opposed these 20,000 regulars. The conditions proposed by the Neapolitan authorities being of little benefit, Garibaldi had the splendid audacity to break off the negotiations. He cowed the royalists, who surrendered the city to him and evacuated it. Next he defeated an immensely superior force at Milazzo, taking that city after desperate hand-to-hand fighting. Two instances of the fighting qualities of the Italian soldier stand out in the latter battle.

Two guns of the royalist artillery were doing great execution near a highroad angle. Alessandro Pizzoli deliberately leaped before them so as to divert attention from a flank movement by a small band of his comrades. He drew the fire and was blown limb from limb a moment before the pieces were captured.

Garibaldi Fought with Sabre.

Again the royalist commander ordered a body of cavalry to charge and capture a gun being worked by the volunteers. They failed and on their retreat the Garibaldian infantry took station behind the hedge to escape the lunges and to empty saddles. Garibaldi and his aide-de-camp, Giuseppe Missori, both on foot, rebuilded in the road. The horsemen, maddened at the sight of their reeling comrades, swarmed round eager to cut down the only two of the enemy in sight. Missori shot the horse of the royalist captain, who slashed at Garibaldi as the animal fell. Garibaldi parried the stroke with, holding the bridle of the kneeling horse, killed the captain with a saber-thrust. Then, rushing to the side of his chief, the leader and his subordinate withstood the attack of ten cavalrymen until four were killed and their comrades withdrew from the hedge. With but 3,000 troops against 18,000 in an entrenched position, Garibaldi crossed to the mainland and took Reggio. There was a fierce struggle in the great cathedral square of that city. One of the most fiery and gallant subordinate generals of the Garibaldians was Nino Bixio. The horses he successively mounted at this battle received an aggregate of nineteen wounds. He was wounded twice in the arm as he led his division. In writing of his war experiences later he verified a local historian as follows:

"My hopes received ten bullets at Reggio, nineteen at Reggio, three at Maddaloni. My own carcass was honored by three bullets at Rome, one at Palermo, two at Reggio and a fracture of the leg at the passage of the Volturno." Garibaldi sent him to lead the night following Reggio's capture. "I suppose the balls that touch you are more of gutta percha." This became Bixio pooh-poohed his wounds. His soldiers were always complaining of his bad temper and harsh language.

"He is mad; he is intolerable," the volunteers cried to Garibaldi.

"Very well. Under whom do you wish to serve then?" asked their chief leader.

"What?" Oh, under Bixio, of course," was the answer.

At the Battle of the Volturno, October 1 and 2, 1860, Garibaldi led 20,000 ill-armed and badly drilled troops against 40,000 regulars. The decisive moment of the day was when Garibaldi himself, at the head of a body of Hungarian and Milanese cavalry, backed with a brilliant bayonet charge, swept the field in the direction of Capua. The battle was won with 2,012 men and 77 officers prisoners of war. Naples and Sicily, as a result of this battle, voted to annex themselves to Sardinia, and at a meeting between Victor Emmanuel and Garibaldi the former was formally hailed as King of All Italy. From this time on until the final inclusion of Rome and Venice within the kingdom of Italy Garibaldi fought valiantly a number of losing battles—often in defiance of the King he had made. His entire life was given to the unification of Italy. When he visited England and other foreign countries later he was hailed as the greatest fighting man of his day.

Numberless instances of bravery, devotion and sacrifice during the Garibaldian period attest the battling qualities of the Italian soldier. The Cairoli family furnished the most noteworthy example. Five brothers participated in the struggle for Italian unification on the battlefield, while their mother was as great a patriot within all possible limitations of her sphere. Four of the brothers fell fighting. Enrico, one of Garibaldi's Thousand, was killed gallantly charging at Villa Glori, 1867. Giovanni, another brother, died from wounds received in the same battle. Luigi, another brother, died while marching through Calabria, in 1860. Ernesto, still another brother, was killed in battle at Varese, 1859.

Two other remarkable soldiers of the Garibaldian epoch were Pietro San Martino, a Sicilian nobleman, who distinguished himself as an infantryman at Palermo and Milazzo, not being ashamed to fight side by side with Giacomo Pollacio, another infantryman, son of a glover and but twelve years old. Both youthful soldiers fought with the greatest enthusiasm, delivering the hand-to-hand combat wherever they could get close enough to the enemy after rifle fire. At Milazzo the twelve-year-old Pollacio wounded two burly royalists in a bayonet charge and killed two at the first volleys.

The Italian soldier fought gallantly side by side with the soldier of France in the war waged against Austria during the year 1859. At the Battle of Solferino, fought June 24, the Piedmontese troops had for their division of battling that the storming of the heights of San Martino. As a preliminary there was an obstinate fight of several hours toward the Lake of Guarda, the Italian soldier being again and again repulsed. The French in the meantime had won their end of the battle against the Austrians on Cavriana heights, and, as one of their commanders afterward declared:

"We left the glory of the other end of the field to the Piedmontese."

And the French confidence was not misplaced, for late in the afternoon, after his many desperate attacks and repulses, the Italian soldier made one more, last, supreme effort and carried San Martino with mighty bayonet rushes the Austrians could not withstand. The loss of the allies in this great battle was 17,000 and the Austrians 22,000. At the previous battles of Montebello, fought May 20; Palestro, fought May 30 and 31, and Magenta, fought June 4, the fighting man of Italy shared the glory of victory to the full with his French ally.

On March 18, 1848, the people of Milan, Vicenza, Padua, Brescia, Bergamo and Venice rose against their Austrian rulers and attacked the Austrian soldiers in garrison. The King of Sardinia, the most liberal sovereign of Italy, at once joined them in their war on Austria. This most extensive confederation of Italian soldiers seen in centuries attacked the enemy at Goito and won a decisive victory, although opposed by a larger army of seasoned troops. May 23 the Austrians, with a force of 19,000 men and forty pieces of artillery, attacked Vicenza, garrisoned with 3,000 Italian soldiers, mostly volunteers. The attack was repelled with a loss of 800 killed and wounded to the assailants and 30 killed and 130 wounded to the defenders. The defence of Vicenza was justly considered one of the most brilliant feats of arms of the war. At Curtatone, May 29, the Austrians, with 15,000 men and twenty-three pieces of artillery, attacked a force of Tuscan students and volunteers numbering 7,000 men and eleven pieces of artillery. Twice the Italian soldier repelled a determined assault by the enemy, giving way the third time only after every artilleryman had been killed at his guns and the Tuscan killed and wounded numbered nearly half their original force.

In Crimean War.

During the Crimean War a force of Piedmontese troops won great credit by their gallant fighting at the Battle of Tchernaya, August 16, 1855. These men had been sent to help France and England in a war that was no concern of theirs at all, at the suggestion of the great Prime Minister Cavour, who looked for the aid of the two larger countries later in the unification of Italy. Even the Russians, in commenting afterward on the battle, remarked on the furious battling of the men from the Adriatic.

And this recalls that in all the centuries that the Italian soldier had no unified country to fight for he was always a great warrior for the ruler to whom he was contracted temporarily, to give his allegiance. His battling accomplishments, however, were more than swallowed up or overshadowed in the history of the greater kingdom or empire that gave another distinctive name to its fighting men. A levy of Italian soldiers was often incorporated in Austrian armies while their country dominated the greater part of the peninsula. Their gallantry then became a part of Austrian glory. During the passing centuries, under different rulers, the same fighting fusion was used to obtain frequent victory. The credit of his battling went to another banner.

The fighting man of Italy was often creditably heard from as the generations passed and the four magnificent cities of Venice, Florence, Pisa and Genoa arose on the ruins of the original site of the Roman empire. Through Venice, in particular, the unbroken battling line of the Italian soldier may be traced. This ancient republic was founded in the fifth century by refugees of Aquileia and other Roman cities, who fled before the desolating invasion of Attila the Hun. Venice has been fitly named the Eldest Daughter of the Empire, and her native soldiers fought and died for her during thirteen hundred years until the Italian conquests of Napoleon Bonaparte ended the republic. From the fifth to the eleventh century it was the only Italian State that had never submitted to the German Emperor and no foreign Power had been acknowledged within its walls. Her fighters were soldier-sailors, for in order to strike a foe they had ever to embark on the Adriatic first. The Italian soldier of Venice was a pirate destroyer for hundreds of years. Later he fought valiantly against the Hungarians and the Genoese, and then was drawn into fighting France and Spain and Germany, according as the troubles of Europe shifted. At the Battle of Lepanto, September 5, 1571, the Italian soldier of Venice played a prominent part in the great victory over the Turk.

During the early part of the tenth century the Italian soldier was kept pretty busy fighting. First his country was invaded by the Magyars or Hungarians, a fierce Turanian horde, who swept over the Alps and ravaged Northern Italy with fire and sword. Then came the Northmen under their famous leader Hastings, who captured, plundered and destroyed the city of Luna, supposing it was Rome. Finally the Saracens kept Southern Italy in a state of terror until the warlike Pope John X. gathered an Italian army and inflicted a severe defeat on them. From this time on the petty princes of Italy began their quarrellings, in which the fighting man of Italy took part for centuries, according as his allegiance dictated.

In A. D. 962 the Italian soldier allied himself temporarily with the infidel Saracens in the southern part of the peninsula and inflicted a decisive defeat on Otto II. of Germany at Crotona, expelling the invaders from the entire section. It was at this battle that an Italian and Saracenic commander exchanged swords to "prove home steel with foreign spirit."

In 1347 the Italian soldier of Rome rallied around Cola di Rienzi, "the last of the Roman Tribunes," a young patriot who cherished the hope of restoring the land to its former grade of greatness. Through the prestige of the ready and willing fighting man, Rienzi was enabled to put in force a number of necessary reforms and by strong measures to reduce the nobles to obedience to the government established. Later the fighting man helped him defeat the Colonnas and other nobles who had taken up arms against him.

An unforgettable tragedy in the history of the Italian soldier was his awful defeat at Adowa, March 1, 1896. Menelik, an Abyssinian king, with 120,000 warriors, surrounded 17,000 of Italy's fighting men (7,000 of them native troops in the Red Sea colonial strip, and almost annihilated the little army. The black men proved the fiercest kind of fighters, 70,000 of them bearing rifles and using them with the effectiveness of European troops.

But the descendant of the Romans lived up to the reputation of his ancestors. He left 4,678 killed and wounded on the field, or over one-third of his army of 17,000 men. The native soldier became panic-stricken and ran. But no battling man ever fused death more terribly than the Italian regular. An artillery command, the Third Sicilian battery, were solemnly ordered to "remain at your post and die that the remnant of the army may live!" The Sicilians did so. Out of four officers and sixty-two men who heard their death warrant read by their commander, just one officer and two men survived. The others had been shot and speared by swarms of hundreds, as they served their cannon while their comrades retired. Five repeated rushes of 25,000 Abyssinians were successfully beaten back in another part of the field by 1,500 Italian regulars. In this fight the Italians killed 9,000 and wounded 5,000 Abyssinians and after a desperate struggle reached the Italian base.

During the recent war undertaken by Italy to annex the fringe of desert land called Tripoli, the Italian soldier came in for much mauling at the hands of the military critics and others. It was charged—mostly by those who, if they had been at the seat of war at all, had attached themselves to Turkish and Arab headquarters—that the fighting man of Italy was doing more retiring than battling and was not showing the proper slam-bang, aggressive, win everything spirit. He was taken to task for not stalking boldly out into the Sahara, disarming the skulking Arab and planting the banner of Italy on every sand dune with clockwork precision of accomplishment.

The fact was that the Italian soldier was outmanaged, the same as he often was in the war for the unification of Italy. He was marched, after the fashion of ancient heroic deft, to an advanced spot, apparently just for the purpose of proving he had gone forward. No system backed up or protected his advance; no scheme of holding in a practical way, permanently, the ground gained. He was picketed unscientifically, according to many reports, so that it was ridiculously easy for the crawling Arab, a master in the art of concealment, to creep up in the dark, stab to death and demoralize. It was criminal to station a soldier who in the auriferous of patient, cool calculation in this haphazard way, and as a consequence the first few months of Italian occupation were a record of unnecessary fatality and blundering, with the misled fighting man of Italy the victim.

Furious Night Fight.

On October 23, 1911, a body of Arabs appeared before the Italian line in the vicinity of Bou-Meliana as a feint. They assaulted and while they were being repelled their main body attacked the Italian position in the rear. During the fight that ensued two battalions of Bersaglieri, a famous Italian soldier body, were cut off, hemmed in and, gallantly resisting, perished to the last man. On October 26 a fresh assault was made along the entire line. West of the cavalry barracks the Arabs and the fighting men of Italy clinched in hand to hand battling. As night came on the Italians slept on their arms in the trenches, worn out with the terrific day. Suddenly their Arab foes crept over the sands and threw themselves on their half-aroused adversaries. Curved knives did fatal execution, and the Italian soldier awoke to fight a brief second and then die.

When the curtain rose on the first act of the Italian unification drama in 1858, Napoleon III., whose policy was to aid Sardinia against Austria, uttered this famous dictum:—"Italy must be free from the Alps to the Adriatic." The Italian soldier made the dictum a true prophecy. He has battled his way to liberty under a monarch of his own choosing, for the ballot has played as prominent a part as the bayonet in the knitting together of modern Italy.

The valor of the soldier of Italy proceeds principally from a quick inspiration, a youthful eruption and an impulse of chivalry. He has it in him to dare and do, rather than to win his fight through finesse. The glitter and the high flame of grim war bring out his militant exuberance much more strongly than the prosaic hardships and the dull endurances of the campaign in trenches. A long, arduous siege, or a monotonous march is far from being the best test of his soldiership.

And his show of valor has its victories no less renowned than the clever and more elegant strategist.

Estelle Martindale's Plow

Story of a Duel That Did Not Come Off

By RUTH GRAHAM

It was somewhere between 1830 and 1835 that. Adelbert Swift graduated from a northern university and, having heard a great deal about plantation life in the south, concluded to go there with a view to becoming a planter. He had inherited some means with which he might buy and stock a plantation; but, realizing his ignorance of the art of tilling the soil, he felt that it was prudent for him to gain some knowledge on the subject before making an investment.

In order to do this he conceived the idea of obtaining a position as tutor in the family of some planter. The hours he would be required to teach would not be many, each day, and he would have time to familiarize himself with the workings of a plantation. He was not long in finding a position in the family of a Colonel Southgate in South Carolina. The Southgate plantation was a very large one, including some 800 negroes. Swift found he had not made a mistake in assuming that there was a great deal to learn in running a plantation. One of these was in itself a community consisting of two main branches, the planting branch and the business branch.

Swift, being young and not yet enervated by the climate, occupied a portion of the day riding about on the plantation observing the methods used and asking questions. He volunteered beside to handle the colonel's accounts, to which he devoted himself during the evenings.

The south has always been noted for the hospitality of its people, and Swift was made at home in the families of the planters in the vicinity of Colonel Southgate's manor house. Indeed, he received more invitations than he had time to accept, which was a source of trouble to him, fearing that when he declined one of them it would be set down as a slight.

Not far from the Southgate plantation resided Miss Estelle Martindale. Her father was supposed by many to be the owner of the plantation he managed. He had married its owner, who had died and left him with a little girl, Estelle. Martindale had contrived to get into debt to his wife for a considerable sum, and she had made a will leaving him an amount equal to his indebtedness, bequeathing the residue to their daughter.

Estelle was about Adelbert Swift's age. She had inherited from her mother not only the plantation, but a practical nature, and was principally occupied in checking an impractical father, whose chief idiosyncrasy was to sink money. She had learned as her mother had learned before her that to save her property from being wasted she must keep it and her finances in her own hands. In managing her father she was very adroit. Nothing hurt his pride so much as to have any one think that he was his daughter's employee. Consequently she always spoke of the plantation as his and consulted him about everything, though, matching her own good against his poor judgment, the conclusion always ended in her views being carried out.

Swift, having been highly educated, made an impression upon Estelle Martindale. He found her particularly congenial, and she preferred him to any of the young men of her acquaintance.

When Albert Martindale noticed that an intimacy was springing up between Swift and his daughter he fancied he saw the end of his administration. He was not a bad man. Indeed, he was an honorable man, but it was impossible for him to contemplate with equanimity his daughter's marriage, since her husband must learn that his wife's father had no right in law to the plantation or its management. It is very easy for one to find reasons for preventing what is not to his interest and oftentimes to believe his reasons to be sound.

Martindale said nothing to his daughter about the prospect before him, but showed—he could not help showing—his antagonism to Swift. When they met, except at the Martindale home, he bowed to the young man coldly. In his home he would have scorned to treat any guest except with an appearance at least, of cordiality. Estelle saw what was in her father's mind, though Swift did not.

What began between Swift and Miss Martindale with friendship developed into love. Swift called frequently at the Martindale home. Then came flowers, a sure sign that there were interviews. Martindale watched the process with disgust.

Martindale, himself an ardent southerner, had a friend, a Major Marston, who was much prejudiced against the north. Marston, meeting his friend one day, spoke of Swift's attentions to Estelle and asked if Martindale were going to give his daughter to a northerner. This was the straw that broke the camel's back. Martindale made an evasive reply. But the die was cast. From that time he began to lay plans for breaking up the impending match.

He could not attack Swift on political grounds, for the young man had no political views. But Martindale must find some ground of objection to the man who, by marrying his daughter, would doubtless make an inroad upon his authority as manager of his plantation. It annoyed him that he could find no valid ground on which to base an opposition. Meeting his friend Marston again, he confirmed the fact. There was nothing for Marston to do as his intimate friend but help him out. He covertly circulated a report that Swift was agent for a northern abolitionist society.

When this report came to Martindale's ears he forbade Swift his house, giving the report as a reason for doing so. Swift denied the charge. Hot words ensued, and before Swift realized what had happened he received a challenge to mortal combat from the man whose daughter he was engaged to marry.

He was [illegible] in the world to do when Estelle's quadroon maid appeared and handed him a note from her mistress. It appointed a meeting between him and her at the house of a mutual friend. At the time named he went to the place designated and found Estelle waiting for him.

"You have heard what has happened?" he asked.

"I have."

"Is there no possible way out of it?"

"Either you must resign me and leave here or we must find some expedient to head father off."

"How can he be headed off?"

"First, you must not be placed in a cowardly position. He would kill me as well as you if I should marry one who showed the white feather. You must accept his challenge."

"What!"

"Be quiet. I have a plan for preventing the meeting or, at least, delaying it. And if it can be delayed long enough I may bring father to his senses."

"What are you going to do?"

"Perhaps it is better that you should not know. I may have to change my plan at the last moment. One thing you may be assured of—there will be no deal between you and my father. But he must not know that I am aware of his challenge. He would probably take measures to change the hour and place of meeting, and you would then be placed in a position to fight or be disgraced."

This ended the interview, Swift going to his own house. Estelle remained where she was till later that she might not be seen in his company.

The next morning the two principals and their seconds met in an opening in a wood not far from the Martindale plantation. The ground was being measured off when a horseman rode up and began to read something from a paper he held in his hand.

"Who are yo'," asked Martindale, "and what do yo' want?"

"I am the sheriff of this county, and I want either security or the money on your note of hand past due for $5,000. The holder of the note is not willing that you should risk your life without first satisfying his claim."

"Nonsense!" cried Martindale, looking at the sheriff as though he would like to shoot him as well as his daughter's lover. "Yo' get out o' the way, and don't yo' interfuah with a southern gentleman vindicating his honah."

"Yo' can't fight, majah, without satisfying the claim."

"Can any of yo' gentlemen," said Martindale to the seconds, "relieve me of this unpleasant situation by taking up my note and holding it till I have settled with this man who has insulted me?"

No one present seemed inclined to take the risk.

Martindale stood looking upon those about him with wonder. That a man who was about to defend his honor should be denied a favor like this was incomprehensible to him.

"Do you mean to tell me, gentlemen," he said, "that you deny me the means whereby I may proceed with this affair?"

His friends were spared the necessity of replying, for at the moment there came the clatter of hoofs and a man rode on to the ground in great haste.

"Major Martindale," he said, "are yo' about to engage in so'tai combat, suh?"

"What is that to yo', suh?" was the reply.

"In that case I expect yo' hafo' risking yo' life to satisfy a claim I have against yo' fo' three hundred and seventy-six dollahs and fo'ty-five cents."

"And yo', too, Walker!" exclaimed the major reproachfully. "Has it come to pass in the south that a man cannot protect his household without first settling every trifling amount of indebtedness he has outstanding? Has a man's honah become of less importance than filthy lucre?"

"Yo' have my sympathy, majah. I have no desire to prevent this meeting. Give me security and I shall make no opposition to its proceeding."

Martindale looked crushed. Glancing from one to another of his friends, he cried despairingly:

"Will no one help me out of this degrading position?"

"I will, father." The words were spoken in a woman's voice from behind a tree, and Estelle appeared leading a horse on which she had been riding. All looked at her astonished.

"My dear little girl," said the father, "I knew you would be sensitive to yo' father's honah."

"I will take up these notes on condition that you shake hands with Mr. Swift and consent to my marriage with him. He is about to buy the Venable plantation, and I shall go there with him, leaving you to take care of your interests here as you always have done."

Estelle put her arms around her father's neck and did not release him till he had given Swift his hand and consented to the marriage.

It was she who had informed his creditors of the risk he was about to take.

Suffered Intense Pain In Her Back.

Could Hardly Do Her Housework.

If a pain attacks you in the back "stop and think" what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in a large majority of cases of pain in the back they are—doctor them at once, and doctor them persistently, as it is impossible to have a well strong back unless the kidneys perform their functions properly.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure them to stay cured.

Mrs. H. F. Jacob, Lavant Station, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in telling you how much good your medicine has done me. I had suffered from intense pains in my back, and was so bad I could hardly do my housework. My kidneys were also bothering me a great deal. I tried several kinds of patent medicines, and was almost discouraged, and was looking for some other kind of medicine to try when I noticed your advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills, so I thought it could not hurt to try them. I noticed a great difference when I had used one box, and to my great relief when I had used three boxes I was entirely cured, and I have not been bothered since. I will not hesitate to recommend them to all I know."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c a box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Radway's Ready Relief

Chas. H. Hilliard, of 348 E. 17th St., writes: "For years I have been suffering from asthma and bronchitis. A week ago I purchased a bottle of Radway's Ready Relief and have taken a teaspoonful in water before retiring each night. The relief I have experienced is marvellous. I most heartily indorse R. R. R."

CURES ASTHMA

The qualities for this disease are the Ready Relief, the Resolvent and Radway's Pills. The Relief must be rubbed on the chest and throat until a burning sensation is produced, and the Pills must be taken frequently, to keep the bowels thoroughly open. The Resolvent must be given at short intervals, in small doses, and is decidedly essential on retiring to rest. Give a teaspoonful of the Resolvent whenever a paroxysm occurs. RADWAY & CO.

LESS DANGEROUS THAN SUPPOSED

Havoc Wrought by Zeppelins so Far Consists Chiefly in Blowing Up Civilians.

It is announced that Hiram Maxim, inventor of the gun which bears his name, has made a new kind of bullet which is warranted to put any Zeppelin or other dirigible balloon out of business instanter. This bullet which may be used in an ordinary rifle, explodes upon striking its target and in the case of a balloon sets the gas bag on fire.

British city dwellers in general and Londoners in particular may be expected to receive this news with joy. The latter especially have been doing a great deal of worrying lately over what may happen to them when the Zeppelin fleet of dirigibles gets into commission. If current reports may be credited, London is taking the situation in this respect very seriously. By order of the authorities all lights which are not indispensable are being extinguished early in the evening. Streets which are ordinarily thronged with people are said to be deserted at nightfall, and at the theatres afternoon are being substituted for evening performances, because the blaze of their illumination has been prohibited.

Yet it is difficult to perceive any sufficient basis for all this apprehension, as thus far the part taken in the hostilities by the Zeppelin dirigible has by no means realized the expectations upon the subject which the public has been led to form. It had been intimated, and was generally supposed, that in its dirigibles Germany possessed a weapon from which it would derive an important advantage over its adversaries. No such formidable instrument of destruction had been acquired by any other belligerents.

They had placed their faith in aeroplanes but Germany, undeterred by the expense and by numerous unfortunate experiences, had supplied itself with no one knew how many dirigibles, and these were trusted to offset in some measure the immense naval superiority of the United Kingdom. At the appointed time a fleet of dirigibles was to navigate the air in the region of the North Sea, and any number of British dreadnoughts and cruisers were to be put out of business before they knew what struck them. They were to be blown out of the water by bombs rained upon them from above.

Such was the thrilling programme, but thus far its performances remains to be accomplished. Some bombs have been dropped here and there, with the result of killing a few innocent civilians, but that has been about the extent of the Zeppelin achievement, and outside of London the public is ceasing to take the dirigibles seriously. We are indeed told that after a while, after the Germans have captured Calais and occupied the other Channel ports of France, the dirigibles will get busy and be heard from in some terrible way, but as the average man is unable to understand what they are waiting for if their destructive power is all that has been asserted he has about given up taking these stories seriously.

Up to this time the bomb throwing business has done Germany more harm than good through the merited odium which it has incurred for having sanctioned it. To throw a bomb on an undefended city is an act of murder and it can be made nothing else.

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

"Fruit-a-tives" Healed His Kidneys and Cured Him.

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 28th, 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My Kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory.

Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

My Kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had".

D. A. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest Kidney Remedy in the world. It acts on the bowels and skin as well as on the kidneys, and thereby soothes and cures any Kidney disorder.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

HEARING IS RESTORED TO DEAF

Without Mechanical or Artificial Hearing Devices. Deaf Hear With Their Own Ears. A Wonderful English Discovery.

Thousands of people suffer from catarrhal deafness or poor hearing, who having tried specialists, advertised treatments, artificial ear drums, ear 'phones, electric vibrators and various mechanical contrivances without success have at last resigned themselves to a "world of silence." Thinking that nothing can ever restore to them their normal hearing. Yet their case is not hopeless. A remarkable scientific treatment discovered a little more than a year ago in England is enabling people hear after years of deafness and is now recognized for quickly stopping the distressing head noises that are so often the companions of defective hearing. This discovery is called Parmint and has attracted widespread notice throughout Canada where reports of the remarkable results it has given to deaf people have come in by the hundred.

The effect of Parmint it seems is by tonic action to produce a stimulus necessary to reduce all inflammation, swelling, enlargement or thickening of the organs of hearing and to stimulate the entire auditory tract.

Parmint is now being sold by many leading druggists in Peterborough and vicinity and a speedy trial is urged upon all who suffer from catarrhal deafness or head noises in any degree. Ask the druggist for 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength) and take it home and mix with ½ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day and you should soon find a remarkable improvement in your hearing.

WAR NOT WITHOUT ITS HUMOROUS SIDE

LONDON, Oct. 25.—(By mail to New York)—Soldiers' letters from the front continue to reveal the aptitude of "Tommy Atkins" in the invention of nicknames. There have been a number of puzzling references to "Asquiths" and the expression remained a mystery until one writer explained that this was the new name for French matches. They are so called because you have to "wait and see"—a famous expression once used by the British premier when baited by the opposition to disclose the government's hand with reference to the veto bill.

The Kaiser is now referred to as "Crazy Bill," and the crown prince as "five bob bit." German snipers are known as "little Willies."

The outer line of trenches where the men are posted at first to draw the German fire, is known as the "drawing room," and the inner line where the attacks are really met, is called the "reception room." The ground at the rear where the dead are buried is called the "dormitory."

In the navy they refer to Admiral Von Tirpitz as "old turps," and call Sir John Jellicoe "hell fire Jack." Submarines are called "wasps."

Neuralgia of the Heart

This Letter Tells of Wonderful Change Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. James G. Clark, Fosterville, York County, N.B., writes:—"I have been a great sufferer from what the doctors said was neuralgia of the heart. The pain started in the back of the neck and worked down into the region of the heart. Though I had taken a lot of medicine of one kind and another, I could not get anything to help me until I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"When I began this treatment I could not rest in bed, except by sitting upright, on account of the dreadful pains about the heart and the quick, loud beating. The change which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has made in my condition is wonderful. It has entirely overcome these symptoms, and is making me strong and well. If this statement will help to relieve the suffering of others, you are at liberty to use it."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a true tonic and the greatest of nerve restoratives, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited Toronto.

PROHIBITION OF VODKA THE GREATEST VICTORY THAT THE TSAR COULD WIN

Imperial Decree Frees Russia From Its Worst Enemy---Question Was Long a Difficult One as Liquor Monopoly Furnished Government One-Fourth of Its Income--- Workmen Used to Stay Drunk on Saturdays and Sundays.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 17, 1914.—By a single stroke of his mighty pen His Majesty the Tsar of all the Russias, Nicholas II., has gained a victory the like of which a thousand battalions of picked guards could not achieve were they to wipe the German hosts off the field of Europe. By an imperial decree, sanctioned by the Supreme Senatorial Council and countersigned by the Ministers of Finance and of the Interior, the sale of vodka, the whiskey of Russia and its evil genius, has been prohibited.

No human mind is keen enough to foretell the far reaching consequences of this heroic measure. One thing is certain; it means the advent of a new era for Russia, an era of sobriety, industry and devotion to civic and social reform.

Russia's worst enemies could not by any stretch of imagination have done the harm that the millions of barrels of vodka sold in government grog shops have done to the Russia people. For more than a year the Tsar has sought ways and means to lessen the evil, to bring about a return of the Russian peasant and workman to his former state of natural sobriety and docility.

Yielded Vast Revenue.

But where to find the equivalent for the 700,000,000 of roubles the sale of vodka by the government monopoly has yielded? This was the question that agitated the minds of the Russian Minister of Finance and his advisers. The Russian budget for the last year was close on 3,000,000,000 roubles, so that vodka was responsible for nearly twenty-five per cent. of the entire income of the empire. Its elimination seemed an impossibility, threatening a financial debacle. Hundreds of sessions were held and the financial situation was discussed from every point of view, but the courage to act was lacking and the decisive step was postponed until there was hardly any hope for the advocates of vodka abolition.

Then came this war of the world, and by the power vested in him through the declaration of martial law the Tsar cast all doubts to the winds, ended the procrastination, simply prohibited the sale of vodka, ordered the government grog shops to be closed and filled the hearts of all Russian patriots with unbounded delight.

It was a case of cutting the Gordian knot with a vengeance. "Let us deliver our people from the alcohol devil; finance will take care of itself," the Tsar is reported to have said Straightway he ordered a commission to be formed to deal with the question of a new financial era, of the creation of taxes that will replenish the imperial coffers and not press too heavily on those who will have to bear the brunt of the new order of things. The task is immense, but it will be carried through unflinchingly, and already it is announced that by December a budget will be submitted to the Duma which will be free from the vodka monopoly.

Income Tax Will Help.

The chief items in the new budget will consist of a graduated income tax, an increase in passenger and goods traffic on the government railways, an increased internal revenue on tobacco and beer, and an increase in the duties on all goods coming from countries that do not carry Russia on the list of the most favoured nations. These measures, combined with additional taxes on real property and an inheritance tax, will in all probability make up for the loss incurred by the abolition of the government vodka monopoly.

Whatever sacrifices these new taxes may bring in their wake, the people, and even those who will have to bear the brunt of the additional imposts, are quite prepared to make them, not only from a philanthropic or sentimental point of view but from the firm conviction that ultimately they will reap the benefit of the change. They regard the extra payments as an investment that will bear additional interest.

Already the vodka prohibition is making itself felt. There are numbers of manufacturers employing thousands of hands, and the increased production of their works, due solely to the sobriety of their workmen, and the working women for that matter, ranges from thirty to sixty per cent. This is no exaggeration, and the explanation is very simple.

Toilers Nearly All Drunk.

Almost the whole of Saturday and all day Sunday ninety per cent. of the workmen were in the habit of celebrating their freedom from work by drinking large quantities of vodka. In the lower quarters of Petrograd a sober man in the street was indeed a rare thing. Reeling, staggering men and women were so numerous that a sober man passing through the streets inhabited by the working classes got the impression that the whole street was drunk. The week's wages were gone on Sunday, and the rest of the week there was only the wife's hard earned pittance to keep the family going.

That workmen were underfed and in addition suffered from the excesses for two days afterward goes without saying. As a consequence he could only put in three real working days a week. Now he works five and three-quarter days, and works hard, enjoys good food and is beginning to feel the delight of putting by a little money.

All in all, it is enough to gladden the hearts of the prohibitionists. But then this is prohibition that really prohibits. It is simply impossible to get a drink of anything anywhere in Russia except in a restaurant that has a first-class license. The first-class restaurant in Russia is inaccessible to the man of humble means. What with a sandwich an inch square costing the equivalent of twenty cents, an ordinary beefsteak one dollar and a glass of vodka twenty cents, it is only the very well to do who can afford to be patrons. In a restaurant of the second class, to say nothing of the third and fourth classes, not even a glass of beer can be had.

So as not to given even the well to do the chance to imbibe too freely, all restaurants must close at eleven p.m., as must all places of amusement. Certainly the foreigner in Petrograd would not recognize the old St. Petersburg.

WAR FEVER GROWING

MONTREAL, Nov. 2.—Italy's early participation in the war on the side of the allies is confidently expected by prominent Italians here.

"This looks very much like war," said Chevalier Gualtiers Chilesotti, Consul General for Italy, when informed that Tommaso Tittoni was spoken of as the new Minister of Foreign Affairs in the reorganized Italian Cabinet, while Baron Sidney Sonino, former Premier, was being mentioned as Minister of the Treasury. "Tittoni is very friendly to France," the chevalier explained. Tittoni has been Italy's ambassador to France throughout the present European disturbance, and is consequently in close touch with the Government of that country.

War Spirit Strong.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.— The war spirit is spreading fast in Italy and the Government is straining every effort to prepare for hostilities.

This was the information brought to-day by Ettore Patrii, editor of the San Francisco L'Italia, who has returned from a prolonged stay in his native country.

Favour the Allies.

"All Italy is enthusiastically in favour of the allies," said Patrii. "The King is standing firmly for neutrality, but it is known that his sympathies are with England in spite of a warm personal friendship with the Kaiser."

BIG SHIPMENT FROM HASTINGS FOR THE FUND.

WARKWORTH, Ont., Nov. 3.— The patriotic contribution from Perry Township, Northumberland County, shipped by the Grand Trunk Railway from Hastings, filled four large cars, and consisted of 800 barrels of potatoes, 100,000 bushels of oats, 20 bushels of beans, five boxes of cheese, five barrels of green apples, three boxes of evaporated apples, and a quantity of clothing, the shipment representing a total value of $1,700.

SICK, SOUR STOMACH, INDIGESTION OR GAS

"Pape's Diapepsin" Makes Upset Stomach Feel Fine in Five Minutes

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favourite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty-cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

NEW PLAN IN WAR AGAINST THE BOOSE

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Bright electric signs, with pointed queries such as "Did Booze Ever Do You Any Good?" are now illuminating the entrances of the various plants at the Illinois Steel Company. The novelty was invoked as a means of driving the desire of John Barleycorn from the minds of 20,000 men employed in the works.

At the three gates of the south plant of the company in South Chicago the signs, shining a bright red, are attracting considerable attention. The wording of the displays will be changed fortnightly. Another question that the plant officials will fire at their employes through the medium is:

"Did Booze Ever Help You to Get a Better Job?" and driving closer to home is this one:

"Did Booze Ever Contribute Anything to the Happiness of Your Family?"

The innovation was adopted with the approval of President E. J. Buffington, in conjunction with a campaign to encourage the drinking of milk as whisky's substitute.

Red Heads Make the Best Stenographers

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—The red-headed girl with soft blue eyes is in a class by herself as stenographer and typewriter, according to the view of the employing head of a big Chicago business house.

"Give us a red-head or give us nothing," was the ultimatum in the communication to Miss Helen Bennett, a Wellesley Girl, who manages the collegiate bureau of occupations, whose mission is to find suitable positions for college girls. "She is the ideal stenographer—the quickest, the most accurate."

A dozen red-haired girls with eyes like the sky were on hand in answer to the appeal. Miss Marion Bascomb, whose hair is raven, also was there.

"Red-headed stenographers are sadly handicapped," she said. "They have awful tempers. The first essential of the perfect stenographer is an even temper. Brunnettes are best."

"The blonde forever," said Miss Mildred Lucas, who qualifies in that class. "The business world would be a gloomy thing if it were not for the blonde girls with their sunny hair and sunny moods."

To Get Rid of Wrinkles and Bad Complexions

It is more important now than during the period of profuse perspiration, to keep the pores clean. All cosmetics clog the pores. In cool weather this interferes greatly with elimination of waste material injuring instead of aiding the complexion. Ordinary mercolized wax serves all the purposes of creams, powders and rouges, giving far better results. It actually peels off an offensive skin, at the same time massaging the pores. Minute particles of scarf skin come off day by day, causing not the least pain or discomfort. Gradually the healthy younger skin beneath peeps out and in less than a fortnight you have a lovelier complexion than you ever dreamed of acquiring. Mercolized wax, obtainable at any druggists, is spread on nightly like cold cream and washed off mornings. One ounce usually suffices.

For removing wrinkles, without stopping the pores with pasty stuff, here's a never-failing formula: 1 oz. powdered saxolite, dissolved in ½ pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in this daily for awhile; every line will vanish completely. Even the first application gives surprising results.

Bury Major General Harrington at Night

London, October 20.

"We buried him slowly at dead of night,
The sods with our bayonets turning,
By the struggling moonbeams' misty light,
And a lantern dimly burning."

This verse describing the burial of Sir John Moore, is recalled by the dramatic story of the death and burial of Major General Herbert L. W. Hamilton, in a little church yard in France.

"The Major General," says the writer, himself a distinguished officer, "was standing with a group of others when a shell burst within one hundred yards off. He was hit on the temple by a bullet and killed on the spot. No one else was touched. It was a fine death, but I know how he would feel—that he was taken before his work was done. He was buried last night—a real soldier's funeral. I shall never forget it.

"All day we could not get near the place where he was lying owing to the heavy shell fire, but at dusk we went out and carried him to a little church near by and buried him there. Just as we got there the attack began most violently so that we could not hear the chaplain's voice for the musketry and pom-pom fire close by. Flashes from the guns lit up now and then, but there was no other light but a tiny torch for the parson to see to read by.

He was doing so splendidly that it was cruel luck that he should have been the one taken out of the group. When we have driven the enemy away the Major-General's body will be removed to England."

IN GREAT DISTRESS FROM ECZEMA

Suffered Over Two Years. Grew Thin and Lost Appetite. Itching, Burning, Sore Eruption. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Healed.

"223 George St., Peterboro, Ont.—"I suffered for over two years with eczema which first appeared in small pimples and broke into red inflamed sores. They were very itching and when my clothing rubbed against them I was in great distress. I lost my rest at night and was much disfigured by the eruption. The eczema was so bad that I grew thin and lost my appetite. My hands, arms, face and various parts of my body were covered with an itching, burning eruption of sores and though I took many common and much recommended remedies they failed to do any good.

"I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after about three weeks I was completely healed. I take pleasure in recommending them to any other lady sufferer from eczema or other eruptions of the skin." (Signed) Miss Bertha Allen, May 28, 1914.

A prescription of emollients has found no soap so well suited for cleansing and purifying the skin and hair of infants and children as Cuticura Soap. Its absolute purity and refreshing fragrance alone are enough to recommend it above ordinary skin soaps, but there are added to these qualities delicate yet effective emollient properties, derived from Cuticura Ointment, which render it most valuable in overcoming a tendency to distressing eruptions and promoting skin and hair health. Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A."

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

This question and "How to Prevent Colds" is asked a thousand times every day. A cold is really a fever, not always caused by the weather but due to a disordered condition of the blood or lack of important food-elements. In changing seasons fat-foods are essential because they distribute heat by enriching the blood and so render the body better able to withstand the varying elements.

This is the underlying reason why the medicinal fats in Scott's Emulsion quickly overcome colds and build strength to prevent more serious sickness. It contains nature's medicinal fats, so skillfully prepared that the blood profits from every drop, and it is totally free from harmful drugs.

Canadians And Irish In Buffalo Ready To Nip Any Attempt To Invade Canada

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 3. — Is Canada in danger of an invasion by German sympathisers resident in the United States? Officials in this city emphatically answer "No."

In the first place, it is certain that the sympathy of a great majority of the officials is emphatically with the Allies, especially with Belgium and Britain.

30,000 Canadians.

In the next place, in Buffalo there are approximately 30,000 Canadians. Every man of them, according to Superintendent Michael Regan of the Buffalo police force, is an enthusiast, and virtually a British agent in the promulgation of British sentiment, and in energetic support of British arms in the warfare. These Canadians are scattered through every department of the city's endeavour, are accounted among the best citizens, and have a potent influence in determining public sentiment.

Add to the Canadians the Irishmen of Buffalo, who, though in the past anything but lovers of Britain, are now ardently championing her cause in the war. This wholesale turnover, ascribed almost entirely to the position assumed by Mr. John Redmond, and the passing of Home Rule by the British Government, under Mr. Asquith, has had a marked effect on public sentiment in many of the large American cities.

Have Laws—Enforce Them.

The whole matter is fairly summed up in the words of Superintendent Regan:

"We have laws in this country and we are seeking to enforce them. If there was anything going on here in the line of preparations for a raid I would know it. My men are in touch with the situation, and it would be nipped in the bud so suddenly that the plotters would not know what struck them. No body of men can drill without my knowledge and consent, and anyone carrying or secreting arms of any kind would be promptly placed under arrest. The whole story has been concocted by sensational newspaper penny-a-liners."

Superintendent Regan stated that he had received a communication from Chief of Police Grasett of Toronto, in relation to the published stories, and was also in touch with the Ontario and Dominion Police. "If such a thing ever came to my notice, even in its most remote or trivial stage, I would at once notify those Canadian officers," he said.

An Quiet on Border.

In the meantime, it is stated here that reports from Canadian border towns show that no alarm or anxiety is manifested in any of them.

Canadian military men, asked for an opinion, smile at the idea. All vulnerable points, they say, are being guarded and patrolled by sentries, both on railways and canals. If trouble is coming it will be met more than halfway. But no one appears to think it is coming.

NOT ISLAM'S TRUSTEE NOW.

Aga Khan Says Turkey Has Drawn Her Sword in Unholy War at Germany's Bidding.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—His Highness Aga Khan, who is known as the spiritual head of the Mohammedans in India, East Africa, and Central Asia, has sent a cablegram from London addressed to the Moslems in India and other British dominions, in which he expresses his deep sorrow that Turkey has joined hands with Germany in the war. In this message Aga Khan says:

"This is not the free will of the Sultan, but the will of the German officers and other non-Moslems, who have forced him to do their bidding."

He declares further that "Turkey has now lost her position as the trustee of Islam. She has drawn her sword in an unholy cause, and the duty of Moslems to-day is to remain loyal and faithful to their temporal and secular allegiance."

NOSE AND HEAD STOPPED UP FROM COLD OR CATARRH, OPEN AT ONCE

My Cleansing, Healing Balm Instantly Clears Nose, Head and Throat — Stops Nasty Catarrhal Discharges. Dull Headache Goes.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat wil be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake to-night struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

THE ALLIES MAKE IMPORTANT GAINS
MYSTERIOUS ACTIVITY IN NORTH SEA

THE ALLIES HAVE GAINED MUCH GROUND IN THE EXTREME NORTH

Germans Abandon Much Ammunition and Many Guns in the Neighbourhood of Dixmunde---Allies Regain Ground Lost Near Vailly---German Left is Pushed Back on Metz

ALLIES' LINES HAVE BEEN REINFORCED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, November 4. — Important gains in the extreme north, and alternate gains and recessions between Ypres and the Aisne, were reported to-day. The Germans are continuing their efforts to renew the offensive, but it is still claimed at the military headquarters here that at no strategic point have they been successful. Very heavy reinforcements have been sent to the north, and to the Argonne and Woevre regions, in anticipation of the arrival there of German troops sent from the east front.

The British forces are reported to have forced a wedge between the armies operating between Belgium and northern France, and to be once more threatening the German communications.

All of the reports received from the right wing indicate that the Germans are being pushed further back toward Metz, and a general withdrawal of the enemy in this section is anticipated.

It was also declared that the Germans have abandoned much ammunition and many guns in the mud in the neighbourhood of Dixmunde, as well as many wounded and dead. The allies have captured Lombardsyde, and have also regained ground recently lost near Vailly.

TOKIO, Japan, November 4.—The Japanese Admiralty in a statement issued to-day, declares that the bombardment of Tsing-Tao, the fortified city of Kiao-Chau, continues without cessation. Fort Iltis has been silenced, it is announced, and it is confirmed that the Austrian cruiser Kaiserin Elizabeth, which took refuge in the harbour there, has been sunk. A good part of the city has been burned, but so far the Germans refuse to consider any demand to surrender.

PARIS, November 4.—The Germans continue their attack in force in the territory between Lys and Arras, with alternate advances and retirements by both sides. The fighting is admittedly desperate in this section, according to the official communique issued at Bordeaux, but at no point does it seem to be approaching a decisive stage.

Along the territory between Dixmunde and Lys the situation is unchanged. Heavy cannonading is taking place in the region of Rheims, where the Germans are again very active.

WILL HAVE BIG ARMY

If the War Continues for Another Year Canada Will Have 150,000 Men Under Arms

10,000 ON HOME DUTY

OTTAWA, Nov. 3.—It was officially announced to-day that the request of the War Office that Canada send enough men in its second contingent to make up with the extra brigade at Salisbury Plains a full army division will not interfere with the plans of the Government. Sir Robert Borden stated that the Government would enlist thirty thousand men, and send forward contingents of ten thousand at regular intervals, always keeping thirty thousand at home under arms and in training.

The second contingent will now consist of fifteen thousand men. The Government wil proceed to enlist a full thirty thousand and as soon as the fifteen thousand are gone will enlist another fifteen thousand. These will make the basis for a land contingent or reinforcements which will get away early in the New Year.

Nearly 80,000 Men Under Arms.

With two full army divisions making 45,000 men at the front by January 1st, with thirty thousand men under arms, with the Royal Canadian Regiment at Bermuda, and nearly ten thousand men defending Halifax, Quebec and Esquimault and the canals, and other public works, Canada, by the end of the year, will have from ninety to a hundred thousand men under arms. If the war continues another year the Dominion will have fully 150,000 men on active service.

West Again Disappointed.

Of the fifteen thousand men which the War Office has asked for the next contingent eight thousand will be infantry. The remaining seven thousand will be made up of artillery, engineers, army service corps, medical service and veterinary corps. There is, frankly, considerable disappointment that there is not a call for cavalry, as the west was prepared to furnish a whole brigade of mounted men. It is understood that negotiations through the Duke of Connaught, are proceeding with the War Office to see if more cavalry cannot be taken. However, this is a war of infantry and artillery, and, apparently, except for scouting purposes, cavalry is little required.

May Leave in January.

It is believed that the first Canadian army division at Salisbury Plains will leave with Lord Kitchener's next army now training, which, it is announced, will be ready to go to the front about December 1st. The second contingent will be ready to take their place at Salisbury Plains, and will then likely get away the end of next month or early in January.

While full reports have not yet been recived by the Militia Department, the preliminary reports show that the 16,000 men asked for have now been fully raised The western Provinces, Toronto and Montreal, have all raised their quotas.

HARBOURS MINED

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 4.—Regarding the possibility of an attack on Vancouver, or Victoria, B.C., by the German vessels, flushed with the Chilian coast victory, every precaution has been taken to mine the entrance to the harbours, while the guns of the forts possess long range. There is now no question that the German vessels have well established coal bases on the islands and points of the South American coast. If they came further north, however, they would be heavily handicapped in this respect.

PATRIOTIC ADDRESS

Dr. Gordon's Meeting To-night Under the Auspices of the City Council

Dr. Gordon's address in The George Street Methodist church will be of a patriotic nature and will be under the auspices of the City Council. The members of that organization as well as of other city bodies, such as the Board of Trade, are invited to attend en masse to hear Dr. Gordon's message.

FEW CASES OF DESTITUTION

Mr. J. H. Garbutt, Reeve of Smith, and ex-Warden of Peterborough County, states that there are scarcely any cases of destitution in the County attributable to the present war. A lot of men have gone forth from Peterborough County, but few of them were family men. Monaghan Township is the only township from which any distress is anticipated; this owing to its close proximity to the city and the fact that a large number of breadwinners are domiciled within its borders. The majority of these men were employed in the City, but since the outbreak of the war, have been out of work.

KITCHENER CANADIAN PATRIOTIC LEAGUE CONCERT

To-morrow eevning a concert is to be given in the Collegiate Institute, under the auspices of the Kitchener Canadian Patriotic League, for the benefit of our soldiers who have gone to the front. A particularly appropriate programme has been prepared for the occasion, consisting of patriotic songs, music and tableaux, which has been in rehearsal by some of the best local talent in the City. The Kitchener Canadian Patriotic League is the organization which has sent so much warm clothing, etc., to members of the first contingent, and the proceeds of the concert is for the benefit of the second contingent

OLD COLLEGIATE BOYS FIGHTING

Mr. Kenner, Principal of the Collegiate Institute, submitted a list of graduates of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute who were now under arms. The list is a more extensive one than might be expected, and shows that a large number of former local corps have crossed the Atlantic as members of contingents from other Canadian cities. The names will be suitably arranged, appropriately framed and hung in the local Collegiate.

TURKS' LOSS HEAVY

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Nov 4.—In an official statement, issued to-day, it is announced that Russian troops have crossed the Turkish frontier in force and have attacked the Turkish outposts, driving the advance guard back in great confusion Seven Turkish villages have been occuiped by the Russians and the losses of the Turks are described as very large

DEMOCRATS ARE MORE HOPEFUL

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Although the Republican landslide was considered privately by the administration authorities to-day as "Cataclysm," they professed the belief that the Presidential result in 1916 will spell only Woodrow Wilson.

The forenoon returns dispelled some of the gloom that had prevously surrounded the Democratic leaders during the night. Doubts concerning democratic control of the House were swept away. They expect now a leadership of at least 25.

MRS. C. JAMES WAS RECEIVED TWO LETTERS FROM CAMP

Fred. Board, Jr., formerly of the Examiner press room, writing from Devonport to his grandmother, Mrs. C. James, 505 Sherbrooke Street, says: "We had a fine trip, although it took a long time to cross. We are seeing some fine sights here. The gram is green and it is as warm as summer. There are battleships around us here all the time, and they sure are fine ones. We had all kinds of sports coming across, boxing matches every day and a fine concert every night.

Thomas Parrington, a friend of the family, also wrote Mrs. James from Devonport. He says they were twenty-one days aboard ship, and it was with great pleasure that they saw the lights of Plymouth.

"We had a swell Thanksgiving dinner of a little soup, a spoon of beans and a piece of boiled meat, with nothing to drink nor any bread nor cakes. Some class to it, what do you think? If they get a second ecntingent advise —— to join. A young fellow will get a lot of experience before he goes to the front, and after that the main thing is returning home if the Germans don't take too great a liking to us."

SIGNS OF HURRIED GERMAN RETREAT

HAVRE, Nov. 3.—An official communication from the Belgian general staff, dated Monday, says:

"The enemy has fallen back towards the east, abandoning his dead and wounded. Our troops are holding the positions occupied on Sunday. Our advanced forces which moved towards the Yser are finding everywhere signs of a precipitate retreat.

"A German officer confessed that the enemy lost 30,000 men, of whom 10,000 were killed."

BENEFIT OF OUR SOLDIER BOYS!

A Concert, under the auspices of the Kitchener Canadian Patriotic League, will be given in the Collegiate Institute on Thursday (To-morrow) Evening, November 5th, at 8 o'clock, for the benefit of our Soldier Boys who have gone to the Front. Tickets 25c. Let there be a Grand Rally! 24-104

ADMIRALTY IS KEEPING SILENT

German Squadron Which Sank British Submarine Was Apparently on its Way to Bombard the British Coast--Trawler Was Sunk by German Fire.

Examiner Special:

LONDON, England, November 4.—(Noon.) — Official confirmation still is lacking of the report that a German squadron of heavy war craft has left the naval base and headed for the open sea. It persists in official circles, however, and there has been no denial. The Admiralty shows signs of the greatest activity. Most of the chiefs have been on duty throughout the night, and it is believed here that important events are impending.

There is still no official word of the British disaster off the Chilian coast.

One of the reports which receives the most credence is that the Germans are attempting to run the blockade of the British fleet with some of their fastest cruisers and tenders in the expectation of joining the Karlsrhue off the South American coast.

It developed to-day that the engagement yesterday when the submarine D-5 was sunk, was of much greater magnitude than at first appeared. A fleet of minelayers was at work when it was surprised by a German squadron, and the trawler Fraternal was sunk, and the Copious badly damaged. The torpedo boat Halcyon was on duty, and engaged the Germans; the latter managed to hit the gun boat several times, although the damage was comparatively small. The German raiders were apparently en route to bombard the British coast, when they encountered the British vessels and were forced to flight.

LONDON, November 4.—Telegraphing from Yarmouth regarding the raid made by the German squadron in the North Sea on Tuesday ,the correspondent of The Times says:

"The fight was so close to the shore that some of the shells dropped within a mile of the beach, one exploding within a few hundred yards of the naval air station on the south side of Yarmouth. It is believed here that the German raiding squadron intended to bombard the coast."

LONDON, Eng., November 4.—A cable from Copenhagen says that a large fleet of German war ships has been sighted in the Baltic Sea, some distance from the entrance of the Kiel Canal. They are anchored, apparently waiting for orders. It is the opinion here, from developments noted recently, that the German fleet is all leaving the Kiel Canal for some important and decisive movement.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 4.—In his report of the naval engagement off Soronel, Chile, United States Consul Fletcher, of Santiago, Chile, says that the damaged British Cruiser Good Hope made her escape with the Glasgow and Otranto.

TORONTO, November 4.—There were at least four Canadians among the officers of H.M.S. Good Hope, supposed to be lost in the engagement off the Chilean Coast, and very likely several among the seamen and stokers. Officers known are: Midshipman Malcolm Cann of Yarmouth, J. V. M. Hatheway of Fredericton, N.B., William A. Palmer and Arthur Silver, of Halifax, N.S. They were drafted from the Canadian Royal Naval College to this warship just a few months ago.

MORE RECRUITS FROM THIS CITY

Peterboro' Will Supply Share of Additional 14,000 Men

Orders will be issued in Peterborough in a day or so for the enlistment of more men for the Canadian overseas forces The first orders sent out by the Militia Department called for 16,000 men. Fourteen thousand more will be recruited immediately and the 57th Regiment will be asked to supply a quota of fifty or seventy-five men. Major Walker has received no orders yet, but may get instructions to-morrow as an Ottawa despatch says orders will be issued immediately to the divisional commanders who will at once notify the Commanding Officers of the different units in their districts

MOSLEMS OF INDIA STAY BY THE EMPIRE

TORONTO, Nov. 4.—At the annual banquet of the Laymen's Missionary Association of Toronto last night, Samuel Higginbottom of India, in rising to speak, said he had just heard that the leader of the millions of Mohammedans of India had come out with the declaration urging his followers to be faithfu to the British. "As one who knows the situation in India, this has brought me great comfort," said the speaker amid loud cheers. Mr. Higginbottom told a harrowing story of the leper life of India. He also gave an interesting account of his work in teaching modern methods of agriculture to the natives. He described how he had got thirty bushels of wheat an acre out of land which yielded only eight bushels under Hindu methods of cultivation. He believed that with proper ploughing India would be saved from the scourge of famine.

Silver And The Big War

The European War is bound to create an extra demand for silver. Messrs. Charles A. Stoneham & Co. of Toronto and New York, have issued a pamphlet showing why this should be the case and, incidentally, give exhaustive statistics of the different leading silver mine companies.

This pamphlet, which has thirty-six pages, is ordinary magazine size and will be sent free to all who apply for it. It is worth your while to secure this copy without charge. Write for one to Messrs. Charles A. Stoneham & Co., 26 Melinda street, Toronto.

THE QUALITY OF TRUE LOYALTY.

While it would be difficult, to define comprehensively in what true loyalty consists, it is not difficult to see in what it does not consist. A regrettable incident took place at the Armouries last night at the patriotic meeting — in which unbalanced impulse was guilty of something like outrage, and in the name of loyalty, too. When "God Save the King" was being played by the band, one young man present failed to uncover. A man near him pounced upon him, and while throttling him called him "a German, etc.". Now this was an excess of zeal. As a matter of fact the young man assaulted was not a German. He was a citizen of the United States domiciled in Canada, and was so little of a "German" that he was one of the volunteers in the first Canadian contingent, but was rejected, as were scores of Canadians and other Britishers, on account of some trifling physical disability. Being an American he was not to the manner born, like Canadians who, as a matter of habit automatically lift the hat when "God Save the King" is sung or played. He was not disloyal or disrespectful at heart, since he was willing to fight for the King. One can even suggest that he was more loyal than his assailant. The latter might be strong in outward manifestation of loyalty, but he would have shown his loyalty in a far more practical way if he had been in the ranks of the departing contingent; and, besides, he took an un-British way of administering reproof—striking a man from behind—"with his hands down." If this gentleman undertakes to assault everybody that shows passive disrespect to the King, he will be kept busy. He would find plenty of employment throttling men and women at the play or at concerts, who show as much disrespect when they accompany "God Save th King" by putting on overcoats, hats and wraps, as a man would show by failing to raise his hat. The truly loyal citizen does not carry his loyalty under his hat, but in his heart. The boast of British freedom is its freedom, expressed in, "a man may speak the thing he thinks." Bigotry can be shown in other things than religion; and experience shows us that, it is not always the loudest shouters of their loyalty that translate it into action, when practical evidence of its possession is demanded. The quality of true loyalty is that it does not submit itself to classificatio with Dr. Johnson's much quoted cynicism — "patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel.

PROVINCIAL GOOD ROADS.

The Globe on Tuesday had an admirable article on "Radial Railways and Good Roads." One can frankly subscribe to the sentiment of the opening sentence as an appeal, pertinent to governments as well as to individuals, to keep business going "as usual"—

"In the stress of war time it is to be hoped that the movement to provide Ontario with good roads and an adequate system of radial railways will not be set aside till a more convenient season. The Province needs good roads — thousands of miles of them—and it needs even more urgently light electric railways, particularly around Toronto and in the Midland district."

While it is true that "the province" needs good roads, it is subject to question that it "especially" needs light electric railways. In elaborating his thesis the Globe takes largely the local, instead of the provincial view. It reasons well upon the advantages that would accrue to Toronto and the immediate rural districts tributary to it, from the operation of electric railways.

But as great a centre as Toronto is, as much as we take pride in its growth and admire its enterprise, it is not the whole province; and any scheme or plan of provincial good roads, should obviously be general in character. Radial railways reaching out from Toronto and other urban centres, no doubt benefit such centres and the adjacent district served by the railway. These benefits are, however, purely local, and even these benefits are more circumscribed, in default of good highways giving access to such railways. With such highways provided, permitting of easy access, a much larger area of benefit would be created. Steam railways are an immense aid to facility of marketing farm products, but this advantage is very largely neutralized by the existence and retention of bad roads leading to and from the farms to be served.

No one will object to radial railways, or minimize their advantages. But in fairness, as well is in good practice, any scheme of improving provincial traffic ways, by means of provincial expenditure — expenditure of the money of the whole people—is defective that does not contemplate the extension of the advantages over as wide an area as possible. Farmers living in the vicinity of cities have, to begin with, an advantage, in the matter of proximity to a good market, over the farmers living in remoter districts. To emphasize this advantage at the expense — financially—of the dwellers in remoter districts, and failing to provide good roads or better roads for the latter, would not be in line with the spirit of the principle implied in "the greater good to the greater number"; nor be in sympathy with the principle of British fair play, which gains so much apt citation in the present world-crisis. All trunk lines of transportation, rail or highway, depend for their fullest efficiency and usefulness upon, good lateral highways. As with the Hydro Electric extended to a few farmers, whereby one in a thousand farmers are benefitted, so with radial railways, which only benefit one in a thousand of our farmers. The benefit of the general farming community and of our commercial interests is overlooked.

We cannot accuse the Ontario Government of any undue precipitancy of action in the matter of inaugurating a comprehensive policy of provincial highways improvement. As the Globe suggests, it is to be hoped that "the stress of war time," will not so paralyze the provincial government that it will fail to measure up to the duty of improving the general highway system of the province. At such a time, unusual enterprise and activity in this direction are indicated. Unemployment is one of our acute national ailments. A wide-spread system of road construction would not only bring a large measure of relief in this regard, but would provide advantages that would justify bold financing to bring it into operation — advantages that would help the farming community to take advantage of the rebound that will come at the conclusion of this war—advantages that would exercise a lasting forward and upward influence upon the agricultural, commercial and social interests of the province.

A STRONG APPEAL.

John Cottram of London has written an "open letter to the American people," in which he upbraids them with indifference, and says, in part:

"Under Stars and Stripes shall a hundred million free people, with resources unlimited, remain indifferently neutral, while a sister republic is being crushed and bled, whose blood and treasure were freely poured to help America in her time of need? Is the recipient of that aid, the premier republic of the world, to remain indifferent while the very existence of free peoples is in the balance?

"Shall America continue merely to look on while other nations yield up their lives, not for land or power or money, not for their own freedom, so long enjoyed, but for the freedom of less fortunate peoples, some well-nigh exterminated, and others threatened with the same sad fate of that little nation, still, thank God! fighting valiantly, whose homes have just been pulp-ground by a tyrant's iron heel, whose families were wiped off their own little spot of earth and all but annihilated by the irresistible hell machine of a scientific, Satanic autocracy?

"Consider not America's loss in treasure, already hundreds of millions yearly, caused indirectly by this war. Apart from that altogether, shall she be content in indifference and neutrality while a pride-drunken obligarchy of butchers run amuck in Europe, converting peace-loving nations into an international slaughter house, all as pre-arranged in long, sly decades of continuous treachery and spy-betrayed hospitality; now at last massing and killing human beings in place of sheep so often destroyed, thousands folded at a time, to test and perfect hell-machinery for 'The Day' they toasted, this bloody day of fiends incarnate, this diabolical debacle in God's own precious flesh and blood.

"But of the land of Patrick Henry, of Washington and Lincoln, shall it be said that no drop of her blood was spilt when free nations united to put an end to war, to crush this great tyrant, this last enemy of universal peace?

"Men from every sea are now sacrificing their countless lives in the birth-agonies of a greater parliament to give freedom to all lands and to all people; to create a congress whose decree no kaiser nor no nation dare oppose, and in whose earthwide domain no force shall permanently prevail, save only the sweet persuasion of a just cause.

"And when men by millions dedicate themselves to death for such a cause shall it be said that the United States of America stood aside, indifferent and neutral?"

This, it will be admitted, is rather lurid writing. Mr. Cottam does not spare his adjectives, and evidently writes under strong feeling. But it will also be admitted that there is a great deal of truth and force and pertinence in what he says. And no doubt most people in the United States will appreciate the justice of the appeal, but duty is often subordinate to diplomacy, and loyalty to the republican principle cannot be expected to override loyalty of an individual republic to itself involved in abstention from active expression of sympathy. Nations cannot always be expected to feel and act like individuals would do under parallel circumstances.

AN INVASION OF THE KAISER.

George Stevens' impression of the Kaiser is worth recalling now. He saw him riding through cheering crowds in Berlin on the day of the great autumn parade—"a face at once repulsive and pathetic, so harsh and stony was it, so grimly solemn. A face in which no individual feature was very dark, but which altogether was black as thunder. He raised his gloved hand in a stiff mechanical salute, and turned his head impassively from left to right; but there was no courtesy in the salute, no light in the eye, no smile on the tight mouth for his loyal subjects. He looked like a man without joy, without love, without pity, without hope. He looked like a man who had never laughed, like a man who could never sleep. A man might wear such a face who felt himself slowly turning into ice." —London Chronicle.

"Ralph Connor's" Conception of Canada's Duty In This Hour

"Ralph Connor," the well-known novelist, (Rev. Charles W. Gordon, Winnipeg), wrote the following for publication, in the Winnipeg Free Press, under the heading "Canada's Duty." He is past President of the Canadian Club, and the latter has though so highly of Mr Gordon's utterance, that it has published it in pamphlet form It is as follows:

I desire to express to my people of the Overseas Dominions with what appreciation and pride I have received the messages from their respective governments. . . . I shall be strengthened in the discharge of the great responsibility which rests upon me by the confident belief that in this time of trial the Empire will stand united, calm, resolute, trusting in God.—King George's Message to Canada.

The Motherland is confronting a necessity of national existence. We come to her aid in determination to ensure the safety of this Empire and defend our flag, our honour and our heritage.—Sir Robert L. Borden, Premier Dominion of Canada.

I have often declared that if the mother country were ever in danger or if danger threatened, Canada would render assistance to the full extent of her power.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Leader of the Opposition.

There is no place for pessimism on the part of any Britisher in this war. The outcome is assured—we shall win, and win completely The gage of the German Kaiser and. of his Prussian Junkertum, hurled in the teeth of Christian civilization, has been taken up, and the fight will go on until Democracy, Liberty and Law among the nations will triumph. But those cheery optimists who forsee a speedy end to this strife, and who picture a joyous jaunt unter den Linden for the Allies, can hardly be regarded as harmless lunatics, for harmless they are not. The sooner Canada realises that this war is a stern serious business and that it will grow in desperation as the long, weary months drag their terrible length through winter and, perhaps, through summer and through winter again, the better it will be.

Let us make no mistake. No sudden rage, no fluke of diplomacy, not Austria's great ambition leaping at the chance of war afforded by the wicked act of a mad Servian student—not these things nor things like these have caused Germany to plunge into this war. Never did a nation more deliberately take a purposed and long-planned step. For forty years Germany has cherished ambitions, has fed upon philosophies, has extended her commerce, has built up her industries, has established her fortresses, has perfected her siege guns, has built her navy, has constructed her aerial fleet, has hoarded her gold, has drilled her eight million soldiers, has fired her young men with lust for the Satanic glory of war with one purpose, and one purpose only—that she might war in a supreme effort after world power, incidental to which is the crushing of France to the position of Portugal among the European nations, the absorption of small countries like Belgium, Holland and Denmark, and the extermination of hated Britain.

Upon this issue Germany stakes her existence, that Europe may be Germanized and a World Empire established greater than the world has ever seen, with colonies on every sea, built upon highly scienced brute force that knows no law but that of might and derides the Chritsian virtues as contemptible and utterly unworthy of the superman.

For this enterprise the Kaiser believes himself God anointed and God appointed. With him to-day stand the haughty aristocracy of Prussia, and all the war caste of Germany, and behind them, united in a mad and deluded enthusiasm, stand as yet the German people to a man.

Victory for the Allies, therefore, means the dethronement of the Kaiser and his military brood the annihilation of the war caste and the smashing of the war machine. Nothing short of this will be accepted as victory by any of the allied nations. Nothing less than this would be worth fighting for.

But what does this mean? It means that the Kaiser will hurl into the last deadly fight every German soldier, every German ship and gun, and every German dolar; for, while it is true that Germany will survive this war, the Kaiser and his caste of war worshippers will not. They will be wiped out of existence, and they know it. Hence the desperate character of this conflict. There is no truce, nor can be. No peace is possible. Two sets of principles are locked in death grips—Force as an empire builder against the Will of a free people, Justice as an international arbiter as against the Sword of the mighty, international Honour as an eternal obligation rather than as a mere temporary convenience. These things make peace impossible, and these things make the war worth while.

What, then, is Canada's immediate duty? It stands clear as the morning sun above the prairie rim. The Empire stands to-day for Liberty, Justice, Honour among nations as among men; and Canada stands with the Empire for these. It is no longer a question of a colony giving support of her national soul and with every past that. It is a question of whether Canada shall stand with the free nations who believe in government by free choice, justice among nations, honour as an eternal obligation, and with her last man and her last dollar fight for these things that determine a nation's character and its place in history. I repeat that it is no longer a question of aiding the motherland in a fight for national or Empire existence. Canada is herself nation with a proud sense of nationhood. Canada's future is involved in this conflict, and with every instinct of her national soul and with every throb of her national life she hates and opposes the spirit, the ideals, the methods for which the German Kaiser with his Prussian Junkertum is now so desperately contending.

And how is Canada to fulfill her obligation as a nation in this world crisis? Our Government has done well, has given a splendid exhibition of efficient dispatch in mobilising, equipping and transporting to England's shores between 30,000 and 40,000 men in the short space of two months. But it is not. I repeat, a matter of contingents, one, two, or three. Rather must Canada, with calm, deliberate, clear-eyed purpose, make resolve that she is committed to this conflict to her last man and her last dollar, not for the Empire's sake alone, but for her own sake and the sake of her national ideals. And when once Canada has clearly conceived it as her obligation to throw her entire national life and resources into this conflict, the problem then becomes a very simple one, namely, one of administration.

If it is clearly understood that every fit Canadian man is pledged to this war, then first let the Government take immediate steps for the enrolment, not of 20,000, but of 100,000 or 200,000 Canadians available for active service. Then from these enrolled men let contingents be selected for immediate training and sent on to the front as soon as they can be equipped and fitted and as they may be needed.

I am no pessimist but I confess that that long, swaying line of men, locked in deadly embrace on the French frontier, is ominous of possible disaster; these daring raids of German submarines are suggestive of dangers in a direction where we thought we were invincible. So far the war has gone well, but after all what signifies the loss of a few hundred thousand men to Germany out of her eight million soldiers, not to speak of the uncalled multitudes available out of her sixty-five millions of people? And we have yet to hear from Turkey. The posibilities of Islam as an anti-British force are faint it is true, but they are as yet unexplored. Then there is Italy. A sudden great disaster on the line of battle, which is by no means outside the fortune of war, a chance and fatal raid upon our fleet, an unforseen combination of crushing calamities, all of which lie within the possibilities in war, might change in one week the hue of our horizon. What then? It is the commonplace of war that battles are lost before they are fought. Let Canada wake before it is too late. Regrets are cheap and, however bitter, are unavailing. Let Canada prepare, eagerly, swiftly, surely prepare to-day, that in the last deadly crisis of the desperate fight she may be able to throw the weight of her young might upon the wavering line of battle and help to hurl the enemy backward in defeat. The final touch may be Canada's. There is no place for hysteria, but there is place for haste. Not a contingent but the whole nation will fulfill Canada's obligations; and not when the cry comes for help but now should the preparation be made.

With a clear conscience and a steadfast heart we can invoke the God, not of battles, but the God of Righteousness and Truth to our aid, but only after we have made our full preparation; and if by God's good hand our men should not be needed the loss is small, but if the day should come when there was desperate need for our men and we were found unready, not even God could help us then. The which may God forbid

LATEST FISH STORY

Back to Land Movement by Pike Near Bassano, Alta.

(From the Gazette, Montreal, October 31st, 1914.)

The latest fish story that has been sprung on the public—a story which "out-whops" some of the most famous of the Whopper Club series—is told by J. Jones, an inspector in the agricultural branch of the Canadian Pacific whose activities are confined to the Rosemary colony, near Bassano.

There is nothing of the piking attitude about the story but the fish. The fish were pike. It appears that there has been started among the fish of the Bow River a "back to the land" movement, with the irrigated land preferred. Mr. Jones says that on the land, or on one particular farm, in the Rosemary colony, the water was turned into the ditches one morning for two hours and then turned off. When it had all seeped away into the ground there were enough pike found to feed thirteen men for one meal. Since that time a number of fish have been obtained. In fact, it seems to be a serious sort of mania among these fish to get out of the water at the earliest possible moment.

It appears that many of the irrigation ditches are full of fish and in some places one of the favorite recreations is to go out and "land' a flock of fish for breakfast.

Notice To Creditors

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF THOMAS FITZGIBBON, LATE OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH, IN THE COUNTY OF PETERBOROUGH, LABOURER, DECEASED.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, pursuant to the Revised Statutes of Ontario, Chapter 121, that all creditors and others having Claims against the Estate of the said Thomas Fitzgibbon, who died on or about the Seventeenth Day of June, 1914, are required on or before the 28th day of November, 1914, to send by post prepaid or deliver to Daniel O'Connell, of 134½ Hunter Street, in the City of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, the Solicitor for the Executors of the Estate of the said deceased, their Christian and surnames, addresses and descriptions, the full particulars of their claims, a statement of their accounts, and the nature of their securities, if any, held by them.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE, that after such last mentioned date the said Executors will proceed to distribute the assets of the deceased among the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which they shall then have notice, and that the said Executors will not be liable for the said assets or any part thereof to any person or persons of whose claims shall not have been received by them at the time of such distribution.

Dated this 4th day of November, 1914.
DANIEL O'CONNELL, 134½ Hunter Street, Peterborough, Solicitor for the Executors.

TURKISH FLEET CLOSE MATCH FOR RUSSIA IN THE BLACK SEA

With the Goeben and the Breslau It Is Expected to Make Serious Work for the Tsar's Six Battleships, Two Cruisers, Twenty-six Torpedo Boat Destroyers, Fourteen Torpedo Boats and Eleven Submarines

With the injection into the naval warfare of the present struggle of a new factor—Turkey—the consideration of strength of the Russian Black Sea fleet, which will have to cope with Turkey's partly German fleet, is of interest.

Russia has no dreadnoughts in the Black Sea fleet. She has six battleships, two cruisers, twenty-six torpedo boat destroyers, fourteen torpedo boats, eleven submarines, and a host of auxiliary vessels.

First of the battleships are the Levstafi and the Ioann Zlatoust, completed in 1910, and the Pantelimon, completed in 1908. These vessels, known as the Levstafi class, are supposed to carry each four 12-inch and four 8-inch guns in their main batteries, and twelve 6-inch and fourteen 12-pounders in their secondary batteries. They have four torpedo tubes. The Pantelimon, however, actually carries sixteen 10-inch guns and no 8-inch. The other two vessels are armed according to specifications. These are the most modern of the battle fleet. They can make 16 knots. Their displacement is 12,680 tons, and they each carry 720 men.

The Rotislav, completed in 1900, carries four 10-inch and eight 6-inch guns in her main battery and twelve 3-pounders and some rapid fire guns in the secondary. She has six torpedo tubes. Her speed is 16 knots, her displacement 9,000 tons, and she has a crew of 631 men.

Like the vessels of the Levstafi class this battleship can also use liquid fuel.

One Battleship Reconstructed.

The Tri Sviatitelia is a little larger. She carries four 12-inch guns in her main battery and a secondary battery of ten 6-inch and four 4.7-inch guns and has two torpedo tubes. She was laid down in 1891 and completed in 1900. She has since been reconstructed. Her speed is 18 knots, her displacement 12,240 tons, and her crew 731 strong.

The last of the battleships is the Georgi Pobiedonosets, an old vessel, built in 1892. She has a main battery of six old style 12-inch guns with seven 6-inch guns and eight 12-pounders in the secondary battery. She is equipped with seven torpedo tubes. Her speed is 16 knots. She is 10,280 tons displacement and carries 560 men.

The two cruisers are the Kagoul and the Pamiat Merkooria, protected cruisers, of 6,760 tons, built in 1900-1903. They are armed with twelve 6-inch guns, twelve 12-pounders, some rapid firers, and two torpedo tubes. Their speed is 23 knots. These are modern vessels, capable of giving a good account of themselves.

They each carry 573 men.

The twenty-six destroyers are fairly modern vessels and nine of them are first-class, with a speed of 30 knots.

Torpedo Boats are Slow.

The torpedo boats are old and not very fast. There are also a number of gunboats, mine layers, and supply ships. Four old battleships—the Sinope, the Imperatriza Maria, the Imperator Alexander III., and the Jekaterina II.—are not mentioned on the latest active lists and seem to have been turned into floating batteries.

Against this fleet Turkey can put the German battle cruiser Goeben, three old battleships, and two good protected cruisers, with the fast light cruiser Breslau. In the torpedo flotilla Turkey is outclassed, having only eight destroyers and nine torpedo boats. But the Goeben, on paper, at least, would seem to be almost a match for the entire Russian Black Sea battle fleet. The Goeben, which ran into the Dardanelles with the Breslau at the beginning of the war, and which, it was announced, was sold to Turkey, still has her original German crew on board, it is said, and will be sure to give a good account of herself. The same thing can be said of the Breslau's crew.

The dreadnought battle cruiser Goeben was completed in 1912. She is of 23,000 tons displacement and carries ten 11-inch guns in her main battery with twelve 6-inch and twelve 24-pounders in the secondary. She has four torpedo tubes, and has a speed of 28 knots. She has a crew of 1,107 officers and men.

Two of the battleships—the Hairredin Barbarossa and the Torgut Reis—were the German Kurfurst Friederich Wilhelm and the Weissenberg, built in 1891, and purchased by Turkey in 1910. Each carries six 11-inch guns in her main battery and eight 4.1-inch and eight 18-pounder guns in the secondary. A third vessel, the Messudyeh, is quite old, having been built in 1874, and rebuilt in 1902. She carries two 9.2-inch and twelve 6-inch guns in her main and twenty-four light guns in her secondary battery.

Cruisers Nearly Alike.

The protected cruisers Hamidieh and Medjidieh, while not of precisely the same type, are so nearly alike that they can be considered together. Each is armed with two 6-inch and eight 4.7-inch guns, together with several small rapid firers; has three torpedo tubes and carries 300 men. Each is designed to make 22 knots. The Hamidieh, it will be recalled, was particularly active and successful during the Balkan War.

The German cruiser Breslau is one of the type of fast small cruisers that have proved themselves to be so useful as commerce destroyers. She is similar in armament and construction to the Karlsruhe, but a little smaller. She is of 4,550 tons displacement, carries twelve 4.1-inch guns, and has two torpedo tubes. She can make 30 knots, although designed for but 26. She burns coal and oil. Her crew numbers 370 officers and men.

The speed of the Goeben and the Breslau and of the two protected cruisers gives the smaller Turkish fleet an advantage in manoeuvring which cannot be underestimated. These five vessels make up a compact little squadron which will give the larger but slower Russian fleet all it can do to handle if the Turkish gun pointers know their business. As the Turkish navy has been for some years in the hands of British naval officers, it may be supposed that the gun crews know how to handle their pieces.

When the British Government snapped up the two Turkish dreadnoughts—the Sultan Osmal I. and the Sultan Mehmet Rechadieh V. which were in British shipyards and almost completed—it dealt a blow to Turkey's aspirations to naval power, the full effect of which can only be seen now that Turkey has taken a hand in the war. If these two vessels were in Turkish waters now and well manned they would give to Turkey absolute command of the Black Sea.

Army Strength a Puzzle.

Hardly recovered from the Balkan War, the strength of the Turkish army at the present time cannot be estimated with accuracy. Conservative figures, however, would place its first line strength at approximately 200,000 men, most of whom are veterans. The Nizam, or regular army of the first line, is composed, on paper, of forty-three divisions, organized in fourteen army corps and five independent divisions. Just how much of this divisional organization is now ready for active service is a question.

A Turkish Nizam division consists normally of three line regiments of infantry, a rifle battalion, and from six to nine field batteries. The artillery, if armed with quick-firing guns, has four guns to a battery; if with old style guns, six to a battery. An army corps consists of two or three divisions, a cavalry brigade, three howitzer companies, six mounted batteries, an engineer battalion, and a telegraph company.

The cavalry strength is supposed to be forty regiments of five squadrons each. Besides this there are twenty-four regiments of Kurdish tribal cavalry. In European Turkey there are 11,000 men of the gendarmerie, now being reorganized.

There are also twenty-two companies of frontier guards, formed to relieve detachments of the regular army scattered about the Russian and Persian frontier.

New Cannon Purchased.

The infantry first line is equipped with the Mauser rifle, 7.65 mm., model 1890, magazine carrying five cartridges. The Redif and Mustahfiz are armed with an older piece. The field artillery was Krupp, seventy-five millimetre in the Nizam and older guns in the reserve. Much of this material was lost in the the war, but since then twenty-seven batteries (108 guns) of Schneider quick-firing seventy-five millimetre mountain guns have been received from France, and a large order for quick-firing howitzers has been given to the Austrian firm of Skoda.

In 1909 a German military mission under Field-Marshal von der Goltz took up the reorganization of the Turkish army. At the present time, it is believed, there are a number of German officers there superintending it.

Since 1909 Christians as well as Moslems have been obliged to perform military service. The tour of duty in the Nizam, or first line, is nine years—three in the ranks and six in the reserve. The soldier then passes to the Redif, the second line, for nine more years. For two years he belongs to the Mustahfiz, the equivalent of the German landsturm. As a matter of fact, the men are often kept for much longer than their time of service in the active army. The Nizam and Redif lines are well kept up, but the Mustahfiz is not well organized.

A Neighbor Told Him To Take Gin Pills

FOR THE KIDNEYS

If you want to know what Gin Pills will do for you, just drop a line to Mr. D. A. Yorke, at Bellrock, Ont. He will tell you what Gin Pills did for him, after he had suffered with kidney trouble for 10 years. Here is his letter:

"I suffered for about 10 years with my Kidneys. I could get nothing to help me. The pain went all through my back and shoulders and down the calves of my legs. When I would sit down for a while, I could not straighten up again until I would walk a rod or more, the pain was so great. A neighbor advised me to take GIN PILLS. I did so and my kidneys cured me. It is about two and a half years since I quit taking them. My back is all right; no pains now, no more backaches. I think GIN PILLS are for it all—they are worth their weight in gold."

Mr. Manufacturer: You are asking the public to support you by buying Canadian made goods. What are you yourself doing to help the cause?

Few manufacturers take absolutely raw material from field or mine and turn out an absolutely finished product, ready for consumption.

A maker of biscuits, for example, uses flour, sugar, flavoring extracts, boxes, labels, etc., all of which have passed through various processes of manufacture before they come to his hands.

The wheat is ground into flour, the sugar is refined, the boxes fashioned, the labels printed by other manufacturers.

In the same way your industry is dependent on others just as others are dependent on yours.

Are you, Mr. Manufacturer, buying your "raw" material, which is really a manufactured product, from Canadian makers? Much of what you need is produced here. Your own markets depend on the continuous employment of every Canadian workmen.

MODERN BATTLE MUCH DIFFERENT

Bavarian Prince Says It Is But a Slow Advance of Infantry Under Cover of Artillery—Costly Tactics

IRON DISCIPLINE NEEDED

BERLIN, Nov. 3.—Prince Franz of Bavaria, who is suffering from a bullet wound in the thigh received at the front, relates in the Munich-Augsburg Abendzeitung his observations during this war. He says:

"The modern battle is quite different from those of former years. You do not see anything unless there is an opportunity to gain a position on hills and view the enemy's movements from observation towers.

"This modern war is nothing more than a slow advance of the infantry under cover of the artillery. During the weeks I was at the front we remained from 13 to 15 days continuously in entrenchments hastily made.

"The fighting for the possession of the enemy's fortified positions is terrible. This is because the French always fortified villages and small towns and we had to make preparations for an artillery attack.

"This is also the only reason for the complete destruction of some villages. These devastated places offer a gruesome sight.

"I must admit that the French soldier in general has not made an unfavourable impression upon me. Our soldiers, of course, are as brave if not more so than those of our opponents. They can hardly be controlled when directly before the enemy.

"The first few battles proved that among our dead and wounded were many officers of extremely fine military talents.

"Our officers must always be the first when attacking. And our soldiers follow superiors of this type wherever they lead them. A second lesson we received during this war was the great importance of an iron discipline.

"With every new day this great war proves beyond doubt that bravery itself does not accomplish victory, but bravery based on the principles of discipline."

MRS. WHITNEY'S GREAT GIFT.

Establishing Large Field Hospital at Own Expense.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who was Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, will sail to-morrow for Europe on the Lusitania, with a staff of surgeons and fifteen trained nurses to establish, at her own expense, a large field hospital behind the firing line in Northern France.

Ten motor ambulances, a large quantity of medical supplies, and clothing sufficient for 3,000 men, women, and children, all purchased by Mrs. Whitney as a part of her undertaking, were shipped to France last Saturday on the s.s. Chicago.

Mrs. Whitney's sister, Countess Szechenyi, formerly Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, is now aiding the wounded in Austria.

A Hard Meal To Digest

Is Quickly Digested by the Taking of a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After It Is Over.

Corn on the cob is hard to digest, for some folk, but with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet it readily is disposed of by the stomach and digestive apparatus.

Don't drug your stomach. Give it just what it needs at the very moment it needs it. Here is the way a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet acts:

He—"I can eat corn now and feel O.K. A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet will quickly digest it."

One takes a tablet just after the meal is completed. It is taken into the mouth like food; is mixed with the saliva swallowed moist and partially dissolved. It goes into the stomach and is there mixed with the stomach juices which are composed of acids and alkalies.

A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet reinforces these juices. It quickly digests the elements which such weakened juices cannot digest.

After a while the stomach passes the meal partially digested to the intestines, where it goes through another stage of digestion. Here, as in the stomach, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets strengthen the juices of digestion and complete the work of giving the body the benefit of the meal.

There is nothing harmful in these tablets. Only natural ingredients which the body lacks are supplied. In a short time the blood and digestive juices are given the power they lack. Man can digest any food without injury and the entire health of the body is increased. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold wherever drugs are sold, price 50 cents a box. Anyone wishing a free trial of these tablets please address F. A. Stuart Co., 189 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., and a sample package will be mailed free.

Less Than a Cent

You may know a woman who has a reputation for making delicious cake, biscuits, etc.,—who seems to hit it right every time.

You may also know a woman, who, no matter how painstaking, can't seem to get the knack of successful baking.

Both use the same butter, same eggs, same flour and sugar. What is the difference?

Very likely it's all in the baking powder. Undoubtedly the woman with the knack uses Royal Baking Powder, and the unsuccessful woman uses an alum baking powder thinking it cheaper.

Yet the difference in the cost of a whole large cake is less than a cent.

It is economy to use

HASTINGS NEWS

Items of Interest From The Thriving Eastern Village

Special to The Examiner.

HASTINGS, Nov. 3.—Another aged resident has passed to the great beyond in the person of Mr. Tuck, formerly of Colborne, but who for the past few years has been residing here with his daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) Hess, and who had reached the advanced age of 86 years. Deceased had been ailing for some time, and gradually grew weaker until Thursday last, when he passed peacefully away. Service was conducted at the residence on Friday evening by Rev. T. H. J. Anderson, pastor of the Methodist Church, and the remains were conveyed via G.T.R. to Colborne on Saturday morning, where they were interred beside those of his wife, who predeceased him only a few years ago. The family has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their bereavement.

Mr. Lloyd Hess, of Peterborough, attended the funeral of his grandfather on Saturday.

Some ten volunteers entrained here on Tuesday of last week, en route for Cobourg to join the division at that town.

Several from this section were over to Norwood on Thursday, attending the funeral of the late Mrs. Wm. Richardson. Her many friends of Hastings regret to learn of her early demise, and express deepest sympathy for her husband and their only son who are left to mourn the loss of an affectionate wife and a fond mother.

The patriotic concert held in the Town Hall last week proved to be the best of the season, the place being well filled, and the programme being quite up to the expectation of the most critical. The several numbers given by local talent were well rendered and received, while those who assisted from out of town were well up to the mark, particularly Mr. Asa Huycke, of Peterborough, who is always a favorite with a Hastings audience. The proceeds netted a handsome sum, and the committee are well pleased with the results.

A "quilting bee" under the auspices of the W. M. S. of the Methodist Church was held in the basement of the church on Thursday last, three of the quilts being donated for the box to be sent to the Belgians.

A canvass of the village was made on Friday for the purpose of securing donations toward the Belgian Relief Fund. Those who had charge of the undertaking were well pleased with the liberal response to their solicitation, and the large quantity of bedding and warm clothing they received. This canvass was the result of the patriotic rally held in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening, when committees were appointed to oversee the work.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered in the Methodist Church on Sunday morning. Rev. T. H. P. Anderson officiated.

Mr. P. Crowley has purchased a car and has undertaken the duties of "chauffeur."

Miss Hazel Humphries, of Dartford, spent the week-end with her parents.

Mr. A. Greenbank, of Norwood, gave us a call on Monday.

Mr. Ketchum, of Warkworth, passed through Hastings on Monday morning on his way to Norwood with a consignment of apples.

Miss Queenie Reanch returned on Monday from Peterborough, where she has been visiting friends.

One of our neighbouring farmers has informed us of a patch of field peas on his premises which not only are in bloom but also are in full pod. Something new for October.

Mr. Ad. Humphries and sons, accompanied by Mr. Lew Elmhirst, left on Friday last for a week's deer hunting in the back country.

Mr. Richardson, of Dartford, was in Hastings on Monday.

Messrs. Ed. and Arthur Fleming left on Saturday for their annual deer hunt some miles back.

Mr. Marshall has moved his household effects into the house on Albert Street, recently vacated by Mr. A. Parsons.

Mr. Duffin, of Peterborough, was in town last week.

ADIEU!

(The Bandmaster in Chief of the German army, dressed in a gorgeous uniform, was captured near Ypres.)

Octaves of woes!—do ray! me! fah! so!—damn!!!
Sweet Bass Viol! what an uncultured slam!
Here I am dressed like the Panama Pair,
Grit! I could scream—but I don't even dare.

Nothing to blow, beat or tickle at all;
Can't even whistle the Dead March from "Saul."
What can I say to these Allies—the bums!
What do they know of the cornet and drums?
What do they care about cymbals or flute?
Ignorant? Heavens, they laughed at my suit!

Bah! I'm resolved on the course I'll pursue;
How can I live when my soul's black and blue?
I'll give these wretches reward for their pains;
I'll swipe a trombone and blow out my brains.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

ADVANCE ON CALAIS ABANDONED BY FOE

Ypres is Now Storm Centre and General French's Forces Must Bear the Brunt of the Attack in That Vicinity

LONDON, Nov. 4.—That the German army has abandoned its attempt to back its way along the Belgian coast to Calais is agreed by all the official reports last night. A combination of inundated country, the remnant of the Belgian army under King Albert and the activity of the British warships seemingly all contributed toward ending the costly struggle.

A Berlin official report attributes the failure of the Germans entirely to the flooded state of the country, where the water in places is over a man's head; but it is declared that the army of Emperor William withdrew in good order and without losses.

After nearly three weeks of desperate fighting, the brunt of the attack has now shifted to the Ypres region, where the British army of Field Marshal Sir John French, reinforced by Indians and territorials, apparently must meet another onslaught. To the [illegible] according to reports, Emperor William has gone to give encouragement to his men by his presence.

News comes from Havre that the Germans near the coast are retreating to the eastward, abandoning their dead and wounded. The Belgian troops are moving on toward the Yser. They are discovering numerous evidences that the Germans are in precipitate flight in that vicinity.

Germany yesterday began the assembling of six new army corps at Coutrai, Belgium, for an attack on the allies' line between Ypres and Arras, France. British aviators report large forces of Germans marching toward Ypres, which is expected to be the vortex of the battling for the next week. The Germans seem to have abandoned their attempt to cut their way through to Saint Omer, southeast of Calais.

A special to The Times, dated Pas de Calais, says: "The desperate attempt of the Germans to take Ypres by storm has failed. The British still hold the town with rifle and bayonet. The German soldiers, even in overwhelming force, are no match for ours. Their infantry has been driven back eastward and their artillery has again come into action at long range. Their shells fall short of the town. That was the position yesterday. On Saturday and Sunday, when the situation was critical, thousands of the inhabitants left the town. It is not yet safe for them to return. The enemy's attack has been repulsed but not yet finally crushed. The outposts of the two opposing armies are almost within a stone's throw of each other. Our sentries can hear the gramophone and the singing of the soldiers in the enemy's trenches. The battlefield is strewn with German dead. In their advance our men had to leap over them.

The Standard has the following from Paris: "The newspapers here are not allowed to give any details to substantiate their belief, but more than one declares itself in a position to affirm that the Germans are hurriedly preparing to retreat and may start falling back in force at any time. Particulars have already appeared in the London press of different [illegible] thrown up by the enemy to enable them to clear out of Belgium in the best order possible, while telegrams have arrived here stating that similar preparations are being made on the eastern frontier and in Alsace, particularly near Strasburg."

The Germans resumed their bombardment of the city of Rheims with great violence on Sunday and Monday, according to a despatch from Bordeaux.

Germans Surprised.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 4.—The German troops who held Dixmude for a brief period last week, had an unpleasant experience. They entered the town singing, as is their custom "Die Wacht am Rhein." The allies previously had mounted machine guns in the garrets of some of the houses and left sufficient men concealed to work them.

The Germans were preparing to stay in the town all night, when suddenly the allies opened fire from the houses. The Germans fled in panic, leaving 1,000 killed.

Cigarettes May Go Up

War With Turkey Will Interfere With Imports

War with Turkey will interfere considerably with imports from that country. It is explained by tobacco merchants that if the supply from the Balkan States was interfered with the price of Turkish cigarettes would increase. Canadian manufacturers, however, have a fairly large supply. This year's supply of Turkish rugs has already been purchased, and unless the war continues over a year there should be little increase in the price of this luxury.

Judgment Against C.P.R.

The following report of a case of local interest appeared in the Osgoode Hall report:

Before Britton, J.

Sharpe v. Canadian Pacific Railway Co.—F. D. Kerr and V. J. McElderry (Peterborough), for plaintiff. J. D. Spence and G. W. Wallrond for C.P.R. Co. J. A. Soule (Hamilton) for the T. H. & B. Railway Co. Action by father of Thomas L. Sharpe to recover $5,000 damages for death of said T. L. Sharpe on March 19, 1913, alleged to have been caused by negligence of defendants. Judgment: As to the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo, the action must be dismissed, but the plaintiff is entitled to judgment against the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. There will be judgment for plaintiff against the C.P.R. Co. for $1,500 and costs, and action against T., H. & B. Co. will be dismissed with costs, if such costs are demanded. Thirty days' stay.

MR. TAYLOR ON THE TROUBLE AT THE COLLEGIATE

To the Editor of The Examiner:

In the interests of the public of true education and of common justice I would like to say a few words. From your columns I notice that the Board of Education has forced the resignation of Miss Weir from the Collegiate Institute staff. To have done so is an insult to the teaching profession. The action of the principal in her case, as in others also, which encourage the lawless element in the school to defy the authority of the teacher is an outrage. It is quite possible for him to make a case out against any teacher.

* * * *

During the last winter term I had occasion to request a boy in Form 2B to leave my class. There was a misunderstanding on his part as to the nature of his offence. My intention was to meet him after four, and adopt such measures as would clear up his misunderstanding and prevent a repetition of the offence. If I should fail to secure the boy's future co-operation it would be my duty to refer his case to the Principal.

But the Principal learned I had sent the boy from my class, and during the following recess, roughly demanded of me what the boy was sent out for. I told him. He then called the boy before him, charged him with the offence, would listen to no explanation on the boy's part and sent him home for the day. He then berated me for not reporting the matter immediately to him. This all before the pupils passing in the hall. The boy returned the next morning and was sent home again.

On the evening of that day the Principal called me up by 'phone and inquired as to the general work and conduct of the boy. He seemed anxious that I should say that there were two counts against the boy. I replied that the boy's general work and conduct were satisfactory and that I never intended to report the matter to him until I had interviewed the boy in private.

Shortly afterwards, at the request of a sister of the boy I met by appointment the father. I found the father greatly incensed against me. He thought I had caused his son's suspension for a trivial offence which another boy had committed. He had discussed the matter with the Principal and I was to bear the blame for the unreasonable and ridiculous procedure on the part of the Principal. I told him the facts of the case. Whether he had a subsequent interview with the Principal I know not. I met the boy early the next day and for the rest of my connection with the school his work and conduct was irreproachable.

This was not the only case where the Principal went out of his way to insult and humiliate a teacher before the pupils, and I have not the least doubt that Miss Weir, whose judgment and intuitions are sound, found it necessary in self defence to pursue the course she did. The extraordinary thing about it is that the Board should think that the interests of education are advanced by the forced resignation or dismissal of tried and experienced teachers on the secret ad vice of a Principal whose judgment is so impaired that he cannot in any conciliatory way discuss the welfare of a pupil with his staff.

There are many other facts which I might lay before your readers which might not be irrelevant to the matter before the public.

Yours truly,
Wilson Taylor, B.A.,
Collegiate Institute.

When the Liver Gets Torpid

There is Nothing Like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to Set it Right.

Mrs. C. L. Cook, 248 Tenth street, Brandon, Man., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the last four years for liver trouble, and can say that I have had great satisfaction and help from them. I find that I do not need any doctor if I use them when the liver gets torpid, and believe that they are exactly suited for my case. My husband has used them for kidney trouble with good results, and my daughter in Winnipeg has been helped a great deal by the use of these pills. We say we can't keep house without them, and have cheated the doctors here out of a good many visits. I think Dr. Chase's medicines are just the thing, and have recommended them to many people who have used them with good results."

More Contingents Will Be Raised

Speakers at Public Meeting Foreshadow the Possibility of Peterborough Being Asked to Raise a Third Contingent —Inspiring Addresses by Prominent Citizens.

Seldom has a Peterborough audience manifested as much enthusiasm and patriotic loyalty as was evidenced at a public meeting that was held in the Armouries on Tuesday evening. The object of the meeting was to encourage enlistment and to awaken a deeper sense of responsibility towards the British Empire in her hour of need. Men in all stations of life and of all ages listened with rapt attention to an extended list of inspiring and patriotic addresses. The speakers were a unit on one point and that was the necessity for united effort on the part of Canadians and Canadian citizens, in rendering assistance to the mother land. It was the concensus of opinion that the present war would be of long duration and that more men would be needed before the German hordes were successfully suppressed. The 57th Regimental Band occupied a position in the gallery at the west end of the Armouries, while the speakers addressed the gathering from the east end.

His Worship Mayor Buller, who acted as chairman, addressed the meeting in a few well chosen words. He explained the object of the meeting and concluded with a stirring appeal to the audience, for their wholehearted support in this terrible conflict. He introduced Rev. F. J. Sawers, pastor of St. Luke's Church, East City, as the first speaker.

Hungry For Enlistment.

"Last August it was my privilege," said Mr. Sawers, "to be in London, England, when like a bolt from the blue came the call to arms. "Your King and country need you" was the sign that greeted one on every hand. The call to arms was responded to by thousands of men who were hungry for enlistment.

It recalled to mind the immortal words of Lord Nelson, England's greatest naval hero, "England expects every man to do his duty." Kitchener has authorized the mobilization of five hundred thousand men. This is not the land's war; it is the war of the British Empire, of which I am proud to say, we form no insignificant part. There never set foot in England a finer body of men than the thirty-three thousand men that were sent from Canada. Yet the call comes for more men. When we think of the war and its possibilities and possibilities we cannot think it will be a war of short duration. It is a fight for justice and freedom that is to show that Britain's word is as good as a bond. (Cheers.) That a nation's plighted treaty is no mere scrap of paper. Germany has said that the sword was thrust into her hands. Imperial observers who have examined the documentary evidence, declare emphatically that such a statement is devoid of truth. When Germany speaks of her culture we think of the sack of Louvain and Rheims. It is a glorious thing to die for one's country. That life you must give once. When the call comes, England expects that every man will do his duty; then you and I will be able to say we can, and by God's help we will."

Mr Burnham's Address.

"It is very gratifying to see such a splendid attendance of ladies," observed the representative for West Peterborough. "When anything patriotic is to be done you can always depend on the ladies. I am informed on reliable authority that additional contingents will be raised. I am not so young a man as some of you, but I would go to the front, knit, peel potatoes or do anything, for nothing is too small in the way of human service, during the present crisis. Lindsay has contributed to the patriotic fund fifteen times as much as Peterborough in proportion to the population, and Norwod thirty times as much. The County Councilof Victoria alone contributed sixteen thousand dollars, and I know that our own County Council will do a handsome thing. I haven't done my whole duty, but the shame is mounting in my face, and upon my soul I wil ldo my duty. I ask the native born to remember that we have a cause and a noble one.

Rev. James Rollins.

Rev. James Rollins received a rousing reception when he declared that the time had come when there should be a coming together. He placed those men who had offered themselves for enlistment, but had been turned down for some minor defect, on an equal basis with those who had gone forward to the front. "The presence of those men on this platform," said Mr. Rollins, "would mean more to the meeting than my presence. Out of my deepest conviction I believe that the heart of Peterborough is all right and that we can supply everything that is required of us. There are going to be future calls for enlistment. Why should we not have a waiting list of four or five hundred business men waiting for the call. I think that it is nothing less than a standing shame if we do not have an insurance policy of one thousand dollars for single men and two thousand for married men, on each of the men that have gone from this city. I don't see how we can save our reputation if we allow the patriotic fund to stop at less than $6,000. Since we have raised only a beggarly sum, we should start all over again and set a mark as other cities have done.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.

"The thought has struck me that we are getting more warmed up to our responsibility than we were at the outset. I hope that from now on we will all be enthusiastic and stand shoulder to shoulder and help along the fight that is before us."

His Honour Judge Huycke.

"These are troublous times through which we are being called to pass," said His Honour Judge Huycke. "Today the Union Jack is being attacked as it has not been since the days of Napoleon. The greatest war machine in the world is being urged and thrown against us. It is our duty to rally to the Motherland, not because she is Great Britain, but because she is the protector of the weak. She stands for immunity against militarism. I do not say that the Kaiser is solely responsible for this war, for there may be some impelling forces behind him. If Germany and Austria were to succeed we would suffer the greatest setback of the age and would be compelled to follow the dictates of the mailed fist. I have learned that there is a rifle club being formed. Let those who cannot join the ranks become members of the rifle club. In conclusion I would say let us all be ready to do our duty to our God, King and Country.

Rev. R. Pague.

"Many of our citizens do not appreciate the significance of the struggle that is being waged in Europe. It is not only the struggle of Great Britain, but of the Empire. I believe that this war is justified, and if called upon I would enlist because of my desire to assist Great Britain in her hour of need. I would enlist that I might help to remove that disturber of the peace. I would also enlist because this is the war of the common people."

Mr. J. J. Hartley.

Mr. Hartley made a stirring appeal for practical patriotism. "I am a Canadian and am proud of it," said Mr. Hartley. Our sympathies go out to those who are at the front. I hope that all of you who are strong and able will offer your services to the country. Personally I am ready and willing to do whatever necessity demands."

Mr. Weber.

Mr. Weber of Berlin, who is in the city in connection with the Christian citizenship movement, was called upon to address the meeting. He spoke of the good work accomplished by the citizens of Berlin, Ontario. When the committee in charge of the patriotic fund inaugurated their campaign they divided the city into districts and used their own judgment in assessing the merchants for different amounts." It is not a question of what a man wants to do, but of what we expect him to do," said Mr. Weber. Man is human no matter where you find him. It's the old story of "ask and ye shall receive." Mr. Weber concluded by inviting the gathering to attend George Street Methodist church on Wednesday evening, when a patriotic address would be delivered by Dr. Gordon in the interests of the patriotic fund.

The meeting was brought to a close by the rendition of the National Anthem.

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

Stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp —At Once.

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, you get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need) apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve, and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and scurfing of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you value your hair, you should get rid of dandruff at once, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it.

His Master's Voice — TRADE MARK

FACE OF NORTHEASTERN FRANCE SCARRED BY PASSAGE OF ARMIES

PARIS, Nov. 3.—Three months of war has made an immense change in the country where battle after battle has been fought between armies of strength that had never before assembled. About the northeastern corner of France, which in July of this year was a land where industry and agriculture flourished, now lie the ruins of bombarded cities and villages, shattered houses, farms devastated and fields torn up and criss-crossed with deserted trenches.

Where the troops died heroic deaths, where the cavalry dashed across in desperate charges or the artillery fought terrific duels the land is now strewn with debris—broken rifles and machine guns, cartridge cases and remnants of other equipment and smashed carts and automobiles; while marshy and boggy spots are covered here and there with dead horses, which are gradually sinking into the soft soil.

Everywhere there is appalling misery, but the people, mostly women, children and aged men, many of whom have lost their all and some who have sons or husbands in the line of battle, maintain their spirits with remarkable stolidity. Nothing seems to break their spirits as they look forward patiently and with confidence for liberation from the powerful invaders.

Away from the immediate vicinity of the fighting ground all over France are groups of soldiers awaiting the call to take their places at the front. Every one follows with interest the progress of the allied troops. Virtually sens and then takes an easterly direction through the Argonne forest to the Vosges Mountains, where, according to French officers arriving from the front, the French troops are making steady inroads into the German lines in their progress toward their objective, Alsace and Lorraine. The frontier fortresses at Toul, Verdun and Belfort, they say, are still holding out against the German artillery, and the efforts of the Germans to open a way between the forts thus far have been vain.

every household has a map on which the positions of the armies are marked as they are given in the daily official communications.

The armies have undergone slow but important changes in alignment since the rapid but unsuccessful German march on Paris was arrested along the Marne. The retreat of the Germans with terrible casualties caused their hasty retirement to the Aisne, where both armies dug themselves solidly in, and neither could dislodge the other, although many desperate attempts to do so were made.

From the Aisne the battle line spread to the Oise, the Somme and the Meuse. Then both sides attempted an enveloping movement, which brought their wings to the shores of the North Sea. All the while furious onslaughts proceeded. On many occasions hand to hand combats for possession of towns and villages supervened. Railroad communication lasted night and day for several days.

The German endeavours to break the Allies' wings or burst through their lines at other points have been frustrated, while the British fleet joined in the battle with disastrous effect upon the German columns, which were trying to force their way toward Dunkirk and Calais.

The battle line now sees-saws down from the coast through Lille to Sois-

Bombs Intended For Rulers.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—A Central News despatch from North France, under date of Monday, says that a German airman skimming 5,000 feet above the Belgian town of Furnes, apparently with the knowledge that King Albert and President Poincare were going to review the cavalry drawn up before the Hotel de Ville, dropped several bombs, which, however, missed the square and did but slight damage a short distance away. Thereafter French and Belgian aeroplanes kept the sky clear of the enemy.

Question of Home Economics Dealt With By Dr. Gordon

A Patriotic Citizenship Meeting Will Be Held To-night—Mayor and Council Will Attend.

FOR MEN ONLY

Dr. Gordon's address last evening, was on the subject of "Home Economics," the question of "Family Finances," Marriage and Money," or "How Much Does it Cost to Furnish a Home For Two?" In spite of the fact that the weather was exceedingly unpleasant and there were several contra-attractions in the city, in the way of special gatherings of a popular type, the George Street Methodist church was crowded to the doors, every available seat being occupied and some standing. Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the coloured singer, was in fine form last evening. He sang first of all, a selection of his own composition, entitled, "Childhood Days," following that, a plantation melody entitled, "Steal Away to Jesus," and last of all, a very appealing hymn entitled "Would You Believe." Mr. E. O. Weber, who is responsible for the Citizenship Campaign idea, occupied a seat upon the platform, and made the usual announcements.

This evening, Dr. Gordon will conduct a patriotic citizenship meeting. His subject being, "The Flag, the Man, the Hour." The Mayor and City Council, as well as the two members of Parliament, will occupy seats on the platform, and the church is being divided into reservations, for bodies of men and from the various establishments of the city. This is practically a man's meeting, and arrangements have been made by which practically all the organizations, including the Ministerial Association, will be present.

The following is a brief outline of Dr. Gordon's address on "The Home Life":

The family has occupied a remarkable place in history, there is no influence stronger than the "Home Influence." The Wesley family stood for religion; the Beecher family stood for eloquence; the Pitt family for statesmanship; the Darwin family for science; the Emmerson family for philosophy; the Disraeli family for literature; the Booth family for evangelism; the Arnold family for education and the family of the Rothschilds for large wealth.

Into every life there comes two great dreams: First, the dream of youth, which is the dream of a home, and second, the dream of maturity, which is the dream of a house. The popular conception of the Home Life suggests itself in the idea that in order to have a happy home, you must have a well built and well furbished domicile or social establishment. The message which I bring you this evening is, that a happy home in the best sense may exist between four walls in one room, and this evening we shall devote our time to the furnishing of just one room, and the young couple who is prepared to furnish a room properly, is prepared for all the comforts and happiness of the home life.

By the way, I have been in some great rooms in my life. I once visited the room in which Lincoln died. I stood in the room in which John Knox stood. I sat in the room in which John Wesley prayed. I stood half an hour in the room in which the Marquis of Argyle slept the night before his execution. I passed through the room in which Queen Elizabeth was enthroned by Bulwer Lytton in his mansion at Nebworth. I once gazed upon the room where Napoleon resigned his throne, after many emotions of indecision. I have been in the room where Thomas Carlisle wrote his magnificent books, and also in the room in Holyrood Palace, where Mary Queen of Scots met her lover, so that this evening we are prepared to indulge in a few meditations concerning the possibilities of one room, or how to furnish a room for two persons.

First.—You will need a strong lock for the door, and the name of that lock is "principle." No home can ever be destroyed wholly, by outside influences. Those are immortal words uttered by Robertson of Brighton. It must be right to do right.

"For modes of faith, let graceless zealots fight,
He can't be wrong whose life is in the right."

Second.—You will need a rare oriental rug for your feet to tread upon. I present to you such a rug in the promises of God. You cannot do better in the establishing of a home, than to plant your feet upon the great, rugged promises of the great old book.

Third.—You will need a great book for the centre table. I suggest as that book, the greatest piece of literature in the history of the world. The Bible is the master book and the mother of books, the lion in the realm of literature. The Bible Society reports the sale of ten million copies of the Bible for the last year, outstanding the combined circulation of ten of the most popular novels in existence.

Fourth.—You will need a beautiful lamp hanging at the exact centre of your room. I suggest that you secure a spirit lamp, a lamp which flashes with the spirit of truth. In other words you shall need the presence of the Third Person of the Trinity.

Fifth.—You will need an easy chair for the hour when you are weary. The name of that chair shall be called "Faith." Remember the words of Paley, the great Christian philosopher, "It is a tremendous thing to believe in one God."

Sixth.—You will need a telephone in your room, and I would suggest that you have a long distance telephone, and the name of that telephone shall be called "Prayer." Ring up "Main No. 7," in the grand central office of universal love, power and grace.

"Day by day the Manna fell,
O to learn that lesson well."

Seventh.—You will need an instrument of music. We have that to happy without good cheer. There have been only two great singing religions in the history of the world, "Judaism" and "Christianity." Christianity began with a song, "Glory to God in the Highest." Cromwell's men advancing on the enemy sang, "Let God Rise and Let His Enemy be Scattered." Infidelity has never written a great hymn in a thousand years.

Eighth.—You will need a picture for the wall. That picture I would suggest ought to be the picture of your Mother. If you live for a hundred years, you will never fin da love so pure, sincere, unselfish and so full of sacrifice as the love of your Mother.

Ninth.—You will need at least one splendid window. Through that window there must shine the golden light of Immortality. Tennyson once exclaimed, "I hope I shall never be so weak minded as to let my belief in a future life be torn from me." Immortality is the golden light which guilds all the incidents of life with an eternal hope.

Tenth.— You will need an extra chair at your table. That chair should be occupied by one who shall represent your Master and your Lord, "Jesus Christ." Go out and find some poor pilgrim, beggar, pauper, peasant, and in the name of your absent Lord, invite such an absent one to be a guest at your table. Do not lead a selfish life. The most unhappy home is the home where two persons live solely and only for themselves.

Dr. Gordon closed his address with an earnest evangelistic appeal.

R. SHAW, WARDEN

KEEP ITALY OUT OF IT.

Turkey Pledges Not to Attempt Islamic Movement in Libya.

BERLIN, Nov. 3 (by wireless by way of Sayville, L.I.).—Turkey, according to an official announcement made in Berlin to-day, has pledged her word not to attempt an Islamic movement in Libya, and therefore there is no cause for Italian uneasiness regarding Tripoli.

Address By Warden Shaw

To the Members of the Peterborough County Council

Mr. Robert Shaw, the warden of Peterborough County, in addressing the members of that body yesterday afternoon, called attention to the provision that had been made by other counties to assist in the war.

"You have come together," said the Warden, "about a month earlier than usual, due to the state of affairs on the European continent, in which the mother country is now engaged, and she being interested, we, as one of her colonies are also interested. Other countries having made provision to assist in some way to carry to a successful terminus the unjust war now waged by another nation, is what constrained me to call you together, knowing that you, after careful deliberation, would act wisely, and in a manner that would be pertinent to the issue.
